Wakefield School To Keep Textbook

The Wakefield school board has decided to continue to use a high school textbook which has been criticized strongly by several residents of the Wayne-Dixon "county area."

The book is the 1958 edition of Magruder's American Government by William A. McClenahan.

Board President Walter Moller said that in a special meeting five members of the board voted for a resolution providing for continued use of the book until proof is furnished that it is "unsatisfactory." A sixth board member was vacationing.

Council Awards

Five Paving Bids

Five paving bids were awarded to Booth and Olson, Sioux City, at a special meeting of the city council Aug. 15.

The Sioux City firm submitted low bids on four of the paving projects for the City of Wayne and an equal bid on the fifth project. Harold Christiansen and Sons, Pender, was the only other bidder.

Booth and Olson's total bid of $39,659.38 and Christiansen and Sons' total bid of $41,736.83 were both below the engineer's estimate of $43,108.00.

Work on the projects, which includes more than seven blocks of city streets, will start within two weeks and is expected to be completed in September.

The paving districts and bids included:

District 38, Sherman street from twelfth to thirteenth and thirteenth from Douglas to Sherman — Booth and Olson, $9,276.30; Christiansen and Sons, $9,838.38.

District 41, Clark street and a south portion of Pearl street — Booth and Olson, $9,081.08; Christiansen and Sons, $9,621.05.

District 42, second street from Logan to Nebraska — Booth and Olson, $6,656.53; Christiansen and Sons, $7,233.40.

District 43, one-half block of alley between the postoffice and Ben-thack clinic, both firms, $1,041.80.

District 44, Fairgrounds avenue from Main to Cummings — Booth and Olson, $13,598.65; Christiansen and Sons, $14,002.20.

He is pictured above being congratulated by a fellow Norfolk golfer, Jute Strasheim, who was runnerup with a total of 107. Complete tourney details will be found on the sports page of today's Wayne Herald.

Driver's Licenses to Expire September 1

All present driver's licenses expire Sept. 1 and must be renewed within 60 days of that date, but Wayne county motorists should wait until after Labor Day to renew them, according to County Treasurer Leona Balch.

She said the Motor Vehicle department has informed her the material to renew licenses will not be available in Wayne county until Sept. 6 and that drivers should not mail their licenses in and be without them on the Labor Day holiday.

Drivers who do not renew their licenses within the 60-day renewal period will have to take examinations from the state license examiner. Adults will pay a $2 renewal fee. Probationary permits will be issued to applicants under 20 years of age for $1.50 fee.

No renewal can be made without turning in the old license. The old license should be mailed not earlier than Sept. 5 or brought into the treasurer's office not earlier than Sept. 6.

Ordained as Teacher

At Seward Convention

Robert J. Haag, teacher at Altona Trinity Lutheran school was one of three Lutheran teacher training graduates officially received into the teaching ministry of the Northern Nebraska district of the Lutheran church, Missouri synod at its convention at Seward, Monday through Thursday.

Rev. Caryl Ritchey, newly installed Altona pastor and St. Paul's Lutheran church, Wakefield, was one of six to be ordained as a minister.

Haag received his B.S. degree in education this month from Concordia Teachers college, River Forest, Ill. Mrs. Haag, who taught formerly in Murray, Utah, will teach grades one to four at Zion Lutheran school, Bancroft, this fall.

Another junior high innovation is a developmental reading program. This is just the opposite of remedial reading, a program to encourage what might be called "go-ahead" reading for greater comprehension, speed and vocabulary.

Ninth, eleventh and twelfth graders can make several choices of courses including Spanish and organized art. A new elective course is music theory. A student who continues this course through high school will have a solid background of music fundamentals, Dr. Way said. Few high schools of any size offer this course.

Prep juniors and seniors will have a new elective course in social problems, including sociology, anthropology and economics. They can also elect advanced music history, advanced mathematics or earth science. Advanced math embraces trigonometry, analytic geometry and calculus. The earth science course will soar into space.

The Haags were welcomed at a reception by members of Altona Trinity Lutheran church Sunday evening following a service in which Mr. Haag was installed as teacher of the parish school. The Haags presently live in the Altona parsonage.

Crambe: This type of mustard and other improved strains have shown some promise, yielding from 700 to 1,100 pounds per acre in eastern Nebraska in 1960. It yields or failures in other years have been associated with hot weather, drought or insects. Mustard seed is a crop easily overproduced; current markets do not warrant considerable expansion, Williams believes.

Williams centered his most optimistic outlook on the future of soybeans in NE Nebraska. This crop, which is not a new one, has a relatively stable market, established uses and can be grown successfully in NE Nebraska.

Dr. J. K. Matsushima described results of a beef fattening experiment involving approximately 100 head of steers, the majority of which are artificially sired from the same bull. With individually variations removed to a considerable extent through use of a common sire, objectives of the test were:

Agronomist Says New Crop Problem Still Not Solved

Eighteen faculty members will be new at WSTC this fall. Fourteen of them already have been approved by the State Normal board and appointments of the other four are pending, the board's next meeting in September.

Two of the newcomers actually are not newcomers now, since they taught this summer. Dr. William Ristow, assistant professor of speech, began his duties in June. For the past three years he has been public information director for the Wisconsin State Board of Educational and Adult Education.

Results to date:

Castor Beans: Adaptability questionable in NE Nebraska to achieve high consistent yields. Problems of weed control and harvesting practices experienced in other parts of the state would apply here.

Sunflower: This crop is faced with many insect and disease problems. Low yields or failures have been frequent in Nebraska tests, especially in the eastern part of the state. These problems could be overcome, but production would probably not be economical in Nebraska under present conditions.

Flax: Not a new crop, in the sense that linseed oil, a flax seed derivative, has long been used as a quick-drying oil in the manufacture of paint and varnish. NE Nebraska is on the southern margin of the prime growing area for this cool-weather crop. It has been tested in Nebraska for many years, and in cool, moist seasons, has done fairly well. The nearest flax processing plants are in Minnesota, causing some marketing problems.

Mustards: Several members of the mustard family produce seed that yield edible oils, special lubricants and other minor industrial uses. Mustard must compete with other vegetable oils. This group of oil seed species can be grown farther north than any other oil seed crop. Mustard seeds contain large amounts of eric acid, which industrial chemists believe is superior to present materials for uses such as textile water repellants. Testing has been conducted at several Nebraska locations, but many annual mustards gave unsatisfactory results or didn't badly during harvesting.

Dr. J. K. Matsushima described results of a beef fattening experiment involving approximately 100 head of steers, the majority of which are artificially sired from the same bull. With individually variations removed to a considerable extent through use of a common sire, objectives of the test were:

1. To compare two levels of protein in the fattening ration.
2. To determine the effect of an enzyme preparation at both levels of protein supplementation.

Protein was fed at the 10 and 11 percent levels, both with and without the enzyme, a feed additive which is believed to aid in digestion of certain nutrients in the ration. Eleven percent is the current recommended level.

While the experiment is not complete, Dr. Matsushima emphasized, results to date with the cattle show the low protein (10 percent) ration with enzyme added appears to be beneficial from the standpoint of gain.

All lots of experimental cattle are averaging 2.7 pounds per head per day gain, he added. There appears to be no benefit in increased gain from adding the enzyme to the high level protein ration, he noted.

Explorers' Account of 10 Days of Wilderness Adventure

Before the advent of the white man, Sioux and Chipewa Indians stalked proudly over the portages and paddled their graceful canoes from lake to lake in the North Woods country. Here, some 300 years ago, the dashing and adventuresome Voyageurs paddled their birchbark bateaux to the rhythm of their rollicking songs.

Today modern Voyageurs, such as Wayne's Explorer Scouts, scull the stones of the same portages and skim swiftly along the same chain of lakes. They followed the same routes the first Voyageurs used, pitched their tents on campsites they used, saw rugged cliffs and virgin forests that still seem to echo with the Voyageurs' merry voices.

Twelve Wayne Explorers and their three sponsors spent 10 days of wilderness living and canoeing through the lake area of Minnesota and Canada. An account of the trip as recorded by Dean Weible and Jim Kern follows.

Participating in the trip were Weible, Kern, RaDelle Erxleben, Gary Jones, Richard Mauzer, Terry March, Jerry Brandstetter, Gary Lubberstedt, Duane Ellermeier, David Ewing, Gary Lorenzen and Phil Rees. Sponsors were John Bernthal, Norris Weible and Roy Coryell.

By Dean Weible and Jim Kern
Photos by Duane Ellermeier

For seven months 12 Explorers, Norris Weible left Wayne for 12 days.

Our first stop was a rather unexpected one at Sioux City. This was to wait for a little green Falcon driven by "the Beast" (John B.) to catch up after getting lost in the metropolis. After that made a stop at LeMars, Ia., to eat breakfast. All of this time we had been driving in a light rain.

As soon as breakfast was over we were driving in very heavy rain with little visibility. At Sheldon, Roy left the caravan to go to Okoboji where his family is staying this summer. His car later joined us at Fairfax, Minn., where we all had lunch. After refueling the boys and cars we headed on to our home for the first night, which was to be the Minneapolis YMCA.

In February of this year our reservations were sent north and Crew 727C out of Wayne was now of the record. Then came the long wait from February to July 26 when we would leave.

When the date for leaving drew near, our post got together and decided that we would all meet at Norris Weible's, our advisor for the trip, and pack the cars a full day early to allow for plenty of time to dig up that one thing you inevitably forget when taking a trip.

At 6 a.m. July 26, all 15 of us once again assembled at the Weible home, this time to head north to our final destination, the canoe base. At 6:30 our three cars driven by Roy Coryell, John Bernthal and

and came up and asked us to be on an interview. "Fan in the Stands." We recognized this man as Randy Merriman, the master of ceremonies of the now defunct "Big Payoff." After our interview we enjoyed a real pitchers' duel between the Minnesota Twins and the Washington Senators. The game was finally won by the Twins 10-9 in the ninth inning. There were four homers hit.

We arrived back at the "Y" at about midnight and realizing this was to be our last night in civilization for something, some of us stayed up and drank cokes, accompanied by a pizza, until 2:30 in the morning. Our advisors called us at a much too early 5:30.

When we got to Virginia, Minn., that morning we were told of a shortcut to Ely. About 40 miles later we realized we were still as far from Ely as we were at Virginia. This was quickly remedied by a deserted gravel road back to our highway. Finally arriving at Ely about 1:30 we had dinner and stocked up on much-needed supplies (mainly lemon drops and butterscotch candy).

We got to the base at about 2:30 where we were greeted by Larry Barton, who was to be our guide for the trip into the Quetico Wilderness. After signing up for our fishing licenses, etc., we were led to tent city where we would stay that night and the night we returned from the trail.

Those next few hours were the busiest ones we had. We had to pack all of the food for our trip, pack our personal gear, swamp a canoe and generally get ourselves ready for the trail. That night we ate supper at the dining hall at base camp and had a campfire at 8.

After the campfire we all headed for the sack and a good night's rest. The next morning we were up by 6:30 and had breakfast at 7 a.m. After breakfast we checked out paddles and canoes and rechecked our gear. At 10:30 we were on our way to our long-awaited adventure.

The canoe base is on Moose Lake and I can assure you most of the fellows saw both shores until we became acquainted with the canoe.

When we finally reached the end of Moose Lake we came to our first portage as well as a lunch break. This consisted of two peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, hot roly and a drink called rid-eye which was made from lake water and stirred with a paddle.

While we rested, our advisors and Larry, our guide, checked us through Canadian customs. After this was completed we paddled and portaged until 5:15, covering 13 miles with four portages. We then made camp on Nds lake.

This consisted of setting up tents, gathering fire wood and starting supper. Some of us then went fishing and some went swimming. Dean Weible cut his foot while swimming. Norris also got his tobacco wet when he took an unexpected dip in the lake. The rice wasn't too bad for supper that evening.

Second Day

We covered 14 miles including seven portages. Some of the portages were through mud up to our knees. We saw Indian paintings on a stone wall. Larry got confused and had to backtrack about 100 yards. We caught 10 northern pike that evening. John and Duane resoled their shoes with the pancakes Radelle made for breakfast.

Third Day

We had six portages including a 1-mile portage we blazed ourselves. While working on the portage we uncovered a nest of bees, which produced eight casualties. We made camp at 3 p.m. and began preparing a campsite for a layover day at Eagle lake. Roy got an unexpected bath, bottoms up. We had pizza for supper that night.

Fourth Day

That was our layover day. We did no traveling. There were two dozen fish caught before breakfast—an outstanding walleye. That morning we improved camp including an A-1 fireplace, church area and tent sites. We had a church service led by John that afternoon. In the evening while John and Roy were fishing, John had three casts and three fish. He lost a quarter to Roy on the fourth cast but connected on the fifth and sixth. Not bad fishing!

Fifth Day

We covered 15 miles including six portages. We saw a mink and bald eagle. We had steak sandwiches made of peanut butter and jelly for lunch. For supper we had delicious apple cobbler. Radelle still hasn't caught a fish. It was rainy and windy that evening.

Sixth Day

We put in our roughest day with four portages totaling three miles. We caught our dinner today including a 31-inch northern caught by Dave. This was the largest fish caught on the trip. We camped at Flat Rock Island that evening.

Explorers' Account of 10 Days of Wilderness Adventure

Before the advent of the white man, Sioux and Chipewa Indians stalked proudly over the portages and paddled their graceful canoes from lake to lake in the North Woods country. Here, some 300 years ago, the dashing and adventuresome Voyageurs paddled their birchbark canoes to the rhythm of their rollicking songs.

Today modern Voyageurs, such as Wayne's Explorers Scouts, scuff the stones of the same portages, and skim swiftly along the same chain of lakes. They followed the same routes the first Voyageurs used, pitched their tents on campsites they used, saw rugged cliffs and virgin forests that still seem to echo with the Voyageurs' merry voices.

Twelve Wayne Explorers and their three sponsors spent 10 days of wilderness living and canoeing through the lake area of Minnesota and Canada. An account of the trip as recorded by Dean Weible and Jim Kern follows.

Participating in the trip were Weible, Kern, Radelle Erxleben, Gary Jones, Richard Maurer, Terry March, Jerry Brandstetter, Gary Lubberstedt, Duane Ellermeier, David Ewing, Gary Lorenzen and Phil Rees. Sponsors were John Berthold, Norris Weible and Roy Coryell.

For seven months 12 Explorer Scouts and three advisors had been waiting to put some of their Scouting knowledge to use in the North Woods of Canada. Our nine-day canoe trip out of the Charles L. Sommers Wilderness Canoe base, 22 miles north of Ely, Minn., was made possible through the effort of every Explorer and parent in our post. We worked two summers, selling concessions at the Wayne ball park, we had car washes and handled the concessions at the District Scout exposition in April.

In February of this year our reservations were sent north and Crew 72TC out of Wayne was now of the record. Then came the long wait from February to July 26 when we would leave. When the date for leaving drew near, our post got together and decided that we would all meet at Norris, Weible's, our advisor for the trip, and pack the cars a full day early to allow for plenty of time to dig up that one thing you inevitably forget when taking a trip.

At 6 a.m. July 26, all 15 of us once again assembled at the Weible home, this time to head north to our final destination, the canoe base. At 6:30 our three cars driven by Roy Coryell, John Berthold and

and came up and asked us to be on an interview, "Fan in the Stands." We recognized this man as Randy Merriman, the master of ceremonies of the now defunct "Big Payoff." After our interview we enjoyed a real pitchers' duel between the Minnesota Twins and the Washington Senators. The game was finally won by the Twins 10-9 in the ninth inning. There were four homers hit.

We arrived at the Twin Cities about 3 p.m. and found our rooms on the fifth floor. That evening we ate supper at the "Y" and then left for the Minnesota Twins baseball park. Tickets for the game were furnished by the State National Bank and Schmidt Brewing company. Our much appreciated seats were located nine rows behind the Twins dugout.

While we were watching batting practice, a man from a Minneapolis radio station saw our uniforms and Larry, our guide, checked us through Canadian customs. After this was completed we paddled and portaged until 5:15, covering 15 miles with four portages. We then made camp on Nest Lake.

Sixth Day
We put in our roughest day with four portages totaling three miles. We are now back in the good old U.S.A. We made camp on Washington Island in Basswood lake at 4:30 p.m. Dave cut his finger while whittling. Larry and Norris left for the trading post and candy bars but were forced back by a storm. We had a sacrificial fire that night with these donations: Duane's muscle shirt; Jim's jeans; Rich's hat; Terry's hat, and several other sentimental items.

We washed packs and canoes. That night John, Roy and Radelle got lost while fishing and had to since our first day out. Norris is down to one half pipe full of tobacco and Roy is starting to cut his cigars in half. We had cimamon rolls for supper.

Ninth Day
We had two portages that seemed like super highways compared to the others. For lunch we had a half sandwich. We arrived back at base at 2:30 p.m. ending our 110-mile canoe trip into the wilderness. Then we had to oil all the leather straps on our packs and chuck up of pay for our paddles, as well as sand down our one wooden canoe.

We then took our sauna (steam bath) which really felt good after nine days on the trail. We had a delicious turkey dinner that evening which lasted like a million bucks. At the closing campfire Jim retold our trip and Dave and Duane gave our skirt. We started a big rivalry that night with 40 Texas boys who were there when we started to sing the Nebraska Fight Song.

We ate breakfast at 7 the next morning and left for Wayne. We went to Duluth, Minn. by way of North Shore drive along Lake Superior. We stopped to take some pictures of a coal loading operation. When we got to Duluth we visited a Coast Guard Station where some of us took photos of a Coast Guard buoy tender.

In Duluth we stopped at a stand where we enjoyed our first hamburgers for over a week. We then went, by way of St. Paul to Okoboji, where we all spent that night in one cabin. The next morning we all went water skiing.

We used Roy's, Alan Cramer's and Phil March's boats. We all thought this tipped off a wonderful trip in a good way. We left for Wayne at 3 p.m. and arrived here at 7. Everyone really had a good laugh when they saw the grizzly faces of Norris and John.

Tenth Day
We had seven portages and saw a deer and an old trapper's cabin. We also saw the first humans stop at a cabin for directions. This cabin just happened to be the home of a family of seven daughters. Of course they were given directions.

When a hammer keeps glancing off nailheads at an angle, chances are the hammer is dirty or nicked both. Correct this by cleaning with a solvent, then file the surface even with a flat file.

The perfect backdrop for a lovely woman is a home panelled in luxurious and elegant wood and finished like a dream. West coast hemlock and Douglas fir, prestige woods of great beauty, are popular for paneling.

Long Life Floors

A properly installed wood floor in a home will outlast several owners. Even if badly treated, it can be sanded and refinished as good as new. This is especially true of soft-wood floors like west coast hemlock.

Sandpaper Storage

Use an old photograph record album as a storage book for sandpaper and other abrasive sheets. Put each grade of abrasive in a separate sleeve and label so each one can be quickly located.

Outdoor-Indoor

Homes of the future will put more emphasis on outdoor-indoor living. Deck terraces or patios will become even more popular. Both Douglas fir and western red cedar lend themselves to this type of construction.

FARM REVIEW AND FORECAST

Livestock Marketing Pattern in Nebraska

Nebraska ranks high among the leading states in livestock production. For several years, state estimates have shown that marketings of livestock (cattle, hogs, sheep) contribute 55-60 percent of the total cash income of farmers and ranchers.

The State Balance-Sheet Estimates for 1959

Livestock:	Marketings (a)	Cash Receipts	(per-head)
	(000)	(000)	(percent)
Cattle & calves	2,194	555,816	45.9
Hogs	3,846	180,405	10.8
Sheep & lambs	74	16,292	1.4
(a) Estimates do not include farm-to-farm marketings within the state if performed either direct between Nebraska farmers/ranchers, or through country dealers bypassing public stock yards and auctions. Because of these omissions the actual volume of marketing operations (trade) in the state is much larger.

The Sandhill area produces some cows and grass-fed cattle, but specializes in the production of feeder cattle and calves. By contrast, most feeding operations are performed in farming areas. This results in intrastate feeder cattle marketings, the size of which is difficult to estimate. The number of livestock on feed is subject to annual and seasonal fluctuations, and is estimated for 1959 as 1.5 million head.

Sheep and lambs involve marketing operations somewhat similar to those for cattle. During the most recent years some of the large-scale lamb feeding operations have been discontinued. However, during the same period the number of farms reporting sheep has greatly increased. In the western part of the ranch area the ewe population is estimated at over 200,000.

The major lamb feeding operations are concentrated around the upper and central part of the Platte River Valley. Practically all lambs from Nebraska ranches, were fed in Nebraska, in addition to some 620,000 feeder lambs shipped in from western mountain ranches. Although some of the lamb feeding operations seem fairly large none can equal cattle operations in size and mechanization.

Pigs are generally fattened on the farm on which they are raised. During the last few years schemes have developed to provide high-quality meat-type breeding stock. In this connection efforts are made to establish specialized "pig hatcheries." So far these operations have not significantly affected the marketing pattern throughout the state. The majority of producers raise their own pigs. Most of these operations are relatively small. While a few sow herds of over 50 head exist, the number of sows on most farms is considerably smaller.

Markets And Facilities Available

Only a little over ten percent of the slaughtered livestock marketed from Nebraska farms is purchased for consumption within the state. This percentage is even smaller in terms of commercial slaughter. This is because at least 25 percent of the livestock slaughtered in Nebraska is shipped in from other states.

The state's total commercial slaughter during 1959 is estimated as:

Cattle	1,960,000	head
Calves	11,600	head
Hogs	4,425,000	head
Sheep and lambs	1,026,000	head

About 99 percent of these animals are slaughtered in 29 plants under Federal inspection. The other one percent is slaughtered in 29 "commercial" plants not under Federal inspection. Seven of these "commercial" plants slaughter over 2 million pounds live weight annually and the other 22 are "medium-commercial" plants slaughtering from 300,000 to 2,000,000 pounds live weight annually. By law, meat from these plants can be sold only within Nebraska.

The 29 "commercial" plants produce about 10-20 percent of the meat consumed in the state. The other 80-90 percent comes from plants under Federal inspection. About 7 to 8 percent of the livestock slaughtered in Nebraska is consumed within the state, leaving 92-93 percent to be consumed in other states.

Firms operating the 29 plants under Federal inspection can compete for markets throughout the United States.

The number of plants by type of livestock slaughtered is as follows:

Type of Livestock slaughtered	"Commercial" plants not under Federal inspection	Total
Cattle, hogs and sheep	5	8
Only hogs	1	3
Cattle and hogs	22	23
Only cattle	22	26
Total	29	58

Twenty-two of the Federally inspected plants including the four largest plants of National Packers are located close to the Omaha stock yards. Seven of the Federally inspected, and all 29 commercial plants are "interior" plants.

Livestock usually does not go directly to the slaughtering plant. Other routes include buying stations, auction markets, dealers and the terminal market. Only six packer-operated buying stations or concentration yards exist within the state. Although some packers indicate the intention to add more stations, a few have been discontinued during the last few years. Apparently some of the advantages these stations provide in other states do not exist in most parts of Nebraska.

Instead, Nebraska state records for a series of years show a fairly large number, between 105 and 110, of licensed salesbars or auction markets. The size of these auction markets is indicated by data for 1959 on the number of auction markets by reported number of head sold annually:

Reported annual run (head)	Cattle and calves	Hogs	Lambs
100,000 and over	3	3	0
50,000 to 99,999	7	5	1
25,000 to 49,999	15	19	1
10,000 to 24,999	21	30	4
1 to 9,999	50	44	51
Total auction markets	105	105	105

About half of the auction markets are of very respectable size. During the months in which ranchers bring their calves to market, the small towns are crowded with buyers. Large numbers of the buyers are from states to the east. They may stay for weeks, move from auction to auction, and buy not only for themselves, but also "for friends and neighbors."

Nebraska, being the westernmost part of the Corn Belt, has a market advantage for hogs in the west, but obviously not for cattle and sheep, for which the demand is in the east. Although the picture is not quite complete without considering the rates of livestock production in both Nebraska and Iowa plus other factors, the geographical trends are reflected in data provided by the Omaha Stock Yards for 1959. Receipts by states of origin show that of livestock slaughtered in Omaha, Nebraska contributed 58.5 percent of cattle and calves, and 46.9 percent of sheep and lambs, while Iowa contributed 29.4 and 21 percent respectively. By contrast, Nebraska provided only 31.4 percent of hogs while Iowa provided 65 percent.

During the last forty years the changes in livestock marketing patterns were clearly toward bypassing public stock yards. Even though the river markets showed steady gains in volumes, these gains were at a lower rate than the increase in livestock production.

Apparently the future of country buying was overestimated by the packing industry. Local procurement operations today are faced with wide fluctuations in farm marketings. It is hardly possible for a medium or larger plant to work on short shifts for an indefinite number of days merely because local farmers defer marketing while they work their fields. This is one factor which forces interior plants to expand their buying over a wider area.

Once the pressing field work is completed, seasonal marketings may become very large. The local plant and country markets also are ill-suited to handle these large volumes, which overflow to public stock yards. Data for hogs indicate that of the Federally inspected weekly slaughter, eight major public stock yards handled more than 30 percent in weeks with large runs and only 12 percent in weeks with small runs.

At the public market the buyer for the large diversified plant can play pretty hard the competitive alternative of country buying or direct buying. Yet at the same time he will reluctantly "clean up the market" and thus occasionally buy large numbers of livestock, including odds and ends. To a selling agency, he usually represents a highly important potential customer who must be tended with care.

Not only is the management of a large diversified plant opposed to livestock grading other than their own, they also have the least inclination toward buying at the public market; primarily because the prices that the public market officially records become prices which their country buyer has to meet a few hours later. Selling agencies are aware of the fact that a market which provides official market and price reports carries heavy burden. Such markets establish prices which guide and protect farmers in their marketing operations. Yet this endeavor is continually torpedoed by those who lean heavily on these prices while selling direct or at country markets, to those buyers who round the countryside merely to bypass the price reporting points.

These observations lead to conclusions which in turn invite expectations of future developments.

An excessively large number of small operators are engaged in livestock marketing. While this could mean effective competition, actually it is evidence of economic inefficiency. Apparently livestock marketing involves too much feel, skill and know-how, because every seller and nearly every buyer feels that he has to be assisted by some expert: (1) to determine the animal's quality and value, (2) to minimize the many risks involved, and (3) to be piloted through the pitfalls of the trade.

As machine costs rise and the capacity of the machine increases, it becomes increasingly important to use machines on as many acres as possible in order to reduce cost per acre. Thus pressure for larger acreage per machine has encouraged increase in size of farm and more custom work by owners of new and larger machines. Custom work is possible in combination with some of the farmers choose to have part of their field work performed by their neighbors instead of buying a machine of their own. This practice is largely confined to harvesting.

The range in sizes available permits selection of a machine that most closely fits the acreage to be harvested. This opportunity apparently is ignored in many instances. Fourteen-foot, self-propelled combines were used on all these farms, yet the acreage covered per machine in 1959 varied from 150 to 700, omitting one large custom-operated machine that covered 2,040 acres. Only two of the 16 machines harvested over 200 acres on the home farm. Nine machines harvested between 150 and 300 acres. The average acreage harvested was 463 acres, including the machine that covered 2,040 acres, and 356 acres for the other 15 machines. Of the 15 machines, 4 were not used for custom work. Custom harvesting varied from 10 to 845 acres for the other 11 machines. Forty-six percent of the acreage harvested by the 15 machines was custom work.

Using these machines for harvesting wheat, oats, barley, milo, and beans extended the harvest season and increased the total acreage harvested. Thirty-seven percent of the average acreage harvested on the 16 farms was milo, which did not interfere with the small grain harvest.

The experience with these machines portrays the struggle to increase acreage harvested per machine. The costs on individual farms vary considerably from this trend for a number of reasons, one of which is the difference in repair bills among farms in the year that the study was conducted. However, these differences do not contradict the principle that costs tend to decline as more acres are harvested. The least cost was $1.00 per acre and the highest $6.50 (average, $2.11).

More detailed costs for these two machines are given in the table. The total annual cost of operating machine Number 2, was $865 higher than for machine Number 1. Both fixed and variable costs were higher. Repair costs were considerably higher. However, total costs per acre harvested were $1.12 lower for machine Number 2, because of the larger acreage harvested. The important difference was in the fixed costs. Although the annual fixed cost was $397 for machine Number 2 compared with $78 for machine Number 1, the fixed cost per acre was $1.23 compared with $2.89 on machine Number 1. Increasing the estimated life of this machine to 20 years would reduce the depreciation per acre by 70 cents, leaving the total cost per acre still considerably higher than that of machine Number 2.

It might be argued that the machine which harvests only 200 acres per year would last longer than 12 years, but there is the problem of obsolescence to consider. Obsolescence occurs when another machine becomes available that either does better quality work at the same costs or the same quality work at a lower cost. How rapidly this occurs is unpredictable. The more years a machine is used, the greater the possibility of obsolescence.

Combines used on more acres cost less per acre. The principle illustrated here applies not only to combines, but to all other farm machines.

Cost of operating two selected 14-foot, self-propelled combines, per machine and per acre in 1959.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The editorial department of a weekly newspaper is an important department. Normally it is one person's opinion of topics that concern most of the readers.

It is the duty of an editorial writer to search all available facts before he sits down to write. From this basis the writer should be able to give a clear picture of important topics.

Deeds Must Follow Words

The reaction of Senator Byrd of Virginia to the administration's program for a vast increase in our military capacities should find support among all who are interested in the fiscal integrity of the country.

As reported by the Associated Press, he praised the President's speech as a "powerful statement of the American position." However, the report continued, "Byrd said it will mean huge deficits or huge taxation unless Kennedy is willing to curtail all non-defense expenditures including all that he recommended when taking office in January."

Senator Byrd, of course, referred to non-defense expenditures which can be abandoned or postponed without weakening the nation's power to defend itself and, if necessary, to take the offensive. These include any and all expenditures of the "welfare-state" category. We have reached the point where we simply can't afford any more Big Brother government and where individuals will have to do a better job of dealing with their own problems. We must relearn the fact that Washington is not a bottomless pit of money to be handed out for the asking.

The President has spoken often of

You may not agree with an editorial — but if you read the editorial and give serious thought to the subject discussed you have gained. You, as a reader, have given careful thought to an important problem and the writer is proud to have called your attention to an important subject that you may have overlooked.

the need for sacrifice. The words must now be reflected in deeds, by government as well as individuals.

What you have said and forgotten is precisely what will be recalled next day by those who were present.

Back Door Spending

The Federal budgets are coming perilously close to the $100-billion-a-year mark. The reason is what is known as "back door spending." This is a procedure by which a Federal agency may obtain funds for a project or program without previous or later annual scrutiny by the appropriations committee of Congress.

A current example is found in the housing bills, which carry price tabs of close to six billion. This is the type of spending over which Congress has little or no say — except to pay the bills as they come due. And that amounts to an abandonment of one of the most important duties laid upon Congress by the Constitution. If there ever was a time when every item of expenditure demanded the closest examination and control, this is it.

Effectiveness in preventing top spoilage of silage. Plastic films made excellent covers when weighted with dirt or sawdust.

Losses were completely eliminated with dirt over the plastic and almost eliminated with sawdust. Felt building or roofing paper, covered with dirt or sawdust, is inexpensive, but losses through top spoilage are considerably greater.

In all cases there was complete breakdown of the felt material between the silage and the dirt or sawdust. This did not occur with plastic, and consequently, there was no layer of wet and rotted silage immediately under the coved.

Perhaps the realm in which there is the most confusion is that of religion. There are many kinds, types and shades of religions in this world. Each one of them claims, in some way, to point to the ultimate good and the eternal well-being of the faithful participant. Certainly this is confusing.

The person who tries to brush it all away by denying the immortality of the soul just adds to the confusion. He does not have proof for his claims whereas many factors in this world seem to indicate the contrary. But the confusion remains and will remain for each person until he carefully examines all the available evidence, weighing it carefully and then makes his own decision.

Drivers will have to get used to a set of new conditions on the interstate. Trucks, truck tractors or freight carrying vehicles may not exceed 65 miles per hour, automobiles 75. Unless in case of weather or emergency, all vehicles must drive at least 40 miles per hour.

It is permissible to pass a vehicle on either the right or left side since the highway is divided, with two lanes running each way, separated by a strip of land.

Vehicles may not stop along the highway unless the vehicle is disabled or the driver ill, and even then it may be towed away at the owner's expense. It is illegal to back a vehicle on the road or make a U-turn. Lane changing must be preceded by eight seconds of warning from turn signals, and be given for at least 50 feet before turning.

State Fair

Anyone dropping in to the State fairgrounds in Lincoln nowadays will see someone rushing from building to building and across the grounds and back. He resembles an athlete in training. The dasher is Ed Schultz, secretary of the state fair board. While he is hustling here and there gets him into shape for the fair, he also is extremely busy at the same time.

Schultz is supervising the operations to put the grounds in tip-top shape for the annual exposition which opens Sept. 2 and runs through Sept. 7.

No exhibits will be removed from the fairgrounds until after midnight of the last day, Schultz says, so people can come to the fair on Thursday, the final day, and see anything that was there opening day.

The secretary says there is a strong demand for reserved seats for the grandstand performances which impresses him. He says this is a good sign of the crowds to come at the annual event.

Industrial space is sold out, livestock space is going to be as heavily used as last year and perhaps a little more. If the trend continues, the secretary said, the fair is going to equal or surpass any previous six-day exposition.

Purchasing Department

The State Purchasing department is expected to be in the news more in the coming months.

By law, the department head or purchasing agent has authority to purchase for trench silos.

Six different seals or covers for trench silos were checked during three years to compare their ef-

This whole thing doesn't rest in the hands of a chosen few. Sure, they will do the actual negotiating, but if they are to be successful, their firm determination must be bolstered by the knowledge that you and I are united behind them. This is where we must all stand up and be counted. There shall be no divide and conquer."

Thinking OUT LOUD

Church of Christ, Wayne

A thought has been growing in my mind for some time as I talk with people, as I read and hear the news. I can't help thinking there is a great deal of confusion today. It may not be the bad noise or blurred pictures we people lost in the woods not knowing which way to go, but there is confusion: 1) throughout the political world; 2) in the personal lives of many people, and 3) in religion.

On the international scene much of the confusion is caused by propaganda which is either false or only partly true. So we see that people are confused because of false ideas that they gain from false information. Then there is some confusion as people sacrifice their ideals in making treaties for supposed security. Then, too, there is much confusion as people speculate concerning other nations' intentions. We must conclude that lies, whether told or imagined or acted out, are also responsible.

In the mind of every human being there is some confusion. Though some may not be conscious of it, even so they are confused if they are not basing all their reasoning on true premises. There is confusion concerning ideals, including what is right and what is wrong to do. And there is confusion of values. This includes values of products advertised on the market; projects we might launch, and interests that might claim our mental energies and attentions. We might extend this list to include any matter you cannot know the whole truth about. So we are confused.

Perhaps the realm in which there is the most confusion is that of religion. There are many kinds, types and shades of religions in this world. Each one of them claims, in some way, to point to the ultimate good and the eternal well-being of the faithful participant. Certainly this is confusing.

The person who tries to brush it all away by denying the immortality of the soul just adds to the confusion. He does not have proof for his claims whereas many factors in this world seem to indicate the contrary. But the confusion remains and will remain for each person until he carefully examines all the available evidence, weighing it carefully and then makes his own decision.

For example if we honestly and carefully examine all the evidence concerning the Bible and can conclude that it is divinely given, we can depend on its teachings as truth. Many of us have done this much and dispelled the confusion accordingly. Now we can depend on the Bible's teachings as truth. We must be admonished by the Bible command to "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

We must examine each point carefully, then stand for truth and right. Only the truth known and accepted can dispel confusion.

Uncle Zee FROM Plum Creek

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

Several serious items was took up by the fellers at the country store Saturday night. First off, Ed announced he discovered accidental a important weakness in our form of Government.

Ed said he's been reading the bank ads in them big Sunday papers and he ain't saw a single one that didn't list four or five vice presidents. Now everybody knows, says Ed, that all banks is making money, paying dividends and ain't never been known to operate in the red. It's on account of them vice presidents' claims. Ed said if a bank needs four or five vice presidents to operate real good, Ed allows as how the Government will never git the budget balanced with just one.

Then Ed shook up the meeting with the news that this fellow James Patton, head of the National Farmers Union, is asking the Congress to make it unlawful to farm without a license. He claims that farmers can't practice law on medicine and it ain't right for lawyers and doctors to be raising their own vegetables.

All the fellers was in favor of this license business, said Sam said he was going to write his Congressman right away. A rancher can't run an extension cord to his barn on account of him not having a electric license, and I don't see how can they electric fellers has any right to be raising their own pens and corn without a farm license. In some states a farmer ain't allowed to unstack his kitchen sink without calling a plumber and a plumber ain't got no right to be hurting the price of beef by raising himself a steer.

They ought to be certain requirements before you can get a license to lift a hoe. I'd say orthand that you ought to have at least two hoes; a silo, two hound dogs, a cow, 40 hens and a rooster that crows ten minutes at daylight. On top of that, you ought to have to fill out them rotating and estimating forms, and read all them pamphlets they send out from the farm agencies.

I'm in favor of making doctors, lawyers, plumbers, barbers and all them other professions that protects their business with licenses stay out of the farm business. It ought to be a $10 fine for a doctor to even raise a blue-top turp. Us farmers need some protection in this business.

And speaking of protection, it's gitting to be a pretty complicated item in Washington. For instance, Bobby Kennedy is aiming to dig a heap of folks fer fixing prices outside the farm and brother Jack is working on plans to fix prices inside the farm. You figger it out, Mister Editor.

Yours truly,
Uncle Zee

Way Back When . . .

10 Years Ago

Aug. 30, 1951: Bishop Dana Dawson, Topeka, Kan., will be one of the guest speakers Sunday as the Wayne Methodist church observes its seven-tenth anniversary and fiftieth anniversary of the present church building. Carroll citizens approved a $10,000 bond issue which will make possible the construction and equipping of a new auditorium. More rain has fallen the past week, 2.40 inches according to Archie Wert, the official weather recorder for this area. At 4 a.m. a boat was used to rescue the Merle Schlund family, Carroll, from their farm home as the water rose to 12 inches in the house. Deer Creek again was over its banks and high water reached the Carroll depot and flooded the lumber yard. Mr. and Mrs. C. Woods, Carroll, and nephew, Ronnie Park, Page, went to Omaha Friday where they joined a group going on the baseball tour to Chicago. Carroll citizens go to the Chevrolet service at Wakefield last week. Clifford Fox is in charge of the garage for Mr. Coryell. A. M. Hypse, Wakefield, sold his furniture business in Wakefield to his son-in-law, W. F. Peterson, Omaha. For the second time this season Jack Morgan, Wayne, won the "short-stop" golf tournament Sunday sponsored by Meridian Heights club, Norfolk. A large crowd attended the old settlers' picnic at Winslow last week. The centennial parade and boxing bouts in the evening were special attractions.

15 Years Ago

Aug. 29, 1946: Dixon county's thirty-third annual fair and 4-H show began yesterday at Concord. C. N. Olson moved the Wayne Photo company from West Third street to the north Main street building which he purchased and remodeled. Carroll won the championship of the Big Six baseball league by defeating Stanton 13-10. Caire Hobart, blind pianist, singer and composer, and John Turner, chalk talk artist, had a part in Sunday school services at Concordia Lutheran church, Concord. A youth technicolor picture, "Detour to Danger," will be shown free in Winfield auditorium, sponsored by St. Paul's Lutheran and Methodist churches. New buildings are being constructed in Wakefield. Clarence Hypse is building a carpenter shop. Albert Anderson is constructing an apartment dwelling and a basement is being dug for a two-story building soon to be erected by John Schroeder.

20 Years Ago

Aug. 28, 1941: Zoning is planned for Wayne place together. In times past, those who love dogs have been good to us and so we ask again, bearing in mind our debt in gratitude.

Mrs. Louise Wood, The Sanctuary, Route 2, Box 264, Martinsville, Ind.

We need food (of any sort), old towels, blankets or pieces. Just about anything can find application here.

Forty-five cold robes and warm hearts salute you!

Louise Wood,

Cost of building this type of shelter, without hiring labor, would be about $650. (Third of a Series)
The first strike against the United States during an atomic war would probably not last more than 15 minutes. Authorities recommend all persons take cover immediately after receiving the warning and remain in it for about 20 minutes after the first bombs fall.

Waiting that long will give time to find out whether local targets have been hit. If they have not, there will be time to move to a community shelter if one is available.

If there is no community shelter, it will be up to the individual to provide shelter for himself and his family. This should be done beforehand as it may be necessary to live in the shelter for two weeks or longer.

Materials for building several types of individual shelters are available on the market today. Detailed instructions for building several of these, including the above-ground double-wall shelter, basement concrete block shelter, underground reinforced concrete shelter and preshaped metal arch shelter, may be found in a booklet published by the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization. "The Family Fallout Shelter" may be obtained by writing: Box Home Shelter, Battle Creek, Mich.

Another shelter, the reinforced concrete pipe shelter, is described here because of its low cost.

I should like to state that I do not condemn our teachers, and never have, for they don't dare say anything as they will be asked to resign. I have had several tell me to get the parents interested in our education and help them. In fact, one has given me a letter that I may release if I care to, but I hope it won't be necessary, just for fear they may be asked to resign.

I am not the type of person to slide my feet, as you more than likely know by now, even though I have been discriminated against for coming out in public and expressing my opinions. I have spoken nothing but the truth. I'm asking our school board president to examine his conscience. As for giving further proof on this book, about all I can state at present is, "I believe anyone who would go along with this type of a text must advocate Socialism, World Government, or Communism!"

Ed said he's been reading the bank ads in them big Sunday papers and he ain't saw a single one that didn't list four or five vice presidents.
