Auto seat helts have long been considered by safety experts a major safety factor in preventing serious injury or fatalities in auto accidents.

Band Works Hard

Every morning they are drilled through their routine until it is perfect.

A day with the band begins at 7:50 each morning. They march down to Wayne High's practice field, which is usually quite wet from dew. But do they grumble? No, it is merely part of the ups and downs of being in band.

They work on the routine all week and present it at the game Friday night.

In an interview with Mr. Don Schumacher, the new band director at Wayne High, he gave the standards he goes by to choose a half-time show for the football games. The length of time the band has to work on a show must always be considered, and time is usually limited to five days. Each routine should differ from the last one so that it presents a challenge to the students. Also, the music and the plot must be put together in a manner that is entertaining and amusing to the audience.

The band's future marching Band Clinic held at Pershing Memorial in Lincoln.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The editorial department of a weekly news

In editorial department of a weekly news-pale is an important department. Normally it is far person's opinion of topics that concern most of the readers.

It is the duty of an editorial writer to search all available facts before he sits down to write. From this basis the writer should be able to give a clear facture of important topics.

Resistance

Administration spokesmen, following an old tradition, have said that the defeat of its inster domestic measures can be attributed to the power of intreached selfish interests along with pure political finangling which cynically disregards the public interest.

But there is another and very different side of the coin. Walter Lippmann, who has observed the national scene for a great many years and is certainly no hidebound conservative, summed it up in these words: "I do not see how it can be doubted as the resistance in Consress, which involves about a third of the Demperats and about all the Republicans, rests on powerful and stubborn feelings among the voters."

This resistance is to the further extension, at chormous cost, of the Welfare State. Among other things it has made liself felt in the votes that defeated the creation of a cabinet-level department of urban affairs and the medi-care plan tied to Social Security payments.

The medicare matter is especially significant. It is reported that members of Congress received more than one million pieces of mail in opposition to it. Of the 20 senators from the 10 states with the highest percentage of elderly people, 17 voted against the final amended version of the bill. They certainly knew the sentiments of their constituents.

Every government, like every family, must at times come to grips with a problem as old as society. It amounts to choosing between what it might like to have and what it can afford. We can't afford more Welfare Statism without running incalculable risks.

Highway Program
Concern has been expressed about what will happen to the state's highway program if the highway construction bill remain ted up in Congress.

State Engineer John Hossack has said, "if the bill does not pet passed during this session, it could delay Nebraska's highway program considerably." He has urged Nebraska's congressional delegation to work hard to get the measure approved.

If the bill is not passed, it would mean Nebraska have to wait until after Congress reconvenes before the annual appropriation, averages about $12 \text{ million, is assigned to the state, Deputy State Engineer G. C. Strobel said.

Governor Morrison has promised to submit such a bill and and has indicated an increase in the basic driver's license cost would be at the heart of the proposed program.
The state has about 800,000 regular driver's licenses. Nearly all of the receipts from such licenses go, into the state's general fund and is apportioned for purposes designated by the Legislature.

It is known that some educators willing to consider a compulsory driver education program feel that much of the driver's license revenue would have to be carmarked to support the driver training programs in the schools.

U.S. Department of Agriculture officials have notified Nebraska officials there is no legal authority to permit supplying western Nebraska farmers with surplus corn from storage with the stipulation that it be repaid from next year's crop.

The request for such an arrangement was made after a hard freeze early in September in the Panhandle. Much of the livestock fee d grain crop was lost in the frost.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman said, however, he is giving sorious consideration to another request that farmers in the Panhandle be permitted to buy surplus corn at 75 percent of the support price.

Visitors From Iowa
Six members of the Iowa
Board of Control recently toured the Lincoln State Hospital Io see if establishment of a similar facility might be feasible in Iowa. George Morris, state director of institutions, said the group was "very much impressed with the arrangement and care offered the criminally insane at the hospital."
Iowa does not have a medital retention center offering psychiatric care for the criminally insane. Such persons are housed in a state prison at Anamosa, Iowa.

Morris commented, "In Iowa, it's a matter of custody of the criminally insane, while in Nebraska we attempt to expose the inmates to a medically oriented program."
The Iowans also looked over the security portion of the penitentiary. Warden Maurice Sigler said the group seemed "favorably impressed" with the conditions and program for maximum security prisoners at that institution.

The conclusion reached at the end of a five-year effort of the Nebraska Community Education Project was that in Nebraska communities there is a layer of pioneering togetherness and "Git-Up-And-Go" as strong as it was 75 years ago.

Four communities — Sidney, York, Syracuse and Mullen — were included in the project.

Dr. Dale Halves, administrator and chairman of the University of Nebraska administrator and chairman for the University of Nebraska department of school administration, said: "While the younger generation might not realize it, most flommunity betterment, projects, during sour pioneering days were the result of meetings and rallies at the schools and by people who took great interest in the who took great interest in the education of youth."

And Common Cold

And Common Cold

The remarkable decrease in deaths from pneumonia and in-fluenza is most encouraging demonstration of progress. About 200,000 more people would have died last year had the death rate of the '30s for these diseases prevailed. Better use of medical care by the public, and particularly the use of antibiotics discovered, and made available in the 1940s have curbed much premature death.

In 12 months of 1958-59, ac-the 1940s have curbed much premature death.

In 12 months of 1958-59, according to the National Health survey, respiratory conditions (the family of diseases that includes the common cold, infuenza, and pneumonia) were reported by the common cold, infuenza, and pneumonia) were reported deaver 700 million days of restricted activity — or nearly half the total of such days caused by all acute conditions. Immunization with the influenza vaccine has been reported as 60 to 75 per cent effective. Its use would seem to be particularly valuable in substantially reducing mortality in persons aged 65 and over, persons with certain chronic diseases, and pregnant women, but the entire population could benefit. Research (is now aimed at finding a vaccine.

If you Don't Have a Cold:

1. Stay away from persons who do. Avoid using their towels, cups, drinking glasses,

2. Wash your hands often—always before handling food or eating.

3. Avoid getting overtired or wet or chilled. Eat a balanced diet, and don't overlanced diet, and don't overlanced diet, and don't over-

Oct. 16, 1952: Fire, believed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion, destroyed a barn and contents on the E. L. Pentson farm, southeast of Carroll, Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Jenkins and sons live on the farm. Dale and Dayle Jenkins were playing in the haymow when the explosion occurred. Donna Lou Olson, Cleghorn, Ia, was chosen homecoming queen at WSTC. The Chncord fire department, was called out wice last week. Wednesday aftermoon they extinguished a brish pile fire at Offford Carlson's, and Thursday evening were called to the Gleinn Magnuson farm where a traish fire had gotten out of control. Lyle, young son of Mr and Mrs. Virgil Ekberg, Wakefield, received a broken leg last Monday afternoon when he became entangled in an elevator at the Lee Schulz farm.

The fellers at the country store Saturday night was voicing their blessings her the Congress not being in session. Ed allowed as how this was the only season of the year, when a poter man could go to bed at night and not expect to read in the papers next morning where the Congress was working on a new plan to tax him ier his own welfare.

Charlie said, now that Congress has adjourned, it looked like just about everbody has crossed the New Frontier and is headed fer the Promised Land. He reported, fer instant, about seeing In the papers where the better barber shops in Washington was now gitting into this "status" business and has installed them Kennedy rocking chairs fer the customers to set in while they're waiting. Charlie claimed the piece said one barber shop there has put in a phonograph playing classic music and is serving coffee, tea and doughnuts. But Sam was lamenting that barber shops, tea or no tea, won't never reach the proper "status" till they invent a contraption that'll keep hair from gitting down the customer's back. Sam never was a feller to appreciate classic music and the finer things in life.

And while the barbers was crossing the New Frontier, Harry reported that Senator Wiley from our good state of Wiscobsin wasn't making much headway with his plan to help the farm surplus problem. You will recollect, Mister Editor, that Senator Wiley told the Congress after it adjourned that one of his loyal constituents had in v e n t e d a cheese charcoal filter that would cut the tar and nicotine dut of cigarette smoke. He has been trying to git the Guvernment to endorse it, pointing out that it will be a fine thing fer our surplus dairy products. Harry allowed as how it solunded as sensible as anything else that has come out of the Congress on the Surpling by the filter that it would to nothing during his life time.

When ninety percent of the "best" cooks do something one way, it has to be good. Nine out of ten meals served in restaurants, clubs and hotels are cooked with gas! it's more economical, faster, easier to control by temperature. But that's just half the reason you'll want a new Gold Star gas range. Ab, what wonderful ideas for us stay-at-home cooks. Eye-level ovens, for instance, keep your meal "table ready," till Dad stops watching TV... easily-clean burners and broilers; dozens of other work and guess-savers! Guess you should see your local gas company, Peoples Natural Gas, or gas appliance dealer. © Northern Natural Gas Company, Omaha, Nebraske

The flame starts to work as soon as you turn the flal. Gas cooks faster because the flame fits itself to the bottom of the pan, so gou cook with the whole surface. Gas cooks faster because you can select exactly the right heat, and change cooking temperatures in an instant. You don't have to "make-do" with just four or five temperatures. District No. 2
Charlene Merrimas, Teacher
Once-again school is here and working together. We have 12 pupils enrolled in our school, in grades one through seven.

Lately we have been very busy taking achievement tests, which our teacher says will show us our strong and weak spots, and will help us to know what we need towork on.

We did quite well at the County Pair this year. We received five excellent ratings and ore superior on pictures, maps and stories that were correlated with subject matter. Some of us attended the Nebraska State Fair in Lincoln, and had many interesting facts to report to the class.

We organized a Citizenship Chib.

Nutritionists admit water is as important as feed. Top poultrymen say adequate supplies of clean, fresh water are the cheapest way to keep hens producing at their best. Here's a continuous flow fountain that does a good job for this egg producer. He makes certain he has one fountain for each 100 hens and that the fountains are no more than 30 feet apart. Under most conditions 100 hens will consume about seven to eight gallons of water a day.

Rate of production makes a big difference in egg profits. Flocks that produce much less than 200 eggs per hen during 12 months of lay seldom make a profit for the operator. On the other hand, records of Midwest egg producers show that, when production averages 18 døzen eggs per hen annually, net profits often run $1 or more per bird; and at the 230-egg level some producers are realizing a return of $1.50 or more per hen.

Basically most flocks of pullets are quite similar in their genetic or bred-in ability to produce at a high rate. However, actual performance after a year's lay will vary greatly from flock to flock. The reason is usually due to different levels of stress to which the flock is subjected.

Don't Let STRESS Rob Your Egg Basket

Turbo-Charging is the modern way to get more power more efficiently out of a big farm diesel... without the need for the excessive bulk of bigger-displacement engines ... without running smaller engines at "revved up" speeds.

Turbo-Charging adds 20% to engine power. The power output depends on the oxygen available to burn fuel efficiently. Turbo-Charging simply pushes more air into manifold and cylinders. The compressor that does this job is driven by exhaust energy normally wasted.

Turbo-Charging sweeps out burned gases. Exhaust valves remain open momentarily after the intake valves are opened. A stream of clean, cool air rushes through each cylinder for a clean sweep between each power stroke.

Turbo-Charging cools valves, nozzles and pistons. The cooling action of this air on valves, injector nozzles and pistons lengthens engine life significantly.

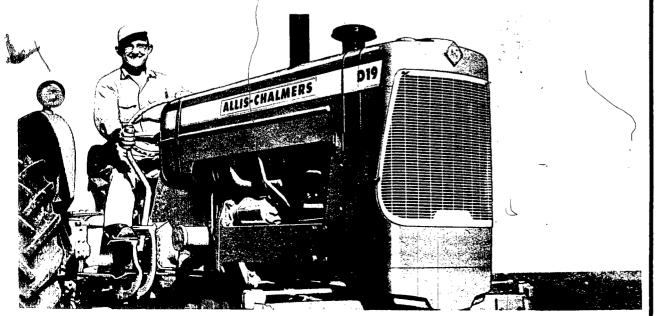

Through Turbo-Charging, Allis-Chalmers meets today's farm problems of increasing work capacity, simplifying tractor design, and extending tractor life. Turbo-Charging is not new in Allis-Chalmers power plants — for years Allis-Chalmers' large crawler tractors and earth movers have been Turbo-Charged.

If you're looking for the latest in big diesel tractors — 70.35 hp on the PTO — see and try the D-19 Turbo-Charged Diesel, now.

You can get the D-19 for gasoline with 75.3 hp on the PTO, and for LP gas with 69.6 hp on the PTO. (All horsepower figures are corrected to standard conditions.)

Just what is stress? It can be defined as any outside force that places an undue strain on your birds. No poultry flock is entirely free from stress because some of the things that are done to protect the flock, such as vaccinations, are actually stresses in themselves. However, these are essential to preventing more severe problems. Your main concern must be to reduce the length of stress from various management practices and eliminate those that can be controlled and prevented.

How can you recognize undue stress? You first must know how your hens should act when they're completely contented, healthy and performing well. Whenever a slight change from normal occurs you had better start looking for the cause. To do this you must constantly be on your toes to spot troubles before they get started.

Housing environment is one of the biggest causes of undue stress during winter. Unnecessary drafts and sudden changes in weather can quickly throw birds out of best condition. During winter, proper ventilation and a plentiful supply of water can often be equally, or at times, more important than feed. If the house is damp or if wet, caked spots develop in the litter and ammonia fumes become great, you can be sure the hens are under an undue stress.

Overcrowding and inadequate feeder and water space can also put a stress on your birds. Even inadequate nesting conditions will disrupt your hens and keep them from producing at their best. With plenty of feed and water space and adequate ventilation you can house up to one hen for each square foot of floor space. But it takes the most optimum conditions under such a high population to get satisfactory production with a minimum of management problems.

Feeds and feeding methods can often offset or prevent undue stresses on a flock but they won't counteract poor housing management. Tremendous strides have been made in the field of poultry nutrition during the past few years. Tailor-made feeds, containing additives to counteract various forms of stress and improve performance, have been a great boon to the egg producers. Contact your feedman.

The stresses mentioned above can become even more severe if several are present at the same time. For instance, if your laying house should be poorly ventilated, litter is wet and hens have an insufficient amount of feed and water space, your risk of diseases developing can be quite severe. No matter how good your feeding program may be, it's hard for the feed to counteract poor management on your part.

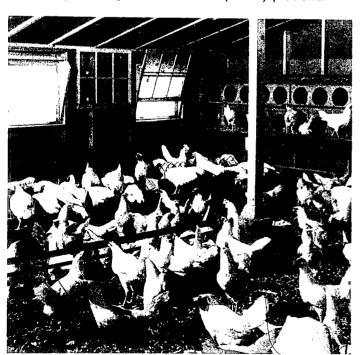

When these pullets are housed they're going to be put under stress. The less you disrupt their routine, the less problems you'll have when you get them into the laying house. New pullets should be vaccinated and wormed at least three weeks before they are housed. This gives them time to recuperate and get back to normal. When housed, clean, well-ventilated conditions will help reduce stress. Also, your feed dealer can give you tips on how antibiotics can help offset stresses during housing.

as management improves — STRESS Retreats

It takes healthy flocks to give you peak winter egg production. Mrs. Alfred Nielsen, of near Defiance, lowa, has been getting about 80% production during winter from the 750 layers in this house. If the flock starts showing signs of disease, she puts a stop to it immediately by making adjustments in management. Note the ventilating fan covered with wire mesh at her left. Good ventilation plays an important role in preventing CRD and other respiratory problems.

Here's a flock that has been provided a good environment. You'll note the windows can be adjusted to vary natural ventilation as weather conditions change. As a result, the litter is dry, loose and clean. Also, there's plenty of feeder and waterer space. Hens need about five inches of feeder space each. Otherwise four feeders, each five feet in length, will supply enough space for each 100 hens in a house. These should be spaced so birds won't have to walk over 10 to 15 feet to get to feed. Also, make sure water fountains are placed close by.

A shelf in the Killeen living room displays the art work of many hours' doing. The empty parakeet egg shell is shown at the right end of the graduating sizes on the top shelf.

This closeup shows the intricate sewing on the velvet lining of a jewelry case, gathered to fit the top. Little pearls and pink seashells form the flower design.

WHO SAYS THROW AWAY THE EGG SHELL?

"A nd there you have it in an eggshell," Mrs. Caroline Killeen might tell you after showing her fascinating hobby.

Most housewives throw away chicken eggshells or put them through the disposal. But the ordinary eggshell becomes a thing to look at through the skilled hands and imaginative artistry of this Dell Rapids, South Dakota housewife and mother of five school-age children.

Her patience is a great attribute to her art. So is the patience of her family as she spends extra hours in her hobby room after supper. Even little fiveyear-old Patty is interested in Mama's hobby and knows each tiny eggshell scene and describes her favorites explicitly to visitors. Their eyes beam as she shows each intricate scene in a shell.

Chicken eggs are not the only source of shells for Mrs. Killeen's hobby. She has goose eggshells as large as six or seven inches in length. However, she has not found an appropriately delicate scene for a tiny parakeet shell a friend has given her.

Scenes inside the shells vary from snowmen. Santa Clauses and Easter bunnies, to ballet dancers.

- 1. First Mrs. Killeen cuts a circular "window" in each egg with a razor blade. She later evens off the rough edge with manicure scissors.
- 2. She then paints the shell inside and out with tempera paints and then shellacs over this.
- 3. She then decorates the edge of the egg opening with gold tape or a tiny string of pearls, then glues flower designs made of tiny colored seashells.
- 4. The "standard" on the bottom is a small plastic ring of pearls glued on.

Hawaiian figures, Chinese themes or Madonna figurines.

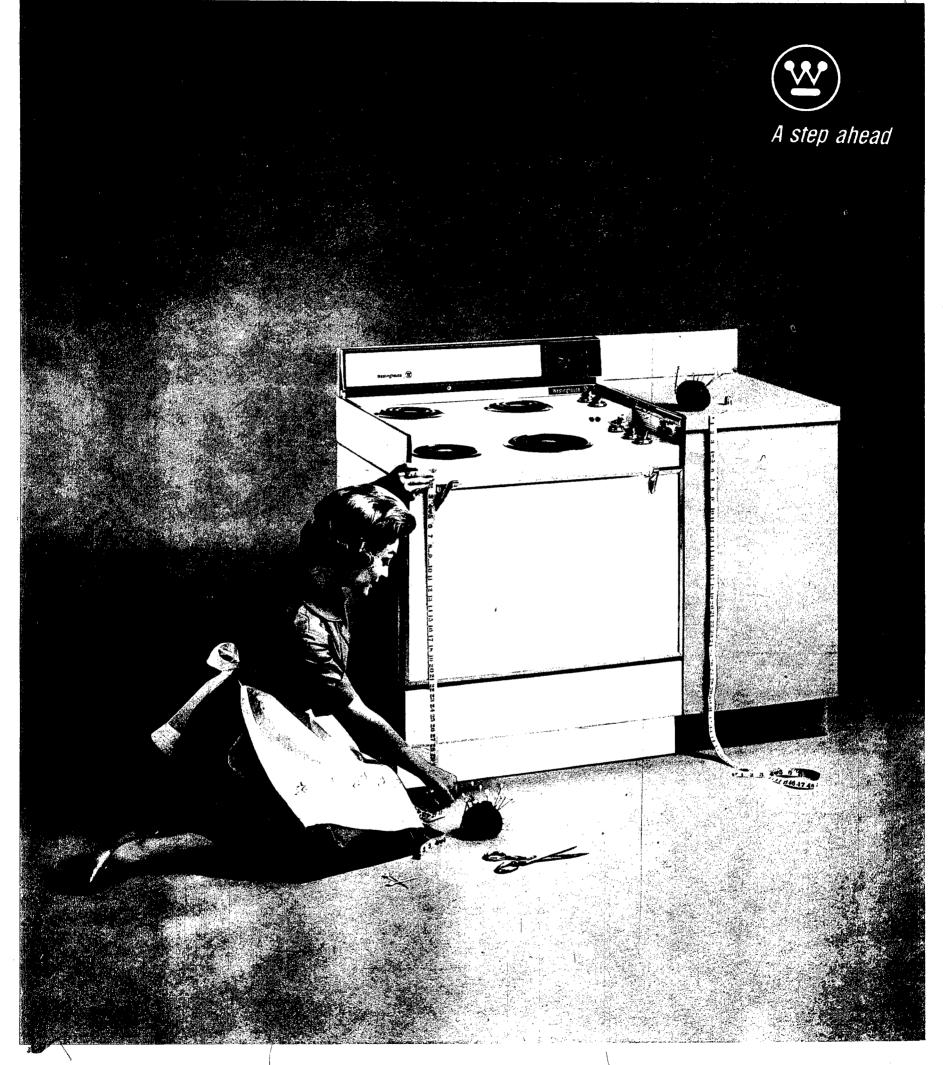

Store-bought images of ballerina dolls, farm animals and reindeer are sometimes found in children's toy departments or on party favor counters. But Mrs. Killeen constructs snowmen out of poppit beads, cattails out of toothpicks and felt and birdhouses out of construction paper. She cuts little birds off greeting cards. She cuts up small pieces of plastic artificial ferns and leaves to make fronds and branches in the tiny scenes. She also uses many tiny colored seashells, bits of real coral, beads and stars which she buys from hobby catalogs.

She prepares in advance all the things the scene will contain. The objects of each scene are pushed into place in soft melted wax poured into the "floor" of the eggshell.

The goose eggs also make ideal jewelry boxes. Each one is lined with richly-gathered velvet linings. The outsides are bedecked in colors corresponding to the inside linings, with gold or silver braid, pearls and shell flowers. A tiny hinge holds the top on and one poppit bead forms the handle for opening the top.

"Such things as the pearl beads and gold tapes can get to be quite expensive," Mrs. Killeen said, "but any hobby is going to run into a little money if you let it."

Engineered by a 5'4" housewife

(that's the average—we like 'em any size)

It makes sense . . . Why not let the American housewife guide us in designing the perfect range top . . . So, we did. The result you see above is the most comfortable-to-cook-on range in America. The new "Terrace Top"—available only from Westinghouse.

From work-height studies and other experiments, we found that most cooking chores required not one but two working heights for maximum comfort. Thus the unique split-level design of the Terrace Top electric range.

The front surface units are lowered to just the right height for stirring, blending, flipping, beating. (Much less fatiguing than standard-height units.) The back surface units are higher than the front units but still lower than counter height. They're perfectly placed for foods that don't require constant attention.

Note, too... Side-mounted controls that eliminate reaching over hot utensils. The timing center that controls the big, roomy oven and outlet for small appliances automatically.

Nice, and so is the price . . . as only your Westinghouse dealer can tell you. You can be sure . . . if it's Westinghouse

move INDOORS

By Susan Lowe

W ith the return of fall, refreshment service has moved from patio and porch to the living room or family fun room. In keeping with the homey atmosphere, refreshments take on an informal air centering around fall foods in festive array.

If you have a "fun room" or "family room" you can provide adventure with an indoor picnic. For easy eating make it finger food — possibly chicken in a basket with French fries and crisp relishes; and if the weather is a little on the cool side a warm dessert will bit the sroot. hit the spot.

For late afternoon or early evening snacks, big mugs of warm spiced cider extend welcoming cheer when teamed with doughnuts or man-sized cookies... Then too you might wind up an evening party with delicious curried shrimp that's quick to fix for a savory night cap. But regardless of time or place make the most of homey atmosphere and let informal refreshments keynote your fall party.

HAPPY JACK-O-LANTERN CAKE

Here's an easy to do specialty cake for Halloween and one sure to delight all the children in your family. It's a Happy Jack-O-Lantern cake made with fresh California walnuts.

You can put a cake together in a jiffy using your favorite yellow or chocolate cake recipe, then a filling of whipped cream and bananas, plus a frosting. For the final decorating touch, use walnut halves or large pieces for the eyes, then outline the eyes with whipped cream, and use whipped cream for the mouth and nose. If you like, add ½ cup finely chopped California walnuts to the cake batter, too, before baking.

Two final hints on the cake preparation. Put the whipped cream and bananas together at the last so that the bananas won't turn dark from standing. The easiest way to outline the jack-o-lantern face is to make a pastry tube of an envelope, then snip off one corner, fill the envelope with whipped cream and squeeze.

I layer cake, chocolate or yellow

I teaspoon vanilla

1 cup whipped cream

2 bananas, sliced

34 cup chopped California walnuts

Prepare cake, baking in 8 or 9-inch round pans. Cool. Shortly before serving, prepare frosting. Whip cream with vanilla. Reserve % cup whipped cream for decorating. To remainder of whipped cream, add sliced bananas. Put cake layers together with banana-whipped cream mixture. Swirl frosting over top and sides of cake. Use chopped walnuts to decorate sides of cake, pressing walnut pieces gently into frosting. Use halves or large pieces of walnuts for "eyes". Outline eyes, nose and mouth with whipped cream. Makes one 8 or 9-inch cake, or 12 to 14 servings.

Really startling costumes can be built around full head masks, made with surprising ease from household aluminum foil. The sparkling foil is merely shaped around a large balloon. When the shape is completed, the balloon is deflated and removed.

Each mask requires only a single roll of foil, a few simple props, and a large balloon.

Here's how they are made:

- 1. Using a 25 ft. roll of foil, tear off the entire roll in three-foot lengths. Crumple one length into a ball to make a nose.
- 2. Blow up the balloon until it is 11 to 14 in. in diameter (should be smaller for children)

- 3. Place the balloon, with blowing spout up, on the center of the first sheet of foil and shape the foil up around the balloon. Place it again on the next sheet so that the foil will shape around the uncovered portions of the balloon. Repeat with a third sheet of foil.
- 4. Place the wad of foil for the nose in position and hold with cellophane tape. Then wrap the next length of foil around the center of the balloon and over the nose to hold it in place, forming it to the nose shape.
- 5. The remaining foil sheets can then be applied like the first three to complete the form of the mask.
- 6. Tuck in the ends smoothly around the head opening, at the spout end of the balloon, allowing 7 to 9 in. diameter for passage of the wearer's head. Then the air is let out of the balloon, and it is removed.

This completes the basic construction. Decorating then can begin, to give the mask identity. Desired eye and mouth shapes are cut out with scissors. Ears, shaped from paper, cloth or foil, are fastened on with a white glue. They should be held in place with tape, until the glue dries. Features and markings can be added with colored plastic tape, or poster paint. Hair can be made from rug yarn or ribbon.

CREAMY CARAMELS

cups sugar cups warm light cream 2 caps warm tight cream
1 cup light or dark corn syrup
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup margarine or butter
1/2 cup broken walnuts

l teaspoon vanilla

Combine sugar, 1 cup of the cream, corn syrup and salt in a large heavy saucepan. Cook over medium heat about 10 minutes; stir constantly throughout all cooking periods. Pour in remaining cup of cream very slowly, so that mixture does not stop boiling at any time. Cook about 5 minutes longer. Stir in margarine about a teaspoon at a time. Turn heat to low and cook slowly to 248°F. until a small amount of the mixture forms a firm ball when tested in very cold water. Remove from heat; add vanilla and walnuts and mix gently. Allow to stand about 10 minutes and then stir only enough to distribute the walnuts. Pour into one corner of a lightly-buttered 8 x 8 x 2-inch pan, letting the mixture flow to its own level in the pan. Do Not Scrape The Cooking Pan. Cool to room temperature. Turn the block of candy onto a cutting board; if candy sticks, heat bottom of pan slightly; cool before cutting. Mark off into %-inch squares and cut with a large, sharp knife. Wrap each caramel in waxed paper. If candy is to be eaten right away, it may be dusted with confectioners sugar. Makes about 2 pounds of candy.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR THE WORLD'S MOST TESTED, MOST TRUSTED ANTI-FREEZE

... about the author

These reassuring words for Rural America come from an old friend, G. B. Gunlogson of Racine, Wisconsin. An agricultural engineer and expert in many fields, GB "retired" recently but did not mean it for a minute. He is now busily engaged in the greatest project of all - telling our rural people what a wonderful life is right in front of them - if they just do things begging to be done.

A recent study of conditions in rural areas among small town and farm people has brought to light many interesting findings which signify the beginning of important changes in the future of Rural America. Despite the recapitulation of trends and various opinions expressed in print and on the air about the widespread migration of people toward cities, the countryside is not about to wither away and become a "no-man's land". All the enduring elements are still there and the roots are firmly in the ground to assure a healthy future and, in due time, a resurgence of growth. Here are some facts which may be of interest:

The countryside comprises nearly ninety per cent of the land area of the country, not counting public lands. It contains a large and very important segment of America's total population and economy The census places the rural population, people living on farms and in towns of 2500 or less, at 55,000, 000. Actually we may add to this five or six million more who live in slightly larger towns but are essentually rural.

This adds up to 60,000,000 or close to a third of the total population, about 25 per cent of which live on farms

While the basic economy is farming, these people are engaged in highly diversified enterprises. This is the third of the population which not only produces but also forms the first link in connecting the rest of the population with the necessities of life. This is the third which annually produces more primary wealth than all the rest of the population.

This is the propertied part of the population. In addition to the 1.12 billion acres of farm land m their hands the per capita ownership of homes and other property (except in a few areas) is considerably higher than for the rest of the country.

These people are different and their environment is different. They are more independent and less regimented or group controlled. The percentage of enterpreneurs, self-employed and owners of businesses is far higher. These conditions and experiences have made for greater resourcefulness, enterprise and better work habits than is generally found among city people. They are closer to the realities of life and their values are different. or many years rural people would look to the city for advancements and advantages. They were enchanted by big industries, big businesses, big payrolls, glamor and adventure. The lure of big pay and easier work attracted millions. During war and in prosperous times intensive recruiting campaigns for factory workers reached almost every rural community. Most of the recruits remained although some returned when work gave out, rather than join the ranks of the city unemployed.

Young people from the country who had education frequently attained much success in the city. To "make good in the city" became a great challenge in many communities. While this has been a two way blessing, it has tended to make country people look too much in one direction and overlook opportunities at home.

Except for the local weeklies (and farm papers going to farmers) nearly every type of media reaching the country is city oriented and slanted. There is little in any of the general run of periodicals that is geared to country people, or identified with their way of life, opportunities and aspirations. Essentially these publications are designed to serve the urban level and interests.

THE TIDE MAY BE TURNING. There are signs that the tide may be reaching its crest. The process of change is many sided and it is being shaped by people—people with desires, needs, values and who reason and plan for their future. For one thing cities are becoming less attractive. Many are suffocating from over-population. Many are facing serious financial problems, unemployment, influx of aliens and indigents, inefficiency, slums, growing crime and disintegration of human values. These conditions are tending to worsen and their solutions grow increasingly difficult. The big city complex may be likened to an old structure that has been repeatedly added to, shored up and patched up. It has become inefficient, outdated and unsound. Many city people are living on a thin margin and many are disillusioned. Country people are becoming increasingly aware of some of these conditions.

Some years ago industry began to decentralize because bigness in one place created certain problems which could best be solved by establishing other units. Behind such moves many factors are involved such as sources of materials, accessibility to markets, transportation, over-crowding and other environmental conditions. Now many industries are studying how this process may be carried on still farther. Actually new approaches may be evolved enabling certain industries to disperse their production into still smaller units.

In recent years another movement got under way. People began to suburbanize and business centers began to spread into the country. This may be the beginning of a broader movement which may reach out still farther. This country has never stood still. Free people will always continue to seek better liv-g conditions and new opportunities.

THE COMMUNITY PACKAGE CONCEPT. There are two new developments which are likely to halt a long trend and almost certainly will help to shape a new future for Rural America. A number of small towns are making a reappraisal of themselves and what the community has in resources and people and potential opportunities. This has stimulated local planning and efforts which in many instances has brought significant improvement in local attitudes and economic conditions.

There are many factors which are changing this attitude and are bringing the farmer and townsman together in a common purpose. Better roads, of course, have brought the farm and town closer together. The consolidated school has been an important influence in many counties, enabling children to occupy the same class rooms and enjoy the same cultural, social and recreational activities. Farmers and businessmen are joining together in community, business, recreational, social and church affairs.

The results may be widely noted in the growing number of new hospitals, clinics, homes for the aged, parks and public works. At the same time planning on the economic front has not been over-looked. Many communities have active committees (or Chambers of Commerce) made up of local business men, farmers and professional people carefully surveying every likely area for economic development. This has included processing of farm products and other locally oriented enterprises or service. Some manufacturing plants turning out various products or parts have been successfully established in many

These committees have discovered that the countryside has many hidden assets and attractions which can be developed to make the community better and provide opportunities for people. They are also discovering that to succeed a community must have self-starting and generating forces within itself.

Never before has there been more widespread interest and endeavor in behalf of rural development. One noteworthy example is the rural development program launched a few years ago by the Department of Agriculture. Some of the Agricultural Colleges and the Extension Services have undertaken various studies. These agenices have not only been helpful but they have shown readiness to cooperate in these local undertakings. The agricultural college operates largely on state basis and is freer from Washington politics than some of the agricultural agencies.

THE COUNTRY NEWSPAPER. There is much evidence to show that a good local newspaper is one of the key factors in the life and progress of any country community. Without it the community is somewhat like an individual deficient in speech, hearing and eye sight. The newspaper is the instru-ment which can help most to keep together and keep moving ahead the many-sided interests in a country community. It alone can present the living pulse and progress of a community to the local people and the outside world. It records family gatherings, births, school doings, Sunday sermons, local sports, field and crop conditions, and the affairs of local business and industry

Nowhere else are the character and the prospects of a community reflected more clearly than in the columns of the local newspaper. Indeed, if one were selecting a new location for a business one of the first things to look into would be the quality of the local paper.

TIME IS ON THE SIDE OF COUNTRY PEO-PLE. To know much about the country one has to experience it and sense its qualities, magnitude and infinite variety. Within its boundaries of oceans, the Rio Grande and Canada it has nearly 3 million square miles of land outside cities and their suburbs and many regions and climates. It has 3 million miles of highways, 15,000 towns and about one million different businesses and services. Never have the opportunities in this vast and varied country been greater.

The growing population pressure in populous centers will place ever higher premium on the very things which now are in super abundance in the countryside: land and congenial living space; products of the good earth, beauty of the landscape, woods, clean water and wild life. It is inevitable that people of the cities must turn increasingly to the country for these essential needs of life. No wonder that people in many rural areas are beginning to reappraise these assets and their strategic position. No wonder that many city people are beginning to look and to long for the country.
