In the special area rooms of Wayne high the story is the same — too little for too many. Proof that bulging enrollment has outgrown the present building can be found in the vocal music area. The vocal music room is very small for 125 pupils involved in the choirs. The senior choir has an enrollment of 87. Thirty students were turned away.

Clayton Southwick, vocal institution, reported, "One of the most critical problems is that of i ventilation. Because we have to have the doors and windows open, to prevent the room from being too stuffy, we create another problem which is almost worse.

"The adjoining classrooms bear the choir almost as well as the director. This makes it difficult for the other teachers to conduct their classes. Then, too, in order to get all the people seated, the rows of chairs have to be placed as close that the students are always bumping those in front of them with their knees.

"Accoustics are another major makers."

Like all the other special area rooms at Wayne high school, the shop is unable to meet the needs shop is unable to meet the needs of present enrollment. Shop instructor, Mike Mallette, commented: "Certainly with more space; netter facilities, and smaller classes in a shop with two teacher stations we will be able to train our youngsters better and give them more practical experience.
"We could offer — if we had the space and facilities — training in electricity. This would have practical carryover for all taking the course, as almost everyone uses electrical knowhow, either as a home owner or a renter. Also, some of the better students could find jobs to their liking here in Wayne along this line.
"With more space we could of this line.

"With more space we could offer the basics in carpentry with emphasis on construction, finishing, roofing, and so on. With more space and some added equipment of minor proportions, we could actively participate in cabinet making."

INDUSTRIAL ARTS classes are crowded at Wayne high, Mike Mailette, instructor, said 150 boys are in the sheet in various classes throughout the day. In addition, the driver's training catis kept in the shop and the room is used for a machine shed This class was not actually as crowded as it looks but the boys got together to show how crowded the larger classes are construction firm, when asked if they needed workmen, replied: "We always have a need for good earpenters, not only in Wayne but in this whole Northeast Nebraska area. If youngsters can combine knowledge and desterity, they'll have a job because I know from experience that most construction crews do lack good carpenters."

Mallette pointed out another area of expansion when he said, "We should have some bench and sheet metal work, and better facilities are needed for welding. These activities plus the crafts could be offered in a general shop class. Such practical experiences may very well help some of our youngsters to discover a strong talent which can be developed in to a successful career. Only one-half of our students go on to college, We need practical courses for the jab-seeking student. Such courses will benefit both the student and the community."

Don Echtenkamp, another board member, agreed: "In our visits we heard plenty about bond; issues that failed and on the second or third time around produced cut' facilities at a cost equal to the first plan. In the time between bond issues building costs had gone up enough so that the reduced facilities cost them as much as the original plan. Fremont is a good example.

Dean Schram added, "We learned in our inspection trips the folly of severat bond elections. Therefore, we have tried to do the most careful planning we could. People who want a lot of frills like swimming pools and courts may be disappointed in this building, but we believe reasonable people will see that with our proposed new high school we can give good, sound education to our youth."

Francis Haun, superintendent of schools, commented, "It ap-

Francis Haun, superintendent of schools, cominented, "It appears to me that the proposed building will meet both the immediate and the future educational needs of our high school students. While there cortainly are not frills, there will be adequate space for vocational, academic and fine arts training.
"Wayne citizens most certainly

Let's Talk About Creative Banking

Sometimes we throw the book out the window to solve a financial problem.

On the surface, most banks are pretty much alike. What makes one bank different from another is the manner in which services are performed.

The financial needs of every business, every individual, are different. Many problems can't be solved by formulas or slide rules. They have to be solved by creative banking judgment. By bankers who always look for new ways to serve customers better and more efficiently.

Here at State National creative banking services for you begin the day you become one of our customers.

Creative banking is the only kind of banking we do. Isn't that the kind of banking service you want?

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The editorial department of a weekly newspaper is an important department. Normally it is one person's opinion of topics that concern most of the readers.

It is the duty of an editorial writer to search all available facts before he sits down to write.
From this basis the writer should be able to give

Chance for a Big Payroll

If asked what they would do to bring a payroll of 50 to Wayne, most residents would reply: "Anything." What they mean is: "Just about anything." What they mean is: "Just about anything." Wayne has an industrial commission, members of which have been on the go at the slightest hint of a possible new industry. They would welcome a firm employing 1,000, 100 or even 10. No suggestion is going to be made here on how to bring in a factory employing 50, but an idea is to be broached on a method that could produce 50 new jobs.

Buy in Wayne. It's that simple, Don't

Buy in Wayne, It's that simple, Don't go away, it's not that same old hackneyed phrase, "Buy at home and not out of bread at one of the bakeries here, chances are they would need another employee or two.

Going to build? Get your lumber in Wayne and have a Wayne firm build for you. Another job or maybe, a half dozen could be created.

If you're feeding cattle, keep the Wayne feed dealers busy — so busy they have to put on more help. Selling cattle? Wayne has an auction yard that bases its need for help on the consignments. If you and your neighbors sell here, someone else may get a job.

The same goes for groceries, drugs, appliances, hardware, repairs, machinery, banking, mechanical work, trucking needs, clothing, car servicing and about every other need.

This help yourself idea can't fail because it works other places. It doesn't apply to "the other fellow" necessarily but to you. If the grocer buys his clothes out of town, the clothier buys his lumber elsewhere, the lumberman gets his baked goods away from here, the baker purchases a car in another city, and the car dealer buys groceries out of town,

You may not agree with an editorial — but if you read the editorial and give serious thought to the subject discussed you have gained. You, as a reader, have given ear-eful thought to an important problem and the writer is proud to have called your attention to an important subject that you may have overlooked.

em. , No sensational growth is guaranteed

No sensational growth is guaranteed but a steady increase in population will be noted and progress can be maintained if most people try this practice. Taxes are cheaper where business and professional men prosper. If a town is worth more, the levy is lower.

If you do your part, maybe the fellows across the street, down the block and up the hill will too. An "industry" of 50 or more new jobs can be created. There's your answer to the question "Why don't THEY do something to bring a payroll to Wayne?" The next question is: "Why don't YOU do something to bring a payroll to Wayne." — CEG

We Need Competition

We Need Competition

The Wayne Herald needs competition. What's more, we have it.
Radio, television, billboards, circulars, souvenir gimmicks and magazines compete with us. They all have their place. None can replace The Herald.

Ever clip a TV photo? Ever get extra copies of a radio broadcast? Ever borrow your neighbor's circular? Ever go back to look at a billboard again?

Chances are you have not. You have clipped The Herald, bought extra copies, borrowed your neighbor's and kept the paper around to take second, third and even more looks.

You make the paper possible, when you buy from advertisers, ask about advertised items and use the paper to buy and sell. The Herald is trying to give you a well-balanced paper filled with sports, weddings, personal items, feature stories, humor, opinion and pictures—and ads.

Solons Disagree Regarding Budgeting of State Funds

LINCOLN — Two schools of thought on state budgeting have emerged from the 1965 Legisla-punkshment in Nebraska will be ture.

One faction, headed by Sen. Richard D. Marvel, Hastings, preaches comprehensive programming of all monies.

But the other force favors ticing all new revenue to specific projects to insure their completion.

Friction between the groups has been increasing during the past two weeks. Each side has chalked up a victory.

The lawmakers voted overwhelmingly to tie a two-cent cigarette tax increase to educational television, recreational development and access roads.

Then, it turned right around and refused to earmark a two-cent-per-gallon beer tax hike for special education programs for mentally retarded youngsters.

Sen. Marvel, who has headed the budget committee since 1961, complained strongly over earmarking provisions on the cigarette tax bill. In fact, he admitted to his colleagues that action on the bill caused him to scriously consider resigning his chairmanship.

According to Marvel's thinking, the earmarking of funds usurps the power of the budget committee process useless.

All funds, he said, should be channeled to the several fund.

All funds, he said, should be channeled to the general fund to be appropriated by the Legislature after budget committee budgeting.

Sens. George Syas, Omaha, and Terry Carpenter, Scottsbluff, agree. They say that under the program budgeting process, many projects are bypassed because of insufficient funds. According to Carpenter, program needs should be the foremost in the senator's minds. The dispute has spread into the broadened tax base area.

Opponents of earmarking of funds argue that if no new moncy is pumped into the general fund, the state will be forced to turn to an income tax or sales tax, or both to meet added gov-ax, or both to meet added governmental and educational costs

Not so says the other side. Pedersen said the income-sales tax contention is being used as a scare tactic to prevent the ear-marking of new tax dollars.

In any case, the battle has just begun. Several other major revenue raising bills have yet to come up for general discussion. When they do, the fur will fiv again.

The bill to abolish capital punishment in Nebraska will be heard by the Legislature's Judiciary committee Apr. 13. Sen. Sam Klaver, Omaha, chairman, said he set the mea-sure, LB 466, for hearing this Spring so all interested persons can voice their opinions on the can voice tuen bill.

"I don't want the weather preme neople from mak venting some people from making it to this important hearing," he said.

ing it to this important ing," he said.

The Bill was introduced by Freshman Sen. John Knight, Lincoln, who believes capital punishment is an antiquated form of punishment. Several sentators have indicated their opposition to the bill.

Similar legislation met with little favor in the 1961 and 1963 sessions of the 'Unicameral.

The bill would abolish death by electrocution in Nebraska for every crime except treason.

Protein Costs Vary

There are three major reasons for variation in the cost of protein supplements for livestock. There are: variation in kind and amounts of ingredients, variation in the amount of service provided by the company selling the supplement; and variation in the degree of production promotion by the company involved. Of these, the first and second causes for variation in price may contribute to increases in net income for the feeder.

Supplements may supply, in addition to protein, various minerals, vitamins and feed additives. The producer must be in a position to evaluate the supplement in regard to the need for these nutrient and feed additives by his livestock. He then should purchase supplements that will contribute to maximum rate and efficiency gain.

An example of how various changes in a supplement may influence its cost is as follows: Rive per cent urea (13.10 per cent protein equivalent) substituted for soybean meal would reduce cost about $8.00 to $12.00 per ton, assuming energy, mineral and vitamin content are not changed. Adding 20,000 I. U. of Vitamin A per pound will add another $2.50 to $3.00 per ton; adding trace minerals will add another $2.50 to $3.00 per ton; and low-level antibiotics (70 mg, per pound) will add costs of about $5.00 per ton and low-level antibiotics.

level antibiotics (v) pound) will add costs of about $5 per ton.

Several companies provide servicemen or salesimen who advise the buyer of their feeds with regard to feeding and other management practices. The cost of providing this service must be paid by the feeder who uses their feed. These salesmen or servicemen can be well worth their cost if the farmer does not take time to specialize in the area of nutrition, feeding and management.

area of nutrition, feeding and management.

Alfolfa Pellet, and Vitamin A

Dehydrated alfolfa pellets contain no Vitamin A. They contain and Vitamin A. They contain accrete, which normally is converted to Vitamin A during digestion. Often dehydrated alfolfa pellets are reported to contain the equivalent of 100,000 or more I. U. or USP Units of Vitamin A when manufactured.

This usually is reported at the rate rats convert Carotene to Vitamin A. Since cattle are only about 25 per cent as efficient as rats in converting Carotene to Vitamin A, this would be equivalent to about 25,000 I. U. for cattle.

The amount lost during storage before faceting will depend equivalent to about 25,000 I. U. for cattle.

The amount lost during storage before feeding will depend on whether or not (1) an antioxidant is used in manufacturing and (2) if the dohy is stored under gas during hot weather. If these two practices are followed, Carotene losses should be reasonably low hefore the dehydrated alfalfa is fed. Don't forget to reduce Vitamin A equivalent, when manufactured, by approximately one-fourth for cattle before calculating supplemental Vitamin A needs.

A representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation told the Committee that one of the most serious threats of future expansion is the proposed beef and cattle import regulations of the European Common Market. He urged that the United States negotiate "firmly and persistently" against the adoption of such policies, adding that it would be a fundamental mistake to involve agricultural products, such as meat and grains, in international commodity agree ements.

As Washington struggles with its balance of payments dilemma, and tries to stem the flow of gold out of the country, there is concern, too, at the other end of the pipeline.

Demands are rising both in Europe and in Japan for closer control over the inflow of funds from the United States. In the Financial Times of London, a columnist noted recently that there is "no reason why deficit countries should be held any more responsible than surplus countries for undesirable capital flows." He went on to say that the movement of American capital into Europe would never have reached its present proportions if countries that did not really need it had taken action earlier to keep it out.

Ignoring warnings over several years that European countries were lax in developing their own capital markets, they have taken the easy way out—rely upon Uncle Sam.

In Japan, foreign exchange banks are pressuring the Ministry of Finance to investigate the circumstances under which United States banks are funneling funds into Japanese industry.

now exists in our junio-senior high school can be best illustrated by citing enrollment data," said superintendent Francis Haun, this week. He cited problems in the following areas:

1. Auto mechanics courses should have from 18 to 20 students. We currently have 26 enrolled. There were six others who tried to enroll but found the class filled. This course is limited to juniors and seniors and is taught for the most part in a classroom rather than a 'shop.

2. Machine woodworking classes are best taught with an enrollment maximum of 20 students. We have 28 students in this class. There were five turned away.

4. The homemaking room was panned for 16 students per section. Homemaking II classes have 24 students each this year and there were eight girls who were forced out. The homemaking room is in use seven periods a day.

5. There are 139 boys enrolled in P. E. classes who must go to the city auditorium on a split schedule for physical education. There are 135 girls in grades 7-9 who likewise have split P.E. schedules. P. E. classes are severely curtailed for upper classmen because of a lack of facilities. When the City auditorium is reserved for someone else, no classes in P. E. can be held there and since we have no room for the boys we have no room for the boys we have to put them in the halls. In addition to the enrollment limitations now being placed on certain classes, overcrowded conditions of necessity, restrict the type of course offerings in many areas.

A high school the size of Wayne should be offering many of the following courses:

Art, two foreign languages, journalism, welding economics, sociology, advanced senior math, advanced boys PE, advanced girls PE, botany, earth science, advanced science and ceramics.

Supt. Francis Haun concluded:
"The evidence is overwhelming. A real need for a new high school exists. Wayne citizens, who I believe, are interested in education will most certainly want to, give maximum effort to provide better educational opportunities for our children. We have the potential to be a double AA school, but we can never achieve that goal until we provide fadilities which serve our goals."

The many Secrets to Successful Beef Raising

by Don Brooks

Jack Butcher personally selects and transports his feeder calves from the Dakotas every year. "You get a 'feel' for selecting the good gainers after a while," says Jack.

There are a lot of "secrets" to making money with beef cattle. And Jack Butcher knows most of them. Even then, he's happy if he "makes it big' one year out of five.

Jack owns 200 acres of land near Alma, Michigan. He rents another 160 to provide enough acreage for the feed needed to fatten 350 head of cattle each year.

"common sense" beef farmer, he doesn't think of fattening steers as a get-rich-quick proposition. "With cattle prices fluctuating the way they are, you've got to figure to pay your bills and break even four out of five years and then hope you hit

And this philosophy has held him in good stead He produces beef for just slightly more than 10 cents a pound—and he gets a fair price for his cat-tle. To do this, several sound practices are combined into a single, smooth-running business operation.

First of all, Jack watches the market like a hawk

He knows that half the profit in raising beef cattle is buying and selling them at the right price.

"I figure the only way to make money is to get cattle that gain," declares Jack. "After a while you get so you can spot those animals with the best potential just by looking at them." (It's only fair to say that this "eye for cattle" takes a while to develop. Jack Butcher has been in the beef business for 12 years.)

"I like to buy cattle from the Dakotas," continues Jack, "because they are usually big boned, fast gainers with good breeding." But before every beef feeder rushes to the Dakotas to find feeders, Jack adds that Dakota cattle are only a personal preference—one that he's had good luck with over the years. He can't guarantee the same success for oth-

When Jack buys calves, he wants them weaned and hay fed with no baby fat. These are the kind of animals that will put on weight as soon as they start getting some high protein feeds.

And this brings up Jack's second "secret" to success. "I don't believe in putting a lot of high priced feed into these cattle only to get them too fat for what the consumer wants," he explains. He feeds two tons of haylage and 30 bushels of high moisture shelled corn to put on about 500 pounds of beef on his steers. Figuring the haylage at $14 a ton and the corn (on a dry matter basis) at $1 a bushel, that comes to $58 for each 500 pounds of beef—slightly more than 10 cents a pound.

Young calves brought onto the farm are fed oatlage (ensiled young oats) and rolled corn to bring them from 400 to about 600 pounds. Then they are put on haylage and high moisture corn.

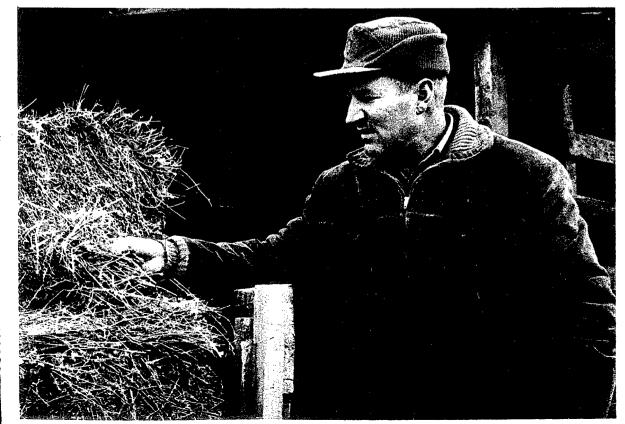

"This means that the cattle aren't too fat at sale time—usually around 1,000 to 1,050 pounds," explains Jack. "They grade high good to low choice. Past experience shows that these cattle often bring more money than high choice . . . and on cheaper

And this brings up a third "secret": good crop yields at relatively low cost. Last year, Jack averaged 150 bushels of corn on 60 acres. He had one field of hay that averaged 9-4 tons (20 percent moisture) per acre. To get these yields, Jack depended on two things: soil testing and cattle manure.

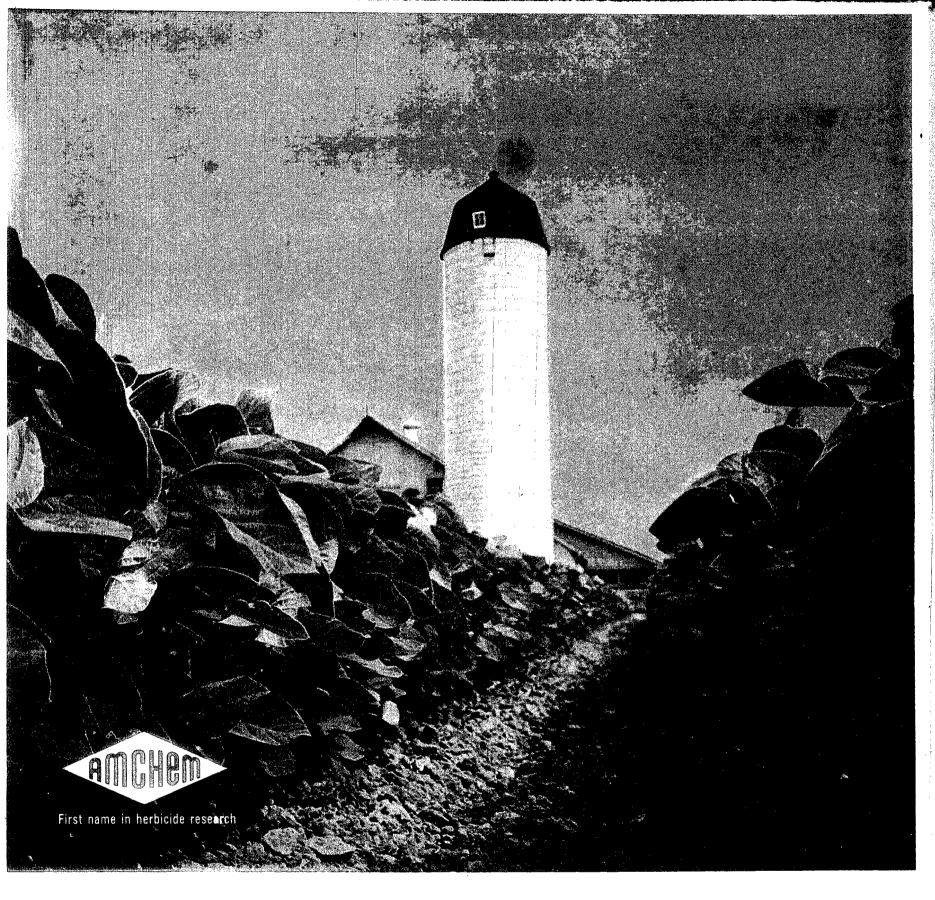

The soil tests showed him how to fertilize his fields. As a result, he applied 150 pounds of anhydrous ammonia (gas), and 240 pounds of 6-24-24. A plant population of 24,000 plus about 30 tons of manure produced 150-bushel yields. "Then the rain helped, too," reports Jack. "We had 29-½ inches last year—not a lot above the average, but all at the sight time." right time.

But rain or no rain, a 150-bushel average on 60 acres is nothing to sneeze at. Jack's good loam soil and enough manure to cover about 90 acres each year provide him with enough feed to fill his 20 by 60 silo three times each year with haylage and another 20 by 50 silo with high moisture corn

The cattle, which are housed in loafing barns, are fed four times a day in winter and six times daily in summer. "They like that fresh feed, and they eat more of it," explains Jack. And that's another "secret" to successful beef farming!

Good alfalfa hay and haylage, plus high moisture corn is helping Jack Butcher turn out beef for just over 10 cents per pound of gain.

Farming by Insight...

The story of a blind Missouri farmer He was sitting in an old wooden rocker in the living room of his home listening to a radio when I arrived. The day was boiling hot and I surmised the 71-year-old farmer might be dreading his regular 4 o'clock milking date. We chatted a few moments in the customary get-acquainted fashion before he announced it time for his chores.

"I built every fence on this place," he began, "sawed the boards and drove the nails in those two buildings over there to the right. I'm told my apples won't be too good, my wheat feels very thin and four of my cows are dry at the present time. But I imagine I'll make it again this year," he said proudly. A much lesser man would have given up

A much lesser man would have given up long ago. This aging farmer has never seen his small 40 acres of land, the rocking chair he sits in or the paint on the farm buildings he built. Since 1923 Ernest Rees of Neosho, Mo., has been blind. With no reservations and without self pity, he told me about his accident. He was a vocational agriculture teacher of 30 at the time, with a wife and two young daughters.

Shortly after concluding a laboratory experiment, a new test tube shattered, splattering the chemical and bits of glass into his eyes. Instantly his students and the light of day passed from his vision.

Blind Ernest Rees prepares to hook milker to one of his dairy cattle.

"A salesman had guaranteed those tubes against breakage," Rees recalled, "and I had purchased several for use in the school lab."

But a verbal agreement becomes pretty worthless to a man who has just lost his vision and vocation. A suit against the test tube company was settled out of court for $20,000, but attorney fees stripped Rees of half that amount. "I know $10,000 sounds like a lot of money," Rees continued, "but it wouldn't support a family for a lifetime. Be like trying to keep an elephant alive on peanuts," he joked good-naturedly. "I had to find some means of support and decided the only thing for me was farming. I raised poultry for about 13 years and then bought this farm shortly after the depression."

I was curious as to how a blind man could

I was curious as to how a blind man could determine land value. As my eyes glanced over his spread I thought a man with normal eyesight would have had reservations about purchasing a small acreage that had never "made its taxes" and consisted of little more than rocky, sloping hillsides. What prompted him to think he could survive on this? And I wondered how he could have possibly kept the bill collectors away when he had only 40 acres — especially in the inflationary years since the War.

And even after two days of observing Rees, I almost became unimpressed by the endless number of daily chores he does so naturally. His hands are as sure and as skilled as a factory craftsman.

With an ax he chopped the end of a wooden fence post to a sharp point; he repaired a 100-yard-long fence, a chore that included renailing many new steeples, fastening a fence stretcher and pulling the wires taut; poured, milk from his automatic milker into cooling cans without spilling a drop — all of these things he performed as easily as I switched the lens settings on my camera. He delighted in telling me about his system of braille farming — how he overcame his handicap and "sees" his way around his farm, determining direction and location by the breeze on his face and the slope of the ground. With his hands and sense of smell he evaluates the quality of his pasture or grain. And he does things that seem strange to a person depending upon eyesight for everyday living. If there's no nighttime broadcast of the St. Louis Cardinals —he's an avid fan — he's apt to stroll into his garden and start weeding potato plants at 9 p.m. A sighted person does such chores in the heat of the hot sun. He "sees" this job by feeling his way on his hands and knees. What difference does it make if the sun's gone un-

Germ 'sliquidator'

Kills deadly germs in the drinking water with Anti-Germ 77° Fights germs inside the chick with Terramycin

Talk about soft touches!

Germs must really drool and smack their lips when they see those peeping, defenseless little balls of fluff you put into your brooder house.

But you can spring a big surprise on those germs. Just put Terramycin Poultry Formula with Anti-Germ 77 into your chicks' drinking water.

While it doesn't affect your chicks, Anti-Germ 77 makes their drinking water about as agreeable to germs as an acid bath. Kills germs rapidly and cuts off this thoroughfare into your chicks.

True, some bacteria can still get into chicks in other ways. Like riding in on dust particles.

But they'll wish they hadn't when they run smack into potent Terramycin.

Terramycin is murder on germ3. And it doesn't leave them any place to hide in the chick.

Terramycin gets them in the intestinal tract like most drugs do. But Terramycin goes a lot further, too! It's quickly absorbed to fight germs in the lungs...the liver...the muscles...everywhere the blood goes!

Put Terramycin Poultry Formula with Anti-Germ 77 into your chicks' drinking water.

A lot fewer bacteria will get inside your chicks. And those that do will run head on into the broadest bacterial spectrum in poultry drugs

That's why Terramycin® Poultry Formula with Anti-Germ 77® is the best thing you can use to keep your chicks healthy.

Rees and his wife, Delia, at lunchtime.

Carl Slunt, background, drives workhorse while plowing garden while Rees pulls weeds. Notice the rocky soil.

Rees "feels" his way along, searching for the door to enter his barn with a milker.

When its time to spray his 30 apple trees he'll ask for help and summon his retired farmer friend, Carl Slunt, to give him a hand. Slunt leads a tired-looking workhorse and an old wooden sled through the rows of trees and points a small-nozzled sprayer at the fruit while Rees pumps chemicals from a barrel. Slunt sometimes helps cultivate the garden and hitches the horse to an old rusty plow and turns the dry soil. Rees' 70-year-old wife, Delia, feels she can leave her husband a few moments when Slunt is around and she backs their 1948 Chevrolet — it doesn't have a scratch on it — out of the barn and drives to Neosho to buy groceries or other household items.

Rees asks no sympathy from anyone and I formed the impression any acts of charity would hurt him. He's a proud man — possibly because he's never asked for a dime from a government that oftentimes seems eager to dole out welfare. His undeniable success made me bubble with pride — and ache with compassion. When I hear of farmers of rich 200-acre plots in Illinois and Iowa claim their land holdings are too small to make a decent living and that low market prices are forcing them out of business, I wondered what the future of Ernest Rees might be. He's getting along in years and though he keeps himself physically fit with a regular program of exercises, he's not as strong as he was 20 years ago. He owns little mechanized equipment. His cattle barn is small, antiquated and would never pass Grade A standards. I doubted the 10-acre plot of wheat he had planted would yield more than two bushels. In fact it was so thin I mistook the field for an uncultivated hilltop until he advised he had "probably wasted money for the seed." His home is adequately, but modestly furnished.

Talk of the future almost brings tears to Mrs. Rees' eyes and she peers off into the distance and quietly asks, "I wonder if he realizes how much he depends on me?" (I fervently bit my lower lip to keep my own eyes dry.)

Face it or not, it is a fact that every time you leave your car unlocked you are inviting major tragedy to haunt and terment some human being, quite possibly yourself. Proof lies in this reflection on the faces of tragedy in my case.

The first face is mine. Once it was a nice face: handsome, clean-cut, unmarked by lines of tragedy and hate. Indeed, two years ago it was among the happiest faces alive, especially one morning when it kissed.

The second face, Nancy's. We had been married 18 months and the honeymoon had only begun. "Joe," Nancy said, walking me out to our jalopy, "in spite of our bambinoin-seven-months-to-be, we can afford a bet-ter car now." Nancy knew I was hankering for a yearling hardtop. I bought one after work that evening and was almost home with it when I was stopped by

The third face, Robin's. At first, all I saw was a sedan backing down a neighbor's driveway. It appeared to be driverless. But suddenly a sun of hair rose from the driver's seat. Robin was at the wheel! A fledgling of five, Robin was the undisputed darling of our block, a curlytop who delighted neighbors as readily as her namesake's song. The crash sprang a door and sent Robin flying, curls foremost, to the pavement. Her doll landed nearby. Unseen, but forcefully felt, was

The fourth face-the overwhelming face of fear. It screamed these unforgettable words: "You've killed her! Turn this car around and get outta here, fast!" Prodded by panic, Lobeyed and thus invited ...

The fifth face, which belonged to a cop. Later, in a courtroom, I faced ...

The sixth face, that of a mother who had recently interred her only child. She testified: "We were going shopping. Robin was impatient, so I told her to take Mimi, her doll, and go wait in the car. A moment later I heard Robin's last words. Since you're such an old slowpoke, Mommie,' she called from the car, 'I guess I'll just have to take Mimi and drive to the supermarket without Many eyes shimmered in flash-flood tears. I wept, too. "But it wasn't Joe's fault," Robin's mother continued, dabbing at her eyes. "Robin enjoyed playing in the car so much that I refused to recognize any great danger in this. Somehow, she must have shifted the car into neutral, allowing it to coast into Joe's path." Her defense of me was abetted by ...

The seventh face, Robin's father's. "Joe is a fine man, a good neighbor," he said. "He loved our Robin and doubtlessly would have died himself rather than harm her. Besides, Robin is gone. What possible good can come of sending Joe to prison?" More defense came from.

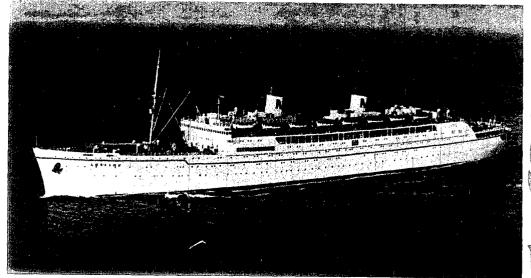

The eighth face, my employer's. "Joe is a valued asset to our company," he said. Always eager to do more than asked, and do it well, Joe has won two promotions in three years." But all of this counted for naught, thanks to . . .

The ninth face, the judge's. "If I had my way," he began, "no driver, regardless of his standing in his community, would ever get a second chance to hit and kill and run. Unfortunately, the maximum term for manslaughter is fifteen years." That sentence eventually brought me up against . . .

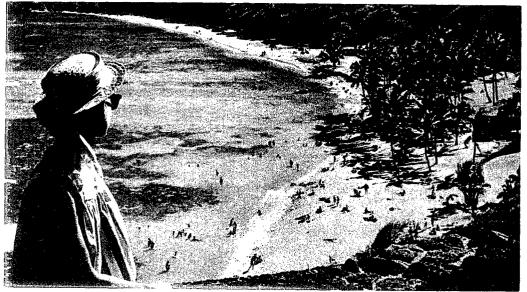

The tenth face, that of my cellblock guard. He paused at my cell this morning to comment on the weather. I ignored him. Finally, turning to walk on, he remarked, "You sure got a hate hangover, ain't ya?"

Yes, I've got a hate hangover. But I knew genuine remorse—until that day, five months after my trial, when this same guard handed me a telegram. Tragic details came later. A thief was in a hot car engaging police in a wild chase when he sideswiped an oncoming car, lost control, jumped a curb and mowed down three shoppers. One shopper never got up again. In her dying move, my Nancy had reached to clutch the layette she had just bought for our baby-to be. The car that killed her had been left unlocked, keys in the ignition switch.

It's Bon Voyage and happy sailing aboard the S. S. LURLINE to Hawaii.

Hanauma Bay, Oahu, Hawaii, will be a stop for members of the Farm and Home Makahiki Cruise Tour in October.

It promises to be an unforgettable experience for Farm and Home readers and their families who take the cruise. When asked for his opinion on planning a trip, H. Allen Smith recommended putting all your money on one bed and all your clothes on the other, then taking twice the amount of money and half the number of clothes. It is just the opposite when you go on a Makahiki cruise on the LURLINE. Your cruise fare includes first class roundtrip steamship accommodations, all means while aboard, and ship as hotel in each port, plus superb service round the clock and a sparkling program of parties and entertainment, so you don't have to worry about extras. You can take as much as 350 pounds of baggage. However, your wardrobe does not have to be a great concern to

On a LURLINE cruise to Hawaii last January, I encountered many amusing situations. One man complained his wife had 23 pieces of luggage and changed her attire three and four times a day. Another couple aboard the same cruise were in such a state of excitement that they left their luggage at the door of their hotel. They started the cruise with such festivity that they were at sea about four hours before discovering their plight. Later the man was giving a talk to his besides club and made the remark that "this thing of needing an extensive wardrobe for the trip was not necessarily so." Their forgetful ness soon made them the best known couple aboard and had everyone aboard offering them clothes-even the crew. Matson Lines, however, came to their rescue by having their luggage flown over and waiting at the dock for them when they arrived. This is typical of the Matson LURLINE service.

After you have worked hard this coming summer gathering your harvest, why don't you come along with me on this holiday. It will be the best therapy you've ever had. I promise we can walk a beach. Hear love songs. Visit a heiau. Dance under the stars. Snorkle on a reef. Learn Hawaiian. Sip a mai tai. Paddle an outrigger. Tour a fern forest. Model a muumuu. Learn to hula. Snooze a day away. Sing in a grotto. Catch a marlin. See petroglyphs. Discover Old Hawaii. Play a uku-lele. Sample poi. Ride a river boat. Watch volcanos. Feast at a luau. Walk a lava tube. Gaze at a canyon. We leave San Francisco October 28th and return to Los Angeles November are you noticed that some women are so efficient in the kitchen, that they fix so many good things? Well, one of the secrets is they're planners, especially when it comes to family meals. And at the top of the list for "magical" time savers is efficient use of your home freezer. The freezer is a tool for everyday food preparation. It's not merely a place for food storage. By cooking in quantity you can have second meals with "planned overs" in a matter of minutes. Here are recipes geared for your freezer—they're designed to minimize your kitchen time—give you more time for your family and friends.

FREEZE PASTRIES NOW - SERVE FRESH-BAKED IN SUMMER

Everyone enjoys fresh fruit pastries during the summer months. But they take time to prepare. You'll be well ahead of the game, if you stock your freezer with these delicious desserts — either shells to be filled later with delicious berries or the traditional favorite, a two-crust pie with fruit filling, ready for the oven.

Pastry freezes especially well and should be frozen before baking for finest flavor and texture. Make up double or triple the standard pastry recipe. It may be handled in several ways that save work and time on the day you wish to serve a pastry dessert.

If time is short when making up the large batch, simply divide the pastry into balls, each the amount for a single crust. Wrap in aluminum foil and freeze. These balls of pastry take only an hour at room temperature to soften sufficiently for rolling when needed

For easier, quicker use, roll pastry into tart or pie-sized circles and cut matching circles of foil. Stack on a cardboard circle, alternating foil and pastry circles to prevent sticking. Overwrap in foil to make a compact package, label and freeze.

When needed, circles may be removed in the number required. They soften in 5 minutes. Tart shells can be formed by turning up foil and pastry % inch all around and pinching to make a firm edge. Bake them in the foil on a cookie sheet. Large-size circles can be fitted into pie pans and used for shells or 2-crust pies.

The new way to cook is with Karo!

What a great one-dish meal for winter! You'll love its hearty goodness and its piquant taste. What gives the extra special flavor? Karo Syrup! Karo adds delicious new flavor and appetizing texture to foods.

Karo Winter Carnival Casserole:

Heat 2 tbsp. corn oil in skillet. Add 1/4 cup each finely chopped onion and green pepper; cook until tender. Add 1 lb. ground beef; brown, stirring often. Pour out and save 1/4 cup liquid from 1 lb. 12 oz. can tomatoes. Add remainder of tomatoes, 1/2 cup Karo All Purpose Syrup, 1/2 tsp. each salt and chili powder, 1/4 tsp. pepper, 1 bay leaf to meat mixture. Bring to boil, cover, simmer 15 minutes. Blend

2 thsp. corn starch with the 1/4 cup tomato liquid; stir into meat mixture. Bring to boil, stirring. Add 3 cups cooked macaroni or rice; pour into 2 qt. casserole. Sprinkle with 1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese. Bake in 350° oven about 30 minutes. Serves 6 deliciously! Karo is available in pint and quart bottles; in 5 and 10 lb. cans.

Large family size pastry shells, completely shaped, may be nested one on top of the other, foil-overwrapped and frozen.

If baked without filling, remember to prick the pastry with a fork before baking to prevent puffing. Bake tart and pastry shells at the usual temperature of 450°F., for 10 to 15 minutes.

Rhubarb, blueberry, cherry and other berry pies made with a top crust or with a latticed crust, and ready for the oven, freeze beautifully, without special attention to the fruit. Apple, peach and fresh apricot need only to have the fruit spripkled with a Vitamia Consequence that approach and have the fruit sprinkled with a Vitamin C preparation that prevents darkening. It is sold under various trade names at food and drug stores. Lemon juice can be used, but will not completely prevent darkening.

Pastry shells and two-crust pies should be wrapped in foil for freezer storage, but it is easier to handle them and there's less danger of injury to the delicate crust, if they are first placed in the freezer without wrapping, until they are firm. Slits should be cut in a complete top crust for the escape of steam, either before or after freezing.

Frozen pies go direct from the freezer to the oven. They are baked at the usual temperature (400°F.) and take 15 to 20 minutes longer to bake than an unfrozen pie. The bottom crust of frozen pies is sometimes difficult to brown. Although good pastry does not stick, spreading the bottom of the pan with margarine or butter before placing the crust in it and baking the pie on a lower shelf in the oven helps to brown the bottom crust.

Foil pie plates, either those saved from purchased foods, or new ones, are convenient for frozen pies and pastry shells. Their bright surface tends to lessen browning, but is also overcome to a good degree by buttering the pan and lower-shelf baking.

Both standard and heavy duty aluminum foil may be used for wrapping pastry for freezer storage. Pastry may be stored for 3 months, but we'll bet you'll not have it that long.

Here is the standard pastry recipe and suggestions for filling:

Standard Pastry

(3 2-crust 9" pies OR 6 11" circles OR 18 41/2" circles for tarts)

6 cups sifted all-purpose flour

2 cups shortening (part butter or margarine) ¼ cup cold water

Sift flour and salt together into a large mixing bowl. Add the shortening and cut in with 2 knives or a pastry blender. Sprinkle with the water, mixing with a fork until all the mixture is moistened. Gather the dough together in small amounts and press with the hands to form into 6 balls about 3 inches in diameter. Flatten balls slightly, wrap in aluminum foil.

Fresh Cherry Filling

(fills 1 9-inch pie OR 5 3-inch tarts)

4 cups pitted fresh cherries

erries ¼ cup flour l teaspoon almond flavoring l tablespoon butter or margarine

Combine the cherries with the sugar, flour and flavoring. Turn into pie shell or tarts and dot with butter. Bake and serve with a topping of whipped cream.

Blueberry pie: use 4 cups blueberries, 1 cup sugar; omit almond flavoring.

Lattice-topped Strawberry Rhubarb Pie

3 cups cut rhubarb 1 pint strawberries

4 tablespoons flour

1¼ cups sugar

1 tablespoon butter or margarine freshly grated nutmeg

Roll out one ball of pastry and line a 9-inch pan. Let pastry extend over edge of pan ½ inch all around. Combine rhubarb with washed, hulled and sliced strawberries, sugar and flour. Mix lightly and turn into pastry-lined plate. Dot with butter and sprinkle with nutmeg.

Moisten the outer rim of the crust; then roll another ball of pastry into %-inch strips and place over the fruit in lattice design. Press ends of strips to rim of crust; then turn up overhanging crust and make decorative edge with fingers. Place in freezer until firm; then wrap in aluminum foil, label and store in freezer.

ORANGE LATTICE COFFEE CAKE

Dough:

1 package or cake yeast, active dry or compressed

1/4 cup warm water (105°-115° F.)

3/3 cup margarine

4 eggs heaten

4 eggs, betten
34 cup light cream
4 cups flour
4 cup flour, for lattice strips

Orange Filling:

% cup margarine% cup chopped California walnuts

3/3 cup sugar 3/3 cup orange marmalade

Soften yeast in water. Cream together margarine and sugar; add salt, eggs and beat well. Combine yeast mixture with light cream. Add alternately flour, yeast-cream mixture in thirds. Mix well, but do not beat. Reserve one cup dough. Spread remainder in two aluminum foil lined 9 x 9 x 2-inch pans. (Cut foil long enough so that overlap completely covers cake; then, when coffee cakes are cool, foil can merely be folded over to seal one or both for freezing.) Lightly grease section of foil in pan. Combine margarine, nuts, sugar, and marmalade. Mix well. Spread orange filling over dough. Blend 1 cup flour into reserved dough. Roll dough into rectangle and cut into twelve 9 x 1-inch strips. Arrange six strips, lattice fashion, over filling in each pan; brush with beaten egg. Cover with aluminum foil. Let rise in warm place until almost double in bulk (45 to 60 minutes). Bake in 400°F, oven for 30 to 35 minutes. Grasp edges of foil and remove coffee cake to serving platter; serve warm. OR cool thoroughly, seal and freeze. To use frozen coffee cake, thaw in oven at 250°-300°F. Makes 2 coffee cakes.

FROSTED ORANGE ROLLS

1 package or cake yeast, active dry or compressed 14 cup warm, not hot water (lukewarm for compressed yeast)

l egg 2 tablespoons sugar

11½ teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons melted margarine
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
34 cup orange juice
3 cups flour

Soften yeast in water. Beat egg in mixing bowl. Add yeast, sugar, salt, margarine, orange peel and juice. Stir in flour. Beat until smooth, adding a little more flour if necessary to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead until smooth. Return to greased bowl. Grease top, cover and let stand in warm place until double in bulk (about 1 hour). Punch down, form into 2 balls. Roll each separately into a circle about %-inch thick, brush with melted margarine and sprinkle with a mixture of 1 cup sugar and peel of 1 orange. With long knife cut into 12 pie-shaped wedges. Starting at wide end, roll up each long, slender triangle of dough toward narrow end. Set on greased cooky sheet, making sure that the tip is under the roll. (This will keep it from unrolling as dough rises.) Cover with damp cloth and let rise again until double in size. Bake in 425°F. oven for about 15 to 20 minutes, or until nicely browned. Let cool thoroughly; wrap for freezer, label and freeze. To use, thaw in the oven at 250-300°F. Let cool a few minutes, then frost with Orange Frosting and serve while warm. (Or if you plan to use immediately, allow to cool a few minutes, frost and serve.) Makes 24 rolls.

Orange Frosting:

I tablespoon soft margarine
I teaspoon grated orange peel
I cup sifted confectioners' sugar

l tablespoon lemon juice orange juice (about 2 tablespoons)

Add orange peel to margarine. Gradually work in confectioners' sugar and juice, a little at a time. Beat well until right consistency for spreading. This frosting should be fairly soft.
