Walter Erdkamp, director of trade and industry vocational education, and Larry Bonner, consultant in business and distributive education, were in Wayne for the day. They met first with the administrator and teachers and then with the administrator and school board.

After the program was explained in depth, the board directed Supt. Francis Haun to obtain application blanks to see if teachers can be qualified. If they can, the Wayne schools will be "vocational in two ways."

On the other hand, a wayne man may not be so sure of himself from now on. In Norfolk during the wee morning hours, he turned onto a one-way street. Coming at him was a lone car. He stopped to warn the other driver, the other car stopped, the Wayne man opened his window and told the other driver: "You're on a one-way street!" The other driver replied: "I know I'm on a one-way street. But YOU'RE going the wrong way! Sure enough, the local man had turned at the wrong intersection.

WSC Next Week

WSC Next Week

It's commencement time at Wayne State. This may seem strange in the Christmas season, and it is

Growth of the graduating

The faculty recently

He will address a class that includes one master's degree recipient, John Tanner, and 73 candidates for bachelor's degrees.

All seats will be available to the public except those reserved for the graduates.

Father William Kleffman, pastor of %t. Mary's Catholic Church, Wayne, will give the invocation and benediction. Blue Key, men's honorary, will provide ushers and decorations; Cardinal Key, women's honorary, the marshals.

Middle School Concept Outlined for Next Year

Supt. Francis Haun outlined plans for Wayne Middle School in Lincoln the past week. He met with Hugh Harlan, junior high advisor with the department of education and the outline for the school was accepted with minor changes.

changes. Grades five through eight

Grades five through eight are to be housed in the present senior-junior high building. It has 21 teaching stations, a small gym, shop, homemaking suite and science laboratories. Grades five and six will continue to be in self-contained classrooms except for art, music and physical education. Northeast Flegmentary will no longer be used. Kindergartenthrough fourth grade will be in West Elementary School.

Wayne Thursday Silver Dollar Night offering in Wayne Thursday night will be $300. That came about because there was no winner last week. Clarence Starzl, Emerson, would have been winner of $250 if he had been in Wayne. His number was drawn, his name was called at the participating business places and he did not respond. Because he registered and his number was drawn, he will get a check for $10 as consolation from The Wayne Chamber of Commerce. The same will happen this week if the one called is not in town. Included in five numbers by this group are "There Shall a Star Come Out of David" by Mendelssohn and "Honor and Glory" by Bach. Other groups directed by the two included the seventh and eighth grade chorus in two numbers, the girls' glee club in four numbers and the madrigal in four numbers.

A Rumor Spiked

Mayor William Koeber and the Wayne City Council members are concerned about a rumor that has been going around concerning fines for overtime and illegal parking. The rumor is being spiked now.

The city is not fining people indiscriminately right and left-for overtime parking in the two-hour zones. In fact, the police department has been uncommonly generous in allowing people the benefit of the doubt.

Not one person has been fined for first offense overtime parking. Every person fined has received two warnings with no fine and had to appear only after a third violation was recorded.

In addition, it is pointed out that if a driver has two violations in a three-month period, the record is then "erased" and he starts over. Thus, four months after the first violation he would get warnings again.

A statement from the city is being prepared for publication next week. In the meantime, the people the Wayne City Council covered a wide variety of problems, taking action on most, including storm'sewers, stop signs for alleys, yield signs for streets, dutch elm spraying, parking violation fines, restricted parking and overruling the zoning board. A city ordinance calls for stopping before leaving an alley and entering a street. To accent this, the council has decided to put stop signs at the major alleys opening onto business area streets.

In other areas, the stop is still required, even though no signs may appear. Policemen will be instructed to enforce the ordinance.

Judge David Hamer appeared regarding the city's ordinance which requires a fine of $10 plus $5 costs, He said there had been some complaints from busnessmen that the total was excessive for illegal parking and overtime parking.

Block Uniting for Special Decoration

A one-block street, Circle Drive, is "Candy Cane Lane" for the rest of the block joined for special Christmas decorations. It is the first phase of a plan to decorate each Christmas, more features being added each year.

Sunday the decorations went up, including large metallic letters proclaiming the drive "Candy Cane Lane." Nine homes and the Assembly of God Church have joined in the project.

Stove pipes with rounded ends were painted white to resemble big candy canes. This did not do the job so red ribbon with bows on them completed the illusion.

Ten candy canes were then erected at the homes and church. Each is tilted at an angle. All of them are floodlighted along with the sign identifying the drive.

This is the same neighborhood that got together to beautify the circle last spring. Petunias, cannai and red salvia were planted and cared for to make the formerly barren circular plot a beauty spot.

Concept 🤜

High school will include grades hine throughtwelve.
Some ungraded classes are planned in middle-school. By "ungraded" it is not meant the pupils will not be graded. They will bring home report cards. However, they will be placed in classes on the level of achievement (not in grades five, six, seven, eight) and until a child achieves proficiency in a subject he will continue to study that course. When he achieves proficiency, he will move on. Likewise, in nine-week periods those who do achieve will move on to further studies move on to further studies.

will move on. Likewise, in nine-week periods those who do achieve will move on to further studies, progressing as ability permits.

Modislar scheduling is to be used. This means courses of less than one-hour will be offered. For instance, it has been shown that in learning languages, little is retained after the first 30 minutes so anhour can be divided into three 20-minute modules. In a seven-hour school day, 21 modules are possible. This will give the school more flexibility in scheduling according to needs and efficiency.

Learn teaching is to be

Team teaching is to be ugurated on a limited it. Team teaching in ordinary imeaning of language merely sugsts cooperation among thers but more specifically it calls for a group teachers who work tocally it calls for a group of teachers who work to-gether in behalf of the tofal number of children they represent and are respon-sible for. The idea of team teaching stresses shared responsibility and coopera-tive effort of a group of teachers working closely together for a common goal.

Wayne school board are block subject areas; en-richment electives(foreign language, typing, home-making, wood shop, music, art, drama).

Middle school testing will be administered by the high school guidance director. Seventh and with the administered by the high school guidance director. Seventh and eighth grade pupils will have home room teachers who will have some personal contact with each child assigned to him. Each home room teacher would be provided with group guidance units to be presented weekly to the seventh and eighth grades. The high school guidance director would be responsible for eighth grade orientation. This would be given prior to the time sible for eighth grade orientation. This would be given prior to the time these pupils enroll in high school.

Wayne Middle School curriculum would be specially designed to meet the needs of adolescent growth and would stress character development. Transition from self-contained to departmentalized classrooms would thus be gradual.

Emphasis will be placed on continued development of study and listening skills. Supervised study under the expert teacher will be used rather than the traditional study hall. It is hoped the library can be staffed with a librarian who is also a certified teacher.

staffed with a librarian who is also a certified teacher. Constant evaluation will be made of all programs, projects and experiments. WMS staff members will be selected with the following qualifications in mind: Willing to try new teaching techniques and methods; desire to learn constantly; ability to work with groups for common goals; understanding of evaluation tools and the need for using them; Ability to explain "what year. However, the two hours would not have to run consecutively each day. Basically, the plan boils down to Wayne being able to offer courses in business and industrial arts which will allow pupils to follow through from year to year and when they complete all the parts of the course they will possess usable skills that will prepare them for the job market.

In addition, industrial education courses can be keyed to train pupils in almost any area industry may wish. If an industrial firm would locate here, courses could be added or enlarged to emphasize the training needed to work with that firm. Vocational industrial education courses have a high degree of flexibility to meet the needs of the community, Supt. Haun points out.

Through the Vocational Education Act of 1963, funds would be available to Wayne to pay one-half the cost of all equipment and material deemed necessary to teach vocational classes. Funds would also pay an amount equal to one-half the qualified Funds would also pay an amount equal to one-half the qualified teachers' gross salaries when they teach recommended and approved courses, Federal money allotted through the act for vocational education is administered by the state. Supt. Haun said the need for additional teachers would be determined by the enrollment. If there were to be an appreciable increase in the courses involved, new teachers might have to be added but the matching funds made available would offset any increase in salary costs.

The library of the Nebraska State Historical Society contains a large number of booklets and newspapers printed in the language of the Sioux Indians. The publications were printed at the Santee Normal Training School, east of Niobrara, in Knox County, Nebraska.

School was founded in 1870 by the Reverend Alfred L. Riggs, a Congregational missionary whose father had also been a missionary among the Santee Sioux. By the 1880's and 1890's, the Santee had come to be regarded as leaders in Indian education.

At Reverend Riggs' death in 1916, a Santee Sioux minister recalled the following: "When I first saw Dr. Riggs I noticed that he was different from the other missionaries. The others all paid much attention to the adult Indians but here was a man who but here was a man who seemed to be giving most of his time to gathering the children and young people....From that training of the children a new or institute to gatering the children and young people...From that training of the children a new and different generation of our people has grown up. The educational work that Dr. Riggs began in a way that looked to us very unimportant has grown to be the greatest blessing to all the Dakota people. Riggs was succeeded by his son, Frederick B. Riggs, who served as principal of Santee Normal until his retirement in 1933.

The Santee Normal Training School became one of the most important and influential institutions for Indian education in the country. The graduates of Santee Normal included ministers, missionaries, teachers, nurses and en.

Santee Normal included ministers, missionaries, teachers, nurses and engineers, as well as farmers, workers and housewives. The school attracted students from Sioux reservations throughout the Great Plains and from other Indian tribes as well. One person estimated that nearly half of the pastors, teachers, government employees, and other leaders of the Sioux were educated at Santee Normal.

A booklet published by Santee Normal, now in the possession of the State Historical Society, lists the courses the school offered. Among the courses listed were history, English literature, physics, chemistry, mineralogy, zoology, botany, mathe matics, music and drawing. For boys there were courses sewing, cooking and laundering.

The printing press of the Santee Normal Training School was used to publish booklets and missionary literature, both in English and in the language of the Sloux. Three newspapers were also printed there, in English and the Sloux language.

At its high point, the school boasted 18 buildings and 480 acres of Jand. In the late 1880's, enrollment was over 200. Financial difficulties and loss of government subsidies forced a limitation of enrollment, however. Eventually, financial difficulties forced the closing of the school in 1936.

Devil's Nest

In the files of the Nebraska State Historical Society are occasional references to an area in horthern Knox County,—east of the town of Niobran-known as "Devil's Nest." Although many areas in the United States which have "Devil" in their names are desolate regions without trees, and with very little foliage of any kind, Devil's Nest is an area of rugged terrain covered with vegetation and dotted with trees. Because of the extreme ruggedness of the area, it has not been farmed and remains in a state of wilderness. Nebraska's Devil's Nest is a beautiful and piqturesque spot, very unlike what its name implies.

The first white man to have left a record of his travels through Devil's Nest was Jacques Machby to his French associates, Mackay traveled through Devil's Nest in 1796, the year John Adams was elected to succeed George Washington as president of the United States.

In the early part of September, 1804, the Lewis and Clark Expedition passed Devil's Nest as the will be used to be used Legends and stories abound concerning the Devil's Nest area. To the west of Devil's Nest may be found "Maiden"s Leap." This was supposedly the scene of an Indian maiden's suicide after her beloved failed to return from battle. However, the files of the State Historical Society reveal that the "legend" was originally started as a joke by an early knox County resident. Today, the joke has become accepted as truth and has found its way into several historical accounts.

Crossing The South Platte

The library of the Nebraska State | Historical Society contains a large number of books which deal with the hardships faced by travelers on the Oregon Trail. Some of these are first-hand actounts, others are derived from first-hand accounts.

The wagon trains which crossed Nebraska in the mid-1800's generally followed the Oregon Trail. This trail ran westward along the south bank of the Platte River from a point east of Fort Kearny to the forks of the Platte, then along the south bank of the South Platte River, Approximately four to four-and-ahalf miles west of the present town of Brule, Nebraska, the trail crossed the South Platte River, at then ran northwest to the valley of the North Platte River and followed that river into the mountains.

However, when recent rains had swollen the siver, no sinch easy crossing waspossible. But even when swollen with flood water, the river was usually not more than about three feet deep. The crossing was made dangerous by the swiftness of the current and by the treacherous sandy bottom. In places, this sand behalved like quicksand. It was necessary at such times to hitch several teams to a wagon, so that if one of the teams hit a patch of quicksand, the other teams would still hopefully find a safe footing. A traveler recorded that it once took fifty minutes to get a single wagon across the river when at flood stage.

At times when the crossing was difficult, considerable traffic congestion developed at the ford, It was

On at least one such occasion, the travelers are recorded as having a buffalo hunt during their enforced waiting period. For some of the west-bound emigrants, the experience of fording the South Platte River at the west-bound emigrants, the experience of fording the South Platte River at the Lower California Crossing was looked upon as the most dangerous part of their journey.

Meteorite Facts Given by Woman

Facts on the meteorite on George Heady's grave in the Wayne Celmetery were supplied the past week by a California woman who used to live here. She furnished personal information plus a quotation from a book.

Mrs. Gussie Skadden

St. Stockton, Calif., wrote a letter confirming that the stone is indeed a meteorite. Her letter appears on the editorial page this week.

According to Mrs. Ketch-mark, her mother married mark, her mother married George Heady 20 years before his death. Mrs. hethmark says Heady never did live on the McIntosh, farm where the meteorite was found but helped dig a well and when he got to the object he keept it.

Mrs. Ketchmark names a professor and a geologist who said it was a meteorite. She also tells about Rollie Ley ha vingpossession of it for a while (as reported by Mrs. Jim Hein) and said Heady had indicated prior to his death that he wanted the meteorite for a gravestone.

A quotation sent by Mrs. Kletchmark is taken from "Stories on Stone," by Charles 1, Wallis, Professor of English, keeka College, Neuka, N.Y. It quotes from "V Book of American Epitaphs," published by Oxford University Press in 1954.

Here is what the book said: A meteory particle marks the grave of George Heady, died 1947, aged 87, in Greenwood Cemetery, Wayne, Nebraska, Heady found the rock one day in his youth when he was digging a well near Wayne. "The claimed it was a meteorite and geologists affirmed his belief, Before he died he asked that the oval-shaped stone, which is 16 inches long and weighs about 250 nounds, he used

Thus continues the investigation into this stone which has been in the local cemetery for almost 30 years without much attention. No one has yet come up with an answer as to why scientists, museums or others never obtained the meteorite for study or display.

Maybe so meone somewhere knows, the full story may be a long time coming. Little pieces of information such as that supplied this week help fill the gaps.

'Not Meteorite' Local Man Says

Meer the acompanying article was written, Frank Heine, Wayne, came in to The Wayne Herald office to offer information on the meteorite on George Heady's grave. He said the grave marker is not a met-grave marker is not a meteorite.

Here is the way Heine tells it. He was cemetery caretaker (serving 19 years) when a story appeared in Robert Ripley's "Believe It Or Not" that the tombstone on George Heady's grave at Wayne wals a meteorite.

This drew nationwide attention and many people came to see the stone. Among them was a Harrard professor, anauthority on such things, who examined the stone and said it was no meteorite.

According to Heine, the Harvard man said meteorites are not "stone" but of iron-like substance. They also are jagged and not smooth.

The Harvard man told.

of iron-like substance. They also are jagged and not smooth.

The Harvard man told. Heine he thought the stone was no doubt found by men digging a well, but he thought a meteorite would bury itself in the earth so no one could ever dig deep enough to find it. However, he said the stone prot bly rolled down from the north with the glaciers and was long buried before the meteorite incident resulted in it being found.

Furthermore, Heine said Levine Johnson, stone cutter at the Wayne Monument Works, tried to engrave the stone but it crumbled off (flaked off) so it could not be engraved. He then made plate which he cemented on it.

There's another version on it.

There's another version and it sounds most plausible, just as those of others have sounded. It adds a different light to the story.

More information will be welcomed.

Some of the most-anticipated numbers were omitted to move the show along faster. However, the portion rendered was well worth the price of admission.

May be next time there is such a program it will be here on time, will not be subject to conjecture about its being presented and will be greeted by a full house. If word of mouth advertising helps, it should fare better than this fine production did.

Road Near Winside

The slow-moving vehicle was in front and the faster-moving vehicle in back. Otherwise there probably would have been no accident on a county road a mile south of Winside Sunday afternoon.

Eugene Schaeufele, Norfolk, was accompanied by his wife as he drove north looking for game. Gerald Thompson, Winside, was also northbound alone.

Thompson came over a hill, saw the Schaeufele car in front of him and tried to stop. The combination of gravel and ice made stopping impossible, and his car hit the rear of the Schaeufele vehicle.

Deputy Sheriff S. C. Thompson, who investigated, reported no injuries. He said damage was moderate to heavy to the Schaeufele car and heavy to the Thompson car, which had to be towed away.

What Manner of Man Would Do This Work?

What manner of man would desecrate a church? Wayne Police Department members do not know but they have a feeling of revulsion for the perpetrator for perpetrators of a disgusting act the past week.

Nomeone entered the church, defected on several seats and at several places on the floor. Discovery of the incident was not learned until a short time before the first ser-vices Sunday.

Other incidents reported to the police were less revolting. One man lost a driver's license, a car was blocking analley, a dog was running loose, someone put pheasant feathers in a garbage can behind a residence, a sick man needed to be checked for possible help and a resident was burning trash at an hour not allowed by the city. A NEW, REVOLUTIONARY FARM BUILDING

... ALMOST ANYONE

CAN DO IT

BECAUSE The panel is the building

By easy, we mean as easy as fastering a nut on a bolt! The Panliframe erection booklet shows you how! The panel is the building.

And every one is factory-formed, cut, and punched with such precision you can't put the building up wrong. Even the doors, windows, and other accessories are factory-located.

New Panliframe panels not only install fast—they're strong, too! Deeper corrugations, more corrugations make them solid as a rock. Heavy snow loads and high winds won't affect this building.

Most surprising is the low price. As low as a good pole band. A price only Butler makes possible through mass-production methods and standardization of parts. Don't put it off—call now about this fast, easy way to build. And be sure to ask about Butler's new, low-cost finance plan—with easy, flexible terms to match seasonal farm income.

Hoskins Firm May Expand in Spring After Manufacturing Less Than Year

After Manufacturia

The latter part of May, Hoskins Manufacturing Co. started operations. It is not rivaling du Pont but it is in line for expansion this coming spring.

Three young men, Kyle Delp, Vernon Delp and Richard Doffin, started the manufacturing operation.

They received encouragement and support from Ed Kollath, mayor of Hoskins and president of Commercial State Bank, Hoskins.

Starting out in a new building they built themselves on Hoskins' Main Starting out in a new building they built themselves on Hoskins' Main Street, the men made up the full work force. Later they hired two others to work on a part-time basis.

Safes and hog oilers were two items they made in their plant. They have since added driveway gates and waterers of all types, both of which they custom build to order.

In November alone they sold over 20 waterers in the area. Sales have been made in all communities in this region and to places as far away as Creighton, Meadow Grove, Hartington, Humphrey, Battle Creek and other towns.

Inquiries on their products have come infrom all parts of Nebraska as well as from points in South Dakota, Kansas and Oklahoma. A salesman out of Sioux

The men make their own electric units to keep the waterers from freezing. They also do much of their own distribution through area business places.

Now they are talking of building, to the west and to the north in the spring. At that time it is possible they will add more employees.

Puriness is good and the Business is good and the Business is good and the men themselves can take credit for this. They are not afraid to work. They put in long hours, they do good work and they want to get bigger in a field where they feel there is a need for the type of products they can make in their well-equipped plant.

Beemer Seminar Has Advice for Feeders

The first 20-30 days after new animals arrive are the most important cattle feeding days, area feeders were told at a beef seminar in Beemer Friday. They were also given other advice on making money by feeding.

Dr. M. L. Green, Mitchell, told of experiences of feeders in the North Platte Valley in helping animals adjust to new surroundings after shipment.

animals adjust to new sur-roundings after shipment. He pointed out that cattle are not normal the first few days because of the stress of shipment and be-ing grouped with strange cattle. It takes 10-15 days for cattle.

It takes 10-15 days for a yearling steer to gain back weight lost and it takes 30 days for a weanling calf to get back its weight, Dr. Green said. If feeders can cut down on the number of days'required, economic losses can be reduced.

Providing too high on too low a level of engrgy is the worst mistake, feeders were told. Inadequate energy levels lengthen time required to recover from shipping effects and excessive energy levels disturb rumen bacteria, may cause an acid condition and even death due to founder.

AMBULANCE

Paone 375-2990

Dear Editor:

Some years ago a test was made on the so-called meteorite in the Wayne Cemetery.

We found that it was definitely not a meteorite but a concretion. A meteorite the size of this stone would create a tremendous impact, would hit the earth at an langle and would also make a cavity or saucershaped dent in the ground. There would also be some fragments scattered and the edges of the hole would show the earth had been seared.

This stone or concretion has been shaped some by human hands. There is no evidence that it had been heated which would happen if it was a meteorite. Also, it is so soft it can be scratched by a penknife and a stone of this kind would disntegrate long before it would reach the earth. The fact that it has been shaped and the inscription plaque inset, shows how soft it is. This could not be done if it were a meteorite.

The hole in the ground can be accounted for. The earth's crust is full of cavities and cracks and under heavy rains or cloud-bursts the ground will sink without leaving any debris on the surface. These concretions and granite boulders are the result of glacial drift during the ice ages. They were buried deep in the earth and can be found down to two hundred feet. Many are found on the surface in Cedar County, Nebr. and elsewhere.

A meteorite the size of

A meteorite the size of the stone in the Wayne Cemetery would be too heavy to lift and it bears no resemblance to a celestial body or fragment.

(This letter was received (This letter was received after the two stories on the front page were written and set. Judge Hamer has a piece of meteorite from Illinois. He is a rockhound. He also has told of rocks similar to the one in the cemetery being found near Mandan, N.D.—Editor). Two Times in Studies

An owl that has been twotiming a Concord farmer will do so no more. It has now gone to owl heaven, its remains being kept to help two times in school studies.

Iner Peterson, Concord, was a little tired of the owl preying on his poultry. He shot it last week and then decided the children at Concord Elementary School might enjoy seeing it.

They did. In one teacher's class, her nephew had just written a thesis on horned owls so she knew a lot about them. Having-read the thesis, she was able to explain a lot about the bird.

All classes learned about how the tufts look like horns and thus give the predator its name. They examined a real bird, saw how its beak and claws could be used to get small birds and animals and learned of its habits and food.

When they were through with the bird, Mrs. Helen Pearson put the owl in the freezer. It is being kept for her nephew who is in Minnesota and who is still studying the bird for his thesis. He will be able to use the bird's body in a lot of ways for his work.

The editorial department of a weekly newspaper is an important department. Normally it is one person's opinion of topics that concern most of the readers.

It is the duty of an editorial writer to search all available facts before he sits down to write. From this basis the writer should be able to give a clear picture of important topics.

Are You an Oldtimer?

The Wayne Herald is interested in finding out who has taken this newspaper without a break for the longest period of time. Now over 90 years old, the paper has been a feature in area homes for time. Now over 90 years old, the paper has been a feature in area homes for many generations.

Write and tell us about when you started taking The Herald. If you can remember incidents concerning payment of the first subscription or later subscriptions, tell us about those too.

Let us know if you paid one year with a sack of potatoes or some dressed hens. Remind us of humorous or humaninterest incidents in conjunction with paying for or receiving this paper.

If you have always received The Herald at the same address, let us know about that too. Tell us how many places you have lived and still received the paper. Iell us where you are now.

This will determine who is the real "oldtimer" among us. There are noprizes but there should be some interesting stories to print in this newspaper. If you have told us oralls before, write out your experiences and length of service and mail in your report.

Send letters concerning this to: Editor, Wayne Herald, Box 71, Wayne, Nebr. 68787. Don't forget to include your name, address and signature.

Be Careful, Businessman

Be Careful, Businessman

In recent weeks. The Wayne Herald, and probably all other Nebraska newspapers, has received a notice from the Equal I imployment Opportunity Commission. It accents how ridiculous some good intentions can become when federal red tape gets tangled up.

You cannot advertise for workers of certain races, religions or creeds. That is a fair enough rule, and it is probably the original intent.

Now the EEOC says federal orders point out that you cannot advertise for employees by sex unless. "a bona fide occupational qualification makes it lawful to specify male or female." You can indicate that a job may be more attractive to one sex than the other but you have to be prepared to justify your preference for one sex over the other as a "bona fide occupational qualification."

There are two aspects to consider here. First, how much proof is needed? If you need an attendant for a ladies' rest room, is this a bona fide reason for seeking "female help" only? You'll have to prove it. If you need a plumbing assistant, can you prove that you have nothing but the best intentions by advertising under the male help wanted" classification? Who decides whether an ad is fair in one classification or the other?

The second aspect is: Who will check the thousands of adsto make surethere are no violations." There are many ads in the Omaha World-Herald each Sunday. These will probably have to be checked. But the Omaha paper has a fraction of the ads newspapers such as the Los Angeles Times and the Miami Herald have. Will hundreds of workers have to be on the job checking each one, determining if they should be followed up with further checks and then making those where there is a question prove that they are being fair in wording the ads the way they do" There goes another federal department growing bigger and bigger.

It is to be hoped if the federal government does need many more employees to other federal department growing bigger and bigger. It is to be hoped if the federal government does need many more employees to do this, it will hire without reference to the "checkers" race, religion, sex, color, national origin OR POLITICAL PARTY. Equal opportunity is all right. How come something so simple has become so involved?—CEG.

Let AT&T Investigate

You may not agree with an editorial - but if you read the editorial and give servous thought to the subject discussed you have gained. You, as a reader, have given careful thought to an important problem and the writer is proud to have called your attention to an important subject that you may have overlooked.

has more stockholders than any other corporation in the world, is under investigation. Who is investigation? The federal government.

This is a case that is comparable to having the cart try to push the horse. It would make more sense if AT&T investigated the government.

Here in Wayne County there are probably stockholders in the huge corporation. They, like others, bought the stock because the firm has progressed through the years, keeping e quip ment up-to-date, keeping service costs low and returning a profit which means dividends to stockholders. In contrast, the federal government knows no way to move ahead without going into debt. It appears that the federal watchdogs jealously watch such a big corporation, unable to understand how it can keep abreast of the times and not go in the red.

Maybe the telephone company should keep abreast of the times and novel red.

Maybe the telephone company should investigate to see why the post office is in the red. Chances are, AT&T could modernize the postal system to serve better, offer latest facilities and make money if it were given the chance.

Certainly AT&T needs no meddling from the federal government. There may be operations that should be investigated in this country but the Bell System is not one of them.

Next time you call San Francisco from Wayne for less than a dollar, try to imagine how much it would cost if the federal government had taken over the telephone systems years ago. Be a little grateful for the excellent telephone service Northwestern Bell provides this area. Try to visualize the crank telephones of a few years ago compared with the push-button types that are coming soon.

The federal government may have a number of firms to investigate. In this instance it has the wrong number -CEG.

No Thanks, Mr. Callan

Clair Callan is "down" and no one should take a kick at him. However, in his outbursts following his defeat at the polls, he has cast reflections upon the ability of Nebraska first district citizens to know what is good for them and upon the integrity of those who plan the "Great Society" program.

what is good for them and upon the integrity of those who plan the "Great Society" program.

In case you did not see the statements by the ex-congressman, he said Nebraska would miss out on a lot of federal money because he, a Democrat, was voted out of office. He inferred that the job corps centers, schools and other public set-ups where federal aid is offered would get less money than they would if he had been re-elected.

If this is true, and the Great Society does use such "reprisal" tactics, the country is in worse shape than thought. The worst fears about the administration may be realized yet.

Ilowever, this is still a free country and Democrats and Republicans alike should not tolerate such "vote for me or lose out entirely" tactics. As freemen, we can vote as we please without fear of "punishment" for not agreeing 100 per cent with the party in power.

Mr. Callan may not know why he was defeated. The idea that he could get more for the people because he followed Great Society dictates down the line did not appeal to Nebraskans.

Now it is up to Bob Denney to make the people glad they made the change. This does not mean seeking a handout or federal Nebraska and its interests to the best of his ability.

Even Democrats should disagree with

Nebraska and its interests to the best of his ability.

Even Democrats should disagree with Callan's "poor loser" outbursts. Those who voted for Denney will expect him to vindicate their choice. Whether Callan says "I told you so!" in years to come or Denney proves the people knew what they were doing, is a matter for time to decide. It's out of Callan's hands now.—CEG.

Jules W. Burbach, also 54. He has shown remarkable tact for working with different factions within the Legislature. He headed the powerful revenue committee in 1965, and whenever a knotty problem had to be worked out, he more often than not was assigned the job. Burbach comes from Crofton.

Harold B. Stryker, 51. He is a former chairman of the legislative council and made a bid for the speaker's job two years ago. A native of Rising City, he has been influential in major public power decisions.

—Eugene T. Mahoney, 38, Omaha. In some respects, he is the epitome of a politician—a master of tactical delay and personable. A former Omaha police detective, he is a one-time administrative aide to Rep. Glenn Cunningham, R.Neb.

These six men are considered the major contenders. But still in the picture are Sens. George D. Syas of Omaha, Arnold J. Ruhnke of Plymouth, William Hasebroock of West Point, and Carpenter.

Adamson has been mentioned most frequently as the next speaker—a functional as well as honorary position. The job is generally regarded as the highest honor conferred bythe senators on a colleague.

Some feel that because the lieutenant governor in the 1967 session will be a Republican, John E. Everroad of Omaha, the new speaker will be a Democrat—possibly Burbach.

However, the Legislature—while it is a non-partisan body—has two registered Republicans to every Newery Permocrat. This.

registeren republicans to every Democrat. This gives a GOP contender a good chance.

New Tax System Needed State Tax Commissioner George Dworak says his office could face an administrative dilemma unless the next Legislature adopts a new tax system in a hurry.

He said no plans have been made to implement sales or income tax legislation because these forms of revenue are not state law yet.

Nebraskans abolished the state property tax and repealed the 1966 income tax in the Nov. 8 election. The next legislature must come up with a replacement tax system. Nebraska now raises about $49 million a year for government operations through the state property tax. The last monies from this source are expected to run out next fall.

Dworak said implementation of a new tax system is his foremost concern. "We will have to play it by ear until the Legislature makes a decision," he said. No Price-Fixing

A spokesman for the state of Nebraska reports a preliminary investigation of road oil sales indicates no bid-rigging or price-fixing has been involved in Nebraska.

Harold S. Salter, attorney for the State Roads Department, added, however, that the probe will continue, hopefully in concert with South and North Dakota.

Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma all have suits pending against several oil companies for alleged price fixing in the sales of liquid asphalt (road oil) sales. "We have gone over the (road oil) sales.

"We have gone over the bids and road work in Nebraska and we cannot find a situation comparable to that in the states where actions have been filed," Salter said.

Favors Research

Elmer Schlaphoff, named new State Agriculture Director by Governor-elect Norbert T. Tiemann, said he favors continuance of the Nebraska farm products research program.

But he indicated there should be some internal revisions in the overall effort.

"I have some very definite ideas on this research—what kind we should do and where the money should go," Schlaphoff, of Waverly, said. "I would like to see more of the money spent in Nebraska."

The research program, enacted by the 1959 Legislature, is scheduled to run for two more years. But it will come to an end next year unless law-makers revoids funds size.

New Law
In an effort to restrain inflation, Congress has recently passed, and the President signed into law, a bill suspending the 7 per cent investment credit for the period October 10, 1966 through Dec. 31, 1967. The suspension applies in susually a rush of samples in late winter and early spring.

Many farmers have corps which are suitable for ps which are suitable and sell as been made. Most farmers assume that seed must be tested in the State Sale. In most cases this is the most convenient place to get it done. However, legal tests can be had elsewhere. In fact, a farmer is not prohibited from testing his own. All that is required by law is that the seed be tested and a label must show the date of test, the germination and the purity. In the final analysis, it's the seller who guarantees the accuracy of the information shown on the label.

Food Buying Tips
If you're looking for something new to serve your family, why not try one of the less expensive cuts of beef? A blade chuck or flank steak, for example—they're all delicious when cooked properly. Braising is a good way to cook these cuts.

good way to cook these cuts.

Beef cuts from certain parts of the carcass help you save money and give variety to your menus. Cuts from the fore-quarter, such as chuck roasts and short ribs are least expensive. Variety meats such as hearts, tongues, and livers are also economical buys.

One word of caution—if you come across an unfamiliar cut of beef, always ask the butcher which part of the carcass it was cut from. If it is just another name for chuck cut, it may rate a fancy name but not a fancy price. When you buy eggs note the difference between grade—which refers to the weight of a dozen. The grade and size are not related, but both are specified on the carton when the eggs have been graded.

Grade AA and A eggs are the best quality and are ideal for any purpose. They are especially good for frying and poaching where appearance is important.

The size of eggs you're most likely to see are Extra large, Large and Medium. Other weight classes are Jumbo, Small and Peewee. Some people like to use extra large and large eggs for a hearty breakfast, large eggs for children.

Letters to The Editor

Dear Editor: I have received, from old friends, two copies of your November 24 issue which contained the story about the meteorite on George Heady's grave.

George never lived on the McIntosh farm but helped some well diggers [I] don't recall their names dig a well there and when they took out this stone George wanted to keep it and they let him have it. He kept it in his front yard many years, it was examined by geologists who decided that it was a meteorite. Professor Duran who used to be a marble cutter there also said it was a meteorite. My mother was married to George Heady for twenty years before she passed away and I have heard him tell about the stone many times and that he wanted it for his grave marker. When he and mother moved to Sioux City, Iowa about 1920, Rollie Ley kept the stone in his barn or garage for George until he passed away in 1937 and then had it placed on his grave.

Very truly yours, Gussie Skadden Ketchmark, (Mrs. W. C.) at 122 E. Noble St., Stock ton, Calif. 95204. (We are using the information you en elos ed from the book "Stories on Skone," in a news article this week. Have we given Bill Garvin of Dixon a bouquet before? It doesn't matter because if he hasn't had one, he deserves one and if he has had one, two will not be too many. Bill is a busy man, but like most busy men he can find time to do things for others. He is handling the "Fighting Irish" basketball teams at Dixon Grade School again this year. You could credit him with time spent at practices, time spentgoing to and from games, time answering the in-person and telephoned inquiries from the kids, time spent calling other coaches and deciding other coaches and deciding if games should be postponed and time spent doing 100 other things most coaches get paid for doing. However, as much credit as you give him for doing these things, you would still not be giving him enough. It takes a special man to work with kids, shaping their lives by teaching them how to win or lose gracefully, getting them to realize that by working and trying harder they can get off the bench and on the team and by prodding them to excel because there is nothing wrong with being a winner. The Divorbide will as to excel because there is nothing wrong with being a winner. The Dixon kids will be better boys and better men because of the work Bill Garvin does without monetary compensation. He only wants to help now but he's helping for years to come. May this bouquet to Bill and his boys (and their parents) never wither.

People who are producing them for TV or stage are using their license to depart from the original and are coming up with some part from the original and are coming up with something that bears little resemblance to what was intended. In "Cinderella," the prince is having sexual troubles. The story has been so distorted it is recommended that the production be shown [ate at night "after children have gone to bed." Later, Morris worked on a dredge near Ogallala as kingsley Dam was being built and Lake McConnaughy was being created.

to Wayne. The butterfly to Wayne and many of the major components are built by Morris himself.

Dredges are all sizes so he has to custom-make valves. The largest he has made here is for a 20-inch hydraulic suction dredgeat LaCrosse, Wis. He has also gone to Minneapolis, Muscatine, Hannibal, St. Louis, Rock Island and other points to install the valves made here since the company retains the right to make and install all valves.

A unique feature is the guarantee. Morris (and the others making and installing valves) offer to put them on dredges at no cost whatsoever for a 30-day free trial. If the dredge operators do not like them they will be removed at no cost. No one has ever had to take a valve off once it has been tried out.

The dredges are used in deepening harbors and rivers, keeping river channels clear, reclaiming land for landfill, building levees and other work. They are the cheapest form of moving dirt and are popular on both coasts, along the gulf, around the Great Lakes and on the big river systems. Sand, gravel and trash can be sucked out, moved away and deposited where wanted through dredge operations at an ex-tremely low cost. The Hofer valve works if slugging occurs (the

Scared, Take Fence

Saturday night of last week so mething scared about 46 head of cattle on the Julius Eckert farm near Winside. The cattle moved and took a gate, posts and fence with them. The odd part of it all is, the cattle were un-cut by the barbed wire fence and the gate and four steel posts have not been found. It may be spring before the gate and posts are found, Eckert said.

Whatever it was that frightened the cattle while they were in the feed yard yard light on, it premped them to move. They toget out a four-wire gate, the steel posts and 40 rode of barbed wire fence. Only the tangled fence remained, the gate and posts moving out with the cattle.

Eckert said it could have been dogs or coyotes. He did not even know anything was wrong until Sundey morning when he looked out and saw that the cattle wers not in the yard. They were all on his place but they were scattered to various sections of the farm.
