

WSC Stages Late Rally for Victory Over Doane Tigers

A 12-point lead at halftime is not enough to beat Wayne State Tigers. Doane's Tigers learned Tuesday night. The Wildcats, down 41-29 at intermission, staged their regular second-half rally and treated an overflow crowd in Rice Gym to an 81-74 comeback.

A three-point play by Wayne's Donn Elfsom lifted the Wildcats to their first lead of the game, 38-37, with 9:38 left. They led from then on, though Doane forced them into continued heroics.

sleeve, he hurt his elbow pounding home a point; he wiped perspiration off his forehead with his tie; he misread his typed copy; he had the crowd laughing in sympathy before he got up to speak and in understanding after it became obvious he was no more knowledgeable about space than he was about what the earth's core is like. The audience responded and afterward a local man contacted him about speaking to a group to which he belongs at their Omaha convention later in the year.

Most sympathy of the evening had to go to Harold George, farmer living north of Dixon. He came early with a tape recorder and sat near the front. He taped the entire program, his wife being unable to attend and wanting to hear the professor's talk on space and rockets.

Outgoing U. of C. president Charles McDermott stressed the importance of the Chamber office and how needed it is during the period when there was no Chamber manager, Wanda Owens having left and Bernie Schulte not yet arriving. McDermott introduced his board of directors and the committee chairman. He also read a telegram from Mrs. Owens who said she hopes to be here for the fair and barbecue.

Incoming president is Ted Armbruster. He introduced the board of directors and the committee chairman for the coming year. He also presented a gavel, plaque and certificate to McDermott in appreciation for the year of service as Chamber head. A bouquet of flowers was presented to Mrs. McDermott by the new president.

Sen. and Mrs. Elmer Wallace, Emerson, were introduced as among the special guests for the program. Kent Hall was cited twice for his work as chairman in arranging the program. Rev. Robert Shreck gave the invocation. Chas Greenlee was master of ceremonies. BIP's Cafe catered the meal.

training at Lackland AFB, Tex., and then attended technical school at Chanute Field, Ill. In May,

'Good Year,' produced by Shell Chemical Co. Some of the scenes actually show numerous kinds of insects attacking corn seed and seedlings. The show segment points out the value of protecting crops from such things as beetles, worms, maggots and grubs.

After the Aldrin story is told, a free lunch will be provided for farmers attending the program.

Smith-Douglass is next on the afternoon program. The most stressed fertilization practice is the proper placement of fertilizer in the row. The spokesman bluntly will tell those in the audience that farmers "should not expect soybeans to eat the leftovers from last year's corn crop if they expect the best in results."

The story of minimum tillage and narrow-rows will be explored by an Allis-Chalmers representative. This is the company that has been promoting both practices in recent years with the manufacture of new types of field equipment needed by the farmer for the changeover. Then comes another movie, in which the narrator (who is in person), talks with Harry Young and Clyde Light (who are on film) about their trail-blazing experiences in growing corn and soybeans the new way.

The formal commercial program will be brought to a professional climax by Beihen with a complete story to tell in the area of crop drying and storage. The speaker will point out how important certain engineering features are in protecting corn and soybeans and other grains held in storage.

Corn and soybean clinic day is Friday for farmers of this area. It looks as though the total program will be time well spent. Doors open at the City Auditorium at 8:30 a.m. There will be coffee and doughnuts waiting. An outdoor recreation movie (on hunting and shooting) will entertain until the actual clinic program starts at 9:15 a.m. The show will be over about 3:30 in the afternoon. Anyone who wishes to stay on to ask the company experts present special questions, may do so. This is the largest farm show of its kind in the country and it is recommended farmers take time to attend.

to office without opposition. Prior to being appointed judge he was clerk of the district court 12 years, thus holding county office since Jan. 7, 1943.

The county judge now gets paid $6,500 a year for the five-day a week he is on duty. Judges are elected for four-year terms on a non-political basis. Voting on all officials will be held at the primary in May with the final election being the general election in November.

Commissioner Stolz has been representing his district for over 13 years. It is possible he may choose to run for another term, which would mean an additional four-year term on the county governing board.

Anyone seeking information on the requirements for filing for judge or commissioner may get it at the office of the county clerk, Mar. 15 is the last day for filing for office in the county.

Accident -

the injured were removed. Oxygen was being administered to one of the injured, creating a dangerous situation, and he had to use a new type extinguisher to make sure no major fire resulted.

Assisting in the investigation were Trooper Whitted of Oakland, Trooper Vosten of South Sioux City, Trooper Tobey of West Point, the Dixon County sheriff, Dixon County attorney and members of the Wayne Police Department. County and state officials rechecked the scene Sunday to try to determine what had happened.

According to Trooper Stokes, the Reher car was eastbound and the Peters car westbound. The force of the impact spun both vehicles around, leaving each in a ditch, the Reher car facing the west and the Peters car the east.

Onlookers made investigation and assistance to the injured difficult, the trooper said. He estimated around 75 people at the scene before he could get there. Wayne County's ambulance and city police station wagon equipped as an ambulance plus several home hearses were called to the scene to help move the injured to hospitals.

Trooper Stokes said he finally had to order onlookers to leave the scene so the injured could be removed from the cars. Only those with the ambulances and law officers plus volunteers with flashlights were allowed to remain.

Sunday was the same thing over again, many driving to the scene and parking nearby to look at the wreckage. As a consequence, a six-year-old boy was almost run over as he came out from between parked cars. Since troopers investigating are in charge, the state patrolmen did not appreciate this type of situation as they had all they could do trying to help the injured at night and determine the next day what had happened.

Much misinformation went out from the scene, including the location. One daily reported the accident five miles north and three miles east of Wakefield. Another gave it as two miles north and four miles west of Wakefield. Both would be wrong.

Stokes said the original report of the accident came from the home of Rev. A. W. Gode, pastor of Immanuel Lutheran Church just east of the accident. Virgil Starks had gone to the home of Ben Hollman for help but their telephone had not been connected yet so they took Starks to the Gode home and ambulances and officers were summoned from there.

At Allen it was reported the six young people were enroute to a birthday party at a relative of the Starks boys near Wayne. They had been at both Allen and Emerson prior to the accident.

Peters had been in a head-on accident several years ago. At that time his father and sister were killed and he was injured. His mother is Mrs. Bert Ellis, Allen. Details of his life are in an obituary in this issue of The Herald.

nurse employed in the service unit.

Five speech therapists have checked 1,200 rural and town pupils for speech problems. They found 1,200 pupils with speech defects and work has already started with 400 of them to correct their problems. Others will be given the same service later.

Supt. Mills reports the testing consultant has given over 400 individual tests and has helped give group tests to pupils in the six-county area.

Reading and art consultants have held workshops for rural teachers in the counties. They have worked in over 50 schools giving demonstrations, offering suggestions or holding workshops.

The services of the nurses, speech therapists, testing consultants, reading consultants and art consultants are available without charge. Each district merely has to ask for their services, requests coming through rural teachers, rural school boards or county superintendents in rural areas or school administrators in town.

Idea of the educational service unit is to provide services for all districts each would be unable to provide alone. The NSIA opposed the plan before it went into effect, has opposed it since it was approved by the people and now seeks enough signatures so that 29 counties can vote on being excluded from the units.

Supt. Mills concludes: "We hope the people of Educational Service Unit One will support the service unit program of supplementary services by refusing to sign the petitions now being circulated by the Nebraska School Improvement Association."

In acting and singing. He has the other lead role. Arne Nelson and Tim Cahill, both of whom have appeared in other college productions, play the feuding fathers.

LeWayne Carlson, Sioux City baritone, sets the mood for the story and introduces the main characters. Fred Wington Gary Ehler, Brad Ford and others have roles, Ford's being most intriguing as a deaf-mute. In a small combo that plays a big part in the musical are Dr. McMurtry at the piano, Karen Orr at the harp, Clayton Fries at the string bass and James Watson on the drums.

Production crew members are Ron Wacholtz, Steve Millnitz, Mary Welke, Debbie McClure, Linda Knoeber, Rita Mines, Linda Garvin, Claudia Thomas, Kathy

Misfelt, Chris Bager, Jean Stading, Vicki Ankerstar, Chris Cook, Sue Cook, Marge Frechette, Priscilla Shortenhaus, Larry Larsen, Steve Taylor and Larry Schelske. Rev. Kenneth de Fresse officiated at the rites. Music was furnished by Mrs. F. J. Ellis, soloist, and Mrs. William Kugler, organist. Pallbearers were Arnie Ebker, Larry Ebker, Norman Soden, Melvin Baker, Dennis Baker and Marshall Cochran. Burial was in Greenwood Cemetery.

Wiebke Margaretha Magdalena Brackert, daughter of John and Margaretha Brackert, was born Jan. 13, 1890 at Burg, Schleswig, Germany. She attended Lutheran parochial school and was baptized and confirmed in the Lutheran faith in Burg, Germany. She came to America with her family in 1906 and settled at Winside.

She was married Dec. 27, 1909 to Charles Goebbert at Winside. The couple farmed until 1957 when they retired and moved into Wayne. She was a member of Redeemer Lutheran Church.

Her husband preceded her in death. Survivors include a son, Harry, Woodstock, Ill.; seven daughters, Mrs. Melvin (Margaret) Baker, Brewster, Minn.; Mrs. Arnie (Minnie) Ebker and Arlene and Roma Goebbert, Wayne; Mrs. Esther Geu, Sterling, Colo.; Mrs. Norman (Frances) Soden, Wisner and Mrs. Marshall (Wilma) Cochran, Midland, Tex.; a brother, John Brackert, Winside; three sisters, Mrs. Henry Maassen, Aurora, N. Y.; Mrs. Harry Hayes, Reno, Nev.; and Mrs. James Jensen, sr., Wayne; nine grandchildren and ten great grandchildren.

There is no joy in Dixon, Aug. 15 has struck out! When Aug. 14 rolls around it will be routine. Aug. 15 will be routine too. It has not been that way in the past but it was decided Monday night of last week to make it a routine day.

Five residents of the community met at the Dixon Cafe. With regret, they decided not to plan the traditional Aug. 15 celebration.

Lack of community support and the problems involved in raising enough money to finance the celebration were cited as reasons for dropping the annual event. Aug. 15 was always Dixon's day in the area but the centennial observance apparently was the last.

Those showing up for the meeting were Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Dowling, Dick Hanson, Mrs. Lowell Thompson and Sterling Borg. Others could have attended but did not.

Hold Dixon County Council Gathering

The Dixon County Extension Council met Friday at the Northeast Station, Concord. Mrs. Myron Dirks, county chairman, introduced the new club leaders for the year.

A budget for 1968 was submitted and accepted. A county extension club constitution was reviewed, discussed and accepted.

Mrs. Marlen Johnson, who is reporter for the group, reports the business for the coming year was discussed. Honored were past presidents and past leaders. Roll call was answered with each member asking a special question pertaining to family life, music and other aspects of the average family's home life.

Officers are: Mrs. Dirks, Dixon, chairman; Mrs. Gordon Bressler, Wakefield, vice chairman; Mrs. Kenneth Schroeder, Wakefield, secretary; Mrs. Joe Erlanson, Concord, treasurer; and Mrs. Chalmers, Wakefield, group chairman.

Built and chiefly supported by March of Dimes contributions, The Salk Institute for Biological Studies at San Diego, Calif., is probing into many secrets of life, including the causes of birth defects.

Former Resident in Wakefield Concert

Robert Johnson, jr., son of the former Wayne Herald editor, will be in the Gustavus Adolphus College choir from St. Peter, Minn., when it appears in concert at Wakefield Elementary School Monday, Feb. 5. The student choir is on a 3,000 mile tour through five states. Churchmen of Salem Lutheran Church are sponsoring the appearance of the 65-voice choir. Philip Knautz is director. Music of the old masters and contemporary compositions will be sung.

"I've been told the ones who graduate with highest honors all watch
Cable T-V."

Cracking the books in a serious way is still the best method of getting to the top of the scholastic heap. But teachers can tell if a student has been keeping his eyes open to other sources of worthwhile information.

Not the least of these is Cable T-V!

In addition to being a wonderful means of entertainment, the Cable is now an institution of "broader", if not higher, education. With 10 Channels, ALL networks and BETTER-THAN-BEING-THERE VIEWS, it can keep you up on science, history, government, drama, art—almost everything—if you will look.

There are courses for everyone at Cable College, and anyone can afford the entrance fee. Even a small piggy bank won't notice the monthly cost of tuition. To enroll, just call 375-1120 and give your name to the Registrar!

Specialists Supplementing County Extension Programs in This Region

Northeast Nebraska is a pilot area in which new organizational approaches are being tried by the Cooperative Extension Service. The Northeast Area Extension Office, established in Wayne in 1963, was moved to the Northeast Station near Concord upon the completion of the C. D. Haskell Building. This office was one of the early area extension offices in the country," according to Cal Ward, District Extension Supervisor and Superintendent of the Northeast Station. Ward reports that, "similar area offices have been established in many states across the nation in the last two years." The area extension specialist positions have been created to assist county extension agents in conducting an even better extension program in meeting the needs of the farm operator, his family and others connected with agriculture today. Ward says: "County extension offices continue to be the point of contact with extension for most people and serve as the 'front door' to the University of Nebraska and particularly the college of agriculture and home economics."

The county extension agents are continually organizing and helping to maintain programs with both youth and adults in agriculture, home economics and community resource development. The area staff members are more specialized in one subject area and limit their work to programs related to their subject. They are available for consultation with individuals or groups on special problems, localized research or demonstrations, and educational activities such as meetings and short courses.

Area extension specialists in agronomy, beef, swine, dairy, and forestry serve the entire 13-county area as shown on the map. Three area home economists at Northeast Station confine their work to Cedar, Dakota, Dixon, Thurston and Wayne counties. Another idea being used in the northeast area is the joint research-extension area position. This position is also designed to supplement the county agents' program. Several area staff members on this type of assignment spend part time on research and part time on extension work.

Solutions to many of today's problems require a team of specialists working together, Ward states. "The area organizational pattern provides an opportunity to do just that. With the area organization, part of the extension staff can become more specialized, work together, and still be accessible to the public directly or thru the county agents."

The Cooperative Extension Service, financed jointly by county, state and federal funds, was created to improve the social and economic well-being of the people through the application of scientific knowledge. Until recently the organizational pattern of Cooperative Extension had changed little over its first 50 years of its existence. The county had been the operational unit and the land grant university had been the heart of the system. The usual staffing pattern had been an agricultural agent, a home economics agent

COUNTY AGENTS in the above counties now have extension and research specialists at the University of Nebraska Northeast Station, Concord, available to help them with their educational and perhaps an assistant agent in each county. These agents were and still are staff members of the land grant university and are jointly employed by the local extension boards and the university.

Extension agents, working with the extension board and other local groups, determine programs needed in their county and their area. In the past, the agents have prepared themselves and carried out the educational activities such as demonstrations, meetings, radio programs, news articles and tours. State extension specialists have been added slowly to help the agents keep up-to-date and to assist with state wide educational activities and limited county activities.

"Changes in society have finally caused the CES to focus attention on its organizational pattern for doing its job," according to Ward. He says, "the many changes that have resulted in the interest in the area approach to supplement the county staff can be grouped in the following broad classes: (1) the technological revolution in transportation and communication, (2) larger and more complex farms, businesses and communities, each more intricately interrelated to the rest of society, and (3) a more positive public feeling toward science and technology."

The organizational change which is taking place is not unique to the Cooperative Extension Service. Ward reports "many other organizations are affected by these changes. Schools, churches, businesses and entire communities are attempting to adapt to these conditions in similar ways."
