Some of her comments about America are interesting:

Allen Will Not Lose Accreditation; Most Deficiencies Now Cleared Up

Allen schools are better than a recent State Department report would have them appear and most of the deficiencies noted in an inspection have been remedied, it was learned Tuesday after talking with Supt, Edward Clinchers

The inspection team noted de-ficiences in two courses in the curriculum and three areas of the library. Five deficiencies are enough to place a school on the department's "Notice" list.

departments "Notice" list.
Seventy Nebraska schools were recently placed on Notice after the inspections were made. Among them were Allen and Winside.

Winside's problems and the steps taken to correct them will be discussed in a separatearticle in a coming issue of The Wayne Herald.

Deficiencies noted at Allen were courses in Aesthetic Art, Practical Arts (shop and home ec) in junior high grades, shortage of volumes in the school library, lack of central library for elementary and cataloging of library books.

Allen this fall, will offer the two courses noted in the shortage report; catologing is done in the library; and a central library has been established for elementary students.

The number of volumes in the library is the only point yet to be cleared up, licekens said, and that is currently being remedied.

Part of the cause for so many schools being placed on Notice is the fact that the new rules under which the deficiencies occurred went into effect only last fall and were not ficially adopted until July 1, 1967, after most schools had their faculty lists filled and curriculums set for the fall term. In other words, the set of rules was made too late for the schools to comply by the fall term. In a recent letter to Heckens, chief of supervisory services Mel Olson said, "Allen is a small school in enrollment and yet at the same time there is no reason at all'to question the quality of the work being done there. The matter of placing a school on Notice is not one of questioning the quality, administration, or the willingness of the school community to support a good school. It does not indicate a loss of accreditation. The only purpose of Notice is to point up to a school some of the requirements which will of necessity need to be met in order that the rules and regulations be followed. In the specific instance of Allen the problems set hose which call for some changes in services which more than likely can be corrected by providing staff with time to early them out. You and your bourd of education are aware of these and I am sure as you plan the program for another year you will attempt to provide the time necessary to satisfy them. "I want to add again here that the problems which Allen faces do not result from any neglect on the part of you nor your board of education. They came about simply as a result of changes in rules and regulations which naturally call for some adjustments. Personally, I am satisfied that these things can be corrected another school year and that your school will continue to be listed as an Accredited School."

The action council is a non-profit agency organized under state law. Although the agency makes use of federal funds, everybody who works for the agency is not a federal employee. Campbell said the agency "is just like a private company dealing in services."

The board's vote qualifies Wayne for numerous federal programs, such as liead Sart, community centers, Neighborhood Youth Corps and many more. Although the initial funds for these various programs are supplied to local areas by federal agencies, the communities provide about 11 per cent of their cost.

Communities can provide these funds in various ways. For Communities can provide these funds in various ways. For example, if a church has a room which could be used for youth activities and which is not being used during the day, the church could let the community action council use the room. The council would then estimate how much the room was worth and this amount would be credited to the community's contribution.

Also, funds may come from private organizations such as the Ford Foundation.

Thurston County has had a Community Council since March, 1966 and up to now it has not provided any money for the programs.

This is possible because countered.

Knox and Cadar could not join the agency because countles partifipating in an area program must be contiguous. This is why Wayne was one of the key countles. Also, the countles taken part must serve a 50,000 population base.

The board's fear of another federal welfare agency entering Wayne was dispelled when (ampbell emphasized that local people, with the advice and help of agency personnel, decide on which pro-personnel, decide on which programs they want, what extent to become involved and for how long to continue in a specific program.

Campbell said he hopes that an advisory board will be formed which will have representatives from each of the participating counties. This board would determine the total situation and needs of a target area and would advise individual communities as to the type of programs which would

In presenting the program to the board, Campbell clued records from the state captol which show that Wayne County has just over 2,000 families and about 900 of these earn less than $3,000 of these earn less than $3,000 a year. He and the board agreed that there is probably a need in Wayne county for a program which will ofter certain people training, get them off the welfare roll and make productive workers out of them.

When A Hail Storm Comes...and Goes!

Thursday night was a happy time for people in Wayne. A few people went to the ball-park to see the youngsters play baseball. A homerun in the bottom of the last inning gave Wayne a victory.

of the last hinag gave maybe-victory.

Others milled about the streets waiting for the boosters from Laurel to come in their colorful costumes and dance in the costumes and dance in the streets.

Some played golf in the pleasant weather.
And other people, farmers like Guy and Earl Anderson, Paul Hrader and Italph Kruger, watched the dark cloud in the west move closer and closer to their farms.
And they watched as the hall began beating their crops to the ground.
Guy Anderson, one of the bard-

Guy Anderson, one of the hardest hit, hopes to get about 75 to 80 per cent insurance adjustment on his corn. His corn suffered the most damage because he had planted it earlier than most farmer.

most farmers. This is the third year Guy has had hall damage to his crops but he was philosophical about it. Farmers have to learn to expect this once in a while, he said as he looked out across one of his fields of corn. The rows of corn were hardly visible now. Two years ago Guy averaged about 90 bushels of corn per acro. This year he can't even across with sy icld will be. It will depend greatly on the weather from mow on.

RESULTS OF HAIL. The broken and bruised stems of the young oats tell the story of the hail storm. This field of oats 131/4 miles west of Wayne would have yielded a good crop to Don Dayls.

The hall didn't stop with Guy's

Ralph Krueger, 184 miles

The hail didn't stop with Guy's crops. It damaged the shingles on the roof of his barn and broke half a dozen windows in his farm house 17% miles west of Wayne. Clarence keepke, about a mile east of Guy, is another farmer suffering heavy hail damage.

A field of oats which he had expected to yield about 5t bushels to the acre looked hald from the road. Up close the broken stems and scattered seeds were plainly visible. He said he plans to the cut his small grain for hay.

Ralph Krueger, 18% miles west of Wayne, tried plowing a filed warne, tried plowing a filed warne, tried plowing a filed for pasture.

And so the story went in the worse, Paul Brader began discing his field of soybeans Montay so he could replant it. About the latest date to plant soybeans and scattered seeds were plainly visible. He said he plans to cut his small grain for hay.

for what it lacked induration.

Mrs. Wayne Kerstine picked up some hall stones on their farm to miles west and one and one quarter north of wayne. They were about the size of large marbles.

Guy Anderson said some of the hail stones that fell on his farm were about the size of golf the hail stones that fell on his farm were about the size of golf balls. After the storm, a field to the east of him looked like it had a blanket of some covering it. The area suffering da mag for the size some fields only a mile on less from heavily damased ones suffered very little.

But generally the damage was the heaviest about a mile on each side of flighway 98 from about 10 miles west of Wayne to near the county line.

Most of the oats, barley and soybeans that were hit hard will yield close to nothing now. The corn will probably recover from the damage but its yield will be cut.

Other areas in Wayne county were also hit by hail. Ist mage to some crops was reported near and around Altona.

A field of alfalfa just north and east of Dixon was lashed so much by the hail that one person reported that you couldn't tell where the farmer had stopped cutting it the day before. And the rows in a field of soybeans were almost impossible to see, Luckly, many of the farmershad hail insurance. But insurance won't cover all the farmershe orase the look of frustration written on many of their faces.

Nebraska has had four con-firmed outbreaks of hog cholera since the first of the year. This compares with 68 outbreaks during the same period a year ago. Not a Negative Approach

Wayne's Planning Commission Friday night cleared a big hurdle when it turned down a request by a builder to change zoning regulations to permit construction of an apartment that did not meet minimum square footage or height requirements in

And the action was not hasty, nor ill-advised. The board met on two separate occasions to consider the plan, heard arguments from both sides of the issue and conducted lengthy discussion among members before acting.

Probably the biggest job this commission will have will be to say "No" to various proposals. This does not mean that theirs is a negative job or should have the negative approach. Rather it is a positive approach to the solution of a problem that has been haunting city planners, councilmen and builders for many years, and will continue 'to do so until long range plans with definite limitations are made and followed.

The long range plans are made here restrictions are definite. Now it is the resp shifty of the planning commission to see that the zoning regulations are intelligently enforced, and they started off by doing this Friday night.

By assuming the positive approach to the roning problem, they must say no to such requests. We think the commission acted properly and we applied them for it.—WWR.

Nebraska Judges Question Denying Juveniles a Trial School at Kearney. The Dodge County District Court-refused to consider his challenge of the action. William G. "No matter how you slice it, the freedom of a child is just as important as that of anadult," Line said. "Juries are a juvenile's wall of protection against judicial despotism." The law was defended by Assistant State Atty. Gen. Mel Kammerlohr and Dodge County Atty. itlebard L. Kuhlman. a juvenile court jury trial for criminal suspects under 18.

One judge, IBal McCown of Beatrice, wondered if the law might violate basic constitutional rights since a minor can receive a jury trial if he is prosecuted in an adult court. In Nebraska, the county at-torney decides whether apperson under 18 is prosecuted in a juvenile or adult court. The law came under fire during oral arguments on an appeal by a 17-year-old Fremont resi-dent, Clarence J. De Backer, from the dismissal of his request for a juvenile court jury trial on a venile court jury trial on a

The state law which permits the Department of Public Institutions to transfer a boy from the training school at Kearney to the Men's Reformatory in Lincoln also entered into the debate. Here is another slant on those scholarships to Wayne State.
These scholarships are given because Wayne City Schools (as well as other area schools) cooperate with the college by providing student teachers with the classroom situations in white to do their practice teaching. While this costs the school district nothing in added facilities, the teachers who supervise the student teachers have todo a certhe teachers who supervise the student teachers have to do a cer-tain amount of extra work for which they receive no extra pay. So, in actual practice, the teach-ers are earning these scholar-ships by supervising the student teachers. This entire plan is the result of closing Halm School, thus thrusting the burden of the practice teaching program on the area schools and their teachers. Since this is the case, what is wrone with taying the teachers

Since this is the case, what is wrong with having the teachers decide who shall have the awards? Obviously someone has to be disappointed because there were only seven scholarships and about 30 graduates indicated that they intended to go to Wayne State. I am confident that the teachers do a reasonably good job of selecting those who will get the selecting those who will get the awards.

However, I do think that alternates should be chosen to take advantage of the scholarships in case the first choices fall to attend Wayne State the entire four years. If they have been earned by the cooperating school, a program should be set up whereby an alternate could be named to finish out any part or all of a scholarship that was not going to be used by the original awardee.

"Pollution? That's a city prob-

That is the usual response when rural people are questioned about air and water pollution. In fact, many people prefer to live in towns such as Wayne because problems like this only exist in Ornaha and Lincoln.
But William Yost, work unit conservationist of Dixon County, wants to arouse rural people wants to arouse rural people.

conservationist of Dison Counts, wants to arouse rural people about the pollution existing even in Wayne and surrounding areas,. Silt and sediment in reservoirs, Yost says, costs Americans about $100 million a year. Wayne could operate for about 50 years on that sum without ever having to raise money for city operations.

Conservation could reduce this cost greatly, since if reads 20

Conservation could reduce this cost greatly, since it costs 20 times as much to dredge sediment out of water as it would to keep the soil on the land.
Sed in ment ruins recreational lakes, kills fish, costs millions in taxes for dredging and filtering and carries pollutants into the water. Total yearly slit pollution damage, Yost noted, is in excess of $346 million. And sediment does double damage because it burts the water where it goes and it hurts the land where it comes from.
Yost said that conservation measures such as conservation measures such as contouring and terracing and minimum tillage markedly reduce sediment loads.
