WS Produces Hit Musical-Comedy At Shore Acres

By Sandra Breitkreutz. Players who were light on their feet, combined with a subject almost heavy on the heart, set the scene last weekend for the WSC Players production at Shore Acres Theatre. 'The Roar of the Greasepaint, the Smell of the Crowd,' a musical comedy by Leslie Bruce and Anthony Newley, is a take-off on the game of life, depicted in a manner both light-hearted and sad by a talented cast of 11. It would be difficult to choose a favorite, confronted with both Sir and Cocky, the two male leads. Ron Wachholtz actually was Sir, as he flicked his cigar ashes, fidgeted, and strutted rooster-style, about the stage. He thoroughly succeeded in gaining audience rejection, and then, in one scene, singing 'Who Can I Turn To,' he won all their hearts. Brad Hickerson, as Cocky, was good. Though his speeches were not quite as clear as were Sir's, he made up for this with excellent facial expression and an unbelievable grace and lightness on his feet. The typical underdog, he is loved by the audience all the way through, and then, with his rendition of 'Nothing Can Stop Me Now,' he gives every-one new faith in him . . . or may-be in themselves. Nancy Wachholtz did an admirable job as 'The Kid,' and

Gard Wins Wayne Open in Sudden-Death Playoff

Tomasiewicz Takes 2nd, Dahl Captures
3rd in Top Flight

By Norvin Hansen

Leo Gard carded a par on the par-four first hole of the sudden-death playoff Sunday to defeat fellow Omaha-John Tomasiewicz in the championship flight during the annual Wayne Country Club Open Golf Tournament.

Gard and Tomasiewicz had finished the regular 27 holes of play tied at 106. Earning third place in the tourney with a 27-hole total of 108 was Wayne's Ken Dahl. Five golfers tied at 109 for fourth place.

Playing in gathering darkness, Tomasiewicz pulled his tee shot out of bounds to his left in the playoff. Both golfers were on the green with their next shots, but Tomasiewicz failed to ram his putt in on his first attempt and Gard two putted to gain the victory.

Tomasiewicz, who Friday finished 15th in the men's state amateur golf tournament at Norfolk, fired a crisp 33 on his first round Sunday, three under par and one off the course record, then came back with 36 for an 18-hole score of 69.

His 69 gave him a one-stroke lead over Gard, who had two rounds of 35, and a two-stroke lead over Bill Schultz of Beemer, who had rounds of 36 and 35. Dahl and Jim Shade of Norfolk, runner-up in the state tourney, were three strokes back with 72's. Both had two rounds of 36.

Tied for fourth place at the tourney's end with 109's were Schultz (36-35-38), Shade (36-36-37), Don Bunkers of Cherokee, Iowa (35-38-36), Ben Lantz of Omaha (36-39-34) and Steve Cromwell of Yankton (36-37-36).

Club professional Jim Christensen said this year's championship flight was the most outstanding field of golfers ever assembled on the Wayne course.

"We drew three of the top 16 finishers in Norfolk's state meet," Christensen said. "The Wayne tournament is becoming well known across the state," Christensen said.

But the well-knowns were unable to duplicate the blistering pace set by Dale Erwin when he won the tournament. A Wayne State senior then, Erwin sped around the course with rounds of 33, 34 and 33 for a 27-hole total of 100, eight under par and probably a course record for that distance.

Erwin failed to show the same brilliance this year, coming in tied with Bob Reeg of Wayne and Ed Pratz of Wisner with a 110. Gard took home a set of Ben Hogan irons for winning the tourney. Tomasiewicz won a set of Ben Hogan woods and Ken Dahl won a bag, carryall and head covers.

The tournament proved something of a happy homecoming for Russ Owen, former Wayne State administrator. Now at the University of Wisconsin, Owen fired rounds of 34 and 37 for a 71 to capture first place in the first flight. He took home a bag, head covers and a carryall worth $50 for his effort.

Trailing Owen by two strokes in the first flight was John Carhart of Wayne (35-38) and Gary Farley of Sioux City (37-36). Carhart won the coin flip to decide second-place winner. Tied for fourth with 75's were Jack Suhr (37-38), Jim Sturm (39-36), both of Wayne, and Fred Wington (37-38).

Winning the second flight with a 78 was Max Hendrickson of Wayne (39-39). Chuck McDermott of Wayne took second with a 79 (40-39). Gail Jensen took third with an 80 (38-42). Tied at 81 for fourth were H. D. Addison of Wayne (39-42), B. Dufek (43-38) and Dr. Dill (41-40).

Merchandise worth $50 went to all winners in the nine flights. Runners-up received $25 in merchandise, third-place finishers got $10 worth of merchandise and fourth-place finishers received $5 in merchandise.

A total of 244 golfers competed in the tourney, almost exactly the same number as last year.

Forty-two golfers declared for the championship flight on Sunday. That number was cut to the low 24 and ties. Other golfers vying for the championship crown were Jim Bender and Don Bridge (111), Brent Falmestock and Dick Wier (112), John Paterson and Mark Northcraft (113), Chuck Diekhute, Jim Gardner, Don Sand, Skip Miller and Craig Schmidt (114), Mike Colter, Harrel Fuelleberth, Tom Benson and Dick Dykes (115), Bill Koepfen (118) and Tom Keenan (120).

Other flight winners in order of finish:

3rd Flight—Les Luft (80), Bill Gaylor, Dr. Schleppebach and Dr. Peterson (3-way tie).

4th Flight—Randy Welson (79), Oh Anderson, Emil Teutzel, Jerry Wilson.

5th Flight—Don Duffy (81), Jim Nelson, Dan Titze, John Addison and Ken Whorlow (tie).

6th Flight—Jim Hirschman (83), Bill Jammer, Bill Fahnestock and Gary Nelson (tie).

7th Flight—Norm Buss (87), Pete Leatheby, Butch Woods and Borst (tie).

8th Flight—W. Wollenhaupt (88), Dr. Schlaiss, Randy Thies, Willie Mahler.

9th Flight—Jack Peters (88), L. P. McGuire, Nicholas, Carroll Barnes and Bob Wilson (tie).

TOURNEY WINNER. Leo Gard of Omaha snatches his ball from the cup on the first green after defeating John Tomasiewicz, also of Omaha, in the sudden-death playoff for championship honors in last weekend's Wayne Country Club Open Golf Tournament. Both men were tied at 106 after the regular 27 holes of competition.

Finally, Wayne Saddle Club Has Horse Show

Over 200 people paid to see the much-postponed Wayne Saddle Club horse show at the Wayne County Fairgrounds all day Sunday.

An annual event, the horse show had been postponed twice because of rain — on July 4 and July 20. Iowa was the only state other than Nebraska represented at the show, probably because of the two postponements.

Judging the day's action was Ben Miller of Sioux City.

Entry fees were divided on a 25, 20, 15 and 10 per cent basis.

Winners of the competition in order of placing:

1969 Foals — Dan Frink, Norfolk; Elder Schultz, Wisner; Bill and Betty Hamernik, Columbus.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The editorial department of a weekly newspaper is an important department. Normally it is one person's opinion of topics that concern most of the readers.

It is the duty of an editorial writer to search all available facts before he sits down to write. From this basis the writer should be able to give a clear picture of important topics.

You may not agree with an editorial — but if you read the editorial and give serious thought to the subject discussed you have gained. You, as a reader, have given careful thought to an important problem and the writer is proud to have called your attention to an important subject that you may have overlooked.

The Moon Trip

Fantastic! Incredible! Unbelievable! Those and many other bursting-at-the-seam words were spoken by thousands of the world over in an attempt to register feelings concerning the moon trip of Apollo 11.

One can imagine the deep search made for adequate expression of elation when man first became acquainted with the mysteries of five thousands of years ago. Now in 1969, man has tamed his torches, learning to ride a thundering tongue of flame into the heavens.

Over seven million pounds of thrust blasted the manned Apollo 11 off the magnetic breast of Mother Earth. Belching wings of fire the monstrous rocket performed perfectly and projected three men, three American astronauts, through a space window which was carpentered by a computer.

Up and on into orbit the screaming monster fell suddenly silent and then fell and fell and fell . . . around the Earth. Apollo was then prompted from her masters on Earth to once again fan her fiery tail of flame and romp off toward a rendezvous with the moon.

What kind of words could possibly express the anxious moments just prior to lunar contact? More descriptive words were needed as the mysteries of the moon suddenly flashed around the world in the form of a telecast showing an earthling kicking his too in mid-audist!

Not only was it the first time since creation that humans had straddled a solar system, but the rocket they rode to another planet had followed a trajectory drawn by an electronic brain, made by the imaginative hand of man.

Snug in LEM's pilot-coaches, the two space travelers ignited the mechanical least-bow-wow, thrashed its torrent of fury, and once again flew heavenward off the lunar's surface.

Like two celestial birds the command ship and lunar module mated as they met at pre-planned rendezvous in lunar twilight and headed home!

Somewhere out there tonight, resting in soil that has been silent for centuries, stippled out on a new horizon, is our proud old American flag.

Perhaps we may find need to rewrite our national anthem to include this historical landmark in space. "O say can you see, therein the magnificence, what so proudly we hail'd, till 'neath the

A Pledge and an Oath

A number of years ago the Nebraska lawmakers made it necessary (11-101.01) for all persons in Nebraska, with the exception of executive and judicial officers and members of the Legislature, who are paid from public funds for their services, including teachers and all other employees paid from public school funds, to take and subscribe an oath in writing, before a person authorized to administer oaths in this State, and file the same with the Secretary of State, or the county clerk of the county where such services are performed.

The oath is as follows: "I, (name), do solemnly swear that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of Nebraska against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely and without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will faithfully and impartially perform the duties of the office of (name of office) according to law and to the best of my ability. And, I do further swear that I do not advocate, nor am I a member of any political party or organization that advocates the overthrow of the government of the United States or of this State by force or violence; and that during such time as I am in this position, I will not advocate nor become a member of any political party or organization that advocates the overthrow of the government of the United States or of this State by force or violence. So help me God."

Law requires that each school district have an Americanism committee and that flags of any convenient size shall be conspicuously and continuously displayed on the interior wall of every schoolroom, classroom and chapel in the public school buildings of the State of Nebraska.

Nebraska law also requires that the flag

"shall be raised every school day between 9 o'clock from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m." Violators of such law is a misdemeanor and upon conviction the minimum fine is $10 with a maximum of $50.

An official pledge, according to 9-1148 in the lawbook, shall be signed by all persons engaged in teaching in the public schools of the State of Nebraska and all other employees paid from school funds.

The pledge: "I, (name), do believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people, whose powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; an individualistic nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon the principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity; for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

"I acknowledge it to be my duty to inculcate in the hearts and minds of all pupils in my care, so far as it is in my power to do, a true understanding of the Constitutions of the United States and of the State of Nebraska, (2) a knowledge of the history of the nation and of the sacrifices that have been made in order that it might achieve its present greatness, (3) a love and devotion to the principles and institutions that have made America the finest country in the world in which to live, and (4) opposition to all organizations and activities that would destroy our present form of government."

In a few weeks a great staff of teachers will be heading back to classrooms. Patriotism, love of country and Americanism are not words to them!

An editorial salute this week to a generation of teachers and school-related employees who are only happy to publicly declare their devotion. —MMW.

Twisted Hatred for Maturity

After hours of painstaking effort by NASA to insure every degree of safety possible for three astronauts going to the moon, it seems incredible there are still immature minds on earth which could care less as to the safety and welfare of others.

What kind of a disturbed mind does it take to purposely set up a trap which might easily kill or seriously injure another human? What kind of "kicks" could a sane individual get from breaking the civil law and the law of responsibility?

Following recent flooding and heavy rains many bridge approaches in Wayne County need repairing, according to a County Commissioner. The Commissioners are trying to get the approaches in shape just as rapidly as possible. Meanwhile, barricades were set up on the damaged approaches to warn the unwary motorist of the danger.

A person or persons, who should by all means get a blue ribbon for being first in their class of the irresponsible, have removed barricades in several locations. Without barricades to warn of danger, a person could easily fall to see the wash-out until too late. The south approach of the bridge two miles west of Wayne and about one and a quarter miles south serves as an example. Without a barricade, particularly at night, a motorist might easily have an accident.

The person or persons who removed the barricade and threw it in the ditch, must, by all measurements of rationality, have a "twisted hatred for anything that resembles being 'knewed' up."

It evidently didn't occur to them that perhaps a member of their own family, a friend, a buddy or a neighbor could easily be the one killed or severely injured by their laborious devilry.

Within the past two months the windshield on a police unit was purposely broken; the back end of another police unit kicked in private property destroyed; a house occupied by college students was left with broken windows, broken furniture, beer cans, garbage and a torn carpet. Clothes have been stolen off the clothes line, two business firms broken into, a bicycle maliciously damaged, a car purposely scratched, a pop machine was torn up, the airport runway lights broken and lenses stolen, and now perverted mentality removes barricades which were serving to protect the public from injury or death.

At least 99 per cent of the residents in Wayne County are the kind anyone could enjoy having as neighbors, but brother, that one per cent of our population who have starved themselves of wisdom, disemboweled their thoughts of all respect for another's property, embarrassed their parents, butchered the social image of others the same age and have thereby made of themselves a genuine nuisance . . . that kind Wayne County can do without. —MMW.

State's 'Rotten Meat' Bill Is Raised from the Dead

Capital News —

LINCOLN—The legislature reversed course last week on the meat inspection bill.

After sending the measure to its death the week before the senators decided on a 35-7 vote to revive it and send it on its way toward what appears to be certain passage.

This puts Nebraska back among her sister states, all of whom had previously agreed to establish state meat checks in cooperation with the federal government. All that is, except Maine, where the legislature hasn't yet decided what to do.

There was some indecision in Nebraska as well. When Elgin Sen. William Wyllie's motion to restore the bill to the legislature was debated last week, Sens. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff and George Syas of Omaha raised a protest.

They claimed Nebraska should let the federal government take over all meat inspection in the state. That, they said, was the only way the consumers could be assured of protection. They said they doubted the State Agriculture Department could fulfill its responsibilities under the proposed cooperative plan.

Skeptical of this sort had helped kill the bill the week before. But agriculture department officials on the state and federal levels had been busy spreading the word that the state inspectors would be federally trained and that federal inspectors would assist them.

The bill had no trouble coming back to life, despite Carpenter's claim that supporters of the bill were supporting dirty meat. He said "rotten meat" and that made some rural area lawmakers mad.

Sens. William Hasebroeck of West Point and Maurice Kremer of Aurora issued statements defending the purity of Nebraska meat and the reliability of the small plants which would be covered by the bill.

All meat sold in interstate commerce already must carry federal inspection certification. That's about 90 per cent of the meat processed in Nebraska. It's just the 10 per cent butchered in small plants for local retail sales that is involved in the new proposal.

Sales Tax Exemption Bill Dies

Another bill of interest to rural Nebraska died last week. It's likely to remain dead.

That measure was introduced by Sen. J. James Waldron of Callaway who sought to provide a method for farmers to escape the sales tax on electricity they use for commercial agricultural purposes.

Under Waldron's bill, farmers who don't have a separate meter for the power they use for such things as irrigation pumps, grain driers and other farm appliances would pay the sales tax only on the first 500 kilowatt hours. Waldron said that amount is about the average residential use in the state.

Currently, electric power used for commercial or industrial purposes isn't subject to the sales taxes, but residential use is. It's not difficult for an industrial plant to figure out how much of the power it uses should be exempt but farmers often measure their usage for residential and business purposes on the same meter.

Waldron said he introduced the bill at the request of rural power districts.

When it was debated on the legislative floor last week, a series of amendments were offered. Some of them would have made significant changes in the sales tax revenues.

Carpenter tried to have all exemptions removed, including those for agriculture. That would have meant all use of electricity would have been subject to the tax. The amendment lost.

Waldron then tried to go the other direction and have the exemptions broadened to include residential use. That would have meant no tax on electricity and would have reduced the state's revenues. That amendment also lost.

During these discussions, rural power officials sent word to Sen. Herbert J. Duls of Gothenburg that perhaps the bill ought to be killed and Duls made such a motion. When Waldron learned the rural districts no longer were pushing the measure he supported the kill attempt, after a floor blast at power lobbyists in general, and the bill was sent to its death.

Carpenter Goes Home

On the same day, the meat inspection bill was revived over Carpenter's protests and the electricity sales tax exemptions weren't erased as he had recommended.

Earlier in the week, the legislature refused to accept Carpenter's suggestion that the senators recess until Sept. 23 so they could take the pulse of the public on the legislative spending habits. This had been a plan Carpenter had been advocating throughout the session.

When it came to a vote last week, however, his colleagues decided they had better stay on the job.

Carpenter had announced the day before that he would make the motion and Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann described it as "unthinkable." Carpenter and Omaha Sen. Eugene T. Mahoney had been critical of the governor.

So, it was a frustrating week for Carpenter and he finally decided to go home for a few days. "I've got to get off somewhere and decide whether I'm crazy or they are," he said as he left.

Busy Governor

Tiemann spent the first few days of last week at Camp Ripley, Minn., where the Nebraska National Guard is on summer training. Then, he went to Cape Kennedy, Fla., to watch the Apollo 11 launch.

He got back from Florida Thursday and proclaimed Monday a holiday for state employees so they could watch the man on the moon activities and then hit the road again to attend a celebration at Gering.

This week he is in Washington, conferring with congressional officials and agencies of the federal government about Nebraska problems.

poisoning, if you're not very careful.

The warm humid weather present this summer can trigger food spoilage in a hurry unless certain precautions are taken. Two main poisoning organisms—staphylococcus and salmonella multiply by the millions in a spoonful of food in just a few hours providing that moisture and warmth are at the right level for breeding.

How warm? Ninety-eight degrees Fahrenheit is just about the temperature in the trunk of your car on a hot day.

For picnics as well as for home meals keeping hot foods hot and cold foods ice cold until ready to be eaten is one practice that will prevent or delay growth of mold and harmful bacteria.

Foods can become unpalatable or rancid, but not particularly harmful. Therefore it is important for you as a homemaker to be aware of the guidelines that can be used in distinguishing the types of spoilage:

—Rancid odor and flavor of fats makes a food unpalatable but not hazardous to health.

—Off-odor and sour taste in bland foods are signals of dangerous food spoilage.

—Fresh foods should be used soon after harvest or purchase.

—Keeping frozen foods frozen until ready to eat is not too difficult today with the availability of ice cubes and thermal chests of polyethylene plastic.

Always carefully wash fresh fruits and vegetables before serving. Further contamination can be prevented by observing cleanliness for surfaces where food is prepared, in the utensils, and for the hands that prepare it.

that is very adaptable to beef production. The location must be selected with careful consideration to physical features, such as distance to streams, neighbors and towns.

Space should be allowed so that drainage from your lots can be kept on your property. Try to avoid a location that would allow drainage from your lots onto your neighbors' property.

Another important point to consider is the runoff or drainage from fields surrounding the feedlot. "The practical solution would be to build a diversion terrace above the feedlot to divert outside runoff away from your feedlot. This practice will help reduce the amount of runoff from your lots and reduce the quantity of materials to handle or dispose of.

The feeder should check carefully on zoning ordinances, both those in existence and those being developed.

"The objective here is to help prevent problems due to objections of odors, dust, noise and flies if feedlots are built on the edge of or immediately adjacent to an urban area. The recent hot and humid weather points up the importance of sites allowing free air movement in summer and wind protection in winter.

167 Kids Enrolled in Recreation Program

The second session of the city summer recreation program is well underway.

The session, which began July 8 and lasts for three weeks, has 167 children enrolled, a slight increase over the 152 children enrolled for the first session.

In its seventh year, the summer recreation program has grown every year, according to Mrs. Mike Karel, program treasurer. She has been working with the program all seven years. Helping her out again this year is Mrs. Al Ehlers, who has worked with the children during the summer for six years.

Any children from kindergarten through the eighth grade living in town are eligible for the summer program, which features group playing and crafts. Children can also attend both sessions if they wish.

The program is supported through city funds and through money received from the annual Community Chest fund drive. It continues throughout the year and includes all city recreation programs such as football, basketball, golf, wrestling, roller skating parties and so on.

District Tractor Driving Contests Now Being Held

District and county 4-H Tractor Operator's contests are being held around the state during July and August. The winners of the local contests will compete on the state level at the State Fair Aug. 30.

The contest for this district will be held at Allen on Sunday, July 27. Also scheduled during the day is the annual parent-son picnic of the Allen Future Farmers of America.

The participants who will be involved in state competition will be required to take a written test on safety, mechanics and tractor care, said Delbert "Red" Lane, Extension agricultural engineer at the University of Nebraska.

They will also have to apply their skills by putting a "bugged" tractor back into operation and then show their driving ability through an obstacle course—first pulling a two-wheeled rig and then a four-wheeled rig, Lane said.

This, he said, requires that the contestants know both what is wrong and how to fix it.

The winner of the state contest will compete in the Regional Contest in Dallas, Texas, Oct. 6, 7 and 8. In the regional competition he will put his abilities on the line as he challenges contestants from 16 states: Arizona, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North and South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Wisconsin, Wyoming and Oklahoma. The trip to Dallas will be paid by the American Oil Foundation.

VA Q & A

Q—I neglected to have some needed dental work done while in the Army because I was anxious to get out of service. Can I get treatment from the Veterans Administration? I have been out of service three months.

A—Under a new VA policy, a veteran may receive such treatment, without regard to supporting military records, if he applies within six months after release from service, and if it is determined professionally within eight months after separation that the condition is service-connected. With supporting military records, a veteran may receive VA dental treatment for service-connected conditions during the first year after release from service.
