The show-sale is sponsored by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce and will get underway with the show starting at 1:30 p.m. The weighing is to start at 4 p.m. and sale time is 8:30 p.m. Ingults said.

The scoring formula will have 10 points for each pound of average gain; 100 points for top packer appraisal with one point off for each 25c cwt, less: 10 points or less for accuracy and completeness of records.

Only those 4-II members who exhibited beef calves at the Wayne County fair may sellan individual animal, according to Ingalls. The difference between the packer bid and the local bid goes to the 4-II member owning the calf. Bidders may either keep the calf at the price they bid or sell it back to the packer at his bid price. Agent Ingalls noted that the sale is open to all regularly enrolled 4-II members ages 9-19 le said all cattle will be inloaded at the sale barn prior to 12:30 p.m. on sale day.

Schoolhouse

Is Damaged

Vandals used shotguns Friday night to destroy three east windows in the District 45 school-house located a mfle north and two miles west of Wayne, according to the Wayne County Shertiff's office.

The authorities report one 16-gauge and two 20-gauge shells were used to shoot out two storm windows and a third window covered by a screen.

This is the third time the schoolhouse has been a target of vandals during the summer months. The Shertiff's office reported in August that shots had been fired through the three east windows earlier in the summer. Then in late August two of the east windows in the school building were broken as a result of rocks being through through the opin through the being through the being through the being through the public process being through through the office of rocks being through through the opin through through

County and City to Join in Hiring Part - time Civil Defense Director

Wayne County Commissioners decided at their regular meeting Tuesday to go along in a joint county-city effort to hire a part-time civil defense director, according to Norris Weible, clerk.

Anton Netherda, councilman, and Vern Fairchild, assistant civil defense director, met with the commissioners Tuesday to discuss the proposed cooperative project.

the commissioners Tuesday to discuss the proposed cooperative project.

The city council had decided last month to have Netherda meet with the commissioners to decide what steps the county and city should take in finding a qualified person for the job. Don Weible has been serving as civil defense director but resigned Tuesday, Fairchild had told the city council that Weible intended to resign because he had been unable to keep up with the large amount of paper work involved in the job and because in any disaster his job as civil defense director would probably conflict with his job as county sheriff.

Clerk Weible said the commissioners decided to ask for written applications from individuals interested in filling the position interested in filling the position of part-time civil defense director and that applications should be sent to him prior to Sept. 27. Weible suggested that individuals desiring further details should call him.

Weible reported the county has in previous years allowed $500 for civil defense purposes, and the new joint project would mean a $250 increase or $750 budgeted by the county for the program.

county officials attended the various sessions where new legislation affecting county governments was the major topic for discussion.

Treasurer Bahde reports some of the sessions she attended discussed important changes in motor vehicle laws. She said license fees on passenger-vehicle plates will increase from $9 to $15.50 starting next January.

Miss Bahde also reports that interest on delinquent taxes will be raised from the present seven per cent to nine per cent when the new laws become effective.

Another Boy Scout paper drive in Wayne has been set for Sept. 27, according to Rowan Wiltse, scoutmaster. He said Wednesday that scouts from Troops 175, 174 and 221 will be participating in the drive. Wiltse was told earlier in the week by a representative from the Midwest Newspaper Salvage Company in Omaha that a total of over 100 tons of newsprint had been received from scouts in Wayne thus far, which would amount to the pulp from 1,700 trees. trees. As in previous paper drives, residents are to place the old newspapers on the front porch where they may be easily seen by the scouts. Tying the papers in bundles helps in handling. Scouts will start picking up the mapers around 9 a.m. They are

The fund drive for the 19 counties in northeast Nebraska which the Council covers will be held Sept, 15-19. In Wayne, Norfolk, Fremont and Columbus the Council is supported by the United Funds-Community Chests. In the other 40 communities in the area independent fund drives are held each year to support the operation of the Council.

The Girl Scout Council has requested a budget of approximately $40,000 for 1970 to be raised through the various drives. The major portion of the budget is used to provide direct services to persons working with the girls, in surance coverage, library materials and assistance to girls and adults attending national continuous contents.

Several hundred cups of coffee were served to drivers at a rest stop at the corner of Seventh and Main during the long labor Day weekend, according to Larry Shupe, manager of the Lil' Duffer. Shupe and the Wayne Jaycees teamed to serve the weary motorists in an attempt to cut down traffic accidents by keeping the drivers alert. The Jaycees bought the coffee and workers at the Lil' Duffer served the drivers. COMMENT EDITORIAL

The editorial department of a weekly necespaper is an important department. Noremally it is one person's opinion of topics that concern most of the readers.

It is the duty of an editorial writer to seasch all available facts before he sits down to write. From this basis the writer should be able to give a clear picture of important topics.

You may not agree with an editorial but if you read the editorial and give serious thought to the subject discussed you have gained. You, as a reader, have given careful thought to an important problem and the writer is proud to have called your attention to an important subject that you may have overlooked.

Everybody Is Doing It

When Jimmy was seven years old, he was with his father when they were stopped by a patrolman for speeding. His dad handed the officer a ten-dollar bill with his driver's license. "It's OK son," his father said as they drove off, "every-body's doing it." When he was nine he was permitted to attend a family council, presided over by Uncle Henry, on the surest means to shave points off the Income tax return. "It's OK, kid," the uncle said, "every-body's doing it."

Then when he was 10, his mom took him to his first theater production. The box office man couldn't find any seats until his mother discovered an extra two dollars in her purse. "It's OK, son," she remarked, "every-body does it." When he was 13 he broke his glasses on the way to school. Aunt Franche persuaded the insurance company that they had been stolen and collected $27. "It's OK, kid," she said, "every-body's doing

When he was 16 he made right guard on the high school football team. His coach showed him how to block and at the same time grab the opposing end by the shirt so the official couldn't see it. "It's OK, kld," the coach sald, "everybody's doing it."

When he was 18 he was approached by an upper classman who offered the test answers for a five-dollar bill. "It's OK, kld," he sald, "everybody's doing it." Jimmy was then caught and sent home—in disgrace.

"How could you possibly do this to your mother and me?" his dad scodled, "You never learned anything like-this at home!" his mother shouted. His aumt and uncle were horrified for fear the "shame" would rub off on their reputation. If there is one thing the adult world cannot stand, it's a kid who CHEATS.— MMW.

That Cornbread Habit

lie first saw cornbread advertized on TV when he was but a small lad. After experimenting with it out behind the barn a time or two, he decided it must be great because millions of others were eating it.

On television the cornbread was always being eaten by young happy youths doing exciting things it must be the thing to eat. He are cornbread until he just had to have a piece of it every 20 or 30 minutes. The first thing when he gets up in the morning he gets himself some cornbread. He eats a piece before dressing and sometimes wakes up at night and craves it.

After breakfast he eats another piece and goes off to work with his pockets full of combread — which he eats every few minutes through out the day. His boss doesn't mind because he has the same tastes.

On our subject's way home, he stops at the store to get more cornbread for fear his wife has forgotten to get a few packs. Once she did forget and he was so mad he drove five miles before bedtime to get a new supply.

On Sundays this man attends church and the last thing he does before going into the building is to stand on the curb and eat another chunk of cornbread. He then throws the wrappings on the ground and enters but can hardly wait until services are over so he can have another piece of that cornbread.

the ground and enters but can hardly wait until services are over so he can have another piece of that combread.

I'lls work often takes him into conventions and business meetings. In some buildings there are large signs posted, "Fating combread must be done in the outer lobby please!" When he files to a meeting, there is a sign in the forward part of the alriher which flashes on during take-off and landings, it says "No combread eating please."

Now, one day, doctors found out that eating this particular combread in such great quantities is probably the cause of many to have cancer... at least it had that effect in mice. The government, therefore, made the combread companies have printed on the package that the use of the product might be injurious to the user's health. product might be adjusted to the user's locality in the didn't cause many to stop eating combread because there is more to stopping the habit than just deciding you don't want anymore com-bread.

In days gone by a "lady" never would have thought of eating cornbread in public. It wasn't the "thing" to do – then suddenly it became the thing to do. She finally got her "equal rights" with men so now she too can eat cornbread in public. Any lady who is a lady nowadays knows which brand of cornbread has the greatest length and whether or not it has been filtered.

The cornbread may cause many to cough, wheeze, lose keen taste and have emphysema... but, of course, anyone who is sold on cornbread wouldn't let such by-products stop them. Neither does the $25 a month cost.

Well, everybody gets their "kicks" in dif-ferent ways. Some do it by eating combread. Or maybe you're trying to kick the habit this summer?— MMW.

It Doesn't Work

When the teacher in a high school discovered when the teacher in a nigh school discovered that his pupils in economics favored the theory of taking from those who had more than enough, and giving it to those in need, he announced that beginning immediately, he would subtract from the grades of the top students and add it to the grades of the poorest students, so all would

to the grades of the poorest students, so all would get an average grade.

The first month the system worked rather well. The grades of the best students were high enough to offset the deficiency of the lower ones, and the class average was above the passing mark—but then the situation changed.

The top students saw no reason putting forth extra effort required to get good grades, with which they would not be credited. The medium students put forth less effort, for they were assured passing grades. The dullards didn't even work at all, since they would pass on with the aid of the grades from others.

- while at first the system provided a passing grade for all, within a very short time the entire class was failing. They then realized that this socialistic-communistic theory was a complete failure.

Economic and social communism lures many a fool with its glitter of "equality". But as has been proven many times over, wherever it has been tried, there is nothing more "unequal".

been tried, there is nothing more "unequal".

Taking from the rich, who have worked hard under a capitalistic profit-making system, and giving to the poor, who all too often would rather be lazy and not work much, if at all, may glitter momentarity. But given enough time — those who work eventually become so overburdened with taxes that it is easier to give up working so hard—making less profits—which decreases investments, which in turn decreases the creation of more jobs, which decreases the economy of the entire nation—and then everyone is equal—equally poor.—MMW.

Mandatory K-12 Districts Only on Ballot by Petition

LINCOLN - If Nebraskans are going to vote in 1970 on changing the constitution to require all school districts to provide kindergarten-thrpugh-12th grade education, the issue is going to get on the ballot by petition.

The legislature made it clearagain—it wasn't going to put it there.

again—it wasn't going there.
Earlier in the session, the education committee killed a bill which would have advanced the mandatory redistricting question there.

Then, in the waning days of the 1969 session, Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbuff tried the same thing with a resolution. The resolution was channeled to the

So, Carpenter made a motion on the floor to retrieve the resolution from the committee. But he failed. Carpenter's motion, which needed at least 25 supporting votes, drew an 18-20 roll call. This left the backers of forced consolidation only the petition method to get the constitutional amendment onto the general election hallot.

method to get the constitutional amendment onto the general election ballot.

They said they were prepared to launch the petition campaign. They will need to gather nearly 50,000 valid signatures to get the job done.

Last year, a petition campaign was waged to put on the ballot an amendment which would have outlawed the state income tax. Although the anti-income tax forces had to go all the way to the State Supreme Court to prove the legality of their signatures, the issue was beaten on election day.

Many of the questions concerning validity tests for petition signatures, however, were resolved by the court decisions. The 1969 legislature also has passed laws clearing up additional areas which had been fuzzy. School Aid Challenge

The state's highest court is scheduled to provide the final answer to questions about the

The state's highest court is scheduled to provide the final answer to questions about the proper method for distributing state school aid.

District Judge William Hastings in Lincoln recently handed down a decision in which he said the State Education Department hadn't been accurate when it made its distribution for the school year just past. The State Board of Education, however, said Hastings hadn't been clear in his ruling and decided the only way to resolve the issue was to appeal to the district court ruling to the supreme court.
Hastings' decision came in challenge made by the Omaha School District, which had claimed it was deprived of $1.5 million in aid it should have reelved.

The Omaha district said it lost the $1.5 million in penalties assessed because its budget for the past school year represented an increase of more than eight per cent in per pupil costs over the budget for the previous year.

When the Omaha schools appealed to the state board for a waiver of the penalties, they were turned down. That led to the court case.

But Hastings said in his opinion he entire distribution of the

But l'astings said in his opinion the entire distribution of the state aid kitty was made incorrectly by the education department and the whole thing should be done over.

According to education department officials, the judge's opinion left them confused. They said he told them they were wrong, but didn't give them any guidance about how to correct their mistakes.

Penalty Clause Removed

Lawsuits resulting from state

Lawsuits resulting from state aid distribution might have been avoided in the future by action taken during the 1969 legislative avoided in the tutter by action taken during the 1969 legislative session.

In a bill which increases the state aid kitty by $10 million a year — to a total of $35 million annually — the penalty clause is repealed. That means there would be no loss of state aid for districts which exceed the per puril cost ilmits and the responsibility would be solely on the local school board to keep the district's taxes in line.

The bill was one of only a few still remaining to be dealt with as the legislature moved toward adjournment last week. If the lawmakers stayed at the desks long enough to make a final determination on it, there appeared to be enough strength to pass the measure. Suggestions Sought

For obvious reasons, one of the most heated subjects during the 1969 session was the spending involved in the budget bills. Last week, the senators passed a measure they said they hoped would make the budgeting process a little easier in the 1971 session.

The bill requires the fiscal sion.

The bill requires the fiscal analyst's office — an arm of the legislature — to present 15 days after the beginning of a session a recommended budget, based on interim studies of the needs a recommended budget, based on interim studies of the needs of state agencies.

The staff's recommendations would be compared with the recommendations the governor is required to submit 20 days after the beginning of a session. The legislature's budget committee, then, could take the two documents and use them as a foundation in writing appropriations bills.

There have been some complaints already that the staff shouldn't be permitted to recommend appropriations because to do so the employees would have to legislative concurrence.

In other words, the fiscal analyst would have to deckle, as he drafts his recommendations, whether an agency deservestoreceive financing for a certain program.

It is argued that the busy

R is argued that the busy senators might be willing to accept the analyst's word because he will have made a deeper study of the agency than the legislators he will have made a deeper some of the agency than the legislators are likely to be able to do. If that were to happen, the sena-tors.would be delegating some of their powers to the staff, or so the argument goes.

The soybean's rise to prominence began in 1930 when USDA plant explorers brought speed-type soybean an varieties, from the Orient.

While plant breeders worked on shattering and lodge resistance, other scientists wrestled with such agronomic problems as nutritive requirements, spacing and inocuation with nitrogen-fixing bacteria.

Keeping pace with this activity, scientists of ARS Northern utilization research laboratory helped find new uses for soybean oil — in foods such as margarine, shortening, and salad dressing and in paints, plastics, detergents and industrial chemicals. They employed soybeans to make adhesives, paper coatings and tryings and tryings and they do.

They employed soybeans to make adhesives, paper coatings and textile sizings. And they developed methods of processing protein-poor regions of the world. ARS scientists helped develop a thriving export trade to Japana country that a decade ago bought no U. S. soybeans for human consumption—by selecting varieties suited for traditional Oriental dishes and improving ways to ship soybeans without loss of quality.

Problems accompany suc-

proving ways to ship soybeans without loss of quality.

Problems accompany successes. Although the Northern laboratory helped make soybean oil our major salad and cooking oil, its flavor stability during storage and shipment needs further improvement. This is important since a major avenue for expanded soybean markets lies in satisfying overseas needs for the oil.

Another problem is the invisible "yield barrier" that seems to hold national average soybean yields to about 25 bushels per acre. Some growers, however, consistently top 60 bushels. Better management by growers plus current research embracing genetics, physiology, pest control and cultural practices will break the yield barrier. The hard everyday work which made soybeans the crop of the century will prevail.

if a new house or remodeling is being considered, it would be well to remember all houses should provide safe and com-fortable living for their oc-cupants — young or old. It is fortable living for their occupants — young or old. It is cheaper to build safety precautions into new construction than

Hi Farm Moms,
You think you have problems.
Little troubles, like the exchancellor, Mr. Hardin, making his third price adjustment for U. S. export wheat since midduly. Mr. Hardin said, "All possible restraint was being exercised"—same restraint as on his 30¢ downward soybean prices, or his non-loan for farm-storage grain program, or his questionable crop conditions and cattlefeed reports.

Little problems—like hogs dropping $2 cwt. last week, or fat cattle adjusting $40-80 per head since middune. Or your little problem like prospects of less than $1 wheat and/or corn at the turnrow. Or, true—interest rate admission of 15% per cent on $12,000 tractors, making interest and depreciation a higher annual charge than on $20,000 urban home.

investigate two auto accidents during file final two days of August.

A 1962 Mercury, driven by Joyce M. Mitchell, was eastbound on West Third Street Saturday about 9:45 a.m. and stopped at the traffic light at Main Street. According to the police record, her vehicle was struck in the rear by a 1966 Buick driven by Don Beckenhauer of Wayne.

Later Saturday morning, around 11:55 a.m., another collision occurred in the 200 block on Pearl when a 1965 Ford, driven by Orville Bolin Jr., Norfolk, was backing from a driveway onto Pearl Street. He was in collision with a northbound 1964 Ford driven by Glenn Carstens. Estimated damage to the Carstens auto was around $175, the police reported.
