NORTHEAST EXTENSION Notes

by Anna Marie Krefeils

Oven Cleaners
"Cleaning the oven is still a messy job for the man-home-makers who do not have self-cleaning ovens."
Commercial oven-cleaners are a help, but precautions are necessary. Labels on these products state that they contain lye, caustic potash or ammonium chloride, and caution the user to keep the container out of the reach of children. They also warn about risks of personal injury and property damage.

These highly alkaline products necessitate the use of gloves to protect the hands.

Oven cleaners in aerosol can produce a mist and vapor when sprayed on the oven surfaces which should not be inhaled. The homemaker can avoid inhaling the vapors by using a mask or by covering her mouth and nose with a damp cloth. The eyes, too, should be protected from oven cleaner mist and fumes.

Oven cleaners can also damage floor surfaces and counter tops. Protect these surfaces with newspapers.

Some oven cleaners state these precautions clearly on the label; others might not be labeled so completely. Homemakers should be aware of the possible hazards involved with the use of commercial oven cleaners. Use all precautions whether or not they are clearly outlined on the product container.

Commission Approves Rezoning of Property

Items on the agenda of Wayne's planning commission meeting in the city clerk's office Monday night included a hearing on the rezoning of a property and a discussion related to zoning regulations for a first class city.

Richard M. Wozniak of Powers and Associates of Fremont attended the meeting as consultant to the commission and discussed with the planners possible changes in zoning regulations when Wayne officially becomes a first class city. He pointed out that zoning boundaries for a first class city extend beyond Wayne's present one-mile limit.

The commission studied a proposed amendment to the city's zoning ordinance regarding parking vehicles in open lots but went on record as seeing no need to amend the existing subdivision ordinance.

Leiland Foote, chairman of the planning commission recently appointed the following standing committees:

—Land use: Cleve Sharer and Larry King.
—Thoroughfare: Louis Meyer and Mert Marshall.

Highway Man Training In New Program

Raymond Starman, an engineer aide at the Department of Roads office in Wayne, is taking part in an intensive "in-house" training program being conducted by the state in order to alleviate a continuing shortage of qualified project engineers.

The program, which began Monday in Lincoln, is a four-week project engineer's school to train selected DOR personnel for possible assignments as project engineers for the 1971 construction season or succeeding seasons.

Included in the 136-hour course will be classroom instructions on roadway, bridge and right of way design; materials and testing; traffic engineering; construction practices, and general department policies, procedures and administration.

Field construction operations are continuing to experience a loss of trained project engineers, to consulting firms, private industry and contractors. Transfer and promotions to other positions within the department also take a toll.

Starman is one of 34 qualified pre-professional engineering employees recommended by field district engineers to attend the classes.

Top Entertainment at WS

Wayne State College students will have an opportunity Friday night to see a ballet company considered among the world's finest, the Royal Winnipeg Ballet. Its performance is scheduled at 8 p.m. in the college's Peterson Fine Arts Center. The Special Programs show is open to the public on a space-available basis, tickets to be sold at the door—$2 for adults, $1 for high school and grade school students. Wayne College students and faculty will be admitted free.

The Winnipeg troupe, 32 years old, is noted for its innovations in dance, and while performing in Paris was described by a Parisian critic as "one of the fairly select group of dance companies that is important for what, it has created as well as for its qualities as an ensemble."

The chief choreographer, Brian Macdonald, created three new ballet last year. One of them, "Ballet High," was the dance world's first rock ballet and played to capacity crowds on a Canadian tour. About the same time four Wayne State students created an original rock ballet with their own music and choreography. It won enthusiastic response from WSC audiences. Though known for its modern dance, the Royal Winnipeg is considered polished in classical ballet, practicing what one critic called "an honest and healthy classicism" and another described as "the most sparkling demonstration of technique we have seen in a long time."

Papers Picked Up

Wayne Boy Scout Troop 175 picked up old newspapers in Wayne and Winslow Saturday. "We had a real good response," Scoutmaster Rowan Wittse said.

Wittse said it really helped to have residents box or bundle the old papers for the Scouts. "If the people don't bundle their papers, then the Scouts have to do it, so it helps when the people have them all ready for the boys," Wittse explained.

The old newspapers are stored until summer when they will be sold. Proceeds will go toward camping expenses. "We're planning another drive Feb. 27," Wittse said. Residents in Wayne and Winslow will again be asked to put their old papers on the porch for the Scouts at that time.

PAUL HARVEY COMMENTS ...

Your Daughter Should Marry A Farmer

For two decades, our nation's most discriminated against minority has been our farmers.

That's changing.

Your daughter should marry a farmer!

The number of Americans living on farms has declined one-third in ten years. Our nation is down to ten million farmers. Less than five percent of our population.

That five percent vote has had little political clout in Washington but they're going to get some leverage from another source.

Our American farmer has taken very good care of us, though we have been paying him half as much for his wheat and corn as 20 years ago.

Your food bill is higher mostly because of the increasing cost of getting the food from the farmer to the housewife. That cost is up 160% in 20 years.

That increase notwithstanding, your food bill averages only 16 1/2% of your take-home pay.

In Western Europe, 25% of your income would go for groceries. In Russia, 50%. In the Far East, as much as 80%!

So our farmers, constantly improving and increasing per-acre production, have taken good care of us.

Because of higher prices for everything they buy and lower prices for most everything they sell, farmers have had to consolidate. Small farmers were forced out of farming. Today it takes an investment of $50,000 to create one farm job. So the trend to fewer farms continues.

And pyramiding population, 90% of it concentrated on 8% of our land, is more and more spilling over onto the countryside.

Fecitly we are planting houses on much of our most desirable agricultural land. We should put houses on the hillides and crops in the valleys, but it's easier for the bull-bogers up widders to mass produce houses on the level land.

So 700,000 farms have "disappeared" since 1960.

Thus arable acres shrink. And soon, sooner than most realize, the era of food surpluses will come to an end. That is going to put the shoe on the other foot.

As is, the farmers' average per-family income is $5,401. That is about half what yours is.

His investment in starting capital is $100,000 to $200,000.

He deserves a proper return on that investment. When your increasing appetite catches up with his production, he's going to demand a fairer slice of the pie — or else.

When that time comes, we'd better hope he will be more considerate of us than we have been of him.

And however relevant, may I just add this to that: For generations in India fathers have wanted their daughters to marry doctors or engineers. A prospective son-in-law who'd graduated from either a medical or engineering school was worth a dowry of up to $14,000.

Not any more. There is increasing unemployment among doctors and engineers. Now the highest dowry is paid for sons-in-law who are trained to be farmers.

Dixon Co. Officers to Be In Allen Forum March 30

The Dixon County commissioners will appear for a public forum during the next meeting of the Dixon-County Young Republicans.

The meeting is scheduled for Allen on March 30 and will give those attending a chance to quiz the county officers about things they may not understand or want answered. Anyone interested in county affairs is welcome to attend the meeting.

John Kingsbury of Ponca, club publicity chairman and secretary, said the forum will be the first of its kind in some time and that he hopes it is well attended because the group wants to provide such public service.

During the club's last meeting, held in Allen on Jan. 26, the group decided to hold a membership drive during February and March.

Named to the membership committee were Mike Roeder and Dean Chase of Allen, Martin Rickett and John Kingsbury of Ponca, Jerry Thomas of Newcastle, Steve Von Minden of Martinsburg and Jeff Mackling of Emerson. A member from Wakefield will be named later.

The age limit for active members, of which there are 33 at present, is from 18 to 36. However, Dwight Gotch of Allen, chairman of the organization, explained that associate members may be any age and still take part in all activities. He urged all high school students in the county to contact any member if interested in getting involved in politics and for old-

Practice was held for the invective of Robin Hager and Teresa Hamm. Jan Sherry led songs.

Jodi Frese, secretary.

Christmas Concert?

A Christmas concert in February? Not quite, but the Wayne State orchestra has proposed next Monday night the concert it had to cancel because of the blizzard Dec. 10. It is scheduled for 8 p.m. in Ramsey Theater of the Fine Arts Center.

Director Benjamin Bernstein made one change in the program, substituting for the "Christmas Medley" he had planned for December. Among program features will be selections from "The Music Man" the popular Broadway hit by Meredith Willson and "Ballet Parisien" by Offenbach.

Parents of youths in the Wayne-Carroll school district — and other parents, too — are being asked to watch a series of programs being presented on Nebraska Educational Television dealing with drug use and abuse and to fill out this survey. The survey, which can be partially completed by those not watching the series, should be returned by March 1. The series began Monday and continues through February. ## Good Morning Feeders & Hi Mom

Two weeks ago I mentioned that I refer to personalities of the direct buying battalions by nicknames. Let's start with the original planners: Batman and Robin.

While the commission men had insulted the new buying system for years, it was not one-sided. The plans were capable but hard-nosed buyers.

Batman might have been the second buyer for a major packer or a fiery Irishman from Chicago South Side. There were ex-feeder buyers, order buyers, cow jockeys and renegades who wanted opportunity, not just a job.

The most skilled I watched was a mild-mannered farmer turned cold-blooded buyer. He wore high-topped shoes, striped bib overalls and a hat inherited from a Bavarian grandfather. His stock options had made him a millionaire.

Robin was the friendly local grass-cattle authority, usually working at 10¢ a hundred. And that added up!

One Robin working the Cherokee, Iowa, area reportedly made more than the president of IBP in 1962, or twice as much as the Batman buyer.

The big hitch by Batman was "you save $2 a head yardage and commission" or "take off a dime" to the feeder, "add one" to Batman. Others merely wanted to be a part of the action or wanted to do the hauling. (This seemed crazy for by adding the buyer to proceed the local haul might be worth 15¢ a hundred instead of a long haul worth 2¢. With fixed interest and insurance, depreciation and a weekly driver wage, the trucker lost income.)

Robin usually rode weekly or bi-weekly with Batman. Procedure was for him to look up 6, 8, 10 or 16 calls of farmers ready and anxious to sell. A "50c Shipper" award pin-holder to the yards would be by-passed. His children, too.

This was before good two-way radio communications. So half the construction firms in the combat knew the secret buyers orders upon transmission. At certain hours the double antenna fans with the coat-of-arms on the car door would be parked on the highest hilltops, straining for better reception. More often than not they were endangering the lives of all kids on the school bus as they passed the packer's car.

And many were the rumors of wild buyers parked on isolated dirt roads. Loyalty was sometimes on a friendly basis, but usually the dime was the dominating determinate.

Questions, doubts and accusations were always on the farmer's mind: "Do they have a night watchman running my cattle around the pen?" "John Duzzer's cattle were mixed." "What is the difference in shrink between 110 miles to Denison and 100 miles to St. Joe?"

Batman counterattacked vociferously, adding kinked to long-building discount. The patter: "Look at the time you save" or "You know more than any commission man, why pay him?"

Cornbelt cattlegrowers were preconditioned by years of cheap interior hog sales, and priced cattle for plant delivery a full dollar a hundred below terminal value. This made not a profit for himself, but a double saving for the packer. If buying in the yards, the packer had the full animal cost, plus order buying expense, plus additional freight and assorted bruises.

Cattle never quit making money for the decentralized packer the first six or seven years of the early 1960's. Offal credits were advantageous. Packers figured yields on the hot weight less 2%, some 3 per cent cooler adjustment, yet many lots shrink less than one. Often partially chilled sides were loaded to age enroute, cutting cooler shrink further.

Then came Grade and Yield. What a packer clinch. No further bruise losses, no condemnations or grub divots six inches long, no reason for excess fill or late delivery. Plus, blame the government.

If a packer slaughtered a load, say at 5 p.m., ran the sides into

"He'd make the varsity if he could get used to playing without overshoes and mittens!"

Ak Grants, Premiums in 17th Year

For the 17th consecutive year, Ak-Sar-Ben last year presented aid to every county fair in Nebraska either in improvement grants or 4-H and FFA premiums. Ak-Sar-Ben General Manager Tom Brock told the Nebraska Association of Fair Managers.

"Since 1954," Brock said, "the state's county fairs have received more than $2½ million as a di-

Conservation Is Everybody's Job

Soil Conservationist at Wakefield

Today we are faced with the problem of conserving our soil and water resources so that we can feed and clothe our children and our grandchildren 25 or 50 years from now. Total nation-wide conservation can be accomplished only through the combined efforts of people on farms. In watersheds and community organizations, working together to get the big job done.

Each and everyone of us must be concerned about our land. We must be concerned because our land must produce the maximum amount of food and fiber without the deterioration of the soil and loss of water. Only then will this land remain productive and beautiful.

If you are a farmer you are concerned in a special way with the land on your own farm. No doubt you know a good deal about some of the different kinds of land that you are farming, but do you know the good and bad points about all your land?

Stream bottom lands, for example, are easy to recognize. Some are sandy, others are moderately sandy or loamy and some are heavy (clay). Some are well drained, others are naturally wet.

How about your uplands? Some are moderately sloping, some steep, some nearly level. Some soils take in water readily, some do not. You can think of many variations of land. To select the best practice for each kind takes a study and time.

If you are farming, you must consider the following conservation practices:

-Contour Farming: This is an easy, yet very effective means of saving soil and water. Simply stated, this is the practice of farming hillside on the level.

When you farm on the contour, every

Irrigation Show Slated

A high humidity cooler, then yanked the shrouds at 7 a.m., disaster. For a "fast" grade by an "ex-taxi-driver" turned regulations-minded U.S. grader, fancy "quality" steers would not grade by regulation. So they were lowered to a designated U.S. Good. However, the feeder was paid on the Good Grade. Then loaded, chilled en-route and graded (choice upon being represented to graders in New York City).

On this, an inadequate job of plant grading and near embezzlement on poor plant operations. Mom, guess you got blindsided - Old Dad. (This still happens, but to a lesser degree, as feeders sell "in-the-beef" and packers hold cattle in coolers until the potential is reached. Graders, however, would not sell a grade, either hot or chilled.) No livestock feeder should be permitted to be penalized because of inadequate and sloppy plant work.

Think of this, it is important: Uncle Protector costs the feeder millions annually.

Batman and Robin still survive. Still with crocodile hides. A buyer who absorbs a punch and has gone thru a dozen general managers, a spotter who has ridden with revolution, head buyers and beefmen. They are all IBPs. They prefer cattle brought on the Fairbanks.

They are the Bill Carsons and Daniel Bonnes, the Dr. Winstons of Decentralized Direct Buying. They paved a highway thru suspicion . . . and ruined the Terminals. But, not knowingly!

High-Moisture Corn For Swine Feeders

Interest in utilizing high-moisture corn for livestock feeding has grown in proportion to the increase in the practice of field shelling of corn at harvest time. And in 1969, 75 per cent of Nebraska's corn crop was shelled in the field, compared with only 33 per cent five years earlier.

The advantages of early corn harvest - reduced field losses, the chance to harvest the stalks as silage or pasture when they have greater nutritive value and the facilitation of fall plowing - are evident but lead to some challenges for the hogman in using the resultant high-moisture corn.

This analysis by an Iowa State University swine specialist is contained in an article on feeding high-moisture corn to hogs, included in the 1971 University of Nebraska Swine Progress Report, to be released soon.

"Although it is generally accepted that high moisture corn can be successfully used in a swine feeding program, special considerations may be required to obtain maximum performance," according to Dr. Harold H. Hodson, ISU Extension swine specialist.

After reviewing numerous studies by state experiment stations, Dr. Hodson concludes in part that "the possible use of high moisture corn in a swine feeding system is primarily an economic decision rather than a nutritional one."

$38,584.49 in improvement grants as 77 counties took advantage of the matching grants which were available. The total in improvement and spruce-up grants provided by Ak-Sar-Ben since 1954 is $829,413.63.

Ak-Sar-Ben also provides special premium money for 4-H and FFA exhibitors at all of the state's county fairs. The 1970 total of $25,902.03 in premiums brings the 17-year total to $463,887.57.

In addition, Ak-Sar-Ben collects a state tax on admissions and individual licenses and pays a daily licensing fee, all of which is earmarked for the state's county fairs. The 1970 total was more than $145,000, bringing the 17-year total to more than $1,300,000.

After reviewing numerous studies by state experiment stations, Dr. Hodson concludes in part that "the possible use of high moisture corn in a swine feeding system is primarily an economic decision rather than a nutritional one."

Show Slated

The seventh annual Norfolk Swine Show, sponsored again this year by the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce agriculture committee, has been scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 23. The carcass show will be held the following Saturday.

Judging the live show will be Keith Glander of Brookings, S. D., Bob Fritschen, and Carl Cates at the Northeast Station at Concord, will judge the carcass show. The show will again include an FFA judging contest.

Entry blanks for the show are available at the offices of county agents, from vocational-agriculture teachers, the Norfolk Livestock Market or the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce.

In connection with the show, the 81-91 Porkettes are sponsoring a pie baking contest. The contest has two divisions - a junior division for girls and boys 18 and younger and a senior division for all men and women.

Bleeding Pig Disease

While bleeding pig disease hasn't been extremely common, it is of enough concern for swine producers to take preventative measures, said Bob Fritschen, area Extension swine specialist, University of Nebraska North-east Station, at a meeting last week.

Fritschen said bleeding pig disease is a problem of internal bleeding and it is somehow associated with feed. The actual agent causing the problem has not yet been identified. Fritschen, who has experienced the problem first-hand with 22-24 pound pigs at the Northeast Station, said the problem can be prevented by adding a supplement to the feed.

An experiment at the Station showed that either dehydrated alfalfa meal or a synthetic Vitamin K (menadione sodium bisulfate) reduced the bleeding problem when the supplements were added to the ration.

The synthetic vitamin K was the more effective of the two supplements. It was added to the feed at a rate of two grams per ton. The dehydrated alfalfa meal was fed at a level of 2.5 per cent of the ration.

None of the pigs receiving the supplements developed visual symptoms of the disease, but pigs not receiving the vitamin supplements started showing symptoms six days after starting the test.

Adding the synthetic vitamin K to the pig's diet at the two-gram per ton level should be considered routine, said Fritschen, for two reasons: "First, we are not able to detect the presence of the hemorrhage causing or anti-K factor in feed-stuffs. Second, the synthetic vitamin K costs only five to 10 cents per gram and this type of insurance fits everyone's budget." Most commercial feed companies are including vitamin K in their starter rations, he said.

If bleeding pig disease is suspected as a problem in a herd, Fritschen recommends producers work closely with their veterinarians to confirm diagnosis. If confirmed, an injection of vitamin K produces rapid response and adding the vitamin to the ration will also help.

Regarding symptoms, Fritschen listed the following: lameness, blood in the urine; massive swelling, caused by internal bleeding around injuries; difficulty in getting up and standing; abnormal breathing, general unthriftiness.

Other Grains

Swine producers attending Area Swine Days are told that we can definitely look at other feeds as substitutes for corn in swine diets, but we must be careful and know the quality of the feeds being used.

The biggest expense in a swine operation is water's around nutrition. It amounts to somewhere between 65 to 75 per cent of the total cost.

In an attempt to reduce feed costs, producers can compare feed grains and consider their use. Grains to consider other than corn include grain sorghum, wheat, barley, rye, oats and millet.

However, there are restrictions in feeding swine rye and oats. The restrictions for rye are five per cent of the ration for baby pigs and 20 per cent for growing - finishing and brood sow rations. Restrictions for oats are 10 per cent for baby pig rations and 20 per cent for growing - finishing rations.

Regarding feed value of grains compared to corn (indexing corn at 100 per cent), wheat has equal value, grain sorghum is valued at 97 per cent, barley at 90 per cent, rye at 85 per cent and oats between 80 and 90 per cent. Live and oats are rated according to the restrictions listed above.

Millet is also suitable for feeding swine and with small amounts of lysine added it nearly equals corn in value.

One thing to consider is that wheat, grain sorghum and millet average or above in quality are higher in protein than corn. Therefore, less protein supplement is required. Feed conversion and rate-of-gain are other factors to consider when substituting grains for corn.
