Strasser: America, Russia To Fight with China Soon

By Tom McDermott
 Recently I had the opportunity to talk with a former organizer of the Nazi Party, a personal acquaintance of Hitler and an early Nazi movement in Germany. The man is Dr. Otto Strasser, whose recent lecture tour in America received much publicity and attention, particularly in our area.

Otto Strasser's life reads like a dramatic movie script. Active in politics as an avowed socialist and public foe of Hitler, he worked closely with his brother, the famed Gregor Strasser, who headed the Nazi Party while Hitler was in prison writing "Mein Kampf". Both Strassers became strongly anti-Hitler and Gregor eventually was murdered by the Gestapo in the "Blood Purge" of 1934.

Meanwhile, Otto himself was "Enemy No. 1" and fled Germany with the Gestapo close behind. The zigzagged his way across Europe at least half a dozen times before going to Portugal and then to Bermuda for safety. While in Bermuda, he applied unsuccessfully for permission to enter the United States. Eventually, Canada granted him permission to come there where he formed a small coalition of Germans to fight Nazism.

After a long discussion with Dr. Strasser's brother, Father Bernard Strasser, a Benedictine monk serving as chaplain at St. Joseph's Nursing Home in Norfolk, I went to the Immaculate Convent nearby where Dr. Strasser had been spending a few days in rest so he could resume his lecture tour before returning to Munich.

I found him alone reading his papers. Although he had suffered a couple of heart attacks within the past year, he appeared in good health. No sooner had I sat down when he said, "Now what may I do for you?" This was what I had waited for, as I had some questions prepared. Realizing that he knew Hitler on a personal level, I asked him to tell me some characteristics peculiar to the man.

"Hitler could talk forever about nothing," said Dr. Strasser, "and a conversation with him was normally one-sided. No one was given a chance to speak with him, for he talked incessantly in a pointless and exoneratory manner. People shyed away from conversation with him, for fear of saying something which he might not agree with."

"In his deep Bavarian accent but with impeccable English, he told me how Hitler filmed some of the executions that he ordered and played them over nightly in slow motion. "Hitler loved crowd films with blood," Dr. Strasser told me.

Years ago I had heard on the radio that a German priest knew of a man in his parish who was the son of Hitler, so I asked Dr. Strasser about this. He replied: "No, I don't believe it. Hitler was impotent. The Russians recently released medical reports of the autopsy which proved this."

Otto met his brother Gregor for the last time in a hospital. Although the Gestapo was after him, Otto risked visiting his brother Strasser disguised as a patient with a heavily bandaged head.

"I felt that this would be the last time I would meet my brother in this life, so I wanted to see him before I left," he said.

Dr. Strasser, the editor of a weekly political newspaper in West Germany, received much attention in Nebraska when he predicted a third world war. He told me, "It is a mystery for me why everyone is so surprised at this fact. It is natural that war should come. It will start between Russia and China, undoubtedly."

On which side would America fight? "I'm sorry to say that America will probably fight as an ally of Russia, which is unfortunate because the Chinese will win," he said. This was shocking for me, even though I had read a similar statement of his before. But to my knowledge, the press had never printed his thoughts concerning who shall win or when the war would be fought. I asked when he believed the third world war would be waged. "Oh, probably within the next five years," he said with a stern look on his face that I shall never forget.

Later on, we talked about the youth of today. Dr. Strasser was very impressed with American youth. "Their dress is sloppy,

$50 to AFS

Dale Stottberg, secretary of the Wayne Lions Club, presented a $50 check to Meg Baumann and Dale Tomrdle, AFS Club representatives, at the Wayne High School last week to help raise $1,000 needed to bring another AFS student to Wayne next fall. Robert Porter, AFS president, sent letters throughout the community recently seeking donations to the AFS project. Anyone desiring to contribute should make a check payable to Wayne AFS and send to Al Ehlers at 120 West 9th Street, Wayne.

The lesson, "Carpet Trends and Selection of Carpets and Rugs," was given by Mrs. Herlan Anderson and Mrs. Iner Peterson. The club decided to pack and send a box to a serviceman overseas at the April meeting. Mrs. Ivan Johnson will be the April hostess. Mrs. Ida Ulrich, Fort Smith, Ark., spent Wednesday and Thursday in the Arvid Pearson home. Guests of Mrs. Roy Pearson Monday afternoon for a belated birthday observance were Mrs. Gertie Erwin, Mrs. Clara Swan-

Army Offering Delay Program

For young men who are contemplating entering the armed services, the U. S. Army offers an opportunity to—enlist—now, yet spend up to 120 days—including the upcoming graduation season—at home before reporting for active duty. Under this option, known as the Army's 120 Day delayed entry program, the young man enlists, then is placed in a reserved status for a period of up to and including 120 days before being ordered to active duty and reporting to a recreation center. Enlistees under the program may still choose from almost 300 job training and service schools if they are qualified. Such assignments for qualified applicants are guaranteed in writing before they enlist, according to Sergeant Cleveland, local Army recruiter whose office is located at Norfolk.

Allen High Selects Dates for 2 Events

Two days have been selected in May for special events at Allen High School. The school has scheduled a Club banquet for the evening of May 7. The banquet would be the first one for the school in several years if it is held. The school has also picked May 10 as the day for the annual awards presentations. Awards are given out in such areas as typing, shorthand, Pep Club and drama.

4 Wayne High Girls To State FHA Meet

Four girls from Wayne High School attended the Future Homemakers of America state convention and leadership conference at Lincoln last week. The girls, who took part in activities starting Friday, are Carol Spitzerger, president of the Wayne High FHA club; Jo Harder, vice-president; Rance Kalesko, dectree chairman, and Teresa Dranselka, secretary. Speaking to the group Friday was Marilyn Van Derbur, a former Miss America. Making the trip with the four was Marle Mohr, FHA sponsor. Health Tips . . . Here's a health tip from the Nebraska State Medical Association: Carbon monoxide is a silent killer produced every time a carbon-containing material burns. Since you cannot see, smell or taste it, the gas is hard to detect except by symptoms such as drowsiness, headache, tightness across the forehead, confusion, nausea and muscular weakness. If you do not reach fresh air, carbon monoxide kills. Various parts of the body depend on the blood for their supply of oxygen. When inhaled, carbon monoxide enters the blood stream, crowding out the oxygen. The body tissues then suffer from oxygen starvation. To prevent carbon monoxide poisoning in your home, have all heating systems checked regularly for operating efficiency. Be sure that all heating devices designed for venting are properly vented to the outside. Charcoal grills and hibachis used indoors are dangerous unless you provide additional fresh air. Do not allow this silent killer in your home.
