Clean Up Operation Promoted by Carroll

Carroll Community Club members are promoting a community-wide clean up, according to Howard McClain, chairman. McClain said Thursday that all residents of Carroll are being urged to participate in cleaning up both private and commercial properties. He explained that there is considerable debris, such as broken trees, junk and parts of old foundations; due to the sewer line installation. No dates were set for the clean up promotion. McClain indicated the club is hoping residents will get properties cleaned up early this spring.

Travel Fans to Arrive Here Friday

A group of people who hold a monthly outing together—the Nebraska unit of the Wally Byam Caravan Club—will hold its first rally of the year at the Wayne County fairgrounds this weekend. The rally will attract owners of Airstream Trailers from across the state and will last from Friday through much of Sunday. The club is the outgrowth of Wally Byam's traveling to out-of-the-way places to see the scenery and learn about people in different parts of the country. He built the first trailers of that name. Byam hoped to be able to lead a caravan of people around the world, something he succeeded in doing before his death a few years ago. That kind of traveling Byam made popular resulted in the formation of the club. Each month the members in Nebraska meet at some spot to spend a few days with the people there. This weekend's stop at Wayne will be the first one ever held here, although the members have held rallies at Walkhill, Gavins Point Dam, Platteville and Norfolk. Some of the activities planned during the travellers' stay in Wayne: Boy Scout Indian dance Friday night, open house at the fairgrounds Saturday from 1 to 3 in the afternoon, business meeting among themselves from 3 to 5 Saturday, dinner at Wayne State College Saturday evening and church services Sunday morning. The donation collected during Sunday's services will be given to some local community program. Clare and Marion Buskirk of Lincoln, former residents of Wayne County, are on the committee making arrangements for this month's rally.

Faunel Pickett of Norfolk, former resident of Wayne, is in charge of the Saturday evening program, which will include a tour of the new science facilities at Wayne State College, and the Sunday church services. Many of the caravaners are retired, spending their winters with their trailers in the south and in a cooler place in the summer.

Confab to Promote New Look Downtown

Plans are underway to stir up interest in giving the downtown district in Wayne a new look. Wayne planning commission members are inviting business property owners, Chamber of Commerce members and anyone else interested in a downtown beautification project to attend a meeting slated at 7:30 p.m. in the city auditorium Apr. 26. The evening program will include films presented by Richard Wozniak of Fremont, consultant to the planning commission, and a representative from the Nebraska Public Power District at Columbus will speak. Plans for the program were made by commission members during their monthly meeting Monday in the city clerk's office. Other items on the agenda included a hearing concerning a request made by Kent Hall that present zoning laws be changed to allow additional retail businesses to be built and operated in a highway business district zone. In response to that request, commission members will recommend to the city council that highway business district zoning regulations be amended to include stores or shops where goods are primarily at retail or where personal services are rendered such as—but not limited to—a grocery store, drug store and beauty parlor, and provided that off-street parking is not permitted in required front yardage. The planning commission also considered a written request submitted by Gordon Shupe that zoning for the property on the northeast corner of Seventh and Lincoln Streets be changed from residential to business. Shupe also suggested in his written request that the commission might want to consider rezoning other property from seventh and Main Streets west to Lincoln. A hearing on the rezoning request was set for 8:30 p.m. May 3 at the city clerk's office.

Richard Wozniak, consultant, presented the new land-use map to the commission following the making of several slight changes, the map will be given to the commission at their next meeting.

A new policy regarding the use of alcohol, drugs and narcotics has been adopted by the board of education at Winside Public Schools. Ron Kramer, high school principal, said school board members have a policy which notes that any student caught with or using alcoholic beverages, drugs or narcotics at school activities, at home or away, will receive an automatic three-day suspension from school. The policy also states that any student caught with or using alcoholic beverages, drugs or narcotics on school premises on a school day will be suspended for the remainder of the school year.

Carlson said much of the test consists of being able to identify sound differences of foreign language words.

Suit Filed Against Wayne City Council

Vakoc Construction Co. of Wayne has filed a suit against the city government in an attempt to get the assessments for a water district reduced on two pieces of land in The Knolls, a subdivision on the west edge of the city. The suit was filed in District Court in Wayne County Thursday. The suit, filed also by Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Winget, argues that the city council incorrectly assessed the pieces of property for special benefits they allegedly receive from the water service.

Suit Filed Against Wayne City Council

Purpose of the program according to Ken Carlson, high school guidance counselor, is to acquaint in-coming freshmen and parents with the school's instructional program. He said discussion will center on registration procedures, courses and school policy. A faculty member from each department will be on hand to explain particular areas of instruction. Students will receive a course registration form to be filled out and turned in at the schools where they are currently enrolled. These schools, Carlson said, will return the forms to Wayne High School. Carlson is in charge of making arrangements for the program. Pupils unable to attend the affair are asked to contact him at the school to make other arrangements.

Area Cattlemen to Study Grade, Yield Standards

Quality grade and yield grade are standards of market beef cattle which will be studied by beef producers and market people in northeast Nebraska. Cattle producers in the Wayne area will be taking part in the study, the second organized one of beef production and grading conducted by the Northeast Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association. The stockmen will select animals from their lots for special observation both as they are grown and as they are marketed and dressed out as beef.

Area Cattlemen to Study Grade, Yield Standards

The market study will be made on July 31 and August 2 at a packing plant with the application of the quality and yield grades set by USDA market service graders and commercial market people. The cattlemen are already selecting and identifying cattle in their feeding lots for the study. Members of the feeders committee organizing the study are Marvin Dumlak of Wayne, Henry Burns of Fremont, Bob Boals of Dakota City and George Olson of Winnebago. Wall, Tolman, Extension beef specialist at the University of Nebraska Northeast Station near Concord, also serves on the committee. Quality grade indicates the probable eating quality, tenderness, flavor and attractive appearance of beef. The degree of blending of lean and fat—"marbling"—is the key factor of juiciness and flavor, says Tolman. This marbling results from proper feeding and breeding. Tenderness is associated with the youth and ancestry of beef. Proper finish and marbling of beef at an early age requires adequate balanced nutrition, high animal health standards with provisions for animal comfort and selections of animals with an ancestry known to take advantage of these environmental conditions, the specialist points out. Yield grade is the proportion of live weight found in the muscle or red meat in the tender flavorful cuts of steaks and roasts produced by the beef. High yield grade, or freedom from waste, and a high proportion of less desirable cuts of beef is secured by selection of animals well developed in the tender muscular back and hind-quarter areas, according to Tolman. It also results from being able to judge the optimum market time when desirable quality grade has been achieved and before excessive fat has been put on either in outside cover or around internal organs. Nebraska beef enjoys an enviable reputation for a high standard of both quality grade and yield grade, Tolman says. The study will help the cattlemen further develop the ability to appraise these qualities and produce them more consistently.

Garbage Can Crackdown

Wayne Police Chief Vern Fairchild says his department will start issuing tickets today (Monday) to local residents violating city statutes regulating garbage cans. The garbage can in the photo is an illustration of a resident having a new garbage container but violating the law by not having the lid on it. Such cans should have tight fitting lids in place so as not to provide a breeding place for insects and curiosity sites for loose dogs and cats. Driving through alleys in Wayne, one may note that many metal or plastic garbage containers are new, but some residents are overloading the containers and leaving lids on the ground. Every city resident can help make Wayne a better place to live by providing proper containers and keeping the lids in place. It may also save paying a fine. — MMW.

Dear Editor: I was one of the few who attended the Environmental Action Committee Fair at Wayne this past weekend. My thoughts and emotions are mixed at this point. The things I learned from attending such a fair are tremendous and I'm grateful for the pamphlets and leaflets I acquired. "Free." I couldn't have absorbed and retained all that. I learned from the various speakers if I would not have these to refer to and refresh my memory. A fair such as this should have drawn crowds such as those at football, baseball and basketball games, yes, even political dinners and most "B" and "X" rated shows. Where were people? We are so quick to criticize our youth of today and yet when a group of young people spend hours, days, weeks and months planning a fair which must concern all who call themselves American citizens, where are they? This group had speakers from Omaha and Lincoln and nearby towns with important materials, news and statistics for ALL of us, whether we be farmers, businessmen or housewives, whether we be young or old or middle age. We think our air is pure, our waters are clean and plentiful and our land fruitful. We like to think this but we know differently. We know, however, that our luxury cars are filling the air with poisonous gases, our sewage is contaminating our rivers and streams, the chemicals and fertilizers which farmers think are really making them money (when facts and figures show the protein content of grains raised are becoming lower and lower, and the nutrients in the food we eat is becoming lower and lower, and causes of cancer and heart disease are being proven to be caused by the chemicals used to raise our food). Actually our soil is wearing out because of these chemicals and fertilizers, lack of rotation of crops and the use of Bliflo and competitive fertilizers which do not destroy the earth worms and good insects which really enrich our soil. Our population is growing at a rate we can't possibly turn our backs on. Not unless we want to bring them into the world to starve. This apathy must stop! My most concern ourselves with our environment, if we care about ourselves, our children and grandchildren. Are we going to sit back and let pollution and over population destroy us? As one speaker brought out, "If something isn't done now and by each of us as individuals, in 10 years people will say 'Why didn't someone tell us?'" You have been told, you have been informed. Don't turn your backs—find out the facts now and act, cooperate and think. I would hope there are a few red faces and a few guilty consciences among those who did attend a fair such as this sponsored by a youth group who acted, cared and cooperated and are thinking about your future. Did you not attend this fair because you were afraid to learn the facts, afraid that you too must get involved, or was it because it was sponsored by a group who choose to let their hair grow and not dress to your liking? To me a person's hair or dress is second in importance to what's underneath the hair and dress. Their heart's in the right place—where is yours? Mrs. Doris Christo

Dear Editor: Congratulations to the Environmental Action Committee for the fine program they provided for the first Environmental Fair in Nebraska held recently in Wayne. I was especially impressed with the slide-lecture presentation on water pollution in Nebraska. For me it highlighted the idea that "It can happen here" and that now is the time for citizens to become vigilant so that our clean air and clear beautiful streams do not become polluted, dangerous not only to good health but to life itself. I hope that the word will be spread far by those who attended the worthwhile sessions and viewed the displays that here is an organization worthy of the support of all of us. It is certainly fortunate for northeast Nebraska that we have college students and faculty among us who will take the lead in our community to preserve and improve the environment which directly supplies most of us with our lifeblood. It is commendable that many businessmen, realizing that the time to save a healthy environment is before it is lost, joined with the Environmental Committee, to support the fair. I hope that all citizens of northeast

JUST WRIGHT

How many JCR days do you have per week? A JCR day is a "Just Couldn't Resist" day. You know, you've heard it many times, or possible said it yourself: "I just couldn't resist!" Do you have those days often? As snow was melting a few weeks ago there was a local motorist having a JCR day and at the right moment became a splash and run driver. A Finnish smile crept contagiously across his face as the poor pedestrian shook his fist.

Then there was this gal walking down Main in Wayne on a recent cold day looking as though her matador pants had been put on with a spray gun. A feminine observer having a JCR day turned around after passing, looked, and laughed.

Did you ever stop to think about some of the things you just can't resist? How about that big piece of banana cream pie even though you had a good meal? After the mailman has delivered a letter and it is addressed to your spouse in a strange handwriting, can you resist opening it? After your spouse opens the letter, can you resist pestering to find out who wrote it?

How about it ladies, right after you find a bargain in shoes, do you find yourself in JCR territory when it comes to buying a $20 handbag to match?

Remember what your best friend told you and then told you not to tell because she had already promised the person who told her that she would not tell anybody else and especially tell who told her? So after you were told and got together with a close friend, did you find yourself shifting into JCR gear and telling? Just couldn't resist!

A fellow's hat blew off his head and tumbled out into Main Street. Like a screaming eagle, a sporty little roadster bore down on the $20 fedora and flattened it. Why? It was just too much for a driver with a severe case of JCR.

See the point? See the wet paint? See the sign that says in big red letters that it is wet-paint? See the sign that warns you not to touch it because the paint is wet? Ah! You went right to it and touched it didn't you? Your JCR day came on so suddenly!

You go to an auction in need of nothing but a good chance to be outside and see others who also need an excuse to stand around outside. With nothing else to do, you look over the merchandise and spot an item or two that you just can't resist. Yes, you tell yourself, you must resist this time. You'd sure like to have that clever little novelty, but you don't really need it. It would look nice on that table at home or sitting near the fireplace, but then you've already got so much stuff. You decide you won't buy it.

The item is held in the air and the auctioneer cries for bids. After a slow start the bidding becomes anxious and you, with a voice that you wonder yourself where it came from, say "Yes!" While your brain said no, your tongue said yes and immediately upon getting the item into your hands you say, "I really don't know why I bought this but I—JCR—JCR—JCR!"

The JCR passion bug bites little kids too. After all the dominos are standing on end like soldiers in a row, what child can resist knocking that first domino over only to shriek with glee at the fun in seeing them all fall down in succession? Is there a creature so rare who has not at one time or another closed his eyes—only to "rest" them of course—during a long sermon and suddenly awakened with a bit of embarrassment that he had fallen asleep? JCR!

You've been married for several years but during a party you saw this pretty little gal standing across the room and within seconds you thought of a reason why you should meet her. You knew there was no real reason to speak to her but you JCR—JCR—JCR!

"Darling, I saw the cutest little downtown today and I JUST COULDN'T RESIST." Those words had probably cost you more money than you care to remember, right? Then the bill collectors start hounding you because they can't resist either.

A local Wayneite was driving a small station wagon near Hancock early last week and came upon a wounded eagle. He stopped his vehicle and with the aid of a blanket he was able to capture the big bird in a box. He thought he would be able to find someone to dress the bird's wound.

It seems after putting the boxed bird in the back end and climbing back under the wheel, our friend looked into the rear view mirror only to behold the angry eagle with ideas of its own. The big beak, eyes and body came right up out of the box and the driver chose to immediately vacate his vehicle. He proceeded to open the back door and the eagle took off. The driver re-entered his vehicle and did the same thing.

At first he wasn't going to help the eagle-tistic bird but just couldn't resist.

On the other side of the fence are the IMTR or "I Managed to Resist" days. There are a few of those scattered here and there throughout the month. This may even be an IMTR day for you, is it? What were you able to manage to resist today? Maybe you'll find something in the following check list.

I managed to resist: —throwing out the electric toaster that seems to enjoy offering up a burnt offering every morning. —rubbing on a rural telephone line. —that pretty office secretary who looks so bride-eyed. —laughing when the intro-galting neighbor fell into his swimming pool. —buying the boss a kite and telling him to go fly it. —talking about the young couple next door who got married at an early-urge.

—cussing the highway patrolman who happened to notice I was 30 m.p.h. over the speed limit. —cooking TV dinners for supper. —telling false that if she doesn't try to hold her shape, no one else will either. —dropping in on an auction to see what was going-gee.

The fellow behind this tripewriter is having a JCR day and just couldn't resist taking up your time with a lot of nonsense! See you next week, or will we?

'Sir, Would You Please Repeat That?'

Anyone who is the product of public schools or has paid taxes toward their support is aware of the three R's—reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic.

There is a fourth R that runs rampant at school board meetings. It's called Rhetoric, or "Educations." By either term, it often goes unnoticed so we'd like to call it to your attention.

Beneath each example of administrative Rhetoric we've offered a plain facts (English) translation . . .

"In conformity with our policy of integrated curricular progression, there is a need to upgrade Science articulation at the secondary level."

(The junior high teachers won't work with those in senior high.)

"Approval is recommended for an additional recruitment trip for the Director of Personnel next week in anticipation of certain unscheduled vacancies at the elementary level in the near future."

(Two teachers are pregnant.)

"An overview of the Metropolitan Tests gives us a valuable comparison of our linguistic construction level with the national norm."

(The kids can't spell.)

"By increasing responsibility factors and adjusting work load formulas for administrative personnel we will be able to save the salary of one supervisor."

(We have too many administrators.)

"The per-capita title level of the elementary material centers is below the minimum set by the American Library Association and we are researching methods to remedy the situation."

(We think we can get federal money for the library.)

"Because the press of outside business commitments and illness have prevented the presence of a quorum of members of the Board of Education, it is recommended that this meeting be declared adjourned until next week."

(These board members are taking Winter vacations.)

"The percentage growth rate predicted on the basis of the Iowa Projection Formula failed to account for the attrition of child population due to the change in the real estate market and this has resulted in a surplus of staff for the start of the school year."

(We guessed wrong and over-hired.)

"At the suggestion of the dietitian and the business manager, it is recommended that certain quantity standards in the Tuna Boats and Sloppy Joes be modified and balanced with an increase in carrot sticks and celery."

(The cafeteria is in the red again.)

"After researching the high decibel level in the administrative work area, it is concluded that it causes interference with curriculum planning and therefore it is recommended that the Board approve the installation of low maintenance, all-purpose acoustical flooring."

(We want to carpet the superintendent's office.)

News of Note around Northeast Nebraska

The Pender Times had a completely new look to it last week as the first issue to be printed by offset methods came off the presses.

The new method of printing, the kind The Wayne Herald switched to several years ago, offers better reproduction of pictures besides several other advantages.

The first annual Wisner-Pilger sports banquet will be held Saturday, April 24, at the city auditorium at Wisner. Speaker for the evening will be Don Truman, sports information director at the University of Nebraska.

Six more teachers at Hartington High have signed contracts for another year of teaching, bringing to 28 the total number of teachers signed for the 1971-72 year. Only seven teachers now in the system have not signed contracts for another year.

The Randolph school system will hold an open house Tuesday evening from 7 to 10 p.m. to permit visitors to view the school facilities.

Emerson Sacred Heart will graduate its last class May 23, according to the Rev. Alfred Hoising, pastor of the Sacred Heart Catholic Church at Emerson.

Closing of the school had been rumored for several weeks after it was announced that four nuns teaching the high school would not return next year.

Opened in 1918, the high school had 134 students five years ago. This year's enrollment is 71.

A former resident of South Sioux City,

James Patrick Alexander, has been killed in Viet Nam. Alexander, 20, lived in South Sioux for eight years with his grandparents. He attended school there to the 10th grade.

Christiansen Construction Co. of Pender was apparent low bidder on the construction of a sanitary sewer system at Ponca. The company bid $139,440 on the project, about $15,000 lower than the next bidder.

A friend told Dick Lindberg, editor of the West Point Republican, that he finally convinced his son to cut his long hair. However, the father isn't very happy with himself, says Dick in his "Nearly News" column, because now he can see his son's earrings.

Gerald Dix, a member of the Pierce Jaycees, has been named one of the Nebraska Jaycee vice-presidents. He was elected to the post at the area convention held in Central City recently.

Want to know how the years pass so quickly, asked Henry Trysla, editor of the South Sioux City Star. The original "Years With The Wind" was playing at the State Theater in South Sioux some 30 years ago.

A reader of the Star sent Trysla the story about the one man who started to step off the curb to cross the street when a mini-mini-skirted blonde walked by. Turning to gaze at her, he nearly walked into the path of a cab. The driver gently admonished the old man by saying, "Well, old man, your eyes came pretty close to being on their last legs."

Nearly 5,000 at 'Pinocchio'

Nearly 5,000 youngsters of varying ages enjoyed the long-time favorite, "Pinocchio," staged by Wayne State college drama department last week at Ramsey Theater.

Twenty-one drama students and two wooden marionettes delighted the audiences with the story of Geppetto, an Italian wood worker who longs to have a son. From a piece of enchanted wood, given him by his friend Master Cherry, Geppetto carves a wooden puppet he calls Pinocchio.

The puppet is able to walk and talk and has many other life-like qualities, including mischievousness. His guardian angel is the Blue Fairy. The fairy, played by Patsy Benson, was a favorite with the viewers as she guided Pinocchio and helped him obtain his greatest desire—becoming a real, live boy.

Geppetto, an elderly and gentle man, was portrayed by Lynn Johanson, who showed a genuine sympathy for his part, as did Mike Caruthers in his portrayal of the crotchety friend, Master Cherry.

A group of lively children were played by Jeri Sill, Lisa Allen, Ron Rieker and Tom Bruner. Two Italian mothers of the rowdy brood, Signora Tortoni and Signora La Scala, were played by Charlene Hesse and Jerine Haeck. Miss Haeck was especially adept in her capture of the Italian matron.

Even without costume Kass Gerhardt could be recognized as the cat, bounding about the stage with feline grace. Richard Brown, as sly as Miss Gerhardt is stealthy, played the fox, second half of the evil duo.

Others who held smaller parts but filled them equally well were Elaine Gross as the fruit vendor, Dwight Meyerlink and Mark Hamm as carbiners, David Kelch as the fire eater, Ron Fazio as the Cardiwick, Joyce Sallach as the old lady, Gary Damber as the Coachman, Harold Madden as Friar Casso, and Bob Newman as the admiral.

Pinocchio was played by Wayne Anderson, who also manned his puppet counterpart. A second marionette, Punchinello, was operated by Mike Hamm.

The entire production was tied together with hitting song and dance routines. The story, over in a brief hour, concluded with the actors bounding off the stage and past the wide-eyed children into the lobby where they photographed play programs for all who crowded close enough to see and touch the storybook characters.

Mrs. M. Willers Hostess

Mrs. Martin Willers was hostess to Pla-Mor Bridge Club Tuesday evening. Mrs. Harold Stipp was a guest and prizes at cards were won by Mrs. Everett Roberts and Mrs. Harold Field.

Mental Health Speakers Available

Wayne area groups, civic clubs and schools wishing to learn more about mental health topics might consider taking advantage of an offer being made by the Northeast Mental Health Clinic at Norfolk. To emphasize Mental Health Week, May 2-8, the clinic will offer its clinic staff for speaking engagements during that week anywhere in the 24-county regional area the clinic serves. Between now and the first week of May, requests for speakers will be processed as received and a schedule will be completed. Anyone interested in requesting such a program should contact Lee Bremer, Mental Health Educator, Box 1209, Norfolk, as soon as possible. Speaking engagements will be scheduled in such a way that a speaker may talk to a number of groups in an area during each day. The twenty-four northeastern Nebraska counties are bordered on the south by the Platte River, east and north by the Missouri River and west by Cherry County. Mental Health Week is the only time these kinds of services are available. During the last year, staff from the center were involved in approximately 200 speaking engagements and the center sponsored numerous conferences, workshops and tours at the Norfolk facility.

ARC Member Among Conference Delegates

Wilbur Habrook of Emerson, a member of the Northeast Nebraska Association for Retarded Children, will be one of the delegates to the 16th annual meeting of the state organization in Lincoln later this month. The meeting, slated for April 23-25, will emphasize helping parents and professionals understand the problems of the retarded person, and their families in efforts to help the retarded become contributing members of their communities. Wayne County is one of the counties belonging to the Northeast Nebraska association.
