Incoming Fresh Quiz Faculty, Students at WS

More future students visited Wayne State College last week and this week to get a preview of what college is all about. One more orientation group, the fifth, will be on campus today (Thursday).

As usual in past years, the new freshmen and their parents had a flock of questions to ask of faculty members and student leaders who led discussion sessions for the visitors.

The freshmen took a test to show English proficiency and enrolled in fall classes after consultation with advisers.

Among the incoming freshmen from the Wayne area were: Wayne Nancy Jones, Michael Owens, Marla Pinkham, Kenneth Roland, Joan Merchant, Elizabeth ORIENTATION, page 6

Council Slates Hearing on Budget

At its next meeting the Wayne city council will hold a public hearing before taking action on a proposed estimated budget which would require levying 23.88 mills on the taxpayers in the city. The hearing is set for 8 p.m. Tuesday, July 27.

The estimated mill levy for the coming fiscal year is up .88 over the present levy of 23 mills. For a person owning a $20,000 home in Wayne the tax for the coming year would mean that he would pay $167.16 in taxes to help finance city government tax is based on 35 per cent valuation of his home, or $7,000. Under the present levy he is paying $161 in taxes on that home for city government.

Valuation of the city is estimated at $7.7 million.

The hearing later this month is open to the public and gives residents a chance to voice their opinion on spending for city services.

Pat Gross, chairman of the council's finance committee which had the responsibility of developing the budget for the coming year, told the council that the budget is a good one.

"We pretty much held the line (on spending)," he said.

The budget includes two mills for the city hospital, up from this year's one mill. Gross told the council that the committee increased that levy to emphasize that the city is concerned about the hospital situation in Wayne.

The levy could be used to build up a fund or facilities which could later be turned over to a new hospital, according to the city attorney.

Public anger over high taxes recently forced cancellation of an attempt to bring the proposal for a district hospital to a vote of the people.

This levy will let everybody in the area, both rural and city, know that the city is concerned about the hospital situation, Gross said.

In other action the council approved spending about $940 for this year to put in six fireplaces, six picnic tables and a water line at the Lions Club Park east of Wayne. Four tables have already been put there by the city and the water line is installed.

Council also okayed spending up to approximately $150 for lettered shirts for Wayne volunteer firemen.

The shirts, which would only go to those eligible firemen who want them, could be worn to regular local meetings and to gatherings for firemen outside the city.

Buying A Minibike? Better Check First If You Want Plates

People considering buying minibikes are advised to make sure they will be able to license it if they plan on driving it anywhere but on private property.

The suggestion comes from Leon Meyer, Wayne County treasurer.

The Norfolk employment office has informed Ken Carlson of Wayne as city auditor for another year.

-Issuing of a razing permit to Earl Bennett of Wayne. The permit is for a house at 321 E. Third St. It will be burned as practice by Wayne firemen.

Other council action saw: -Hiring of Jerry Malcom of Wayne as city auditor for another year.

-Issuing of a razing permit to Earl Bennett of Wayne. The permit is for a house at 321 E. Third St. It will be burned as practice by Wayne firemen.

The Norfolk employment office has informed Ken Carlson of Wayne that it is still working with one of the large seed companies in an attempt to get corn detasseling jobs for Wayne area youths.

The area youths have already filled out application for the jobs and have been waiting word about when they could begin work, said Carlson, the man who was to supervise the detasseling crews from this part of northeast Nebraska.

A misunderstanding between the Norfolk employment people and the seed company has resulted in that detasseling work to be delayed several days, Carlson said.

Definite word about the work should be forthcoming within the next few days, according to Ken Boyer, manager of the Norfolk employment office.

The Wayne Herald will carry a story on whether the youths have a job detasseling or whether they don't as soon as possible, Carlson noted.

Nearly $3 Million Spent in County for Food

Recession or no recession, the past year turned out to be better than expected in Wayne County.

With most local families enjoying bigger incomes than the year before, they were in a position to spend more.

However, although they did spend a considerable amount for food, clothing, automotive equipment, house furnishings and other goods and services, their buying was somewhat more restrained than it would have been if they had not been concerned about economic conditions, according to economic experts.

As in other parts of the country, area people cut back temporarily on their spending plans and put more money into their savings accounts.

The facts and figures on the local spending pattern are brought out in the annual survey of markets, made by the Standard Rate and Data Service. It shows how consumers in each section of the nation spent their money last year and for what.

In Wayne County, a large portion of the spending went for food. Approximately 15 cents out of every dollar spent in local retail stores was for such purchases.

What is produced, for grocery stores, bakeries, supermarkets, butcher shops and other food outlets in the area was a sales volume of $2,801,000, as against the prior year's $2,630,000.

This was exclusive of the amount spent for food consumed in restaurants and in other eating and drinking places.

If the outlay for take-home food were to be divided equally among the local population, it would be equivalent to $870 per household.

The figures for other retail lines also indicated relatively strong consumer buying locally.

Sales of cars and other automotive equipment and supplies amounted to $3,385,000.

General merchandise expenditures, in department and variety stores, came to $1,013,000.

Stores selling wearing apparel had sales in the year totaling $445,000.

Furniture stores and those selling home furnishings and accessories accounted for $592,000.

15 Help Launch Youth Group for Retarded

The Wayne area Youth Association (YARC) held a post-lunch supper and organizational meeting Tuesday at the Wayne Armory with 15 attending.

Marla Zurovski, a student at Wayne State College, was elected president of the group. New vice-president is Donna Doencher of Wayne. Theresa Allen, also of Wayne, was elected secretary-treasurer.

The new chapter is one of the 17 member units in the state organization. Organized in 1968, the Nebraska YARC has over 500 members interested in helping retarded children.

The Wayne chapter will concentrate on a recreation program for the retarded, including activities such as bowling, ping-pong, swimming, tennis, miniature golf and crafts.

According to Mrs. Kenneth Stizman, local Association for Retarded Children (ACR) vice-president and sponsor of YARC, the group plans to branch out and include youths from Wayne, Dixon, Dakota and Thurston Counties.

In addition, they hope to tour the Norfolk Opportunity Center, work with retarded children at the Beatrice state clinic on weekends, assist with the special education classes at Wayne Middle School and run a booth at the Wayne County Fair.

To qualify for membership, persons must be between the ages of 13 and 25, receive 10 hours of training and be interested in helping the mentally retarded.

Next meeting is set for 8 tonight (Thursday) at the Armory. State YARC president Kim Glossemann of Lincoln, unable to attend the Tuesday meeting, will speak to the group. Mrs. Rose Meile, YARC state advisor, will also be present.

Helping themselves during Thursday's meeting to form a youth group are Wayne State students Karen Abbott, center, and Carol Fiezer, right.

Weather

Residents of the Wayne area have been lucky the past few days in at least one respect—the thermometers haven't climbed above the 90 degree mark.

Dr. Owen, the area has received an occasional rain to help keep the July days from becoming overbearingly hot.

Highest temperature recorded the past few days was the 90 degrees on Monday. Total rainfall as of Tuesday for this month was 2.43 inches.

Glass Drive Shifts Into High Gear

The total glass collected in a church group at Wakefield and the Senior Citizens Center in Wayne early this week.

Three big loads of glass—one in a panel truck and two in pickups—boosted the total from the relatively small figure of about 440 pounds that had been collected in the first three weeks of the contest to near the ton mark.

Those using for the $25 cash prize in the contest have just over two more weeks to collect glass. The contest deadline for weighing glass is Monday, Aug. 2.

A couple youths from Wayne, a church group at Wakefield and the Senior Citizens Center in Wayne are big contributors in the contest so far. Together, they have come up with over 1,300 pounds of glass collected and weighed by late Monday.

Any group or individual in the area is welcome to enter the contest and try to win the $25 prize.

All kinds of glass can be collected and weighed—provided it has been washed and had all paper or metal removed.

Those collecting the glass should bring it to the newspaper for weighing. Then it should be taken to the large pile along the railroad tracks in the southwest part of the city.

Main purpose for the drive is to clean the environment and focus the attention of area people on the problems of pollution, according to the editor of the newspaper, Norvin Hansen.

The glass drive is being conducted by the newspaper as a public service, he said.

Following are the contestants and the amounts of glass they had brought in by Monday:

Young Drivers Fined

Two young men were fined in Wayne County court early this week, both on driving violations.

Robert Wheeler, 19-year-old Alton resident, paid a fine of $10 and court costs of $6 for failure to stop at a red light. A 20-year-old from Coleridge, Ronald Willcox, paid a fine of $11 and costs of $6 for speeding.

Both were fined Monday.

Want Fair Booth? Better Act Quickly Or They'll Be Gone

All area businesses, groups or individuals wishing to reserve booths for the Wayne County Fair in August should get in touch with Al Bahe as soon as possible.

Bahe, secretary of the Wayne County Agricultural Association, said that the booth reservations should be in within the next few days if people expect to obtain one for the fair, scheduled for Aug. 5-6-7.

Businesses, groups and individuals wishing to make contributions to put on the free barbecue feed during the fair should send their money to Bahe by the end of next week, the secretary said. Any people or groups who did not contribute to the barbecue a year ago who wish to help put on the upcoming one should also get in touch with him as soon as possible.

The Chamber of Commerce will notify all contributors about the duties they will have during the feed, said Bahe.

Clean-up day at the fairgrounds has been scheduled for Monday, July 26, at 5 in the afternoon. Needed for the work are numerous volunteers with mowers, rakes and other equipment, he said.

No Rabies Shot For Your Dog? Better Be Alert

The judge of Wayne County, Luverna Hillton, said Monday that dog owners in Wayne who do not get their dogs vaccinated for rabies are subject to a minimum fine of $10.

There are apparently quite a few dog owners in Wayne who are subject to that fine, according to Dan Sherry, the city official responsible for issuing licenses for the dogs.

Sherry said earlier that only about 200 dogs have received their rabies shots this year. There are several times that many dogs in the city, the city clerk said.

The deadline for licensing dogs, something which can't be done without a certificate showing the dog has received its rabies shot, passed several weeks ago.

Dog owners now have to pay a slight penalty to have their dogs licensed, making a total fee of $1.50 for males and spayed females and $4.50 for females.

State law requires that dogs receive rabies shots once every two years.

Another Survey Set for Wayne Area

The Bureau of the Census will conduct a survey of employment and unemployment in this area next week, according to Guy A. Lutz, director of the Bureau's regional office in St. Paul.

This survey is conducted monthly for the Department of Labor in a scientifically designed sample of households throughout the entire nation. The employment and unemployment statistics which are based on the results of this survey are used to provide a continuing measure of the national economic health.

For example, in May the survey indicated that there were 84.1 million men and women in the civilian labor force; 6.2 per cent were out of work as compared with 6.1 per cent of the 83.8 million persons in the April labor force. The figures are adjusted for seasonal changes.

Facts supplied by individuals participating in the survey are kept strictly confidential by law; the results are used only to compile statistical totals.

Interviewers who will visit households in this area include Catherine Moeller of Winser and Ruth Koehler of Norfolk.

Hair, Sideburns Can't Be Too Long

Competitors in the upcoming district baseball tournament at Wayne will have to watch the length of their hair if they want to make sure they'll be permitted to play in the tourney.

Players are to keep their hair short enough so it doesn't interfere with wearing a cap or protective helmet.

A player's hair, including the sideburns, can be no longer than the bottom of the ear lobe, and the hair must be well groomed and neatly trimmed around the ears and on the back of the neck.

Moustaches and beards are not permitted under the rules.

Hair combed low over the forehead will not be allowed by tourney officials.

The new regulations originated from the national American Legion organization, according to Wayne Tietgen, one of the local men involved in helping put on this year's tournament.

AMELIORATE?

Ameliorate. Got you confused, huh? O.K., the word means improve. Still confused? Don't worry, a lot of people are. After all, home improvement can be a pretty confusing thing, and a pretty frustrating one too — unless you're an expert.

Well, Carhart's are home improvement experts. But since a lot of people lacking in experience are calling themselves experts, that gets to be pretty confusing too.

Let's get it straight then. Carhart's are home improvement experts because they do everything on any remodeling job — from putting up a new storm door, to building a new room — and everything in-between, like garages, kitchen remodeling and bathroom remodeling — everything and anything.

Everything? That's not it's meaning too. With Carhart's, though, it still means that we start with a free estimate, our designers work with our own supplier, our craftsmen are highly skilled, we give you one contract (even when the job includes plumbing, electrical installations, or concrete pouring) and finally, we give you one guarantee — on the whole job.

You want to see proof — good! You're our kind of person. Stop in at 105 Main Street, see our showroom and talk to our personnel — it wasn't easy, but we've taken the confusion out of ameliorate.

NORTHEAST EXTENSION Notes

Pickles Add to Your Meals
Pickles can add spice and nutrition to your meals. Except for the sweet pickles they are low in calories.

But it takes a skillful blending of spices, vinegar and sugar to make crisp, firm, flavorful pickles.

Cucumbers should be fresh, firm and free from decayed spots. They should be medium size and pickled within 24 hours after picking.

If you do not have enough to make a whole batch of pickles, prepare the brine and use it as you need it.

Brass, copper, iron and galvanized utensils should not be used when canning pickles. They are apt to cause undesirable color changes. They also react with the acid or salt to produce unwholesome substances.

Use enameled ware, glass, aluminum, stainless steel or stoneware utensils when pickling. Hard water or minerals, especially iron, is one reason for pickles turning dark. Use soft water for making the brine. If the water is hard, boil it for 15 minutes, let it stand for 24 hours and then remove scum from the top.

Carefully ladle water from the kettle so the sediment in the bottom is not disturbed, adding one tablespoon of vinegar per gallon of boiled water before using.

Pure refined dairs, pickling or kosher salt is necessary when pickling. Pound for pound, granulated and flake salts have the same strength, but they do not measure the same. When using flake salt, increase the amount by one-half.

Boiled salt will darken pickles and may make them soft. Undiluted table salt will make the brine cloudy. If it is necessary to use table salt, use the exact amount given on the recipe.

Using white or cider vinegar to make pickles depends on personal taste. Cider or dark vinegar gives a mellow blended flavor but may darken white fruits or vegetables. White distilled vinegar has a sharp, pungent, acetic acid taste. White should be used when making pickled pears, onions and cauliflower.

Always use a high-grade—not high-priced—vinegar of 4-6 per cent acidity (40 to 50 grain). Do not use the vinegar unless you know the acidity.

If your recipe doesn't specify the kind of sugar, use white granulated sugar. Brown sugar will be listed otherwise.

Garlic and other spices may be left out or added to any recipe, the amount depending on your family's taste. Be sure spices are fresh.

The amount of pickling solution called for in a recipe may not be just right every time. The condition of the cucumbers and the manner of packing them will determine how much is needed.

Remove air bubbles by running a knife or other utensil between the jar and food. Add more vinegar if you're out of pickling solution. If you have too much solution, refrigerate it and use it later.

Sometimes the liquid in the jars may be left out. Do not open the jar and add more liquid because spoilage organisms will enter. Seal the jar as is. If the jar is opened for any reason, repeat the entire process.

Shriveling may result from using too strong a vinegar, sugar or salt solution. It is best to start with a dilute solution and increase gradually to the desired strength when making very sweet or very sour pickles.

Overcooking or overprocessing may also cause shriveling. Hollowness in pickles usually results from poorly developed cucumbers or holding cucumbers too long. Too rapid fermentation or too strong or too weak a brine may cause hollowness also.

Once a pickle becomes soft it cannot be made firm. Perhaps too little salt or acid was used, cucumbers may not have been covered with brine during fermentation or insufficient heat treatment and a seal that was not airtight are possible culprits. Blossoms, if not entirely removed from the seed to the cucumbers before fermentation, may soften the pickles also.

He said earlier this week that the state law which went into effect late in May requires that minibuses have at least five horsepower and stand at least 30 inches from the seat to the floor around before they can be registered. The law also applies to golf carts, according to Meyer.

Those minibuses or carts which were licensed before the law went into effect also have to conform to the new law, the county sheriff said. They don't meet the requirements, they are in violation of the law and the drivers can be fined, Meyer explained.

Regional Center Head Guest of Kiwanis Club
 The center now has 450 beds and an improved ratio between the number of doctors and patients. He pointed out that the hospital admitted about 150 people during 1955 and each averaged staying for about six months. With the new program, 500 persons are being admitted annually and each averages staying approximately 47 days.
 The out-patient load in 1955 was 50 persons each year. That number grew to 1,400 in 1970 as the emphasis was placed on improved services to out-patients and having fewer in-patients.
 "We have a treatment plan for every patient," Ingham said, adding, "and we are providing more services and better care now."
 He emphasized that part of the overall change at the institution from the time it was called an insane asylum until now was possible due to a difference in the public's understanding of mental illness.

Bold lines and shapes — accentuated in this special effects photograph — were the word for Wayne's new business during one phase of construction last week. The all-steel building, being constructed on the east edge of Wayne along Highway 25, will house Diers Supply a farm and home store which will stock everything from farm fertilizers and spray to kitchen utensils. A few more weeks will be required before the building is completed. Tracy Diers of Fremont, one of the two brothers putting in the business, said earlier that he hopes to have the business open sometime in August. The store will employ four or five people. It's the fourth store in the family chain. Others are located at Columbus, Fremont and West Point.

Opportunity for Advertisers

Advertisers wishing to get their message across to farmers in the Wayne area are reminded to start thinking about what they want to put in The Wayne Herald's coming "Farmer-Feeder Section."

of farmers and feeders in the area. The issue should be fairly representative of the kinds of farms going on in the area.

Drag Racing

Most people want to live and will spend great sums of money in the attempt to stay alive. There are other people; however, who by their actions appear to care less whether they live or die.

either the superiority of their car or driving abilities by racing. Drag racing on a public highway proves neither of those. It does prove there are a few thoughtless drivers who are willing to ignore the law and flir with death due to a weird concept of amusement.

Results Encouraging

A couple young boys entered in The Wayne Herald's glass drive are getting some of their glass off the sides of roads and highways in the area. That's fine, exactly what we had in mind when we decided to start the public service contest.

to get that old glass gathered together so it can be used again than to throw it in the trash so it can be taken to the dump.

FARM PAGE

Good Morning Feeders & Hi Mom

By Eddie Collins

I doubt if many ranchers and farmers realize their freedom in decision-making policies. With only the banker, assessor, in-laws and wife to answer to, a rancher can make more rapid decisions in any day than can a vice-president of a corporation in an entire career.

Mom, that old head you married stands without purchasing agent, legal department or research staff. He is the nation's only remaining practitioner of free enterprise in the true sense of our heritage.

At times some Dads feel inadequate in their solitary agricultural efforts. He sees the political giants or the lecturing educators flash across the TV screen. He receives a dozen farm and livestock magazines which tell of gigantic operations, of bulls that sell for more money than would eight sections of needed grass. He reads of geniuses who prosper in insurance and oil who in three short years have built up a reputation registered herd worth millions.

He attends a glorified cattle sale and overhears talk of 1,200-pound calves, of breeds whose names once existed only in Hans-Gretel Fables and Wagner operas.

Yes, these Dads would feel a sense of incompleteness. Too bad he can't come with me. The thing industry, government and education have given their people is a respectful, little else.

Janitors are maintenance engineers, city banks have vice-presidents without a telephone.

In name, everybody is a chief. Radio and TV are great on that direct-to-lazy industry, still profit minded, has found it better to give a title than a raise.

I have met advertising account executives who can spend millions but are not authorized to accept a long distant call.

Or government officials who terrorize a dozen states on an inspection tour but who share a broom closet on some unknown side street in Washington.

If a rancher or farmer has a disgruntled hired man, give the man a title. Give him a fighting chance to look the 21-year-old assistant cashier of the bank in the eye and say, "I'm the assistant foreman in charge of outside maintenance at the ranch."

Listen, these Dads are flexible. In one moment, without a board meeting or 30-page survey, he can shift crops or buy combines without all the f's dotted and the t's crossed or fear of Philadelphia lawyers.

He loafs at times, but puts in 20-hour days. He helps friends, buys grain, repairs intricate equipment, serves on school boards and attends conventions. But, Mom, I have a complaint.

Why do so many of these wonderful rural people apologize for being a farmer or rancher? In no segment of industry or government or education does there exist such qualified people who survive and grow only by personal effort and skill.

Mom, next time you hear that hard head blurt mouth himself, please belt him right between the eyes. Make him raise that head to the mirror and see the greatest producer of all times.

And, Mom, tell him that either owner and/or operator is a greater title than any of the city's unfortunates can ever achieve.

Guidelines to Farm Profit

Among the principal factors which help to determine the financial success of a farm operation are the size of the business, crop yields, livestock returns per $100 feed fed, operating costs per unit produced and volume of business per man.

In addition to these points, which records have shown to be highly correlated with profits, the selection of enterprises—corn versus oats and hogs versus beef cow herd—can be related to financial success. Generally, a well managed large business is more profitable than an equally well managed small business. It should be noted that a man might do very well with a small unit but lack the ability to do as well with a larger one.

Also, for size to be beneficial, it must be accompanied by good management, as a large, poorly administered business is often a losing proposition.

Good management can be classified into two categories: organizational and operational.

Organizational management is concerned with the policies or decision-making aspects of an enterprise.

Some considerations for this type of management are:

—Greater use of cropland for corn, sorghum or soybeans and none or very little for crops like oats.

—Hogs have been good money makers over the years. They are better than any other hogs for example, or even cattle feeding. This is, of course, dependent on available facilities.

—Use of only enough harvested forage to meet the needs of livestock which fit in well with grain production.

—Fertilize for good yields (not necessarily maximum yields).

—Adequate machinery is needed to get work done at the proper time.

—Low herds fit best where there is plenty of capital, a large amount of land unsuited to tillage and a relatively short supply of labor.

—Operational management involves the mechanics of carrying out policies. It deals with timeliness and pertains to methods used in the production of a crop or a particular kind of livestock.

Aspects for consideration in operational timing—particularly with regard to crop production.

The term "livestock returns per $100 feed fed" can be clarified by an understanding that the producer must receive enough from the sale of the animal to cover non-feed costs such as veterinary expense, taxes, labor and interest, as well as feed costs.

For example, with cattle, if you feed $100 worth of feed, you'd need to have about $135 worth of receipts to cover the feed costs and the non-feed costs. Anything above that would probably be in the profit zone.

Comparable figures for other kinds of livestock would include hogs, about $150.

Double Muscling Is Field Day Subject

Double muscling, a frequent but oftentimes unrecognized condition of beef cattle, will be the main topic of discussion at the annual Nebraska Charolais Association Field Day scheduled for Saturday at the county fairgrounds near Madison.

According to Dave Williams, extension livestock specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, a discussion and demonstration of double muscling in beef cattle will be conducted during the afternoon session of the field day.

In relation to the discussion on double muscling, Donald Campbell of the Nuclear Electric Center-Corporation, Okmudgee, Okla., will be on hand to demonstrate the use of a new machine which can be used to measure with reasonable accuracy the actual pounds of lean meat in the live animal.

John Ritchey of Norfolk, chairman of the field day, emphasized the importance of the discussion on double muscling, noting that the majority of beef producers are aware of the condition but that few are able to recognize it.

In addition to the afternoon discussions and demonstrations, a judging contest is scheduled for Saturday morning. Williams said the contest should be a special highlight for 4-H and FFA members.

Williams termed the judging contest as an excellent opportunity for the young persons to attain supervised practice in judging beef cattle in preparation for the State Fair.

The five divisions of the contest will include senior 4-H, junior 4-H, FFA, men and women. Trophies and ribbons will be awarded to high-scoring individuals in all divisions. Top 4-H and FFA teams will also receive trophies.

In addition to the awards, a total of $250 in special premium money will be divided among high scorers in the 4-H and FFA divisions.

The field day will begin with registration for the judging contest at 9 a.m. at the fairgrounds. Field day participants will also be treated to a free barbecue at the noon meal.

Goal of Vet Class: Better Farming

By Jane Owens
In this age of technology, farming has become more than a way to earn a living. Agriculture is a recognized scientific field, forcing farmers to keep up with new trends.

To learn new and better ways of farming, 49 area farmers return to the classroom weekly.

Farm Cooperative Training classes, held at Wayne High School three nights a week, are taught by Lee Foote of Wayne. Classes run about four hours each night.

The training program, provided for in the GI Bill, is funded by the Veterans' Administration and open to all veterans serving after Jan. 31, 1955 who derive a major part of their income from farming.

According to Foote, the program deals with methods of crop and livestock production and farm management.

"Our main objective is to increase efficiency in farming and keep abreast with the latest developments in agriculture," he said.

The farmers have discussed topics such as crop management, hybrid selection, disease and insect control, fertilizers and soil testing. Demonstrations are sometimes conducted by feed companies, fertilizer companies and implement dealers.

The program was started in

Shorthorn Spotlighted

This week is "Shorthorn Week" in Nebraska, according to a proclamation issued by Gov. J. J. Exon.

Nebraska ranks third nationally in polled Shorthorn production and fifth in Shorthorn production, according to the American Shorthorn Association. The national group is the oldest beef registry in America and is currently observing its 125th anniversary of registrations.

Exon said in the proclamation that the importance of youth in agriculture must be emphasized if Nebraska is to continue its leadership in beef production.

March after it was approved by the Wayne-Carroll school board. Farmers enrolled in the course must pay $15 a month tuition. If they attend for 36 months and make "satisfactory progress," they receive a certificate of completion.

Foote, who previously taught 10 years of high school vocational agriculture, noted that other towns in the area—Laurel, Alton, Randolph, Hartington, Pender, Yreka and Coleridge—are holding similar classes.

It is the course achieving its goals." Foote said that so far it has exceeded his expectations. Farmers are encouraged to apply what they've learned to their farming operations. "After all," said Foote, "that's the best test a teacher could give."

James C. Peterson, a service of CARF, expects to send about 125 volume specialists overseas this year, during CARF's 25th anniversary, to teach their specialties to local medical personnel.

Social Security Man Plans Wayne Visit

Local and area people with questions about social security can have those questions answered Thursday, July 22, at the Wayne County courthouse.

Gall H. Robart of the Norfolk social security office will be at the courthouse that day from 9 to 11 in the morning. No appointments are necessary for seeing him at that time.

According to Robart, medicare premiums will increase to $5.00 effective the beginning of July. This is an increase of $3.60 per year, he said.
