County Fair Gates Open for 1971 Exhibition

Gates to the 1971 Wayne County Fair were thrown open early today (Thursday) and everything points to it being the biggest three-day exhibition of livestock, farm equipment, home economics and entertainment ever displayed at the fairground.
 Fair goers will first of all be greeted at the west entrance gate—the only entrance to the grounds this year—by a new 20-foot sign which not only marks the entrance, but also welcomes visitors and asks them to return again. Posted above the sign are the state and national flags.

 Parking the family car and being able to find it again should be easier this year, according to Al Babe, fair secretary. He said parking rows are each identified by letters of the alphabet.
 "The fairground is the best condition it has been in for 26 years," Babe noted earlier this week. He pointed out that the roads are graveled, buildings are repaired and everything is ready to go.

 Those attending the fair during the three-day show will find exhibit booths packed with display items. Babe said the outside exhibits featuring farm machinery and equipment are the largest commercial exhibits ever on hand for the fair.

 Today is Winside, Hoskins and Altona day with horse judging and judging in the 4-H building getting underway at 1 p.m. Judging of open class economics and dairy cattle is slated for 3 p.m.
 The midway—featuring the Thomas Shows—will open today with concessions and rides for all ages.

Tonight at 7:30 p.m. will be a junior rodeo time in front of the grandstand. Contestants planning to demonstrate their abilities in the calf riding competition must register before the rodeo. Deadline for entries is set for 6:30 p.m. First prize is $5 and a trophy. Second prize is $8. Third and fourth prizes are $6.

'Travelaires' Scoop Herald's Glass Contest

A group of youths specializing in singing has won the top prize in the glass drive sponsored by The Wayne Herald.
 Winning the $25 first place prize—the "Travelaires"—a singing group from the Christian Church at Wakefield. The youths, thanks to a big hand from residents of the Wakefield area, gathered together a total of 13,923 pounds of glass during the six-week public service campaign.
 The money will be used to help finance the group's summer trip to the Black Hills in South Dakota. Each year the group takes a summer trip for a few days of fun and fellowship. They leave on the trip this weekend.
 Making up that group of teenage singers are Frank and Shane Giese, Paula Malmberg, Bruce, Ron, Jane and Gebe Hing, Larry Rubick, John Agler, Leah Moomaw, Kay and Jean Pankratz, Dorothea Beckenhauer, Tom, Jerry, Lou Ann and Pat Nicholson, Stanley Haglund, Teena Russell, Dave Dunning, Rhonda Myer, Miles Pearson, Andy Lewin, Mary Frezer, Jane and Debra Johnson, Carmen Kline, Sheryl Hallinger and Jill Carhart.
 Winning the $15 second place prize was the Senior Citizens Center in Wayne. The Sunday school youths of another Wakefield church, Salem Lutheran, won the $10 third place prize.
 The two banks in Wayne, State National and First National, put up the money for the campaign in the beginning. The newspaper provided the money for the winners.
 Started late in June, the contest slowly picked up interest until contestants were harvesting about at the end of June to get as much glass credited to them as possible before Monday's deadline.

 Result was that nearly 30 tons of glass—59,918 pounds to be exact—were collected by the 13 groups and individuals who vied for the cash prizes.
 The drive, first of its kind ever held in the area, was started by the newspaper in an attempt to clean up the environment and to focus attention on pollution in and around Wayne.

 Glass collected during the contest will be combined with that gathered during the month's Environmental Action Committee glass drives. It will be shipped away by railroad car to a plant where it can be melted down and used again.

 The enthusiastic response to the glass drive was almost overwhelming, said Norvin Hanson, editor of The Wayne Herald. "We never anticipated that the people in the contest could find that much glass," he said.
 "We just wish there were some way we could give prizes to all the contestants instead of just the top three, however, all those who did enter the contest will receive a letter of appreciation from the newspaper," he said.
 The newspaper is considering making the glass drive an annual event. It is also considering holding a different drive next year,

Courthouse to Close At Noon on Friday

Local courthouse employees will get a chance to attend the Wayne County Fair Friday afternoon.
 Norris Weible, clerk, said the courthouse will be closed at noon Friday—following a tradition set many years ago during fair time—and will remain closed until regular hours Monday.
 Area residents planning to take care of business at the courthouse yet this week are reminded they should do so today (Thursday) or Friday morning.

Bake Sale Set by AFS To Raise Needed Cash

Members of the local chapter of the American Field Service have a problem and hope to solve it by holding a bake sale.
 The chapter is approximately $125 short of having sufficient funds to bring an AFS student—Rosa Mery Castillo of Caracas, Venezuela—to Wayne for the fall term at Wayne High School.
 Mrs. LeRoy Simpson, project chairman, said Monday that it takes $500 to cover expenses in supporting the AFS and American students abroad programs each year.
 She said the local AFS Chapter is planning to hold the bake sale Friday and Saturday at the People's Natural Gas Co. office in an attempt to raise the $125.
 Anyone wanting to contribute food items or money is asked to contact her before 7:30 p.m. Thursday. She said those interested should call her before 7:30 p.m. Thursday. See BAKE SALE, page 5

'The Big Guys' Are Coming

Fans of both fast-pitch and slow-pitch softball better not plan anything for Sunday afternoon because "The Big Guys" will be in Wayne.
 "The Big Guys" are exactly what their name says—big. Each player weighs between 270 and 430 pounds.
 They will take on local teams made up of players from Wayne, Winside and Carroll in two games starting at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.
 The games will be a benefit for Al Carlson, a rural Winside man injured several weeks ago in a car accident. He remains unconscious.
 Their opponents—the big guys—half from Sioux Falls. They play numerous games in the area during the summer months.

Cattlemen Keep Trying to Improve Quality

Northeast Nebraska cattlemen are all eyes and ears as they watch and listen to Robert Turner, a USDA meat grading expert during Monday's closing activities in this year's NEM market beef study. The feeders got to see the slaughtered carcasses of cattle shown Friday at the Iowa Beef Processors plant at Dakota City. The specialist pointed out how the cattle look and grade in the coolers, affording cattlemen a chance to actually see what they are raising in their feed lots. About 30 feeders and interested people from this part of the state turned out for the chance to see their cattle in the coolers. Earlier Friday the group got to see colored slides of their slaughtered animals and films of the cattle in the IBP pens. The study is an annual event sponsored by The Northeast Nebraska Live-Stock Feeders Association in an attempt to improve the quality of cattle raised in the area.

Planners Extend Seventh Street Property Survey

Planning commission members, meeting in the city clerk's office Monday night, decided to expand a survey of property along Seventh Street being made at the request of the city council.
 The planning group initiated the survey in July asking those who own or live on property within 150 feet of Seventh Street their opinion of rezoning that property from residential to highway business use.
 The survey included property from the east city limits to the west city limits on Highway 35.
 Commission members decided to extend the survey to each square block joining Seventh Street at the suggestion of Richard Wozniak of Fremont, planning consultant to the city.
 Merv Mordhorst, commission chairman, said it is hoped the survey can be completed by Aug. 23 when results will be tabulated by the commission at a special meeting. See PLANNERS, page 5

This large sign will greet 1971 fair goers at the west entrance to the fairgrounds.

NORTHEAST EXTENSION Notes

Canning Fruits and Vegetables. To enjoy out-of-season fruits and vegetables many homemakers preserve the flavor of in-season foods by canning them.

However, a few principles need to be followed. Select only the fresh, firm, unbruised and fully ripened fruits and vegetables. They must be mature enough to hold their shape during processing.

Sort according to size for even cooking. Scrub and wash fruits and vegetables thoroughly in small quantities at one time under running water or in several changes of water. Don't let them soak or they'll lose their flavor and nutritive value.

In canning, the heat treatment must be sufficient to destroy all enzymes and microorganisms present in the food. When the directions for method, heat and time of processing are followed,

Pender Man Fined

A Pender fisherman, Brock A. Anderson, has received a fine of $10 and court costs on a charge of drinking on state property, according to the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

'No Danger in Fish with Parasites'

Every year a small portion of the fish caught in Nebraska are needlessly wasted because they show evidence of parasites and are discarded by anglers thinking they are unfit for consumption.

However, these fish present no hazard to man and can be safely eaten, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

Skinning of the fish will remove nearly all of one of the most common types found in Nebraska fish, and ordinary cooking will kill any parasites remaining in the flesh.

The most common fish parasite in this state is the black grub, which appears as small black spots, about 1/25th of an inch across on or just beneath the host's skin. The black spot is actually a cyst, built up by the fish around the larva of a family of flatworms known scientifically as strigoids.

Another form found in Nebraska is the white or yellow grub, which appears as wart-like protuberances on the skin, especially at the bases of fins and near the tail. The structures, also encysted flatworm larvae, can also be found in other parts of the fish, including the abdominal wall and muscle structure.

Neither form represents any threat to man, and their harmful effects on the fish are not well documented. Heavy infestations undoubtedly stunt a fish's growth and may kill young fish, however.

Control of these parasites depends on breaking the chain in their complex life cycles. Both forms spend various stages of their lives in fish, fish-eating birds, as free-swimming organisms in the water, in the bodies of snails, back into the water as free-swimmers and finally completing the cycle by attaching to a fish. While the parasites do represent a problem in Nebraska, Commission Fisheries biologists say there is no practical method of control at present.

Loop Play-Off Possible For Local Baseballers

Wayne's town team is able to get by Bloomfield Sunday night in a home game, there's a good chance the local club will make the Tri-County League play-off for the second year in a row.

The club went up against Wausa Wednesday night in a make-up game. A win there was also important in determining whether the club would make that play-off, scheduled to start Thursday of next week.

This year there will be only four teams in that play-off, a change from the year before when all eight teams in the league vied for the play-off trophy. Wayne won that trophy to end the first season of play in the loop.

Wayne's record in the play-off is 1-1. Last year they lost to Wausa, 1-0.

The car is campaigning in 1971 on B. F. Goodrich Radical T/A street tires against pure racing tires. The tire has been raced at Mosport, Daytona and Sebring.

The racing car will be on display at the Fredrickson Oil Co. booth at the fairgrounds.

Winning Flags Posted For Area Race Drivers

A Wakefield stock car driver had reason to be all smiles Sunday night following the action at Raceway Park, South Sioux City, as he left the track a triple winner.

Lyle Ekberg first roared across the finishing line in number one position in his heat and then went on to win the trophy dash. He topped off the evening by beating out competition and winning the A feature.

Another area driver drove his way past the winning flags during the weekend. Racing at Collins Field, LeMars, Ia., Saturday night, where he continues to be high point man, Gerald Bruggeman of Hoskins finished first in the B feature. He raced the following night at Scotland, S. D. turning in a winning performance that gave him first place in his heat and the number one spot in the A feature.

Wakefield drivers also earning winning slots at South Sioux City Sunday night were Dennis Crippen who won his heat race and finished eighth in the A feature, and Joel Wirth who nabbed fourth place in his heat.

Crippen took fifth place in his heat and won the B feature Friday night at Creighton. Competing at LeMars, Ia., Saturday night, he was fifth in his heat and finished eighth in the A feature.

New Track Completed For Stock Car Fairs At Cedar Co. Fair

A new quarter mile track has been recently completed at the Cedar County Fairgrounds in Hartney for all hobby stock car enthusiasts in the area.

The track was engineered by John Stockwell of Hartington. Dirt work was done by Logan Valley Const. Co. Inc. of Laurel.

In hobby stock car racing the cars can not be newer than a 1948 and the wheelbase must be at least 100 inches.

The county fair board hopes to use the track for stock car racing throughout the summer months.

The board has also moved in and completely renovated an old one-room school house now located just east of the grandstand. It contains the same desks, old apples and readers used years ago by students attending the country schools. It will open to the public during the fair scheduled for Monday through Wednesday.

HOW TO SOLVE GOLF PROBLEMS

HITTING DOWN THE LINE OF FLIGHT

The old concept of swinging a golf club from inside to outside the target line (dotted arrow) is changing. Instead many new generation players hit the ball with the clubhead moving down the intended line of flight (solid arrow).

The inside out technique involves rotating the club into the ball with the clubhead moving out to the right of the target. The hands must be turned to attack back, away from the hitting area, to avoid pushing the ball to the right.

Some professionals now prefer a big hit of the shoulder into the backswing and then a stress shoulder turn that starts the club straight through the ball on a steep or inside curve. There is an effort to turn the hands over to straighten the clubface at impact.

Tractor Pull Slated

Cuckler C-40

See how much more building you get for about the price of a "pole" barn!

- Building width 40 feet
- Building length minimum 60 feet (Length can be increased in 20-ft. sections)
- Sidewall heights 12 feet and 14 feet

It's a permanent all-steel building...not a temporary shelter

Because Cuckler's steel columns are anchored to a reinforced concrete foundation, you'll never get uplift or soil slippage. The building stays plumb and sound indefinitely. In contrast, posts can slip and heave even if set below the frost line.

Cuckler siding and roofing panels are formed from 26 gauge steel (28 is standard for many pole barns). Our high ribs and minor flutes have rounded crowns for still greater strength.

Your self-drilling screw fasteners have many times the holding power of nails driven into wood. Cuckler walls stand up to wind and other pressure, exerted inward or outward.

You can use all the space inside a Cuckler C-40. Wall to wall and floor to ridge. The trusses of pole barns are not so insightfully, they effectively limit your use of the building.

Let us quote a finished building, or a complete "package" for you to put up yourself.

Airborne Biologists Are Now Completing

Count of Antelope

Airborne game biologists are wrapping up their annual survey of Nebraska's antelope range in the Panhandle and Sand Hills, and are now compiling data on population trends and reproduction of the state's pronghorns.

The biologists have been covering all of the Panhandle, usually at two-mile intervals. They note the number and ratio of bucks, does and kids spotted within one-quarter mile on either side of the plane, then expand their data to get an estimate of the total number of pronghorns in the Sand Hills, where antelope are less numerous and not as well distributed, a random sample is taken only to determine the ratio of bucks and kids to the number of does.

The buck-to-kid ratio, tells a great deal about an antelope population. A high ratio of kids per doe points to a good rate of reproduction.

71 Deer, Antelope Permits to Be Late

Getting to Hunter

Waiting of Nebraska's 1971 deer and antelope permits to hunters will be somewhat later than usual this year because of a delay in delivery of the permit forms from the printer, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

However, hunters should be patient, since the new licenses are expected shortly. Those whose applications were in order can count on a license for the 1971 season, unless their names were eliminated in the July 9th drawing for permits in over subscribed units. These hunters have been notified by mail.

Thanks mainly to the concern of hunters and efforts funded by their money, the nation's wild turkey population jumped from 97,000 in 1952 to 531,000 in 1958.

Laurel Men Building Simplified Calf Stall

Two enterprising Laurel men have designed a simplified version of a calf stall which is being distributed throughout a six-state area.

The calf stall, designed by John McCormick and Verneal Peterson, makes calf feeding almost trouble-free since the calves are separated and kept under control.

Calves are fed in the stalls by nipple bottle and with two small pans for feed and water. The calves are kept clean because of the slatted floors in the bottom of the crates.

All equipment needed to build the crates is made at McCormick Implement Shop in Laurel. The stalls are made in a repair shop in Laurel and are distributed by Peterson.

Increases Get Okay At Local Hospital

Some patients at the Wayne Hospital will pay slightly higher fees as a result of increases in rates approved last month by the hospital board.

Increased have been the charges for the operating room, nursery room, delivery room and delivery room anesthetics.

The maximum charge for the operating room will now be $200, up from $150. The charge for an hour will now be $60, up from the $50 charged prior to the change.

The delivery room charge has been increased from $20 to $40, and the charge for delivery room anesthetics has been increased from $10 to $15.

Charge for the nursery room has been raised from $10 to $12 a day.

A spokesman for the hospital said that the increases were approved after a study of rates charged at other hospitals in the area. That study showed that the Wayne Hospital was low in these four areas.

The rate changes mark the first time in several years that there has been an increase, the spokesman said. There was an increase in the charge for the operating room within the past few years, the spokesman noted.

Rid'n High
These five Wayne youngsters discovered Tuesday morning that horseback riding need not be limited to one person per saddle. Taking advantage of the summer sun and the hospitality of a horse named Buck, are, from left Brendan Dorsey, 5; Stephanie Dorsey, 10; Joe Dorsey, 7; Toby Van Cleave, 5; and Sean Dorsey, 7. The youngsters' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dorsey and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Van Cleave.

Health Tips

When you are in the market for a pair of sunglasses, remember there's more to it than choosing fashionable frames. The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness reminds us that the cost of sunglasses is usually determined by the frames—not the lenses, so just because a pair is more expensive, it is not necessarily better. The best sunglasses have lenses made of optical grade shatter-resistant glass or plastic. "Cheaper" lenses often contain distortions which put a strain on your eyes. But no matter how good they are, the Society warns, sunglasses are for outdoor daytime wear, not for wear indoors, and never for night driving.

Way Back When

Wray Mundy NATIONAL TRUCK DRIVER OF THE YEAR

Tips from a Pro

The County Budget

Wayne County Commissioners Floyd Burt, Joe Wilson and Ken Eddie have proposed an estimated budget of $691,635 for the coming year...

If the proposed budget is adopted after the public hearing at 10 a.m. Aug. 10, it will require raising through taxation about $441,593. The budget will require a levy of about 11.78 mills...

In looking over the county's tentative budget it is important to notice that some of the proposed increased costs—such as in the bridge and road fund—are a result of the public's demand for better roads.

more than the actual expenditures last year. Commissioners Burt and Wilson, when campaigning for election, talked about improving the road situation in Wayne County...

Better roads and bridges call for the expenditure of more funds, particularly in the face of heavy rains and flooding in past months. When road problems have been discussed with the commissioners at the courthouse, more than one rural representative reportedly emphasized that it was illegal taxpayers wouldn't mind paying a little more in taxes...

County expenditures may increase this year but it is our opinion that if the extra funds—particularly those for roads and bridges—are well spent, few citizens will complain. —MMW.

Public Hearings Good Bets To Spark Hot Discussions

LINCOLN—Rampling alongside Cornhusker football as a topic sure to spark discussion anywhere in Nebraska is water. Therefore, a lot of testimony is expected Aug. 26 when a legislative study committee holds a public hearing on the subject at the Statehouse.

Witnesses will be restricted, according to committee chairman Maurice Kremer of Aurora, to a discussion of the framework study prepared by the State Soil and Water Conservation Commission as the first step in the preparation of a state water plan.

But that study covers 268 pages and contains plenty of fodder for hearing testimony.

Another interim study committee has scheduled public hearings on another hot topic—taxes. The group headed by Sen. J. W. Burbach of Creton will solicit citizen testimony at hearings in Alliance Sept. 13, North Platte Sept. 14 and Grand Island Sept. 15.

The Burbach committee will be accepting comments on equalization of property values among counties, the handling of personal property taxation, the possibility of reinstating intangible taxes and the structure of the sales and income taxes—especially the corporation income tax.

At a recent meeting in Lincoln, Burbach raised the possibility of intangible taxes. It is unfair, he said, to tax bank accounts and stock holdings, but he said, it's also unfair to tax such personal property as business and farm equipment and inventories.

"If we must continue the unfairness of the personal property tax and keep the state in this position or condition," Burbach said, "then we'd just as well put everything in reverse and move backwards by considering the intangible tax (which was abolished in 1967)."

Burbach was the sponsor of the personal property tax exemption bills which passed the 1971 Legislature, but couldn't get past the vetoes of Gov. J. J. Exon. Exon's last veto was timed to arrive after the lawmakers had admonished so it was sheltered from a possible override attempt.

Exon Takes Tough Stance

Another running battle between Exon and some senators during the 1971 session concerned the prorating of standards for aid to dependent children (ADC) payments.

The legislators maintained the state should make full payments and "make sure Exon was given enough money to do so. The governor, on the other hand, said welfare expenditures were climbing too fast and by prorating the standards, he could make the money go farther.

He scheduled prorating to start Aug. 1 and ran into a storm of criticism—including an announcement by attorneys for the Omaha and Lincoln legal aid services and the Nebraska Catholic Conference that they would seek a court injunction.

Last week, Exon took his arguments to the people. In a speech at a Democratic fund-raising dinner in Wahoo, the governor lashed at what he called "irresponsible and misleading" criticism of his plans.

He contended his budget proposals called for a $27 million increase for welfare programs. That, Exon said, was the largest increase in the history of welfare appropriations in Nebraska.

"No other state responsibility received such a fantastic increase in total tax funds," he said.

But Exon said that increase was enough. "Under this administration, there is a recognition of the legitimate needs, but there is not and will not be the writing of blank checks or IOUs for any cause real or imagined. I categorically reject deficit financing as practiced in the past and the suggestion of a special session to spend more money on welfare," he said. The governor called the increase in recent years of the welfare load "unbelievable."

"This fantastic growth has continued in the midst of economic boom as well as the recent slowdown in the nation's economy," he said. "This suggests that the welfare system has somehow evolved into something quite more than a means of sustaining the destitute and tiding the unlucky over bad times. The destitute and the unlucky simply cannot be increasing that rapidly and consistently."

"The question inevitably arises: How did all those people get along the year before? How can there be 6,200 families in Nebraska (24,000 adults and children) who made it on their own in 1967, but in 1971 have no alternative but welfare?" Exon said the answer seems to be the growth of a "non-working or part-time working class, and this can scarcely be a happy omen for society."

Greater federal participation in providing welfare money is needed, the governor said, along with a better job in seeing that fathers support their children. "Often times," he said, "we seem to be encouraging fathers to allow others to assume their rightful responsibilities of supporting their families."

Exon himself compared the Wahoo speech with one he had made in March at Columbus. The Columbus speech was aimed at critics of the Exon recommendations for the University of Nebraska budget.

In both speeches, the governor hit hard at his critics. "I am again asking the people for their support with the full realization that what is said here will again open the doors for a crescendo of abuse... No one is going to dictate the policies of this administration—pressure groups notwithstanding—while Jim Exon is governor of this state," he said.

SS Q & A

Q. When I applied for monthly retirement benefits, the man at the social security office mentioned something about making some sort of report. I stopped working when I started getting benefits five years ago, but a friend of mine recently told me he had to file a report with social security last year. Should I have filed a report, too?

A. No. Your friend and the man in the social security office were referring to an annual report of earnings. A social security retirement beneficiary only files this report if he works and his earnings go over $1,680 in a year.

Q. I receive monthly social security survivors benefits as a student. I work during the summer and part-time during the school term. Will I lose any benefits because of this work?

A. If your total yearly earnings do not go over $1,680, you will not lose any social security benefits. If your total earnings exceed $1,680 for the full year, you may lose some benefits. But you will still get full benefits for any month that your earnings are $140 or less. You should call or visit any social security office immediately if you know that you will earn more than $1,680 for the year.

Q. How do I change my address on my social security card?

A. It is not necessary to change your address on your social security card. Social security records are all kept according to the number.

Load of Charcoal Teaches Quick Lesson

By Jane Owens

Mrs. Max Lundstrom of Wayne never lets herself get carried away at an auction. She learned her lesson after attending a recent auction where charcoal was sold at 30 cents for 10 pounds.

Surprised at the reasonable price, she bid on the charcoal and ended up taking the whole 180 pounds home. If the family hadn't given most of it away when they moved, Mrs. Lundstrom thinks they would still be using it.

Mrs. Lundstrom hasn't given up going to auctions but she does set a price in her mind before bargaining. Once the item reaches her top price, she drops out of the bidding.

For the past five years, Mrs. Lundstrom has been collecting antiques. She became interested when an aunt from Ohio died, leaving an old house to be cleared out.

Most of her antiques once belonged to her mother and her aunt. However, she also buys at auctions and through the mail, answering advertisements in collector magazines.

"I like antiques that I can use. If I can't use them, I don't want them," said Mrs. Lundstrom. For example, one of her old cut glass decanters serves regularly as an iced tea pitcher.

Although she is especially interested in sterling silver and Wedgwood Jasper ware—pastel blue plates with white embossing—her collection includes practically everything old: a ouija board, a Shirley Temple pitcher that came as a Wheaties cereal premium, a hibiscus teapot, her grandmother's carriage lights and a wooden bucket once used for storing sugar.

Stored in closets and trunks, Mrs. Lundstrom also has sun bonnets, flapper dresses and 19th century wedding gowns which are often used for costumes in plays.

In 1968, "Grandma's Attic" was started and Mrs. Lundstrom began selling some of her collection by mail or at flea markets, instead of running an actual antique shop, she puts ads in magazines offering a mimeographed list of items for sale.

"Grandma's Attic" deals mostly with paper items that can be listed and described easily such as old post cards, road maps, railroad timetables, cards printed with Bible verses and Mt. Rushmore souvenir booklets.

Customers live all over the country, including one serviceman stationed in Malta. Although most goods are sent through the mail, Mrs. Lundstrom once shipped 150 issues of The Saturday Evening Post to Massachusetts by freight.

Flea markets, where people set up tables to display their antiques, homemade items and just plain junk, are usually held once a month in Omaha, Sioux City and Sioux Falls. Mrs. Lundstrom tries to attend at least two every three months.

Because the atmosphere is so informal, she takes some "junk" to sell along with the better items. She recently bought a hayrack full of old tools, nails and bolts which she plans to sell at the next flea market.

According to Mrs. Lundstrom, dealers usually set a price on their goods but expect to have to bargain with market customers.

When she wants to buy or sell antiques of better quality, she goes to antique shows held in larger towns such as Sioux City.

"This is the first year I'll really find out if I'm making money on my antiques," she said. In previous years, she has come out about even. This year, Mrs. Lundstrom is keeping records on her dealing and thinks she will do about the same financially.

She said, "Grandma's Attic" is really more of a hobby than a money-maker. Most of my profits go back into more antiques."

What advice would she give to a beginning collector? If a person is collecting for his own enjoyment, Mrs. Lundstrom says, buy "whatever pleases you."

However, if you are planning to make money, she advises to "buy for intrinsic value and don't fall for fads." Mrs. Lundstrom feels that this is a bad time for speculation because antique prices have almost reached a peak with inflation.

When asked how to tell real antiques from clever reproductions, she said: "The most important thing is to know your dealer and make sure he can be trusted."

She also mentioned a book on the subject that can be checked out from the public library. The title: "Confusing Collectibles" by Dorothy Hammond.

"A person really has to learn about good antiques through experience," she said. "One of the best ways is to listen and talk to people who do know something about them."

In addition to her interest in antiques, Mrs. Lundstrom has many other hobbies, including stamp collecting, writing, camping, dramatics and helping with the Girl Scout program. She also teaches math courses part-time at Wayne State College.

Her husband, Dr. Max Lundstrom, is the assistant dean of administration at Wayne State College. The Lundstroms have two children—Elaine, 16, and Marjie, 14.

Mrs. Lundstrom gently handles one of the antiques from her collection.

Needy Students At Wayne State To Receive Help

Needy students at Wayne State College and other eastern Nebraska institutions of higher education will be helped in the coming school year by nearly $1 million in federal funds.

A total of $913,860 in federal funds will go to needy students in Nebraska's First Congressional District, according to Cong. Charles Thone.

Of the total, Wayne State College will receive $50,520 to pay 80 per cent of the wages of an estimated 217 students. The jobs and the remaining 20 per cent of the funds for the wages will be provided by the school or off-campus non-profit organizations, according to Thone.

Northeastern Nebraska College at Norfolk will receive $24,300 to help pay the wages for an approximate 100 students. Other schools to receive funds include John F. Kennedy College at Wahoo, Midland Lutheran College at Fremont and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Don't let the future scare you — it's just as shaky as you are.

Good Morning Feeders & Hi Mom

The King is dead. Long live the Prince. (I hope.)
Chicago after 106 years, the last 25 under horrible management and public relations, is now being demolished by swinging steel balls and scrapped into piles of dirt.

Moms, the Exchange Building possesses beautiful inch-thick slabs of pure marble on every floor. The halls echo with history and memories. The marble steps are worn deep from past boot soles.

All that marble will be smashed into rubble—for progress, to make room for urban American and to hell with Cattleman!

Oh, they still will have the International. The Mayor and the Chamber still like the conventions, the fantastic hotel trade and the late November shopping spirit. Agriculture, deserted by Chicago, will still blindly send thousands of FFA and 4-H kids to the Windy City.

Chicago Union Stockyards, absolute leader for years, is dead, assassinated.

Chicago once served all the Cornbelt. The last 10 years it served no one. Improvements were non-existent.

Deserted were feeders of quality cattle and hogs from Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan and Illinois. Also deserted were the Eastern and local buyers and commission men who never missed a day since Mrs. O'Leary's cow barbecued Chicago.

Finest Chicago began eroding when commission men were no longer considered to have divine guidance and when auctions sprang up in the west. Then by decentralized packing plants.

Too bad the noble livestock industry gets in the hands of the Joilet opened. Not a fancy eight-story Exchange Building, not marbled-walled "joints," not 2x8 plank set in 10' cemented posts. Oh, no, the entire yards are temporary. Totally of portable, segmented chutes, the same you see used for dozens of western brandings.

Not all Chicago commission men joined Joilet. Some went to the hog-minded terminal at Peoria. Some retired.

Last week I visited with some dozen Koshier cattle buyers. Joilet keeps them alive, too. True, transportation problems do and will exist.

But with buyers held together, the quality feeders can be secured. There remains those potential top tags that build confidence and strengthen the psychological side.

For the first time in 10 years, I have seen an Illinois commission man with spirit.

Good luck, Joilet, sorry about the funeral.

What is a farmer?

A definition given by E. A. Jensen, NDSU agronomist, says this.

"He must be engineer enough to run $70,000 worth of machinery and blacksmith enough and welder enough to fix it. He must be economist enough to know when to buy and when to sell and bookkeeper enough to spot the weak points of his operation.

"He gambles on the weather and prices. He must be veterinarian enough to spot livestock diseases, castrate pigs, or stick a bloated cow, and plant pathologist enough to recognize and solve crop disease problems.

"He doesn't have to be a chemist but he needs to know what his soil fertility level is and what is in fertilizer formula. He must know herbicides, fungicides, and insecticides that will safeguard his crop and yet be safe to the consumer of the food and fiber he produces. He doesn't have to be an agronomist but he must know which crop variety is best, when to plant it and how to make it produce a profit.

"He doesn't have to be a diplomat, but diplomacy will help convince his wife that a new tractor will increase profits enough to buy her a dishwasher.

"He doesn't have to be a psychologist but it might help to keep his children working on the farm while the city boys go fishing. A farmer today is a combination capitalist, a day laborer and a manager.

"He must have brains enough to make any decisions each day and enough to toss around bags of fertilizer and bales of hay. Along with this, he must have thrashe enough to be able to walk into the bank and ask for a $20,000 loan without batting an eye."

Annual Field Day At NE Station Set For September 9

The annual Crops Field Day at the University of Nebraska Northeast Station near Concord has been set for Thursday, Sept. 9.

The Station is located one mile east of Concord and tours will begin at 10 a.m. Visitors will assemble at the Headquarters Building where they will be picked up on hayracks which will make stops at selected experimental sites around the Station.

Research work of Agronomists Russell Moomaw and George Helm and Agricultural Engineer Wayne Fisher will be viewed. These Northeast Station researchers will be assisted by several people from the College of Agriculture at Lincoln.

About three or four short tours will be arranged and tours will continue throughout the day until mid-afternoon. A visitor may spend a part of the day and make a part of the tours or he may spend the day and complete all the scheduled tours, says Cal Ward, supervisor of the research facility.

Lunch will be available on the grounds.

Yard & Garden Tips . . .

Q. Does detergent in the dishwasher, when thrown on the lawn, help the lawn to take in water better?
A. Detergents such as those used for dishwashing are very similar to commercial wetting agents used specifically for this purpose.

Q. What should be used to control bag worms?
A. Half-grown bag worms are difficult to control, and as they grow, controls with chemicals become even more difficult. If not too many are present, it would be best to hand pick them and follow with a spray of diazinon or Cygon. On large trees or heavily infested shrubs, spray with a mixture of diazinon or Cygon and Sevin.

Trail Drive Draws 500 Hereford Enthusiasts

By Merlin Wright

Polled Hereford enthusiasts from nine states turned out by the hundreds Friday and Saturday for the Great Nebraska Polled Hereford Trail Drive of '71.

Several northeast Nebraska communities took on the appearance of the Old West as the caravan passed through, although the covered wagons were family cars and the horses were hidden under the hood.

Farmers, feed salesmen, livestock raisers and other people interested in the trail drive gathered first at the Miller Hereford Ranch—nine miles north of Omaha for campfire coffee at 8 a.m. Friday morning.

Wagonmasters Leroy Sievers of Wakefield and Kenneth Larsen of Decatur kept the wheels rolling north, stopping at Hereford farms near Arlington, Crale, Decatur and Lyons.

Numbering about 300, the group arrived Friday evening at the Herevale Farms northeast of Wakefield. They were greeted by their host, Leland Herman, and were given rides into the pasture where they inspected some of the Herman herd.

Following the inspection of show and sale cattle, the group for the second day of the event. Activities included adult, 4-H and FFA judging contests, and demonstrations of hoof trimming, clipping and grooming.

Jack and Bev Beeson of Wayne demonstrated the proper way to trim cattle hoofs. Jerome Settles of Scribner and Gaylen Frenzen of Fullerton, demonstrated the correct method of clipping cattle for show. Jack and Jacque Sievers, members of the host family, showed how to properly groom a Hereford for show. At mid-afternoon, Debra Delchmann, 16, Central City, was crowned as the Nebraska Polled Hereford Queen for 1971.

Crowning her was the 1970 queen, LeAnn Larsen of Decatur. Betty Lou Stelhoff, 17, Syracuse, was named the Nebraska Polled Hereford princess.

Wayne Nurse Helps Combat Misuse of Drugs

By Merlin Wright

It is possible that your children and other Wayne area youngsters will be less apt to misuse and abuse drugs due to the efforts of a Wayne resident—a registered nurse, housewife and school staff member—and the efforts of 19 other Nebraskans.

Mary Ann Cottrell, school nurse in the Wayne Public Schools, is one of 19 persons appointed in May, 1970 by then Governor Norbert Tjeman to serve without financial compensation on the Nebraska Commission on Drugs. She was re-appointed to the commission last February by Governor J. J. Exon.

"Education is our greatest tool to combat drug abuse," Mrs. Cottrell said recently as she spoke of the commission's efforts to get the state legislature to pass legislation regarding drug education.

Mrs. Cottrell serves as chairman of the commission's legislative committee. She said the commission worked last year studying the drug problem in the state, then submitted to Tjeman recommendations for legislation. As a result of the commission's efforts, the Nebraska Legislature passed HB51 which requires all schools in the state to have drug education programs in the curriculum by the fall of 1972. Such a course will involve the physiological, psychological and sociological aspects of drug abuse as well as the misuse of alcohol and tobacco, she said.

She pointed out that schools failing to comply with the law will be in danger of losing their approved or accredited status with the state.

This year the commission is working with the State Department ment of Education in setting up more workshops to be used in schools, she said.

The commission is also sponsoring such drug education workshops as the one held July 22-25 in Lincoln on the campus of Nebraska University. It was a youth workshop and featured such speakers as John Luce, director of the Haight-Ashbury Drug Clinic in San Francisco; Dr. Lee Smith, director of the hearing Community Action Center; and Dr. Donald Parkinson, director of Omaha's free drug clinic called Fairfield.

What first caused Mrs. Cottrell to become interested in drug problems? She said she could see that drug abuse was becoming a nationwide problem and became interested in doing as much as possible to prevent having the same problems in Wayne as exist elsewhere.

"The drug problem has hit the larger cities and is slowly moving into smaller communities," she noted. "The drug problem is centuries old really, but it hasn't been the social problem that it is today," she observed.

The school nurse pointed out that every age group and every social class of people are affected in some way by drug misuse.

Is the general public very well informed as to the hazards of drug misuse? Mrs. Cottrell said she thinks people are becoming more aware of the problem throughout the nation due to information carried by newspapers, radio and television.

She said the commission is studying the possibility of establishing drug abuse programs on the college level and, "Already industry is asking us for help in establishing some type of information program to be used in their institutions." She further explained, "The commission is trying very hard to create a unified program across the state, in schools, industry, social organizations, churches and service groups, so that the drug education programs won't overlap."

In working out a statewide drug information program, the commission not only works with the State Department of Education, but also with the State Crime Commission.

The commission on drugs is currently making a study of the state to determine where drug treatment centers are needed.

Asked when people turn to drug abuse, Mrs. Cottrell said, "I think that is a hard question to answer. One of the main reasons is probably peer pressure, that is pressure from one's own group and age, plus personal problems."

Are drugs misused in Wayne and northeast Nebraska? "I do not think we are immune here to drug casualties," Mrs. Cottrell said, continuing, "Many people abuse barbiturates, tranquillizers and amphetamines without being able to admit they are abusing them." She said there was little doubt but what marijuana is misused in northeast Nebraska.

Among other activities of the drug commission, she said, is that of studying available materials regarding drugs and then making recommendations of the better materials to schools, churches and social organizations.

Though busy as a school nurse and housewife, Mrs. Cottrell is continuing her work on the commission for the second year and meets with the 20-member group once each month either in Lincoln or Omaha.

What compensation, she explained, is the satisfaction of helping to prevent drug problems from developing here or elsewhere.
