City Council Denies Request by Wayne Grocery for an Off-Sale Beer License

The Wayne City Council Tuesday night denied a request for an off-sale retail beer license for Wayne Food Center Inc. (Wittig's Super Valu), 117 W. Third.

Speaking on his own behalf at the 8 p.m. public hearing at the city auditorium, Al Wittig said his request was justified on grounds of customer convenience, adding that he felt there were no legal or moral reasons for denial of the license.

Attorney Budd Bornhoft, representing local retail beer dealers opposed to the granting of the license, stated that the business of selling intoxicating beverages has always been controlled by law. According to Bornhoft, his clients felt that granting a beer license to a grocery store would result in license requests from other retail grocery concerns.

Bornhoft reasoned that if the council granted Wittig a license, it would be forced to grant other license requests, or face charges of discrimination.

The vote on the request found the council evenly split, with councilmen Keith Mosley, R. H. Banister and Darrel Fudrath.

Thief Enters Lueders Oil

Lueders Oil Company of Wakefield, owned and operated by Bud Lueders, was broken into Christmas Eve or early Christmas day by an unidentified person. No goods were taken and no arrests have been made, according to Dixon County Deputy Sheriff Jim Stark and Wayne's Night Marshal Charlie Olsen, who were called about 2 a.m. to investigate the incident.

Bud Lueders found the station lock jammed when he went to the station about 12:30 a.m. to get gas for a couple who had contacted him at his home. Without getting the jammed lock a lot of thought, he broke the double glass between the folding garage doors to get into the station, filled the car with gas, and then had a cup of coffee inside his station with Marshal Olsen.

Lueders decided to remain at the station since the glass was broken to prevent anyone from entering, and about 1:30 a.m., heard a noise in the back room.

Keffler Out on Bond

Michael L. Keffler, 20, of rural Allen, who had been charged earlier this month in connection with several Allen break-ins, has posted bond of $1,000. The bond, originally set at $3,000, was lowered by County Judge Malcolm on Dec. 24.

Allen Robbery Nets About $200

Dixon County Deputy Sheriff Jim Stark investigated a reported theft at the Cash Store in Allen, estimated to have occurred about 12:30 a.m. Christmas morning.

Owner Keith Hill discovered the theft about 9:30 a.m. Christmas day when he went to the store for some sugar and discovered that a quantity of cold meat, cheese and cigarettes, valued at about $200, had been taken. A carton of cheese had also been packed, but not carried away by the trespasser.

Entrance had been gained by breaking a rear door window and plywood which had been used to replace the glass following a previous break-in. Blood was found around the glass where the trespasser apparently cut himself.

Stark noted that there were no significant leads in the case.

Winside Man Dies in One-Car Mishap

Wayne County recorded its third traffic fatality of 1971 Thursday, Dec. 23, when a one-car accident 8.1 miles west of Wayne on Highway 98 claimed the life of Lorence Apking, 58, of Winside.

There were no witnesses to the mishap, which occurred about 2:45 p.m.

Apking was eastbound on Highway 98, just west of the junction of Highways 35 and 98, when he apparently lost control of his car. There were skid marks which indicated the vehicle swerved off the road into the south ditch, then climbed the ditch, crossed the road, and ran into the north ditch. The car never overturned.

According to the Wayne County Sheriff's Department, Apking apparently was thrown from the car in the north ditch. The vehicle, after ceasing its forward motion, rolled backward, with the right front wheel coming to rest on Apking's neck.

The Wayne Hospital received a call requesting an ambulance shortly before 3 p.m., but Apking was pronounced dead when the rescue equipment arrived. In addition to the Sheriff's Department, units of the Nebraska State Patrol and County Coroner Don Reed were present.

An obituary appears on an inside page of this issue of The

Ak-Sar-Ben Drive To Begin On Jan. 4

Ak-Sar-Ben will kick off its 1972 membership drive Tuesday, Jan. 4, with more than 850 volunteer workers meeting in Omaha to discuss plans for the campaign. According to Alan Cramer, Wayne, Ak-Sar-Ben district ambassador. According to J. Allan MacIver, chairman of the membership drive committee, a goal of 50,000 members has been set for this year. City Council

(Continued from page 1) statewide primary, May 9. The ordinance was necessary in order to hold the city election concurrent with the county election. In answer to a need for more equipment for electrical line service, the council voted unanimously to purchase an aerial ladder for $4,800. The ladder, which will be installed on a truck, is extendable, and will allow two men to work on lines. In other action, the city building inspector Dick Carlson volunteered to meet with local plumbers to amend a national plumbing code for use by the City of Wayne. The Streets and Alleys Committee agreed to survey the downtown area to consider possible solutions for parking problems. The council voted to reduce the easement on lot 15, Knoll's Addition, from 10 feet to seven feet. Mayor Hall noted that though Wayne has been redistricted, voters will not be required to re-register in their new wards, unless they have moved.

The council discussed the pension plan which is required for police officers near state-wide is a first class city. The subject was referred to city attorney John Addison for further review. In his administrator's report, City Clerk Dan Sherry noted that the hospital did not operate at a financial loss for 1971, and that the city farm, located at the airport, realized a profit of $4,000, half of which is turned over to the city. The city will return its share of the profit to the airport fund. Sherry also disclosed that the recreation board will donate $50 to each of the three Wayne Boy Scout troops, $150 to the Wayne Girl Scouts and $50 each to two local Cub Scout troops.

Break-In

(Continued from page 1) He investigated and apprehended a man in a stocking cap attempting to leave through a rear door. The man had apparently broken the tumblers on the lock prior to Lueders' arrival at the station earlier, and had been hiding there since. An ensuing struggle between the two men resulted in Lueders being hit on the head and the thief making his escape. There were no suspects.

The Agent's Angle

by Harold Ingalls

Beef Feeding Test Underway
A total of 745 steer calves, representing 40 Nebraska ranches, have been collectively consigned to the three feedlots cooperating in the Nebraska Commercial Beef Herd Evaluation program for the 1971-72 feeding period.

Good Records Always in Style
The widely-used Nebraska "Blue" Farm Account Book, devised by University of Nebraska Agricultural Economists, is available to provide Nebraska farmers with the business records necessary to successful farming operations.

The Blue account book, No. FM65-1, is helpful for income tax reporting, as both receipts and expense items are broken down to provide easy transfer to income tax forms. Within the account book are found records for landlor expenses and receipts, livestock produced and sold, Social Security items, and a farm map and land use record for the production of crops.

Financial summaries and net worth statements are also contained within the Blue book.

This Blue Farm business record book could make dad a real fine gift and could be of real service to him every day of the year.

Several additional publications are available which may be used in conjunction with the account book: a depreciation schedule (No. 59-SL); extra pages of the income and expense record (No. FM76-S1); and a farm business analysis sheet which assists in evaluation of per cent return on investment, livestock return per $100 feed used, and other information.

The Blue Account Book can be purchased from the County Agent's office for a nominal cost. The additional material can also be requested from the County Extension agent.

"GOSH PARDNER, I FIGGERED EVER FEEDER HAD A DOUBLE-DECK CHUTE!"

Good Morning Feeders & Hi Mom

By Eddie Collins

Mom, I receive many letters from worried parents who ask how their calf-showing 4-H son might become a packer cattle buyer. Repetitious questions seem to be...

(Q) Can he attend a buyers school?
—For bet. But, merely to get the interview with the packer, what Sonny learns as a freshman will be obsolete by graduation. Remember, most professors would starve to death if totally dependent on buying skills and knowledge. In my day, they pushed dwarves.

(Q) What is the best training a boy can have to buy fat cattle?
—At 15, buy him a 40-horsepower hot rod. To be driven entirely on gravel roads since buyers must learn to cut in front of school buses on narrow bridges, drive all night and to nonchalantly wave "hello" to patrolmen while speeding. Also, parents buy him a two-way radio. He must learn to locate the highest hills with the most far-orable radio conductivity to practice catching the buying orders thru static from the slurring beef man or numbing head buyer. Finally teach him the only two words the beef department understands... grade and field. Note: In buying circles this is pronounced "grade and steal."

(Q) Most Junior be on the judging team?
—(A) Only if he wants to become a farm director on radio or TV, or a feed salesman under Clifford Hardin.

(Q) What is the best experience he can get to condition himself for buying?
—(A) Learn to drink coffee! Each morning go punctually to the local truck stop. Tight pants are important. Always be early to get into the extreme corner of the booth. There is no human way to get stuck for the coffee tab in such a straight jacket. Important on expense accounts.

(Q) What is the best training my boy can receive?
—(A) Get the local franchise for the following magazines: (1) Angus Journal, (2) American Hereford Journal, (3) Charolais Banner.

(Q) Should he study the articles?
—(A) Well, they beat Dick Tracy and Little Orphan Annie. Not as good as Charlie Brown. Junior should sell subscriptions as country cattle-buying not only takes patience but the buyer needs a keen business sense. Needs experience on how to resist a tough sale.

(Q) What type of person would make the best country cattle buyer?
—(A) These shapely mini-skirted gals who occasionally drop by to sell magazine subscriptions. Even on a down market they could load and sink Noah's Ark. Of course the moment the wives saw them, the terminals and auctions would get all the trade henceforth.

In fact, that might be their salvation.

Best Wishes... Happy New Year!

WAYNE HERALD WANT ADS!
Where buyers and sellers meet.

Why Is it always chore time when:
—you discover that you need to grind feed for the fat hogs? Gosh, you're sure it was about half full this morning. Maybe it was yesterday.
—the vet comes to vaccinate pigs after you have waited in the house all afternoon waiting for him?
—the cows are grazing in the farthest corner of the pasture or cornstalks?
—the electricity goes off?
—Mother, Pig needs help in having her family?
—city friends are driving around and stop for an hour "just to say hello"?
—the feeding cattle break into the fat cattle yard? or the pigs finally root through the hole they have been working on for days

Isn't ready to go in the barn. After several mad dashes just the wide open door she figures that you are mad enough to do something drastic. And you are. So she slows down and moles in like a nice old cow.

—Dad, inside the door, she can't seem to find the stall that she has been going in twice a day for the last three years. But between your arrogant language and her puffing and snorting you have the entire herd roused up. Then she meanders into her stall and independently sticks her head in her stanchion.

—Now you're really behind schedule. So you try to feed the following little calves while you are milking only to discover that you feel the black Holstein twice.

Well, since one of them wasn't fed, at all and you can't figure out which one it is, you feed the one that seems to still be following the toughest.

At last you are done milking but the kids haven't brought the water to the barn to rinse the milkers. But a fast trip to the house and a wet return to the barn takes care of that. Maybe it didn't improve your father's image but you can bet they aren't larc with the water for another week or so.

You hurriedly proceed to feed the fat cattle, which by this time have shrunk 10 pounds. They crowd around the feed bunks till you can't get a tractor and wagon "off of feet" close to the tanks. After squeezing 10 more pounds off a couple steers you get within three feet of the bunks.

As you throw out a scoopful of feed and it lands on about five heads, they shake it off onto the ground and you quickly dig in for another scoopful before they can do it again. Right now that extra couple hundred bucks for an auger wagon would be well spent.

If for nothing more than to help your nervous system.

You finally get enough feed scooped onto the feed bunks to tide the fat cattle over till morning and you start for the hog yard with two buckets full of feed.

All the hogs seem to be outside. So you try to sneak in the opposite side of the hog shed, thus avoiding the big mad scramble.

But just as you step inside the door an old setting hen which has strayed from the hen house goes squawking and fluttering in sheer panic as she flies past your head.

You almost lose your balance, spilling most of the feed and you let out a yell that can be heard in the next section.

By now the always famished hogs are all around you, eating to their hearts' content.

After you kick and climb your way over the fence-crawling, mid-lovers-to-the trough, you find that you haven't enough feed.

"Old Bossie" nudges you on her way out as if to say "I'm sorry." And you think "Damn you onery hide anyhow" and rub her back. But after the last cow goes out the door you linger a minute to watch the contented beasts. You can't help but chuckle to yourself and wonder if anyone else ever has these problems. You know darned well that every farmer does at various times and no doubt some are even worse. At least you try to console yourself with that thought as you hurry on to the house. Oh, yeah, now you remember why you are trying to hurry. You were supposed to go in to the folks for supper tonight. When you reach the house you find that everyone is bathed and attired in their good clothes and all ready to go. That is, everyone except you.

Area NU Students Work with 4-H's

LINCOLN—Over 100 students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln are learning by doing and helping hundreds of young 4-H'ers do the same. These University students serve as leaders for the 50 Inner-City 4-H Clubs in Lincoln and they work with over 500 young 4-H'ers between the ages of nine and 16.

Inner-City 4-H leaders Cheryl Kahl of Wakefield (left) and Connie Watson of Wayne phone their 4-H club members about an upcoming meeting.

Initiated in 1967 as the University 4-H'ers-Citizenship Project, the Inner-City 4-H program is aimed at helping each member become more aware of himself and of his community's potential.

The University 4-H Club is a student organization which emphasizes service and leadership in the community, as well as on the campus. Many of the club's members are former 4-H'ers. It is one of the largest student organizations on the NU campus. According to Sharon McNally, president of the University 4-H'ers, the Inner-City 4-H program is always growing and changing, providing leadership experiences with children of every age, race and background. "It's organized for those who care enough to become involved with urban youth."

The group held their 1970 meeting at the Wakefield Covenant Church. Christmas Eve supper guests in the Elwin Fredrickson home were the Dennis Fredricksons, Lyle Johnsons and Chalmers Simpsons. Sharon Johnson of Albion, Mich., and Bobby Johnson from Gustavus Adolphus College, St. Peter, Minn., spent the holidays in the Rev. Robert V. Johnson home.

Bank Contributions

Forty-three Nebraska banks have helped "make the best bet" and given their support to the 4-H program by contributing $2,770 in the 1971 Nationwide Bank Campaign.

Area contributors in the program are the First National Bank of Wayne and the Security National Bank of Laurel.

Drug Abuse Booklet Is Available

"Drug Abuse, An Authoritative Selected List of Materials" is the title of a new booklet received recently in the Wayne Public Library. This 48-page document telling what is available in films, filmstrips, slides, recordings, books and other materials directed against drug abuse has been published cooperatively by the Nebraska Public Library Commission and the Nebraska Commission on Drugs.

Financed by federal funds, the bibliography provides a capsule rundown on the materials. Data is provided on each film as to its length, level of proposed audience, cost of rental, availability and an evaluation of quality. All materials in the booklet were examined "and critically evaluated" by the state's drug commission. They represent the "best available current information which the drug commission can recommend on the subject." Additional copies of the publication are available free of charge to local libraries. Wayne residents may request one from Harriet Kohl, librarian. This publication is the first in the new Library Know Series (Nebraska) planned by the Nebraska Public Library Commission.

City Puts on Its Dressiest Christmas Formal for the Holiday Season

The Dick Lesh home at 505 E. 10th, with its exquisite multi-colored bulbs on trees and the house, was judged the top winner in the Kiwanis sponsored Christmas lighting contest last week and the Lesh family was awarded first prize of a $25 gift certificate.

This elaborate nativity scene, complete with wise men, animals and realistic stable, brought the Christmas spirit to life at the residence of Carl and Joe Nuss, 1120 Sunset Drive. Also featured was a large Christmas tree (center) and gaily decorated shrubbery.

Lights shining on a Christmas scene cast giant silhouettes against the mobile home of the James Vachas on Valley Drive. The unique decoration attracted the eyes of the judges in the Christmas lighting contest and won the $10 gift certificate, third-place prize.

A colonial-type home complements this attractive Christmas decoration at the Budd Bornhoff home on Route 2, the first house east of the Wayne County Club. This is one of the homes receiving top consideration in the Christmas lighting contest last week.

Santa in a Model T? That's a new mode of transportation even for old St. Nick. The clever idea of Santa in the front end of the T and his packages in the back seat was displayed at the John Russell Johnson home, a short distance north of the Wayne city limits on Highway 15. And, the 1926 Ford T is still in running condition.

Rural areas were not eligible for a prize in the Christmas lighting contest but had they been, the Con. Munson farm home, five miles east and two north of Wayne, might have been in the winners' circle. Santa and his motor-driven sleigh appeared to be skimming along the top of the snow, the decorations covering almost the entire frontage of the farm house.

'Fifth Grade Herald' New for Winside

By Joel Knutson

Any resemblance between Mrs. Judy Peters' fifth grade classroom and the city room of a commercial newspaper is purely intentional. In connection with a unit on language, the Winside youngsters planned, wrote and edited their own paper.

Work on "The Fifth Grade Herald" began Monday, Dec. 13, and the first issue hit the streets Wednesday, Dec. 22. The students gathered and wrote news during their language period and in their free time. According to Mrs. Peters, the papers will be distributed to parents, other teachers and friends.

The "Bulldog," or first edition of the paper was handwritten on ditto sheets, and mimeographed. Sheets of standard-size blank paper were divided down the middle to provide two columns, and the first issue ran six pages.

Each student had a part in the paper's production, with some being assigned to committees for work on the various pages, others writing sports, two handling editors' duties, and one drawing cartoons. (The co-editors allegedly sought the position for the privilege of writing an editorial, a situation not uncommon in the commercial newspaper business.)

The paper contained all the features present in commercial newspapers, including the editorial, a book review, beef report, sports, cartoons drawn in fine fashion by David Ritze, social news and a recipe for cherry pie. Each student reporter had a byline.

Young newspaperwoman at work. Staff writer Carla Berg is thoughtful as she proofreads the "Bulldog" edition of "The Fifth Grade Herald." Winside's student-published paper provided practical experience in the complexities of the newspaper business.

come a grandmother-for the first time.

Page two provided an index to features, the cherry pie recipe, a book review and the results of a recent poll, pass and kick contests.

Co-editors Brenda Voss and Lori Jensen, apparently welcoming controversy and unafraid of repercussions, assailed school policy on the use of the trampoline. The editors concluded, "They could at least bring it (the trampoline) over to the new gym so the children could use it in P. E. class."

Page three news featured stories on class activities in reading and spelling, and an account of Winside's recent school Christmas program. Running down column two were three David Ritze cartoons.

Social happenings and features held the spotlight on page four with Della Holmgren outlining wedding plans for the sisters of two fifth-graders. Tommy Koll and Mitchell Pfeiffer noted that the Boston Tea Party occurred 198 years ago on Dec. 16, and summed up the historic rebellion: "Well, people didn't want to pay taxes, so they threw the tea off the ship." Two jokes found their way onto the page, along with features on the class Christmas tree and two prize-winning dioramas. Kurt Moratz reported on the national beef trade.

Sports editors Greg Verba and Tom Anderson, along with reporters Todd Jenkins, Randy Willis and Brent Miller, put together a comprehensive report on a recent fifth-grade football game. The contest, a noon-time affair between the "Oakland Raiders" and the arch rival "Green Bay Packers" ended with the Packers on top, 6-0. Under a banner heading screaming, "Packers Dump Raiders," the sports staff recounted the highlights of the game, complete with box score, season records and passing and running statistics. A "fearless forecast" in column two picked the Packers over the Raiders 28-14 in their next encounter, pointing out that the Packers "have a great pass combination" and "don't blitz often."

"Packers Crash With Raiders" proclaimed the screamer headline on the next page, which provided starting lineups for the game, with height and weight statistics on each player.

Wayne Herald assistant editor Joel Knutson was present as the first issue of the paper rolled off the press. Knutson discussed

Heart Patients Find Activity Is a 'Tonic'

Here is a health tip from the Nebraska Medical Association. Thousands of Nebraskans are living active, satisfying lives, even though they have some degree of heart impairment.

After suffering a heart attack, it is understandable that various aspects of newspaper work with the class, and answered questions about writing and publishing. Knutson asked the fifth-graders what they thought was the most difficult job in newspaper publishing, and the reply was unanimous: "making up the pages so that everything fits." Most professional newspapermen would probably agree.

Mrs. Peters stated that the young members of the fourth estate enjoyed the experience and learned a great deal about communications, but that the pace of activities became hectic as the publishing date drew near. There are no definite plans to publish issues of the paper on a regular basis.

some people are fearful of resuming activity... but when these fears are exaggerated, they actually harm the patient and his heart. They deny him the activity he needs for good health. Getting back to work is a tonic for the person who has been disabled. This applies as much to the heart patient as to the person who has suffered some other illness or injury. He may not be able to resume the complete range of his former activity, but the heart patient should try to reach the safe limit of his functional capacity.

He should follow the advice of his physician, who can evaluate this capacity.

Becoming more active often relieves financial and emotional strains within the heart patient's family.

Resuming some activity is good for the patient's heart and his health.
