Handicap Doesn't Stop Youth

The grandson of Mrs. Harry Swinney, Wayne, has been written up in recent California and Nebraska papers for his skiing prowess, not particularly notable, perhaps, unless you take into consideration the fact that the 20-year old Sacramento college student has been blind since birth.

Every Saturday David Swinney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Swinney of Carmichael, Calif., travels 80 miles into the soaring Sierra to ski. He wears two special pieces of equipment: a crash helmet and a big red sign reading, "Blind Skier."

The youth aims his slats according to directions shouted by a friend: "90 degrees left, 45

by the San Juan Unified School District in Sacramento, took its first blind pupil to the slopes five years ago, and this year about 20 blind persons and that many deaf persons are participating in the program, along with 1,500 sighted youths from the district, which covers high, middle and low-income neighborhoods.

Swinney took his first lesson in 1968, and having mastered the snowplow turn and advancing into the stem turn, he is now trying to sell skiing to other blind students. David's instructor, Joe Hayes, a Sacramento school principal, says David is his best handicapped skier.

Featured will be Dr. Halm Groot, Judith Viorst, Betty Rollin, Vidal Sassoon, Marya Mannes and many contributors whose reputations have been built solely on excellence in their chosen fields.

Big Carl Johnson goes up, (who'd want to try to stop him), for two points against the area coaches. The hefty Husker lineman, who is more at home with football pads than on the basketball court, proudly declared after the game that his seven-point output was "my all-time high." Others in the picture are, from left, "Case" Kassebaum of Randolph, Pat Morell, Don Johnson of Wayne, Ron Dalton of Wayne, Roger Nannen of Wisner-Pilger, Johnson, Keith Wortman and Lyle Nannen of Randolph. The other Huskers obviously were backcourt—to stop a fast break.

Area Coaches Defeat Husker Footballers — in Basketball

The University of Nebraska football players, who didn't need any help from anyone while claiming their second straight national championship, couldn't win in basketball—even with the timer's and scorekeeper's help during a game against area coaches Wednesday night at Rice Gymnasium.

The area coaches pulled off a 76-79 victory over the senior gridderers from NU on an out-court ripper by Lyle Nannen of Randolph just before the gun sounded.

"Somehow" the score had jumped from 72-68 to a 72-all tie on a three-point play by Bob Terrio who hit 122 left.

The coaches went into a stall after Don Johnson of Wayne had hit a two-pointer with 44 seconds left to break the tie—but it didn't do the "locals" a bit of good. The clock was ticking off only about one of 10 seconds in the big minute of play.

The Huskers took advantage of the double-aid on the scoring table and Terrio hit a team-high errant shot with just 14 seconds remaining to lock it up at 76-74.

Women changed being mobbed by the Husker musclemen to become a hero for his own squad by sinking the winning bucket just before the final buzzer. Choking at that stage by the timer would have been just a little too obvious.

The Huskers were not exactly the Harlem Globetrotters, but they did occasionally put in a comedy routine, "berate" the officials, "terrorize" their opponents with their threats, hang on to jerseys and shorts, use a teammate to step on an opposing jumper's toes and block and tackle for their mates on a fast break.

In pre-game warmup, Woody Cox took advantage of Bob Terrio, down on all fours under the basket, to run up his back and dunk the ball.

At other times, the Huskers actually showed a lot of basketball savvy—but they were content mainly to play, and enjoy, the game.

The benefit game, sponsored by the Wayne County Jaycees, cleared around $300 for the Medical Center, counting advance and door ticket sales and concessions. That is in addition to the $400 paid the NU players.

Playing for the Huskers were Bob Terrio, who had 18 points, 14 of them in the second quarter. Jim Anderson, who added another 18; Van Brownson (12), Carl Johnson (7), John Adkins (6), Pat Morell (6), Woody Cox (4) and Keith Wortman (2).

Jerry Tagge, the Huskers' starting quarterback who has accompanied the group on most outings, along with Larry Jacobson, another "usual," did not make the trip.

But the area youngsters didn't seem to mind a bit. They besieged their heroes after the game and the autographing session for over a half-hour.

A number of area coaches proved they are not yet of the "has been" class. Herb McGill, Wayne State College Junior Varsity coach, led a well-balanced attack with 18 points, followed by Bob Hope, Emerson-Hubbard coach, with 10.

Others on the coaches' team were Jim Winch of Wisnido, Don Johnson and Ron Dalton of Wayne, Tim Peterson of Wakefield, Lyle Nannen and "Case" Kassebaum of Randolph, Steve Olson of Pender and Roger Nannen of Wisner-Pilger.

Admiring youngsters seek autographs of the Cornhusker stars. The longest line usually was at the table where Van Brownson, NU's backup to Jerry Tagge at quarterback, was seated. In the bottom photo, John Adkins also received a mild case of writer's cramps after being besieged by the youngsters, teen-agers and even a few adults.

member boasting more lunkers and drawing fewer blanks in the spring than at any other time.

The water is warming up in the spring, making fish more active. Species such as walleye and white bass are on the move to spawning areas in rivers and shallow lakes.

At this time of year the bait fish (the food for big bass, walleye, crappie, and others) are scarce. New batches of fry have yet to appear, and survivors of last year are bigger and more cautious. Since a meal is hard to come by right now, lunkers are particularly eager to take live bait or lures resembling minnows and worms.

While the water is still chilly, a fish's reflexes are slower than normal, so lures should be fished very slowly. In current, deep-running lures are best, and they should be fished just off the bottom over as wide an area as possible. When a fish grabs the offering, his strike might be hardly discernable, so the angler must be alert.

Spring rains sometimes discolor waters, making lures hard for fish to spot. At this time, a wile angler will work on his other senses. A lure with a larger spinner or a vibrating action creates sounds that the fish can hear.

Appealing to the fish's sense of smell can also be productive in murky water. This tactic could include use of live bait, artificial scents, or cut bait. An ingenious angler might also try a combination of the two, a noisy artificial sweetened with strips of cut bait, worms, or scent so that the fish can both hear and smell the offering.

The angler with the right tackle, some perseverance, and a bit of luck should be able to get his 1972 fishing season off to a good start with an early spring outing.

Minor Injury As Station Wagon Rolls

Randall Nelson, 16, of 414 E. Fifth, suffered a minor knee injury when the 1961 model station wagon he was driving rolled onto its side seven miles north and three miles west of Wayne on a county road Sunday at 9:15 p.m. A passenger in the station wagon, Michael Dunklau, 16, of rural Wayne, was not hurt.

Nelson told Doug Rother of the Nebraska State Patrol that he was eastbound in the vehicle, owned by Ray's DX Service, when the light went out. He stopped the station wagon on the edge of the road, but slid off the shoulder when trying to pull forward and the station wagon rolled.

How to Keep Your Dog Healthy and Happy

Your dog gives you his love and trust completely. Showing him that you return his love is the best way to keep him happy. Keeping him healthy is a responsibility, not an emotion. See to his particular health needs just like any other member of the family. For example, his booster shots and annual physicals.

It is often said that distemper occurs only in the young dog. But veterinarians tell us this just isn't true. Distemper can occur at any age, although the young dog is most susceptible. Serious? Very! But only if you neglect arranging for his yearly boosters. So, don't neglect them.

To simplify matters, have his annual physical made at the same time as the yearly boosters. The ears, teeth, eyes, heart and general body condition can be checked. Catching early warning signs here and having them promptly attended to is the wise and loving rule to follow.

Is your dog one of those flopped beauties?

If so, you should be aware that the normal circulation of air through his ear canals is somewhat impaired. This means you should check them occasionally, as you would your child's ears, to keep them clean and dry. Otherwise, the accumulation of dirt and moisture tends to get warm, becoming a potent source of infection.

If your dog has already started shaking his head and scratching his ears, have him examined and treated by your veterinarian. This probably won't happen again if you remember to keep his ears

Many severe head injuries could be prevented if every motorcycle rider wore a crash helmet. By far the most common injuries, however, are to arms and legs. The severity of these might be reduced if riders wore more protective clothing—the heavier the better.

Finally, experienced riders know that a motorcycle is not a toy. The driver must be expert at controlling his machine, wear safety equipment, and know and obey traffic rules.

A puppy should be checked every six to eight weeks. Once matured, have him checked at his annual physical. Remember, your pet's best friend is his veterinarian!

Certainly Lasso on beans eases weather worries.

Some herbicides work well with lots of moisture. Some do nicely in dry weather.

But certainly you can't predict what kind of year it'll be.

So use Lasso. It works well in most any kind of weather. With a little moisture or a lot. Get giant foxtail, fall panicum — lots more grasses. Many broadleaves, too.

And you can tank mix Lasso liquid for special weed control. And get it without incorporation.

That's what you expect from your herbicide.

Something New

A recent, though not exactly "new" addition to the Wilfse Mortuaries is this 1849 horse-drawn, Knightstown hearse, which was purchased a couple of weeks ago from the Munderlow Funeral Home in Pender. It is believed to be the last one of its kind in this part of the state, and, according to Rowan Wilfse, will be restored and kept for display and parade use. Wilfse also indicated he has hopes of getting a pre-World War II hearse (1927 to 1941) to complete the collection which now includes a 1941 Buick four door sedan, the modern vehicle presently in use, and the horse-drawn hearse shown here. Pictured with the hearse is Gary Smith, who manages Wilfse Mortuary in Laurel.

Soil Tests - spreading out on a piece of paper overnight. No heat (above 100 degrees) should be applied. This procedure should always be done in the case of the nitrogen test.

 The NU laboratory also provides a good zinc soil test, Knudsen pointed out. "This is especially important where cuts and fills have been made in leveling, or on very sandy soils," he said. For the zinc test, a surface sample is adequate. Cut and fill areas should be sampled separately from other parts of the field, he stressed.
 If fertilizer has already been applied in a field, the soil test may show it, but in most cases it will not, Knudsen said. The soil test for nitrogen measures only the nitrate portion. In the case of lime, potassium and phosphorus, sampling procedures will not pick up accurate readings unless material is worked into the soil. Lime requires one to three years to react with the soil. The soil test for lime measures the result of the reaction.
 "Although the soil test results as parts per million may not be meaningful to the farmer, the soil test should be, and most important is the fertilizer recommendation for those crops he plans to grow," Knudsen pointed out.
 He urged farmers to see their county Extension agent immediately to obtain mailing cartons and soil and crop information sheets.

Hungry Children Given Help

There are so many groups, agencies and individuals helping needy people that it seems strange there is so much hunger and poverty left in the world. Only when we consider the staggering millions of people do we begin to see the monumental task that even our multiple, man-powered efforts can't cope with.
 It is not difficult to point to places in the globe where thousands are going hungry and living without adequate shelter. There isn't a benevolent nation in the world singly that can take care of them all.
 But some of these people are getting help through various church-affiliated, government-sponsored and private efforts.
 The only trouble is that much of the assistance is stopgap, a meal today, to prolong the hunger of tomorrow.
 What is needed—and there are people working on this, too—are development programs which enable hungry people to gain the know-how and motivation to grow their own food and build their own shelter. The Peace Corps program has tried to do this sort of thing because it is the only long-range answer.

In recent weeks attention has been turned to the millions in India and Pakistan who live in a perpetual state of hunger and misery. The U. S. government has poured billions of dollars into their areas to try to help.
 But the money has disappeared and the hunger remains. The essential problem of mere existence hasn't been solved yet. The people simply do not have the means, the knowledge or the motivation to work their way out of the mire. Until some way is found to solve this situation, every meal furnished by some humanitarian agency is a patch on a running sore. There is no healing medication.
 There is no intention here to demean the helpful efforts. Believe the misery. The subcontinent, Africa, southeast Asia, and Latin America, Thank God, there are people concerned enough to try to help.
 One of those international agencies doing what it can to relieve hunger among children is Compassion Inc. with headquarters in Chicago. It was organized in 1952 by the late Everett Swanson, an evangelist, to seek sponsors for destitute children.

 It has developed into a worldwide child care agency. Compassion figures that it has provided some 25,185,000 meals for hungry children during 1971. This is an estimate, of course, based on three meals a day, 365 days a year for 23,000 youngsters.
 In South Korea, Compassion provides meals for 16,000 children, most of them orphaned and abandoned. The youngsters get the basic foods of their country—rice, fish, vegetables and fruit.
 In Indonesia, Compassion is assisting more than 3,000 children and their widowed mothers. The need here isn't so great as in other parts of the world because bananas and coconuts grow extensively throughout Indonesia the year round. However, hungry children need more than that.
 Compassion also serves children in India, Thailand, Singapore, Afghanistan, Puerto Rico, Jamaica, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, and the Southwest Indian School in Glendale, Arizona.
 The organization actually does more than provide food. It is concerned about the basic needs of children. Provision is made for spiritual, physical and material needs. Some of the children get clothing, shelter, medical assistance and elementary education. And that is good.
 Thousands of individuals, Sunday School classes and civic organizations throughout the U. S. and Canada provide Compassion with the financial support needed to carry on this worldwide operation.
 Anyone interested in learning more about the organization and its work should write to Compassion, 2774 W. Irving Park Rd., Chicago, Ill., 60634.
 Compassion, of course, is only one of a great many such agencies trying to do what they can to relieve human misery. May they all flourish in the coming year in direct proportion to the good they are able to do.

Social Security Questions, Answers

Q—I recently moved and have already notified the Social Security office of my new address for my monthly retirement benefit check. Do I have to notify Medicare?
 A—No. Since the retirement program and Medicare are both administered by the Social Security Administration, only one change-of-address notice is needed.

Certainly Lasso is the two-crop herbicide: Gets grasses (and more) in corn and beans.

You'll find plenty of corn herbicides. Plenty for soybeans, too. But why mess with two, when one'll do?
 Especially when Lasso does such an outstanding job of controlling giant, green and yellow foxtail, fall panicum and other grasses. As well as many broadleaves.

Yet Lasso's gentle to both corn and beans. And after Lasso controls the weeds, it leaves no carryover. Next year's crop won't be affected by this year's Lasso.

So make things easier on yourself, yet tougher for grasses and broadleaves. With Lasso—in both corn and beans.

That's what you expect from your herbicide.

College Adopts Credit By Examination Plan

Wayne State College has adopted a credit-by-examination plan which will allow students and future students to earn college credits for knowledge they have acquired by non-traditional means.

Up to 30 credit-hours—a full school year—may be earned.

Dr. Seymour said the examinations are constructed to measure knowledge gained through out-of-class activities as well as formal college study. They test a person's understanding of basic core elements in courses commonly taught by many colleges.

Students and others interested in taking the examinations should write for information from the College Entrance Examination Board, 990 Grove Street, Evanston, Ill. 60201.

The College-Level Examinations are of two types: general and subject.

General exams cover five broad areas—English composition, humanities, mathematics, natural science and social sciences—history. They can be administered as a battery or individually in any combination.

Subject examinations are basically end-of-course tests developed for widely taught undergraduate courses.

Spring Brings Robins — and Potholes In Roads, Tire Safety Group Warns

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Motorists anxious to get out on the road now that warmer weather is here are reminded that while a robin may be the first sign of spring, the roads you have to drive on are usually the last signs of winter.

Snow, ice, salt and sand take a great toll on streets and highways. Potholes are not only numerous and a driving nuisance, but they are also hazardous.

"Drivers should remember they can do a lot of damage to their cars and especially to their tires when hitting chuck holes in the road," says Ross R. Ormsby, chairman of the Tire Industry Safety Council.

Obviously, a car striking a pothole, curb, or an object in the road can suffer damage not only to the tires and wheel assembly balance, but also to the vehicle's alignment.

Safety specialists say that should a driver notice an extreme wear pattern on the outside edges of his tires, or a vibrating of the car when the brakes are applied, it is advisable he consult his dealer or garage about possible misalignment.

The damage resulting to a tire from sharply hitting holes in the road, curbs and general highway litter is often not visible. It could be internal and unrepairable. The driver might not know anything was wrong until the time he suffers sudden tire disintegration, and that time is always the wrong time.

Heavy rainfall is another highway hazard normally associated with spring driving. It is especially dangerous to those drivers who insist on driving with bald tires. The Council defines a tire as bald if its tread depth is any less than 1/16-inch or less in any two or more adjacent tread grooves. The risk of skidding, which is five to 10 times more likely with average tread depth on wet roads as on dry roads, is doubled with bald tires.

The best advice for the careful motorist is not only to pay attention to where he is driving, but give equal attention to what he is driving on.

"The tires on your car are the most important factor between you and the road," says Ormsby, "and the most important factor in tire safety and mileage is proper inflation."

An underinflated tire causes excessive wear, excessive heat build-up and excessive sidewall flexing. Underinflation decreases tire safety and increases tire costs.

The Council's advice is further confirmed by safety expert, Dr. C. F. Brenner of the U. S. Department of Transportation, who says:

"The force of impact between tires and stones or potholes increases sharply with speed. Modern tires are built to 'take it,' but there is a limit to what rubber and fabric will endure. If you want to avoid cuts, bruises and blowouts, slow down on bad roads and give your tires a chance."

Falls Cause 130 State Deaths Yearly

Here is a health tip from the Nebraska Medical Association. Falls in and around the home are the second most common cause of accidental deaths in Nebraska... second only to highway accidents. Falls in Nebraska homes account for nearly 130 fatal injuries a year.

You are not truly safe in your own home unless you have checked these danger points: Make sure your stairs are well lighted and have sturdy handrails. Use a ladder instead of standing on boxes or chairs if you need help in reaching a high place and make sure the ladder is firmly braced at the foot.

Spilled water, grease or badly waxed floors have broken a lot of necks. Loose rugs, scattered toys and trailing extension cords are equally serious threats.

Most of these hazards can be quickly eliminated if you will take a few minutes to accident-proof your home.

Faculty Addition At Wayne State

Dr. Morris Anderson has been appointed head of secondary education at Wayne State College, President W. A. Brandenburg said Friday.

Dr. Anderson joined the Wayne faculty in 1965 and has been director of student teaching the past five years. He will retain this position.
