Taxpayers Forum Questions Candidates for City Council

The newly-formed Taxpayers Forum, in their first action as a group, invited all candidates for the Wayne City Council to express their feelings at a meeting at the Woman's Club Room at the City Auditorium Monday night. Candidates were given a maximum 15 minutes to speak on any or all of a set of nine issues presented by the Taxpayers Forum. Questions from the floor were allowed only if the candidates consented, that questioning to which the candidates were unanimously in favor. Five of the seven Council candidates took the podium—Jim Thomas, Vernon Russell, John Struve, Frank Prather and Dick Banister. Ivan Beeks and Darrel Fuebberth were unable to present. Conducting the meeting to hear the candidates' opinions on different issues was Wes Fluenger, the group's temporary chairman, assisted by John Valok. Fluenger pointed out the objectives of the Taxpayers Forum as evaluation of tax structure of local government bodies, analysis and study of the local budget and evaluation of the use of tax dollars and benefits derived. "Action Group" "We will be an action group—definitely an action group, Pfluenger said, adding "without action we will not achieve our purpose. Our purpose is to promote efficiency, economy and wise expenditure of the tax dollar." Questions posed to the candidates by the Taxpayers Forum were: (1) Why are you running for City Council? (2) Do you feel as a councilman, it would be your duty to seek out and vote your constituents' wishes, or do you feel that the people, by electing you, have entrusted their interests to your best judgment? (3) Is there any area of city spending in which you feel we are not receiving just value? (4) Is there any area of city services which you feel are lacking? (5) Do you feel restricted parking should be implemented impartially throughout the city; or just in those areas the City Council and Police Department deem necessary? (6) Do you feel our zoning regulations are being interpreted and enforced correctly by the City Council and are they having a positive effect on Wayne development? (7) Do you feel the present structure of city government is working well, or would you advocate changes? (8) Do you feel the recent enforcement of city building codes are being handled fairly and are working toward the betterment of the community? (9) How do you feel about liquor by the drink in Wayne. City Sales Tax Dick Banister, one of the two candidates in the Third Ward, told the group that he is in favor of a half-cent city sales tax to remove part of the tax load from the property owner. He also felt that Wayne should have a resident, full-time engineer and that the city should handle the garbage collection. In other areas, Banister said the building codes would work toward the betterment of the community "unless they become too encompassing," said that transportation was the big reason some industries "have looked and then gone away," and that the present hospital facilities could be converted into a building to house the police department, city clerk and city engineer. Restricted Parking His opponent in the Third Ward, Frank Prather, said one of his reasons for running for the council is a result of "run-ins" with the city governing body. In the past, especially in the matter of restricted parking. "Should streets be garages?" was asked of him from the audience. Prather answered, "No. But the traffic problem is not overnight, when parking is prohibited in most areas—but in the See TAXPAYERS, page 6

Community Dental Health Program Is Objective of Golden Rod Hills Project

A community children's dental health program in Wayne County is well on the way to becoming a reality. Each community in the county is willing to get involved. "Our aim," said Mrs. Duane Thies, Golden Rod Hills Community Action Council organizer, "is to help set up a dental health program in Wayne County that will eventually be turned over to parents in the individual communities." The purpose of the program, she said, is to help parents who cannot afford dental care for their children. Mrs. Thies went on to say that the program is available to those parents whose income is too high for welfare payments but whose income is not high enough to afford dental care for their children. "The people in this category," she said, "we refer to as the gray area." Presently a survey is being conducted in Wayne and Wisner to determine the need for such a program. Already 106 students participated in the survey, including children from St. Mary's Catholic school, District No. 23 and Winside, kindergarten through fourth grades. It is hoped, she said, that by May 1 the results of the survey will be known. On April 14, the group aims to complete the survey after interviews at two rural schools, Hoskins and the fifth and sixth grades at Winside. "We want this program to be a community thing," said Mrs. Patricia Dahl of Golden Rod Hills Community Action Council, "for those who wish to donate their time and get involved." Mrs. Dahl also pointed out that the aim of the group is to continue the program each year. So far three local dentists, who have been notified, agreed to donate a certain part of their time each month. According to Mrs. Thies, the dentists will be reimbursed for the cost of the materials. In which case, she said, the program, once it is established, will pay part or all of the dental costs. Wayne County Jaycee President Bill Workman said that the Jaycees are donating money to the project to make it a full time program. "In the future, we hope to have a Jaycee on the board of directors." Winside High School Principal Ronald Kramer pointed out that this type of program where the parents will gradually assume responsibility of the program is an "incentive type of thing." "Parents will have a chance to show self pride." The final plans for the program are in the planning stages said Mrs. Thies, and hopefully there will be enough people interested in developing the program. Attending the Tuesday meeting at Council Hall on the Wayne State campus were Workman; Professors Allen O'Donnell and Jim Evans, Wayne State College; the Reverend Paul Begley, St. Mary's church; Principal Kramer; Mrs. Thies; Mrs. Dahl; Mrs. Eldon Bull, director Wayne senior citizens; and Mart Strang, Hilary L. Lassek, Don Halston and Mrs. Myron Schmitt, all of the Golden Rod Hills Community Action Council.

Former Soviet Labor Camp Prisoner To Speak at Baptist Church Tuesday

John Noble, who spent 9 1/2 years as a prisoner in the Soviet slave labor camps in Siberia, will speak on his capture, enslavement and eventual release Tuesday evening at 8 p.m. at the First Baptist Church in Wayne, Fourth and Main. Noble, in 1954, was able to get a postcard smuggled to his parents in Detroit. After many attempts by the U.S. State Department, the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower personally intervened and exerted his full presidential powers which resulted in Noble's ultimate release. Since returning to America as a free man in 1955, Noble has traveled thousands of miles to keep his promise to those still in slavery about the ordeals and torture inflicted on Soviet slave labor camp prisoners. Noble has authored two books, "I Was a Slave in Russia," and "I Found God in Soviet Russia." He has appeared on national radio and television programs, has testified before various Congressional committees and has been the subject of features by the nation's press and leading publications.

Laurel Votes Tuesday for 2nd Class City Government

In their election Tuesday, Laurel voters decided, 82 to 55, to accept a second class city form of government. Towns with a population of 800 or over have the choice of retaining a village type of governing body or switching to that of a second class city. According to L. J. Mallatt, city administrator, approximately 34 per cent of the eligible voters turned out to make the decision. Wards will be set up in the near future and four city council members and a mayor will be chosen in the November election. According to John Young, chairman of the Dixon Board of Trustees, 38 of the 72 registered voters in Dixon cast their votes Tuesday, resulting in Leo Garvin and Bob Dempster being chosen for the Board of Trustees and Marvin K. Nelson being named board member and village clerk. All were running for four-year terms. Incumbents Dempster and Nelson received 34 and 33 votes respectively, and Garvin, who had been named to fill the unexpired term of J. C. McCaw about six months ago, received 28 votes. Concord Village Clerk Norman Anderson reported that incumbents Fritz Rieth, with 38 votes; Jack Erwin with 41, and

Councilmen Study Three Types of Airport Hangers

The future of the Wayne Airport building a hangar is still up in the air, according to Harvey Brasch, city council member. Brasch, who is the committee head for the airport project, said that he and council members Pat Gross and Darrel Fuebberth, who make up the committee, hope to have further information by the next meeting Tuesday, April 11. The cost of the project, Councilman Gross said, is about $39,000, of which the state would pay $12,000. "We figured the cost of the new hangar at $6,500 per plane or six planes at $39,000." Gross pointed out that the state will loan $2,000 per plane with a maximum of $12,000 at no interest. Presently the committee is looking into three different types of hangers including a square type, T and revolving hangers. "We are more interested in the revolving type," Gross said, "but the cost and whether it meets state specifications will determine which hangar the city will get." Bids for the project have not been released, according to assistant city engineer Duane Upton, in charge of drawing the plans. Upton said that the Nebraska Department of Aeronautics would have to approve the plans of the three types of hangers before a definite date could be set for the release of bids. Teachers Will Meet Today in Courtroom The quarterly Wayne County Rural Teachers Association meeting is set for this afternoon at the Wayne County Courtroom. A regular business session is scheduled.

Mrs. Gunter, nee Marilyn Kay Velk, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Velk, Osmond. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vert Gunter, Hoskins. The 9 p.m. ceremony, held at Mt. Olive Lutheran Church, Norfolk, was attended by members of the immediate family, including the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John Head and Brian, Miami, Okla. The day was also important to Brian who marked his second birthday. The Rev. LeRoy Paul officiated at the double ring rites. The bride chose a yellow, street-length dress with white accessories, and carried a colonial bouquet of white and yellow daisies and carnations. The bridegroom was attired in navy blue sport coat and trousers and yellow shirt. Attending the couple were Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Anderson. The bride is a 1970 graduate of Osmond High School. The bridegroom, a 1970 graduate of Norfolk High School, is employed at Staudenmaier Sheet Metal, Norfolk. # Blue Devils' Track Debut At Plainview on Saturday

Coach Al Hansen took a look at this year's high school track roster and knew the 1972 Wayne track season would be in the hands of the freshmen and sophomores. "We have eight sophomores and freshmen coming out this year," Coach Hansen explained, "which will make up 16 of the 25 boys on the team."

The Blue Devils' thirteens will have two returning lettermen to help lead the team from their last-place finish in 1971 in the Husker Conference.

Senior Dale Tomrdle and Junior Dan Hansen will provide some experience in the long and triple jump as well as the 440 and 880-yard runs.

Coach Hansen pointed out that although the team lacks some experience, members have a good mental spirit.

Among some of the players Coach Hansen feels will help

Dan Hansen

lead the team are Juniors Brad Pflueger and Larry Shupe.

"Pflueger looks pretty good in the sprints and Shupe could be our strong man in discus and shot put."

Coach Hansen added that Shupe will also run in the hurdles as well as the long jump.

As yet Coach Hansen feels that it is too early in the season to predict which teams will be the conference leaders.

"Right now I'd say that Wisner and Bloomfield will be strong contenders but I'll have to wait until later in the season to find out."

The first meet of the season is April 8 when the Blue Devils will travel to Plainview for the Plainview Invitational.

Schedule
April 8—Plainview Invitational; April 11—Stanton Invitational; April 19—Randolph Invitational; April 28—Wisner Invitational; May 1—Dual at Stanton; May 5—Husker Conference at Wisner; May 8—Husker Conference Jr. High Meet (undecided); May 11—Districts at Randolph; May 18-19—State meet at Omaha Burke.

In Nebraska, it is unlawful to possess any wild game bird or small game animal at any time except during the open season and for 90 days thereafter.

All-American Mention-Earned By WSC Star

Dennis Siefkes, Wayne State's ace basketball center, has another honor, NAIA All-American honorable mention, to go with earlier all-star citations in Nebraska.

The 6-7 junior from Somers, Ia., is among five Nebraska collegians accorded honorable mention. Siefkes led all scorers in Nebraska colleges and also led in field goal percentage. He hit 55.3 per cent and averaged 26 points a game while setting new Wayne scoring records, 649 points for the season and 47 in a single game.

Area Schools Cancel Sports Competition

Athletic competition between Allen and Randolph High Schools will be discontinued beginning with the fall term.

The two schools reportedly agreed that the difference in enrollment had become too great to be of benefit to either school.

Dandy Northern

Leslie Doescher, 521 E. Seventh, went fishing at Grove Lake near Royal Sunday for some trout. After he baited his line with salmon eggs, Doescher reeled in a 13-pound-plus Northern. "They say that Nebraska is No. 1," he said, "I guess this proves it."

Fish Egg Gathering Time

LINCOLN—One phase of the Game and Parks Commission's annual fish-egg collection has been successfully completed in the Sand Hills, and another is just getting under way along the North Platte River above Lake McConaughy.

The Sand Hills operation resulted in about 25 million northern pike eggs. Another eight million walleye eggs are expected to be taken above Big Mac this week.

The northern eggs were taken from adult spawners netted at Pelican Lake on the Valentine National Wildlife Refuge. The

Cannon-propelled Nets Are Used To Band Geese

LINCOLN—Game and Parks Commission field personnel have trapped and banded 556 white-fronted geese in Nebraska during the spring migration, the most successful banding effort in the 16 years that the project has been under way.

All but six of the birds were captured in the Elm Creek-Lexington area, and all were taken in nets propelled over the birds from special cannons.

Before the 556 taken this year, the Commission's best spring effort resulted in 340 birds.

The white-front trapping is done in cooperation with federal waterfowl biologists of the U.S. Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, Nebraska, a staging ground during spring migration, is one of the few places where whitefronts can be effectively trapped for banding.

Trapping of whitefronts on their wintering grounds has proven ineffective, and only a few can be taken on breeding and nesting areas. Returns of banded birds give biologists data on the whitefront's mortality rate, survival, reproduction, migration routes, and wintering grounds.

Wayne State Baseball Team Drops Six Opening Games, Then Win Six a Row

A pair of wins over Yankton Tuesday lifted Wayne State's victory string to six for a 6-6 record in the young season.

The Wildcats downed Yankton 8-0, on Greg Kamp's three-hit pitching in the opener, plus heavy hitting which saw Wayne bats produce a two-run homer by Steve Heying and doubles by Kamp and Jack Shupe. Four Yankton errors gave the Cats considerable help.

Wayne jumped on the Greyhounds in the nightcap with four first-inning runs, adding more counts in both second and third innings, then plied on four more in the fourth. Starter Charlie Solano gained the win though needing relief from Ron Nelson in the sixth. Yankton collected six hits but committed three errors while the Cats played errorless ball. Shupe and Bob Comono-ll both banged doubles for Wayne.

Kamp's win upped his record to 2-1 in the 10-game southern trip while Solano moved to 1-1. Both hurlers lost the Wildcat opening games Mar. 28 to Missouri Western at St. Joseph, Mo., 2-1 and 3-0.

The next day the Wildcats dropped 4-0 and 13-2 decisions to a strong Emporia State nine - Ron Nelson and Gary Jamieson charged with the losses. Coach Darrell Lehms said the second-game beating was Wayne's only poor performance on the tour.

Central Oklahoma State at Edmond planned two more losses on the Cats Thursday, 7-5 and 8-3, with freshman hurlers Steve Brecher and Mark Prather the losers. Heying, battling clean-up in the opener, smashed a grand-slam in what was a different story Friday when Wayne beat Central Oklahoma, 6-2 and 4-3, starting the win skein which is still going. Kamp, after only two days of rest, went the route in an eight-inning grid and contributed a two-run homer to the cause. Four runs in the top of the eighth provided the win.

Shortstop John Ege turned into a pitching hero when he beat the Oklahomans on five innings of nightcap relief. Two runs in the top of the sixth gave Ege the decision.

Then on Saturday against Kansas Wesleyan, Ege turned in another relief job for his second victory, 9-8.

With the score knotted at 8-8 after seven innings, Ege took over after one out in the eighth bases loaded and blanked Central through the ninth. His mates produced the winning run in the top of the ninth.

In the opener, Ron Nelson had blanked Wesleyan, 9-0. First baseman Marty Goling poked three hits in both games at Salina and had a team-leading .429 average before the Yankton pair.

Largest to Cross Atlantic

The "Universe Japan" is the largest ship ever to cross the Atlantic, and one of the largest ships in the world. It is shown on the last leg of its first transatlantic voyage in the Strait of Canso near Point Tupper, Nova Scotia, its destination.

The dock at Point Tupper is the first and only one in the Western Hemisphere built to handle the world's largest tankers.

The ship, under charter to Gulf Oil Corporation, is 1,133 feet long. Standing on end, it would be almost as tall as the Empire State Building. Its cargo of more than two and one quarter million barrels of crude oil is enough fuel to supply a city as large as Washington, D. C. with electricity for three months. A conventional tanker would have to make five transatlantic crossings to transport the same amount of fuel.

Advanced technology is employed to assure safe landings in the "Universe Japan." The ship is equipped with sophisticated space age navigational instrumentation.

The Canadian Government installed a million and a half dollar all-weather system of buoys, range lights and electronic guidance devices to assist mammoth tankers entering and leaving the Strait.

Be Alert for Hearing Loss Symptoms

If "Beg pardon," has become one of the most frequently used phrases in your conversations, you may be suffering from an undetected hearing loss.

Since most hearing losses appear gradually, the victim often is not aware of his problem until it has become a handicapping loss. However, there are certain danger signs that can be an indication that you may have a hearing loss. These include:

1. Frequently saying, "Beg pardon," "What?" or "Huh?"
2. A belief that most people mumble when they talk.
3. Frequently cupping your hand behind your ear.
4. Hearing "better" in noisy places than in relatively quiet locations.
5. Having to press the telephone receiver tight against your ear.

Wayne Teenager Files

To Return from Hike
Wayne Police filed a missing person report Monday for Sam Hepburn, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hepburn of 209 Lincoln.

The youth left home Saturday morning, saying that he was going on a hike. He was wearing blue jeans and boots and carrying a back pack and bedroll.

Sam reportedly was given a ride by a family acquaintance to the Milford interchange on Interstate 80 and has not been seen since.

Last-minute Filers of Income Tax Make Errors Most Often, IRS Finds

OMAHA—Last minute income tax filers should double check their returns, since those filed just before the deadline are much more likely to contain errors, Richard P. Vinal, Internal Revenue Service district director for Nebraska, advises.

Errors on returns delay processing and any refund that may be due.

Math errors are the most common, Vinal said. Missing information also accounts for many of the errors, he said. This type of error could be a return received without a required signature, Social Security number or W-2 statement.

Taxpayers who use the tax form they received in the mail can avoid Social Security number problems, Vinal said. These forms have pre-addressed labels that show the taxpayer's name, Social Security number and address just as they appear in IRS files.

The label can be lifted off the form it came on and placed on the Form 1040 that you file.

Vinal advised taxpayers who have someone help them with their return to be sure their pre-addressed label is on the form they file.

Wakefield Teens Take Home Honors

Jack Slevers, son of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Slevers, rural Wakefield, was named senior division winner in the showmanship class at the York County Progress Show held Saturday at York, and received a halter for the honor. Jack's sister, Jacque, was also chosen to compete in the senior division showmanship class, and in addition, received plaques for Champion Hereford Breeding Heifer and Champion Hereford Steer.

The teenagers showed one breeding heifer and four steers. A total of 114 calves were shown at the Saturday competition.

The Slevers teenagers also plan to attend the Arlington Progress Show this month and the Nebraska Junior Hereford Association Progress Show at Broken Bow in May.

daytime hours."

Prather also cited the need of more citizen consideration from the council in matters such as the cutting of trees.

Asked if he thought this type group was beneficial to the community he answered with an emphatic "Definitely—if the group is active."

'Protection'

Vernon Russell, unopposed in the First Ward, said he was a candidate because "I didn't want to see a councilman appointed."

He was asked if he thought persons in Wayne selling liquor by the drink should be "protected" by allowing only a certain number of those places to be licensed. Russell answered this by saying "only so many businesses can make a living by selling drinks," agreeing that the number should be limited.

The same question came back with "how about service stations." Russell answered that stations reflect the industrial growth of the city.

On restricted parking, he said that most large cities have no prohibited overnight parking in the residential areas and "I don't know why it is necessary here."

'Public Debt'

John Struve, Fourth Ward candidate, said his reason for being a candidate is that "everyone owes some public debt" and added "I didn't like some of the things being done by the council."

His opinion was that a candidate should take a "sampling" in his ward to get feelings on important issues, believes that services could be more efficient with a chain-of-command structure, that uniformity was needed on parking regulations and that there have been "too many reversals of the planning commission's wishes."

Struve said that he had no solutions for bringing in industry but that new businesses would help in at least three areas—reduction of the individual's tax load, provide a job market and aid the economy.

Low Rates

Jim Thomas, now serving as an appointee on the council and Struve's opponent for the Fourth Ward seat, said "It's too bad a Taxpayers Forum wasn't formed 10 years ago as a 'watchdog' for taxes."

Thomas pointed out that Wayne's electric rate is the sixth lowest in Nebraska and the sewage rate is lower for one quarter of a year than some cities are assessing monthly.

He expressed his opinion that he would like to see the engineer paid a monthly or yearly salary, rather than on a percentage basis.

In the area of zoning, he said that he was not in favor of spot zoning throughout the city but the area now in question, along Seventh Street, "should lengthen and strengthen Main Street instead of sending business outside the city limits."

On parking restrictions he said disgression should be used in unusual cases before all violators are ticketed.

Interested taxpayers have been invited to attend the April 12 meeting of the Taxpayers Forum, at 8 p.m., in the Woman's Club room, at the City Auditorium.

Medical Center Pledge Service Group Confers

The Pledge Service Committee of the Medical Center Building Program met Tuesday noon at Hotel Morrison to discuss the direction to be taken on delinquent pledges for the new hospital and those pledges involving persons leaving the Wayne area.

Pledge Service Committee Chairman Kenneth Olds said "this committee is not a collection agency, but is designed to work with those persons who fall behind on their pledges and to try to persuade those leaving the area to keep up their pledges."

The point was brought up that the possible loss of pledge revenue should be offset by newcomers to the Wayne area.

Committee members are Donald Merriman, Lyle Seymour, Cal Ward, Dr. Wayne Wessel, Walter Moller and Freeman Decker.

Presbyterian Church, Wayne. The Rev. Oliver Proett officiated. Organ selections were played by Mrs. Albert Carlson.

He was preceded in death by his son, Henry. Survivors include his widow, Stella; daughters, Dorothy Hanks of Wichita, Kan., and Mary Marx of Yorba Linda, Calif.; two sons, Robert D. of Gardena, Calif., and Arthur of Ralston; four sisters, Fannie Rogers of Hebronville, Tex., Bertha Cooper of Chicago, Julia Hay of Renton, Wash., and Edith Gulliver of Port Orchard, Wash., 17 grandchildren and 25 great-grandchildren.

The family asks that memorials be given to the Presbyterian Church and the Wayne State Foundation Scholarship Fund.

Civil Defense —

the Nebraska Civil Defense Agency and the Office of Civil Defense, Region VI, Denver, will feature a four-hour long major natural disaster scenario, accompanied by slide projections. The program is designed to illustrate the numerous federal, state, local and private agencies which can be called upon to assist during, immediately after and in long-range recovery from a major tornado-flood disaster.

In succeeding sessions, participants will be given latest guidance on prior planning for actions in natural disasters, on recovery actions, and gaining assistance from appropriate federal, state and local agencies.

Ideal Training Areas

Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe has proposed a program that would permit the federal highway trust fund to be used for urban public transportation or highways.

Just for openers, he proposes a mere $1,000,000,000 for the first year. The amount gets out of the petty cash class in his second-year plan, jumping almost double to $1.85 billion—and that, folks, is one billion and eighty-five million dollars.

"This recommendation is as critical to the needs of the American public as any recommendation sent to Congress since I became secretary of transportation," Volpe pleads, adding: "If enacted by the Congress, it will provide us with the means for meeting the pressing problem of urban transportation."

Enough to meet the problem? We should think so. It should even leave a little dab left over to do at least some patchwork on the Wayne-to-Laurel obstacle course. With the crumpled-up areas, soft spots and chuckholes on Highway 15 north of Wayne we think such a skilled driver as Mario Andretti would find it an impossibility to miss 'em all.

But even out of the worst of things can evolve some good.

We've had a national championship football team at the University of Nebraska for two years running—right? Partial credit was in the slippery running of some of the Husker backs—right?

You getting the idea? Why not open up the NU spring training camp right here in Wayne and use the Highway 15 span for some running exercises? If the 1973 ball carriers can dodge all those holes running at full speed there's not a defensive back in the country who can lay a hand on them.

Volpe, by trying to capture all of the highway funds for the urban areas, may have unknowingly made a contribution towards Nebraska's third national crown. Which should earn him a berth in the Hall of Chuckholes.

No Inventory?

The average property owner can recite from memory the legal description—block number and lot numbers, the whole bit—of the location of the property on which his house is located.

But the administrator for at least the second biggest property-owner in the state of Nebraska apparently does not even have an inventory that would identify land holdings by location or the type of buildings in his client's possession. The "biggie" of land and property holdings is the United States Federal Government.

The federal government has a $257 million investment in land and buildings in the state of Nebraska alone, $62 million of which is estimated to be in 721,000 acres of land and $195 million in the 3,251 federally-owned buildings.

We're going to have to assume that most of the building inventory is in the new post offices that have been built in many cities and towns in the past decade.

The General Services Administration, the government's housekeeping agency, either has no inventory on that property or simply would not disclose the location of its holdings or type of buildings under its direction when the information was requested recently by the news media.

Surely the GSA's bookkeeping is not all that bad.

Average County Family Income Was $6,774, 1970 Census Shows

Average family income was $6,774 in Wayne County in 1969, compared with $8,564 for the state, according to a report on the 1970 census by the Bureau of the Census, U. S. Department of Commerce. Per capita income for the county amounted to $2,192, the report shows.

The 1970 census counted 10,400 residents in the county; 12 per cent were foreign born and 14.8 per cent native born with one or both parents of foreign birth.

Among the county's 9,787 inhabitants age five and over in 1970, 1,412 were living in a different county within the state in 1965, and 856 in a different state.

In the population age 16 and over, 70.5 per cent of the men and 33.5 per cent of the women were in the labor force.

Among the employed, 37.9 per cent were holding white collar jobs, and 24 per cent were government workers.

About 34.2 per cent of the married women with husband present were in the labor force, and 27.5 per cent of these wives had children under six.

There were 4,291 persons three to 34 years old enrolled in school. In the 25-and-older population, 48.6 per cent of the men and 59.8 per cent of the women were high school graduates.

Copies of the report, "General Social and Economic Characteristics, Nebraska," FC (1)-29C, are available for $2 each from the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., 20402, or from U. S. Department of Commerce field offices located in major cities.

Car Can Be Nearly Perfect — What About Driver?

This is the second of a two-part series on possible solutions to the high loss of lives among the young drivers. One of those solutions proposed by a nationally-known insurance company is to make driver-training programs more relevant and in this second part of the series tells how it proposed to do it.

"We have been able to recognize problems and suggest solutions as a result of a long and proud history of leadership in automotive safety research and development."

"We were instrumental in the development of seat belts and later built two survival cars to show the world the way to safer automobiles. Recently we developed a unique two-stage car bumper system."

"So much for the car, but what of the driver?"

"First, we know that kinds of driving situations continually result in automobile accidents."

"So, let's start by asking a few questions."

"What do you do when you are traveling along the road at 60 miles an hour and experience a blowout? You can't stop to reason it out then. You don't have time. You have to do the right thing right away—almost automatically."

"What if you are driving around a curve on a two-lane undivided highway and you suddenly see a car pulling out of a hidden driveway in front of you? What if there is a car in the oncoming lane? And then what if it's raining and to avoid the slippery accelerating car you start to skid?"

"What happens if you are driving along safely minding your own business and an oncoming car swerves over into your lane? Or what if you suddenly lose steering or brake control? What if the windshield wipers stop or the lights go out? What if the accelerator gets stuck?"

"Yes, what if?"

"Your worst enemy in a crisis can easily be yourself. If you panic, you can talk about emergency situations and what to do. You can simulate these situations on film but there is no replacement for the real experience. That is exactly what is needed in high school driver education today—we need more of the real thing. We wouldn't suggest it if we thought it wasn't possible to include this kind of training in high school programs. We know it is possible.

"When novice drivers are learning how to handle emergency situations, they will see how important it is to keep the situation from developing in the first place. For example, when young people are introduced to slippery turns, some of them at least, will decide to drive in the manner necessary to prevent a skidding emergency."

"We are launching a major campaign to lead the way. We are immediately instituting a multi-phase driver education program which will aid high school programs in three distinct ways. First a permanent research driver education program to discover better ways of teaching avoidance and control of emergencies will be conducted at our Hopkinton, Miss., Research Center. We will do all we can to make it available to high school driver educators. Second, we will take a similar but mobile program throughout the country each year to share with driver educators and public administrators what we have learned. Third, we will make available brochures describing how driver educators can establish relevant programs."

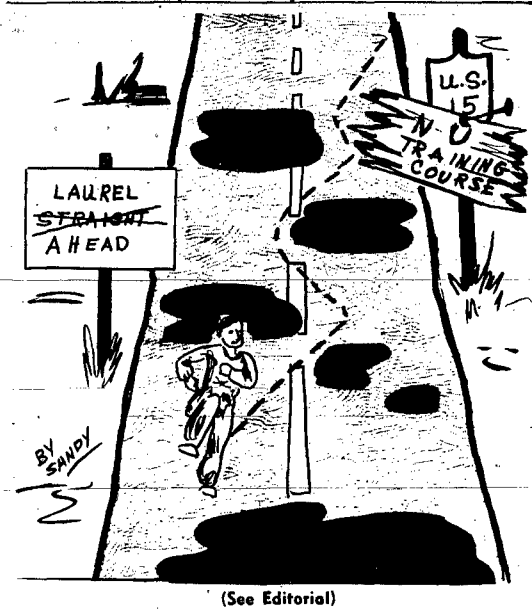

"In the last several years our research resulted in the development of a skid school program. It was first conducted at Hopkinton and now has been taken across the country. Our success with it and the plans we have drawn for others has resulted in it becoming a part of driver training programs in many parts of the country. It is relevant and makes us feel that many similar-type true-to-life programs can be developed."

"The proposed multi-phase program will center around an emergency driving school. One part of the program is emergency reaction training, which will be taught on a variety of specially-arranged courses on a driving range. Various courses will be used to test different maneuvers which are necessary in emergencies. Some of the standard courses will emphasize evasive moves so necessary on the highway today, controlled braking, off-road recovery and blow-outs on curves. Virtually any configuration emphasizing an emergency can be simulated. On the driving range, the student goes over and over a single maneuver until he is capable of control. For instance, a student who loses control on a simulated blowout on a curve does it until he or she gets it right. If the same situation ever occurs on the highway, the chances of survival are greatly enhanced.

"Emergency reaction training can provide practice in almost any kind of emergency driving situation. For example, part of the program should deal with skid control. It is estimated that skidding is a major contributing factor in one of every four fatal accidents. The course will teach students how to recognize the six types of skids which can occur and the best ways to avoid or control them. Again, the accent is on real experience and the students actually experience the various skids and practice them until they are capable of control. Where it is impractical or dangerous to conduct maneuvers on the driving range a classroom Decision Driving program is a possibility. The Liberty Mutual Decision Driving Course is a multi-media presentation which teaches participants how to make the right decisions on the highway. A driver has to make an average of eight decisions per mile and there is little or no room for error or delay."

"We do not pretend to be the originators of emergency driving schools. We are the first to demonstrate how high schools throughout the country can and should develop their own emergency driv-

Exon's Pace on Vetos May Set a New Record

LINCOLN—A couple of years ago, when he was candidate J. J. Exon, Nebraska's present governor often told campaign audiences he would "veto, veto, veto" to keep the Legislature in line if he considered it necessary.

This year, Exon apparently found it necessary. His vetoes flowed into the legislative chambers at what may be an unprecedented pace.

Last week, just before the lawmakers took a seven-day recess in advance of the closing day of the 1972 session, there were three override attempts the same day.

The reason for the recess prior to the 60th and last day of the session was to make sure any vetoes the governor might decide to submit on bills passed during the 58th and 59th legislative days would be delivered before final adjournment.

A governor has five calendar days (not counting Sundays) to decide what he wants to do with a measure passed by the Legislature.

One of the bills passed on the 59th working day appeared to have veto possibilities, although Exon said he wasn't going to announce his plans immediately.

The measure increases the food tax credit by $3 a head for all Nebraskans and the governor said the only reason the provision was adopted was to "thwart the efforts of the Democratic party in circulating petitions for the removal of the sales tax on food."

Petition Campaign

Exon and his party are conducting the petition campaign to place on the No-vetter ballot the issue of exempting food from the tax at the grocery stores.

The Legislature sent to his desk a bill which would allow a $10 credit—instead of the previous $7—on state income taxes as a refund for the sales taxes paid on groceries.

The senator responsible for that provision was Jerome Warner of Waverly, a lawmaker Exon had faced in a bitter veto battle last week over state school aid.

Exon turned out to be the winner as the legislators split as nearly down the middle as a 49-member body can. The count was 25-24, but Warner needed 30 votes to overcome the governor's veto.

His school aid bill, LB 1377, had attracted 34 "aye" ballots the week before when it was passed. In the days that followed, the governor and the senator waged verbal war through the news columns and then face-to-face in a publicized conference.

Warner maintained throughout that the criticisms the governor was making of the effort to increase the present $35 million in state school aid by another $23 million were either misleading or untrue.

'Raid on Treasury'

Exon, however, didn't change his mind about his claims that LB 1377 was "the greatest raid on the state treasury ever envisioned."

In his veto message, Exon said his administration wanted to "wash its hands of this bill."

Warner, after the veto was sustained, said he wouldn't "wash his hands of the problem of soaring property taxes—nor did the majority of the Legislature."

The Waverly lawmaker said the philosophy of LB 1377 was to transfer the bulk of the financing burden of public schools from local property taxes to the sales and income taxes.

He consistently argued—despite claims by Exon and some other senators—that the measure provided the necessary machinery to guarantee property tax relief for most Nebraskans.

Among the nine senators who abandoned the bill on the override question after supporting its passage were several who said doubts about the effectiveness of the property tax relief guarantees caused their switch.

Others said flatly they couldn't stick with a bill which required the state to shell out another $125 million.

They agreed with Exon that it was a spending bill, Warner claimed it didn't shift in revenue source. He said school districts would, for the first time, be tightly controlled on how much money they could raise locally as well as how much they could spend.

Victory Statement

But a statement issued by the governor's office after the victory on the veto said there had been a triumph over the "spenders and the taxpayers."

The school aid win was the second of the day for the governor. The lawmakers also sustained a veto of Scott's bill. Terry Carpenter's bill to expand the state militia and give the National Guard a role in the fight against drugs.

But the governor's day wasn't all-victorious. Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers got ing schools to make their programs more relevant.

"Experience. That's the answer. We want everyone to get involved—students, teachers, school administrators, the media and, most of all, the public. This is the direction in which high school driver education (and all driver education or re-education) should go in the future."

To the Editor:

The State of Nebraska has lost one of its finest citizens. The community of Wayne must have lost one of its most dedicated and public spirited servants.

I have personally lost one of my very best friends. In Al Bahe, we had a person who never refused to do anything asked of him; never refused any task needed to be performed for the benefit of his town, his community, county fairs, the State Fair, and his friends. He did all of this with good humor and made every one about him feel cheerful and gay as he worked among them.

He was always willing to be the recipient of good natured teasing; always gave the necessary ingredients needed to release the tension of public gatherings and meetings yet, performing his tasks better than anyone else knew how.

Al finally gave too much that he gave his whole heart. He did this with malice toward none and I know you could find no one who could feel any malice toward him.

In consolation of our sorrows and feeling of great loss, I believe Al wanted it this way and enjoyed every minute of public service and would not have changed any of it.

I know my life has been much fuller and greatly benefited for having known and been associated with a very great friend and fellow worker—Mr. Al Bahe.

I sign this with much sympathy and respect.

Chris M. Miller, Fellow Nebraska State Fair Board Member and friend

Wayne County's Share of Taxes Expected to Be Near $4 Million

(Special to The Herald)—How much money will pour out of Wayne County, bound for Washington, when April 17, which is tax day this year, rolls around?

Will local residents be taxed for more than they paid last year, when their payment of personal taxes, including what they contributed through withholding, amounted to approximately $3,834,000?

That was the total turned in, as estimated from statewide collections announced by the Treasury Department, and from an unofficial breakdown of the figures, based upon local earnings.

They show that personal income taxes collected throughout the state of Nebraska came to $69,000,000 and that residents of Wayne County produced some .60 per cent of the total.

Although the nation was in a period of recession during most of 1971, with many people partially or wholly unemployed, the 95 per cent or so of the working force that did have steady jobs earned considerably more than they had in 1970.

As a result, the government counts on the tax haul this year reaching about $86.5 billion, which is nearly $300 million more than was collected last year.

As for each individual community, the returns will be larger or smaller than before depending upon the change in the number of taxpayers and the change in total earnings in the period.

In Wayne County, in line with the relative stability shown by the local area, this year's tax payments are expected to reach nearly $3,846,000.

The Administration's budget for the next fiscal year, submitted to Congress in January, forecasts an expansion of the economy this year. It figures that personal income nationally will be around $924 billion, up $67 billion from 1971.

On that presumption, it concludes that personal income taxes for the fiscal year beginning July 1 should reach $93.9 billion, or $7.4 billion more than is being collected this year.

In Wayne County, overall earnings will have to rise by about 8.6 per cent, it is calculated, for the local population to meet its share of this increase.

The Agent's Angle

by Harold Ingalls

local government we tend to think more in terms of efficiencies of operation and consolidation.

In view of the inequities of personal and real property tax it is well recognized that local government must be furnished a more equitable base for public finance. Many proposals are in the discussion stage. Most tend to place reliance upon other levels of government, state or federal, to supplant local property tax funds. It might be well to consider more seriously the possibilities of substituting a local income tax base for the local property tax base and utilize state or federal funds as supplements to assist the poorer communities such as has been the case in the past. This would allow citizens to remain closely associated with fund sources and reinforce local responsibility and involvement. It would dampen competition and infighting among communities and areas for the largest share of state or federal funds.

Perhaps county government could be expanded to include a board of 20 or more persons to facilitate the inputs of a wider range of economic and social interests. With a larger board would come a wider range of talent and judgment. It would be less subject to strong pressures from special interests.

Also, among the larger group no one member could achieve a dominant role. Another advantage might be that a larger board would not as easily become 'captive' of highly specialized expert advisors in matters such as taxes, budgets, education or capital construction. All in all, a wider and larger representation of interests across the county is consistent with our more complicated and specialized way of economic and social life.

More persons serving government at the local level would not necessarily cost more. Perhaps they might serve as school boards do—without pay. Money could be channeled instead into hiring a county manager or executive director who would serve at the pleasure of the larger board. The director could, in turn, economize by entering into joint buying, data processing, special economic and engineering studies and the like with neighboring or regional groupings of counties.

In summary, it might be well to think of local government restructuring and vitality in terms of citizen participation and interest stimulation as opposed to consolidation and apparent economies of operation. Community resource development efforts might well proceed at a faster pace with revitalized local government.

with revitalized local government.

Tax Exemption for Tree Planting in 1861

Even before the establishment of a formal Arbor Day in 1872, Nebraska's pioneers felt that tree-planting should merit a suitable tax exemption. In an act of Jan. 4, 1861, the Legislature exempted $50 in the valuation of land for each acre on which there was in a good state of cultivation not less than 100 fruit trees or ornamental trees or not less than 400 forest trees in an artificial grove.

Numerous sources in the collections of the Nebraska State Historical Society detail events pertinent to tree planting and to Arbor Day, a Nebraska-born holiday.

In 1871 the Legislature approved an act requiring cities and villages in Nebraska to plant trees along their streets. It provided: "Trees shall be annually planted when practicable on each side of one-fourth of the streets in each city and village in the State of Nebraska, until all shall have shade trees along them not more than 20 feet apart."

The first Arbor Day was celebrated in 1872 as a result of a resolution adopted by the State Board of Agriculture. Crediting J. Sterling Morton of Nebraska City with the authorship of Arbor Day derives from the fact that as a dedicated orchardist and forester he introduced the resolution which the board adopted.

Gov. Robert W. Furnas of Brownville, who served in the capitol between 1873 and 1875, wrote: "Attention is being given to the cultivation of timber. In every part of the state yet settled trees can be found to grow with great rapidity. It is found that every farmer can raise his own fuel within five years, from seed.

Ten acres planted closely together, and cared for at an expense of not more than $50 in labor will, within five years furnish a family with fuel merely by cutting trees to proper distances as they become overcrowded."

Gov. James W. Dawes, in his proclamation of April 13, 1885, said: "The result of these annual periods of tree planting for the past 11 years can be seen on every hand. The once treeless prairies are dotted with young forests; and there is scarcely a village or a homestead, or a habitation however lowly, in the state, that has not its complement of tree, shrub, or vine, the result of honest toil on the day set apart as Arbor Day. This is well. There should be no decrease in the number of trees planted each year, no discontinuation in the work of beautifying the home, no suspension of Arbor Day, which is now the legal holiday of the Nebraska husbandman."

There has been no decline in the importance of the day with the passing of the years. In fact, it has become recognized throughout America, and even in some foreign countries. In 1972, the Centennial of the Founding of Arbor Day, it is of even greater importance than ever. The motto adopted by the Nebraska Arbor Day Centennial Commission, established by the Unicameral, is: "Trees, a Joy Forever." Several Nebraska towns are planning Arbor Day events on or near the Centennial date, April 22.

The Nebraska State Historical Society is cooperating in various capacities with the Commission, not the least of them being the reissuing of James C. Olson's Book, J. Sterling Morton, first published in 1942.

Trace Elements' Value to Corn Varies

Some Nebraska farmers invest $40 per acre in fertilizer for irrigated corn. Half of that cost is for micro-nutrients and secondary nutrients.

Is this kind of investment necessary to raise a profitable crop? In some cases it may be. Dr. Delno Knudsen, agronomist at the UN-L soil testing laboratory, says, but usually fertilizer supplying nitrogen, phosphorus and perhaps zinc, will do just as well. Sulfur may be needed in sandy areas.

What are trace elements? These elements are essential for plant growth, but are required in very small quantities. Most of them are metals, including zinc, iron, copper, manganese, molybdenum, boron and chlorine. One tenth to one half pound of each is needed for a 200-bushel corn crop.

Usually Nebraska soils can supply enough to do the job, but there are exceptions.

Zinc may be needed on areas recently cut or filled in leveling for irrigation and on some high lime soils and some sandy soils.

Iron deficiency may occur in sorghum or beans grown on certain high lime soils. Iron deficiency does not occur on neutral or acid soils. Copper, manganese, boron, molybdenum and chlorine deficiencies are extremely rare.

Sulfur, magnesium and calcium are also essential for plant growth. These are sometimes called secondary nutrients. A 150-bushel corn crop will require 35 to 40 pounds of each. This is about the same requirement as for phosphorus, but is less than the 175 to 200 pounds of nitrogen or potassium found in the crop.

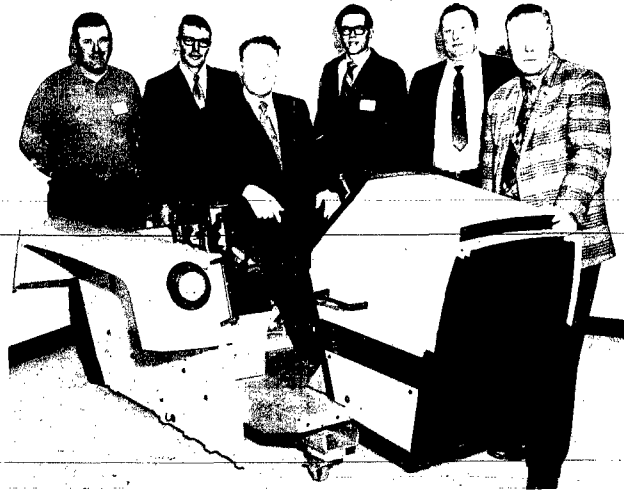

These elements make up much of the mineral content of ground and surface waters. Frequently, enough calcium, magnesium and sulfur are applied in irrigation water to meet crop needs. Again there are exceptions:

In certain sandy areas sulfur may be needed because (1) the sandy soil is low in available sulfur, and (2) the irrigation water is low in sulfate sulfur.

A word or two about soil tests. The University of Nebraska has dependable soil tests for nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium and zinc. A subsol. sample to two or three feet and a topsoil sample are necessary for a meaningful sulfur soil test—just as in the case of the nitrate test. A soil test for iron developed at Colorado State University works on high lime soils. Magnesium soil tests are meaningful but soil tests for other micronutrients or trace elements are of doubtful value at this time.

Farmer's Fancy Turns to Sowing Oats

There's something about spring that works like a tonic in everyone. It brings out the vigor and vitality that were out last fall and hibernated all winter.

Spring is a time for the beginning of new life from Mother Nature. The new, tiny, green spears of grass creep through and cover the brown, dead blades of yesterday. Colorful, fragrant blossoms adorn the barren limbs of the fruit trees and almond bushes. Yes, spring is a time when a young man's fancy turns to love and a time when a farmer's fancy turns to sowing oats.

Even the farmer's wife who doesn't usually take an active part in the other field work assists at this job. Usually it is too early for her garden work yet she wants to be involved with the season. She is anxious for the sowing to get underway. Or more likely, to get finished.

Of course at the first sign of spring, the oats were sown. During the second dose of "spring tonic" the wagon boxes were changed and all other necessary equipment adjustments were made in preparation for the official opening of another farm year.

Again you rely on the weatherman. Yesterday he said today would be a warm, sunny, clear day. But you had an entirely different interpretation of that forecast. You understood him to say it would be a good day to sow oats.

Ready to Go

So you fill the seeder wagon full of oats, throw on a couple bags of clover seed and call the Mrs.

She quickly emerges, warmly dressed, with her arms heavily laden. She hands you an extra coat, a thermos jug which is evidently full of coffee, and a loosely-bound, brown paper sack. While she is climbing into the wagon, you are telling her that all this stuff is unnecessary.

She nods and reaches for her articles. As she carefully tucks them in the oats she warns you that it may be colder out in the field. That the coat may come in handy. And that the lunch may taste pretty good after an hour or so.

You have no argument there. So you begin telling her how to scoop the oats into the seeder. And never, never let it run empty. It doesn't take much clover seed so she won't have to fill that part of the seeder as often.

When driving to the field the earth and air even smell new. Like there had never before been a crop. Or a drought. Or a hail storm.

You stop at the end of the field to recheck the seeder settings and to fill the small seeder with clover seed. The Mrs. has dug herself a comfortable seat in the oats near the seeder. At last you're ready to go.

You jostle down the field, the oats fanning out behind you. The ping of the oats on the ground and cornstalks sound like a sweet storm that can't quite catch you.

Oats Storm

About the third or fourth round you notice an occasional sting on your cheek. A few of the oats are catching up with you. Then the warm, spring air seems to have breezed across a lingering snowbank somewhere. More oats begin flying past the tractor. The once quiet, warm spring air seems to be freezing the marrow in your bones.

You glance back toward the Mrs. She's donned the extra coat and is nestled down in the shelter of the wagon box. So you go round and around the field until you feel like your blood has turned to ice and is refusing to flow. You decide to stop. Making a pretense of checking the seeder and the seed.

And while you're stopped you just as well have a cup of that hot coffee. The Mrs. joins you on the downwind side of the wagon. The coffee not only warms your insides but also your hands while you're holding the cup.

And to show your appreciation for her thoughtfulness in bringing out the coffee you're going to fill the seeder for her. In one third as many scoops as she would have used, you have the oats overflowing. Then you grab the sack of clover. You don't use the can the Mrs. uses to fill the seeder. You'll just lift the entire sackful up and pour some seed in.

You let go of the top with one hand, while still holding it with the other, and quickly grab for a bottom corner. With your knee under the middle of it to hoist it up, you aim the open top corner toward the seeder. And, Boy, do you fill the seeder.

And every gear, cradle and ledge on the back end of the wagon. And your overshoes—inside and out.

Fine Reward

That's a fine reward you get for being nice. So you think. But the Mrs. helps salvage most of it. What the wind didn't already blow away.

Sure don't remember hearing the weatherman say anything about a strong wind for today. He did say something about a high and a low somewhere but he didn't say anything about them going to trade places.

But by now you've warmed considerably and are more determined to sow at least one field today.

Feeling relaxed, with a full, satisfied stomach, hardened against the chilly, spring air, you continue round and around the field. Up this row and down 12 rows over. The sun's bright rays pierce the cold, giving a deceptive feeling of warmth. The rhythmic patter of oats and the constant whirling of the seeder soon make you drowsy. Round and around you go.

Nap Time

All at once your head is almost yanked off your shoulders. You're jarred halfway out of your seat. You grasp the steering wheel harder as you try to get your bearings together and figure out what is happening.

By widening your eye lids you can readily see that you are going across the corn rows instead of with them. The hysterical screams of the Mrs. reach your ears and you turn to see what damage has been done to her.

She is crouched in a back corner of the wagon, hanging onto the sides. When she goes up, the wagon is coming down. In perfect rhythm to the jostling of the wagon over the corn rows. The oats, thermos jug, scoop and clover can be tossing all over the wagon.

You throttle it down and quickly aim the tractor in the original direction. You are wide awake by the time you make a large circle and find the correct rows.

You glance back at the wagon to make sure the Mrs. is still there. Yep, still there and right in there scooping.

And just think of it. You were actually anxious to get this job underway. No wonder they call it spring fever. It sure is a disease. A disease that affects the mind. But in a nice, disillusioning sort of way.

Deadline Apr. 17 for Estimated Tax

OMAHA—If total estimated income and self-employment tax for 1972 exceeds income tax withholding by $100 or more, those persons should file a declaration of estimated tax, Richard P. Vinal, district director of Internal Revenue for Nebraska, reminds taxpayers.

Complete instructions on how to file can be found on Form 1040-ES, which was sent to everyone who filed a declaration last year and others who, according to IRS records, probably are required to make a declaration.

Vinal said vouchers and pre-addressed envelopes were included in the tax return package for the taxpayers' convenience. Estimates for 1972 are due by Apr. 17, the same date that 1971 federal income tax returns are due.
 A copy of the 1040-ES Form is available at local IRS offices for those who need them but did not receive copies in the mail.
 Vinal said now is the time to start working on your income tax return. This will help you avoid the last-minute rush if you run into something you are not sure about and need more information.
 Taxpayers who fill out their tax returns early avoid the risk of making costly errors because of haste and carelessness. Vinal said returns filed in April are much more likely to result in errors than those filed earlier.

BREAKFAST,

The heart of the morning!

By Sandra Bloom,
Farm & Home Food Consultant

Talk to most Americans about breakfast and you discover that they are either skippers or snatchers. The reasons they give for not eating breakfast are many and dreary, but they boil down to three; rush, fatigue, and fear of putting on weight. Skippers and snatchers are members of the morning "beat" group. They start the day irritable and listless. And worst of all, some have the problem of creeping poundage because they constantly snack on foods as the day drags on.

A breakfast that follows the Basic Four Food Guide will start you and your family off to an energy packed day. After all, breakfast is the first food you've taken in ten to fifteen hours and it's most important in starting the day right.

You may wish to have breakfast ready buffet-style in the morning. Set the prepared food from the basic four on the counter and allow the family to choose their portions. This should include food from the:

- 1) Meat Group (eggs, meat, poultry and fish)
- 2) Milk Group
- 3) Fruit and Vegetable Group
- 4) Bread and Cereal Group

A hearty breakfast easily includes one of each of these groups. Try some of our breakfast dishes to vary your routine breakfasts.

Breakfast Sandwich

1 can (15½ oz.) beef hash
6 English muffins, split
6 eggs
2 tablespoons chopped chives
Margarine

Divide hash into 6 slices; place one slice on each muffin bottom. Make deep well in center of hash, keeping walls thick. Break one egg into each well. Sprinkle with chives. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes or until done. Serve with toasted muffin tops which have been spread with margarine.

Meal in a Muffin Pan

12-oz. can spam
6 eggs
6 tablespoons milk
Salt and pepper
1 packet raisin bran muffin mix

Grease generously 12 muffin cups. Cut ½-inch slices of spam in half. Place one slice in bottom of 6 muffin cups. Break egg into each cup. Add 1 tablespoon milk. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Make muffin batter as directed on packet. Fill 6 muffin cups ½ full. Bake 15 to 20 minutes at 400 degrees or until muffins are golden brown. Serve immediately. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Herb Omelet

3 eggs
3 tablespoons water
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon chopped chives or ¼ teaspoon basil, thyme, oregano or parsley flakes
1 tablespoon margarine

Mix eggs, water, salt, pepper and desired herb with a fork. Heat margarine in skillet or omelet pan (approx. 8-inch) just hot enough to sizzle a drop of water. Pour in egg mixture. It should set at edges at once. Reduce heat slightly, but cook eggs quickly. As the mixture at the edges thickens, draw these portions with the fork toward the center so that the uncooked portions flow to the bottom. Tilt skillet as it is necessary to hasten flow of uncooked eggs. Shake skillet to keep omelet sliding freely. Keep mixture as level as possible. When eggs are set and surface is still moist, increase heat to brown bottom quickly. Roll out or fold onto serving plate. Makes 1 to 2 servings.

Brown 'n Serve Sandwich

1 pkg. brown 'n serve sausage
11 oz. can Boston brown bread
(or cut circles from white bread)
1 cup apple sauce

Cut the brown bread (or white bread) into 5 equal slices. Spoon 2 to 3 tablespoonfuls of applesauce onto each of the slices. Top each with 2 brown 'n serve sausages. Put the sandwiches on a cookie sheet. Place under the broiler for 3 to 5 minutes or until sausages are browned. Serve immediately.

From Fleischmann's. The greatest homebaking breakthrough since yeast.

Freezer-Doughs—a great discovery from Fleischmann's Yeast that lets you freeze your homemade yeast doughs as long as a month before baking.

Now you won't have to bake a batch of yeast dough as soon as you've made it. With new Freezer-Doughs, you can make the doughs for rolls, loaves, croissants, coffee cakes or buns, all at once. And freeze them.

Then just let thaw and rise, and bake as you're in the mood for something homemade. Since Freezer-Doughs don't rise first, they take less than one-third the freezer space of baked goods. And they were developed to keep in that freshly made flavor.

Try these delicious Dinner Rolls with Fleischmann's Yeast. You may even want to bake some today and freeze the rest.

In a large bowl, mix 2 cups flour, ½ c. sugar, 1½ tsp. salt, and 2 packages undissolved Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast.

Combine ¼ c. water, ½ c. milk and ⅓ c. Fleischmann's Margarine in a pan. Heat until liquids are very warm (120°F-130°F). Gradually add to dry ingredients; beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add 2 eggs at room temperature and ½ c. flour. Beat at high speed 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough flour (up to 3 or 4 c.) to make a soft dough. Turn onto floured board; knead until smooth and elastic (8 to 10 minutes).

Cover, let rest 20 minutes.

Punch dough down. Divide into 48 pieces. Form each into a 9-inch rope. For bowknots, tie once loosely. For coils, hold one end of roll firmly and wind dough loosely around. For figure 8's, shape into an 8, sealing ends. Place on greased baking sheets. Cover with plastic wrap and foil, sealing well. Freeze until firm. Transfer to plastic bags. Freeze up to 4 weeks.

Remove from freezer; place on greased baking sheets. Cover; let rise in warm place free from draft until doubled in bulk, about 1½ hours.

Bake at 350°F. 15 minutes, or until golden brown. Remove from baking sheets and cool on wire racks.

To bake part of them right away, instead of freezing the dough, just let the shaped doughs rise the usual way and bake as directed.

PEARS A' PLENTY

by Sherry Onken

Luscious Anjou, Bosc and Comice pears are now available from October through May. Once, however, pears were regarded as such delicacies they were reserved for the kings of ancient Persia.

Winter pears grown today on the Pacific Coast are direct descendants of pear trees transplanted from Cathay to the famous orchards of northern France. The Anjou, which originated in Belgium in 1819, was brought to this country in 1842 by Colonel Wilder of Boston. The Bosc was named for Louis Bosc, an eminent French horticulturist, and was received in the U. S. in 1832 by Robert Manning and William Kenrich. The Comice tree reached America in 1850.

Whether fresh or canned, pears are plentiful from the West Coast.

Arrange pineapple chunks around pear halves. Spread cheese-fruit sauce over fruit. Cut remaining rolled out pastry in 3/4-inch strips and make a latticed top. Bake at 450 degrees for 12 minutes; then lower heat to 375 degrees and bake 35 more minutes. Last 10 minutes, brush top with egg white to give a golden glaze. Serve with sour cream topping.

Topping:

Blend together sour cream, fruit juices and confectioners' sugar. Refrigerate until needed.

pear kolacky

1 pkg. (13 $\frac{3}{4}$  oz.) hot roll mix
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
3 fresh pears
2 tablespoons cornstarch
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup brown sugar
 $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoon cinnamon
 $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon salt

Mine Sends Coal 6 Miles Via Belt

by Grover Brinkman

OLD SHAWNEETOWN, ILL.—Is this the longest coal-carrying conveyor belt in the nation?

It starts at a new mine opened by Peabody Coal Company six miles west of this Ohio River town, wends its way toward the river, where it dumps its coal in barges moored at a port facility there.

It looks like a huge snake sprawled over the river flatlands. But when one approaches, the "snake" comes alive with the soft whirr of many driving motors, the incessant noise of turning spindles, and a huge belt, curved into a "V," loaded with coal fresh from the mine's tipple.

The coal rides along the 42-inch-wide belt at a merry clip, sometimes at ground level, then elevated into the air over trestles to clear a highway, railroad or other public utility. There are ten transfer stations along the route, and the entire mechanism is operated by electricity, enough to light up a thousand residences with all facilities.

The cost of the belt is stupendous. Yet its cost, spread over its service life, makes it cheaper than any other form of transportation.

It is a new form of materials handling, fully automated. It falls in the same category as the pipeline, through which various solids and liquids are now sent great distances at minimal cost. It is an amalgamation of brains and ideas, using the cost slide rules of today's technocracy.

The conveyor belt is simplicity itself. It runs through evenly spaced spindles, set at an angle. The weight of the coal on the belt dips it into a perfect "V". There is no spilling and very little dust as it is transferred from one station to another. The belt travels at ground level, climbs, turns, all without trouble.

And at its river terminus, six miles from the tipple of the mine's processing plant, the coal drops into hoppers for stockpiling, or directly into barges waiting at the port facility.

And here again, low cost shipping is employed via the river and the towboat barge chain.

The mine itself is a combination slope and strip operation. Again heavy machinery takes the place of the man with the shovel. A coal shovel towers upward high as a 14-story building. The coal is processed, washed, dropped to the belt in a continuous automatic operation.

Eventually this belt conveyor will handle 3,000 tons of coal an hour, enough to fill two river barges. Compare this automated mine's efficiency with the coal mine of yesterday, the skeletons in Appalachia.

At the port facility, two men sit at a console that is really a computer of sorts, control the coal to any spot it is desired. The belt runs on and on, an endless servant, undisturbed by season or weather.

This is the new automation in the Midwest coal belt, part of the new industrialization of the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers and their tributaries.

This coal-carrying belt, 6 miles in length, is the latest method of materials handling in the Midwest coal belt.

Ask the Lindsay Lady

Q. What's all this commotion about phosphates in detergents?

A. Phosphates which make up a substantial part of synthetic detergents, can disturb the natural, or ecological, balance of streams and lakes. Phosphates nourish algae. As algae becomes overabundant, it clogs lakes and removes oxygen, killing fish and other plant life. Soap, unlike synthetic detergents, contains only those ingredients necessary for soft water washing.

Q. How do I do right by the vitamins when cooking fresh vegetables?

A. A little tender, loving care, please! Wash vegetables thoroughly but don't soak them. Cook vegetables in as little water as possible, as quickly as possible and, when you can, cook vegetables whole—without dicing, chopping or peeling. If you're lucky enough to be using soft water, here are a few bonuses: You'll remove garden soil more easily and you'll bring out the full natural colors of the produce. The results—garden-fresh vegetables that look better and taste better.

Q. Is it true that dish towels are unsanitary?

A. Yes, sad but true for those of us still doing dishes by hand. Authorities say that draining and air drying is better than wiping them. With hard water, however, streaks and spots can occur. But with soft water, everything sparkles even when left to drain and dry by itself. And, note this, in all cases soft water improves machine dishwashing results.

THREE GENERATION 4-H FAMILY

by Gene Haman

Mrs. Emory Voland of Ozaukee County, Wisconsin, heads a 90-member 4-H club which includes three generations of her own family as leaders and members.

In the "V" section of the Ozaukee County, Wisconsin, 4-H files, there is a bundle of records thicker than a bale of four-leaf clovers. This particular bundle is unusual for more than its physical size: it covers three generations of one 4-H family and includes nearly every membership and leadership activity and award available on county, state and national levels.

This bundle of records is a chronicle of the Ozaukee County 4-H history of the family of Mrs. Emory Voland, of Mequon, Wis., which includes herself, two sons, Donald of Mequon and Maurice, now of Lexington, Ky., a daughter, Judy, now Mrs. Glenn Helge-land, Grafton, Wis., and Don's sons, Rick and Jeff.

Three generations of 4-H work in one family is fairly unique in itself. But this family has more going for it—all three generations are within one club and all are active. This is the Mequon Sunnyside 4-H Club, which Mrs. Voland helped found 27 years ago and has been the sole general leader of since 1953. That's one generation. Her son Donald was one of eight charter members in 1945; he now serves the entire Ozaukee County as aviation project leader and is Sunnyside's small engines project leader. That's two generations. Don's sons Rick, 14, and Jeff, 11, now are included in the club's 90 active members. That's three generations, all active at once in Sunnyside 4-H.

No less involved, but in other areas, are Mrs. Volland's oldest son Maurice and her daughter Judy. Maurice worked as a county extension agent in Kalamazoo and Muskegon Counties, Michigan, before gaining his doctorate in sociology at Michigan State and taking a sociology-rural development job with the University of Kentucky. Judy's a former Pepin County, Wisconsin home economics extension agent, and is planning to get back into home economics work. She served as a project leader for the Grafton Falls, Ozaukee County 4-H Club in 1971, and is now an Ozaukee County key leader in clothing projects.

Thus, this is a story of a 4-H family that believes in the principles of rural life, extension and 4-H work to such an extent that they are willing to make it at the very least an avocation, and at the most a vocation.

Says Richard Hauser, Ozaukee County 4-H agent, who has worked with Mrs. Volland for more than twenty years, "In my book, what she has done and is doing is tremendous. In this day and age of the generation gap, a woman of her age (which she admits is "past 60") doing what she does, shows that she has more remarkable traits than just sheer stamina."

Mrs. Volland says, "I've seen many changes since 1945—in local club work, county and state work, community attitudes, children's attitudes—but I saw how 4-H helped my kids, and that's why I've stayed active. If I can help some other kids along the way, then I'll be satisfied."

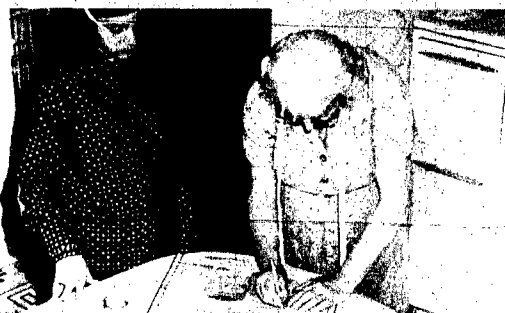

"Along the way" began, naturally, at the urging of her own family. Maurice wanted to be a 4-H member, so Mrs. Volland, her late husband Emory, and a few neighboring parents organized the club. Maurice participated for four years and dropped out when he entered Iowa State University. Donald was active eight years, and he too dropped out when he entered Iowa State. Maurie received several county awards, but Don went one better—he received a national Danforth Award in 1951 for general excellence. Both, their mother believes, were influenced by Dick Hauser, first to like 4-H, and second, to want to remain a part of it. And Don, now living on a small farm and working as an airplane pilot, finds 4-H an excellent opportunity to work with his boys. Maurie's family finds itself more involved in Scouting in suburban Lexington.

"We didn't push Maurie and Don much, because we weren't aware of all the opportunities then. When Judy began 4-H, we were more aware and there were many more areas for competition. So she naturally did better."

This included county recognition in eight projects: Ozaukee County representative at the state speaking contest, the national Key award, and selection as one of the first four Ozaukee County representatives to the citizenship shortcourse in Washington, D. C. In fact, Maurie, who had chaperoned a group of Michigan 4-H'ers to the shortcourse, urged that she apply for the worthwhile experience.

Mrs. Emory Volland, one of the organizers of the Ozaukee County 4-H Club, helps a member in planning a sewing project.

Mrs. Volland's constant attention to members' problems helps make the Sunnyside 4-H Club a "club to be depended upon".

Statistics don't always tell a complete story, but they can give an indication of the total effort. During Mrs. Volland's years as general leader, her club members have received county awards in 29 projects, five members have represented Ozaukee County at state demonstration contests, five took part in state speaking contests, seven girls participated in the state dress revue, seven have received the Key award; four the Danforth award, nine have attended the citizenship shortcourse, one has attended National Club Congress in Chicago, and one has been elected the State Junior Leader Council President.

Results like that come only from hard work in the development of natural talent. And it means an active club, a steady club.

"Sunnyside 4-H can be depended upon," Hauser adds. "They meet their deadlines and carry things through like they say they will. That makes them easy to work with, with no supervisory problems at all."

What makes a leader? "Someone who likes kids and has or is willing—there's a difference, you know—to take time," Hauser explains. "All youth groups, regardless of their purpose, seem to be in terrible need of someone like that nowadays."

"It's much more work being a leader today," Mrs. Volland says, with a wondering shake of her head. "But in most ways it's better, too."

"For instance, kids can now apply for special national awards and they will be personally interviewed. When Maurie was in Michigan, he said, "The kids that could tell the most impressive fibs in their record books," were the ones chosen. Simply because the selection was made only on quality of record books. I like the new way best.

"We don't have as many planned programs from national, state and county offices as we used to. This makes our general club schedules more difficult to plan, but the final results are better, I believe. For instance, record books now have evaluation sheets which you can use to prepare the project, deciding what needs to be learned, and can then be re-examined at the close of the project. This creates individual goals, which mean more to the member than generalized national or state goals."

"However, I still believe that when we're training beginners we should be highly standardized to get things done best."

As communities and objectives have changed over the years, so have 4-H members. How have these changed in Mequon, which twenty years ago was 15 miles from Milwaukee but now stands right on the big city's border?

"We don't have rural youth any more. It's urban now. We used to have quite a few farm-oriented projects, but now items like foods, clothing, crafts, gardening, exploring, nature conservation and animal pet projects are strong."

"When we had just a neighborhood club we had more parents helping. Now, parents want their kids to have the 4-H experience, but they rarely get involved themselves."

"Kids are changing tremendously. They're more aware, have better schooling and news sources, and are influenced by more outside contacts. But a lot still depends on the ability of the child and the interest and training of his parents."

"In 1945, 4-H filled a community need. We schooled together, knew each other, visited and played together. Now we're not really a community anymore; we've become a suburb."

"(One youngster at a recent meeting was fooling around, and I couldn't call his name to quiet him because I didn't know who he was. I learned after the meeting that he was a new member in the Exploring project. And I don't handle that. Ninety kids get a bit unwieldy at times like that—to the detriment of the kids and the leaders.)"

"Years ago, clubs worked together and shared things. Now it seems everything is cutthroat competition, with larger groups and tight-lipped attitudes. Last year a sign on some furniture at the county drama contest said, "This belongs to ????? 4-H! HANDS OFF!"

"I'm sorry to see that happening," Mrs. Volland sighs, with another rueful head shake and a sad smile.

What problems lie ahead for 4-H? "Lack of leadership. Mobility and leisure—there's more time to go somewhere, to leave town. That removes leaders and members and communities. We aren't community centered anymore. But I guess that's a natural outgrowth of our times. There are just so many things to do."

"If youngsters are active they participate in so many school programs that they don't have time for 4-H. But I've still had them for four or five years, and that's pretty good."

"I look at the honor lists in the local high schools, and even the dean's lists from Midwest colleges—and I see plenty of names I recognize from 4-H membership."

She clenches her hands together, kneads a row of not-so-young knuckles, then she says softly, "If I've helped along the way . . ."

A FUNNY THING HAPPENED ON THE WAY TO COOPERSTOWN

By Bill Nelson

For the average ballplayer, the road to major league success is paved with pitfalls (and a few pratfalls, too).

No one knows better than Milwaukee's Bob Uecker, a light hitting catcher who ran into his share of detours in a seven year quest for Cooperstown's Hall of Fame that missed headlines across the country.

Bob carved a reputation with his tongue, not his bat. Although stardom proved elusive, Uecker established himself as the clown prince of National League bullpens.

"I spent most of my time booin' the guys playing in front of me," he recalls.

No stranger to tough times, the curly-haired mod dressing Uecker, now a nationally-known entertainer, speaks eloquently for the hundreds of journeymen unable to emerge from the shadows of baseball's handful of superstars.

A superscrub at best, Bob had no problem avoiding overconfidence.

"There were little things managers would do to you . . . well, to indicate that maybe you'd be movin' on," he says.

"With Philadelphia, I'd be sitting on the bench and the manager would holler down, 'Grab a bat, Bob, and stop this rally!'"

"Or he'd send me up without a bat . . . and tell me to go for a walk."

Uecker kept his bags packed. An anemic .200 batting average gave him the chance to pick up splinters in Milwaukee, Atlanta, St. Louis and Philadelphia uniforms before hanging up his spikes in 1967.

"That was a blow to the pitchers around the league," he recalls. "When they heard I was being released, they took up a collection to pay my salary—anything to keep me around."

His career highlight, the Milwaukee-born Uecker says, was an intentional pass from Sandy Koufax.

"I was pretty proud of that," he admits, "until I heard that the commissioner wrote Koufax a letter telling him the next time something like that happened he'd be fined for damaging the image of the game."

But Bob points out that he has his admirers, too.

"Anytime I'm at a banquet and the talk swings to baseball, my name is automatically mentioned," he says. "In fact, I've been called by many people one of the greatest athletes of all time. These people, unfortunately, know nothing about athletics."

Yet even a strikeout artist has his cherished memories.

"My career has had a number of high points," declares Uecker, hired last year as a public relations representative of the Milwaukee Brewers and—as he puts it—batting instructor for protest groups ("to guarantee that they won't hit anything.")

"I led the Braves in homers, RBIs . . . and lies. And in 1962, I was voted the minor league player of the year. That, unfortunately, came my second year in the majors."

Like many ballplayers, Uecker is at his charming best in visits with underprivileged and sickly children.

"I went to a hospital once and told a kid I'd hit a home run for him," he recalls. "The next day, I struck out four times, had two passed balls and the kid suffered a relapse. What really upset me was when I found out he was only an outpatient."

Although the chances of a strikeout specialist making the Hall of Fame are less than bright, Bob says he's sweating out the five years a player must wait after retirement before he's eligible.

Behind him, he notes, are scores of records, most of which he attributes to his ability.

"Besides my .200 batting average, I also have the distinction of missing the All-Star game seven years in a row," he says.

"I was never thrown out stealing a base in the majors, either—and being a catcher this is one record I'm most proud of. Secondly, I never attempted to steal a base."

"I also set a major league record for passed balls. Setting that record gave me an opportunity to meet a lot of the people sitting in the box seats behind home plate—because that's where I spent the major part of the game. I think this record, too, was a tribute to my ability when you consider that I didn't play every game."

"As far as team spirit goes, I was outstanding. I showed up for most every game . . . and those I couldn't make I always caught on the radio."

The twilight of his career was bittersweet.

"It's odd the way you find out your career is over," he says. "When I was with the Braves, I was getting dressed and the coach came over and told me visitors weren't allowed in the clubhouse."

But, then, there had been storm signals earlier.

"I got the hint that tough times were coming when I first joined the Phillies," he says. "For spring training they sent me to Bradenton, Florida, which I thought was just fine—till I found out the rest of the team was in Clearwater."

Baseball's funnyman paused and a nostalgic look crossed his face.

"But if I was to say I didn't miss baseball I'd be telling a lie," he admitted.

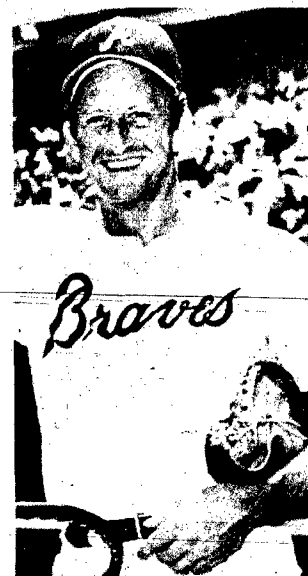

"I miss . . . well, coming in after a big ball game, gathering in the clubhouse, the thrill of your teammates pounding you on the back, jumping on you—trying to keep you out of the next game."

"Or the glow from a youngster dashing up to you after a game, paper and pencil in hand, and saying . . . 'Why don't you quit?'"

Today, the ball field's loss has been national television's gain. His baseball woes have proven the springboard to a brand new career as a comedian. Now, besides his Brewers' job, Uecker has become a popular TV guest, appearing on the Johnny Carson, David Frost, Merv Griffin, Mike Douglas and Today shows. That's a long way from the $200 a month he brought home in his rookie year in the minors ("my wife and I ate C-rations for three years," he quips).

Since he's only 37 now, is there any chance there will be a baseball comeback?

"It doesn't look too good," he confides. "Actually I've been told to stay away from the park."

WHY PLANT

A GROUND COVER?

In many areas and situations, ground covers are more appropriate and more satisfactory than turf. They are able to grow and thrive in sun OR shade, and in poor soil.

On steep slopes where mowing is difficult, ground cover is much more effective and much less laborious to maintain than grass. Ground covers hold the soil as well as turf and the textures are far more interesting.

Small areas of grass are a continual chore to keep mown and trimmed but ground covers require almost no care. They are excellent protection and soil conditioners. They hold the fallen leaves from blowing away, thus helping to add annually to the humus content.

WHY CREEPING RED SEDUM?

One of Sedum's most valuable assets is its full time beauty. Lush foliage begins in early spring, and star-shaped scarlet flowers delight the viewer from late June through September. The attractive semi-evergreen foliage lasts well into winter, maintaining its rich green and bronze color nearly all year round.

Besides being one of the loveliest of the ground covers, Sedum also rates high on the other requirements. It is hardy, grows well in sun or partial shade, in sandy soil, clay soil, or good soil.

Its thick foliage and root system hold the soil on slopes or banks. The neat 3-4" cover forms a dense perennial mat to bring green and scarlet beauty to slopes, borders, rocky areas, anywhere beauty and durability are needed.

Each plant will easily and quickly spread to fill one sq. ft. Sedum spreads evenly, maintains its uniform smooth beauty at all stages of growth. Unlike some other ground covers, Sedum, also called "Dragon's Blood", stays where you put it—does not straggle out into places where it doesn't belong. Sedum is almost indestructible, enduring and persisting against heavy climatic and nutritional odds.

RED SEDUM!

Your young Sedum plants will establish themselves and begin to spread a few days after planting. In a month or so they will already be 3-4 inches in diameter. They may lose their foliage as the first winter progresses but will leaf out again in early spring. During a long growing season they may reach 12" in diameter, always maintaining their neat regulated shape.
