

Parking Restriction Proposal Draws Big Delegation to Council Meeting

The city council, in a unanimous decision Tuesday night, voted to postpone any decision on the proposed parking regulations in the southwest section of the city.

In the first of two public hearings, the council heard from a near-capacity crowd along views on both sides of the argument whether to continue restricted parking throughout the rest of the city.

"We don't need restrictive parking," said City Attorney John Addison, "in the southwest section of the city—in fact it's about time the council reviews restrictive parking for the whole city."

Addison, speaking as a member of the audience, said that he felt that the people who live in the new sections of town such as Oak Drive, Knoll's and the Wilcliff area, should not be restricted from parking on the streets since those residents paid for the extra wide streets.

"The council has lost sight of the purpose of the city streets," he told the members. "The idea of the streets is to serve the property owners. What you're doing here is to deprive the citizens of such a service by restricting parking."

Several of the members of the audience voted the same opinion, saying that they had paid for it and it was their right to park on the streets.

"I paid for it and I have the right to use it," said Andy Mares, 524 Oak Drive. "I'm firmly against no parking."

John Struve brought up the fact that the new housing areas are away from the college and the areas have few apartment houses that would contribute to the need of parking restrictions.

"I just don't have the problem," he said, "why are you trying to standardize the city?"

City councilman Keith Mosley, in charge of the street and alley committee, explained to the group that their purpose of the parking restrictions in the southwest portion of the city was to provide safety and a uniformity throughout the city.

But a person in the audience pointed out that Wayne is not an infantry base and therefore has no need for uniformity.

As far as safety goes, another said, whether cars are parked on or off the streets, won't prevent a child from running out onto the street.

Mayor Hall then asked the council to postpone their decision on restricted parking on the south part of town until the next meeting, May 9, so the council could study the proposal.

After a motion made by Councilman Gross, Councilman Thomas seconded and the motion was passed.

In the second public hearing, Debra Farrans, 115 Main, was granted a bottle club license.

The unanimous decision was motioned by Thomas and seconded by Banister.

In other city action, the council gave the go ahead to appropriate funds for the Red Cross swimming instructions for the handicapped.

The city council in a 5-1 decision voted to scrap plans for a circular air hanger after City Engineer Sid Magdanz, Consolidated Engineers, told the group

Set Clocks Ahead Saturday Night

All readers are reminded that daylight savings time goes into effect this Sunday, allowing an hour less sleeping time Saturday night.

So that church-goers do not arrive for services just at the time others are leaving or employees don't arrive at their jobs Monday morning an hour late, clocks should be set ahead an hour before retiring Saturday night.

Letter From President Nixon

Classmates Envy 'Famous' Third-Grader

Letters, to some people, are fun to write. But to others, letters are more fun to receive.

Just ask Jere Morris. He'll tell you he loves to do both. Especially when he received a letter from President Richard M. Nixon.

"No one would believe me," the third-grader at West Elementary said, "until I showed them the letter I received from the President last week."

Jere, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morris, got together with classmate Ross Powers and each wrote a letter to the President after their teacher, Mrs. Lloyd Beemer, assigned the class to write a letter to a relative.

"Miss and I decided to do something different and write a letter to the President," the nine-year-old said.

"My main purpose was to see if I would get an answer. And, you know, last Saturday (April 15) I received an answer."

Jere's reaction was the typical young boy's reaction—"Where is it?"

After tearing open the letter, in which President Nixon thanked Jere for his interest in Surprised. That was the word to describe Jere Morris as he received a letter from President Nixon.

Nixon's recent trip to China. Jere could hardly wait until school Monday to show his friends and teacher.

"Mrs. Beemer wants to take the letter and put it into a frame and hang it on the wall for awhile," he said. "After that I'm going to hang it in my room and someday start to write my book on the President and his trip to China."

Cuming County Agent, Woman Killed in Crash

Joe Watson, 63, who had been Cuming County extension agent for 37 years, and Mrs. Marvin Loewe, 36, rural West Point, were killed Monday afternoon in a head-on crash 4 1/2 miles west of Hecker.

Mrs. Loewe's four-year-old son, Shawn, was listed in critical condition at an Omaha hospital with head injuries. He was taken to Omaha by the West Point Rescue Squad.

Investigating officer Ernest Volkmer of the State Patrol, stationed at West Point, said the two cars met at the crest of a hill on a gravel road. Mr. Watson was alone in his car.

Mr. Watson was the dean of Nebraska county extension agents. He had received numerous awards for his work in boosting Cuming County to the No. 1 rank as the largest livestock feeding county in Nebraska.

Map Shows Wards, Polling Places for Wayne Voters

Voting. Your right and privilege.

But to exercise that right, the voter must know in what ward he or she should vote.

To help clarify the voting wards in the city of Wayne, County Clerk Norris Weible provided a voting map outlining the wards. (See the map on an inside page of this issue.)

"Check this map to make sure which ward you are in and where you will vote." This is very important, Weible said, since your registration card will be at the correct polling place.

If you have moved since you last registered, then you must re-register by 6 p.m. April 28 to be eligible to vote in the primary election May 9.

If you have changed your name by marriage, etc., again you must re-register.

The County Clerk's office, located at the Wayne County Court House, 510 Pearl, will remain open until 6 p.m. April 27 and 28.

"If you find that you are in a different ward but have not moved you need not re-register. Your card has been transferred."

"If you are not sure which ward you are in, please save yourself and the election board time and confusion by calling the County Clerk's office," Weible concluded.

Furnace Fire Damages Motor

A fire at the Bernard Mackey residence, 912 Windom, resulted in minor damage Tuesday when a furnace motor shorted out and caught fire.

According to Wayne Fire Chief Cliff Pihkelman, about 22 volunteer firemen answered the call at 3:40 a.m. to extinguish a fire that was contained in the furnace area.

Chief Pihkelman estimated the damage to the motor and furnace to be about $50 but could not give any estimate on the amount of smoke damage.

But No Assurance of Reduction Shifting of Tax Burden 'Desirable Goal'

Elaine Schmadeke of Dakota City, candidate for the Unicameral seat from the 17th District, told a group of Kiwanians Monday night that she agrees with her opponents that shifting the tax burden from the property owner to a greater majority would be a desirable goal.

However, Mrs. Schmadeke found no assurance in the recent bill before the Legislature that property taxes actually would be reduced in compensation for the increases in sales and income taxes.

"I could not vote for a bill of that magnitude, $126 million in fact, and thus commit the people of the 17th District to such an increased tax load without a reliable guarantee that this tax shuffle would not create more of a tax burden than we already are carrying," she said.

"I'm not of the opinion that things automatically have to cost more to be better," Mrs. Schmadeke pointed out.

Mrs. Schmadeke, who has been in education (and whose husband, Harley, is program coordinator for secondary special education in Woodbury County) criticized the Legislature for dwelling on are limited special cases, and I do not mean as a matter of convenience in family planning, where legal abortion, with an atmosphere of dignity and concern shall be considered and legalized for pregnancies under 3 months.

Mrs. Schmadeke said she originally became interested in state government while spearheading a campaign to bring better recreational facilities to northeast Nebraska. She presented, at her own expense, a case for dredging and cleaning up the shores of Crystal Lake to the State Board of Health and the federal Department of Interior and action on the matter formed her resolve to run for the Unicameral.

"There is only one way we'll solve our pollution problems," she warned. "We must have strong, enforceable legislation that will allow man and industry to co-exist. Legislation to appease the public that can't be enforced is a great waste."

She ended her speech by noting she has no other business interests and that her own interest will be the business of state legislation for the people of this district.

The bride's gown was a floor-length fashion of acetate and sheer illusion, featuring Juliet sleeves and full chapel length train. She wore an elbow length veil and carried a cross bouquet of daisies and baby's breath.

Her attendants were gowned in identically styled, floor-length frocks of pink and blue dotted swiss with matching headpieces. Each carried a single pink rose. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the church fellowship hall.

The bride is a graduate of Madison Central High School and has worked for Eastern Kentucky University. The bridegroom is a Wakefield High School graduate. Thirty-eight persons from Nebraska traveled by chartered bus to the Nolan-Linemann wedding, and that weekend toured Richmond, visiting the Cassius Clay mansion, Boonsboro Park, and other places, with the bride's father as their guide. The group returned home last Sunday evening.

Upon their return to Nebraska, the newlyweds were honored with a reception at the Wakefield Legion Hall. The fete, attended by 84 guests, was hosted by the bridegroom's parents. The bride and groom, and members of the wedding party, appeared at the reception in their wedding attire.

Ken Thomsen and Company of the Thomsen Music Studio, Lincoln, furnished music for dancing. Cheryl Herkins, Columbus, who had been a vocalist for the wedding, sang "More" and "We've Only Just Begun," accompanied by Mike Morkert, Seward.

Guests were present from Richmond and Herkimer, Kan.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Wymore, Liberty, Columbus, Lincoln, Seward, Fremont, Bancroft, Wayne, Emerson, Omaha, Allen and Laurel.

Roland, Saul Combine for No-Hitter Against Homer As Wayne Wins, 7-0

Wayne pitchers Charles Roland and Roger Saul work great as a team. Both of them combined to pitch a no-hitter Monday to blank Homer, 7-0, at Wayne.

Roland started the contest and pitched hitless ball for 4 2/3 innings before the Knights loaded the bases in the fifth inning on two walks and an error.

With two men out, relief pitcher Saul came onto the mound to strike out the next batter, and continue striking out six of seven men to preserve the no-hitter.

Wayne opened the scoring margin in the second inning when First Baseman Mike Ginn singled, stole second and third, and scored on Roland's infield out.

The Blue Devils added one more in the fourth when Ginn led off with a double, advanced to third on Roland's grounder and scored on left fielder Bob Nelson's fielder's choice, making the score 2-0.

The fifth inning was the most productive for the home team as Second Baseman Darrell Hank opened with a walk, and scored on Saul's double. After Ginn intentionally walked, Roland and Nelson also followed with walks, setting up scores by Saul and Ginn on passes balls.

Freshman Mike Meyer, substituting as center fielder, then lined a solid single to left field, scoring Roland and Nelson to make the final score 7-0.

Mike Ginn led the Wayne offense, scoring three runs and hitting one single and double in two official times at bat.

Roland and Meyer each had two R. B. I.'s to lead in that department.

The Blue Devil's record stands at 6-1 with a Thursday game (tonight) against Bancroft with Ginn getting the pitching nod as Wayne goes after win No. 7.

Wakefield Record Dips to 3-3 As Trojan Baseballers Fall to Bancroft

The Wakefield Trojans were on the road for the first time Monday and did not find the travel to their liking as they dropped a tough 5-3 loss to Bancroft to even the season record at 3-3.

Bancroft jumped on Junior Bob Twite early in the first inning for two runs but then was throttled by Twite until the fifth. The Trojans tied the game with two runs in the top of the fourth, but Bancroft broke the game wide open in the bottom of the fifth by scoring three runs to put the game out of reach.

Junior Bob Twite hurled the first four innings and gave up two unearned runs on two hits, while striking out four and walking only one to lower his earned run average of the season to a sparkling 1.71. Senior Pat Szarzi came on in the bottom of the fifth but was tagged for three runs on two hits, while striking out one and walking one, to take the loss and even his season record at 2-2. Senior Kevin Peters hurled the last 2 2/3 innings and gave up no runs, no hits, and walked only one. Kevin has yet to give up an earned run this season and has only allowed two hits in 7 2/3 innings on the mound.

The Trojans tied the game with Team 1 and Team 3 will play for the championship next Monday evening at 8:30, following a consolation contest between Team 5 and Team 2 at 7:30 p.m.

Hex Murray was high for Team 3 with 20 points, followed by Doug Sturm with 12 and Mike Mitchell with 10. The only double-figure man for Team 5 was Earle Overin with 18.

There were four double-figure scorers in the second game, Kyle Wills and Kerry Jech peaced Team 1 with 27 and 21 points respectively, followed by Todd Eigelow with 15 and Tom Kerstine with 13.

The four pace-setters for Team 2 were Mike Ginn (22), Randy Nelson (21), Steve Mordhorst (14) and Charles Roland (10).

Stu Lantz Lecturer For NU Cage School

Coach Joe Cipriano has announced that Stu Lantz will be the guest lecturer at the 1972 Cornhusker Basketball School. Stu was an All-Big 8 performer at the University for two years and is now an all-star guard for the Houston Rockets of the National Basketball Association.

Stu will be on hand each week to lecture and give his outlook on how to become a great basketball player. Also joining the staff will be former players of the 1971-72 basketball team—Chuck Jura, Al Nissen and Mike Peterson.

Coach Cipriano said that applicants are still being accepted for all four sessions—June 4-10, June 11-17, June 18-24, and June 25-July 1. Applications can be obtained by writing or calling the Basketball Office at the University of Nebraska.

Joe Gray of North Platte holds Nebraska's state hook-and-line record for brook trout with a 5-pound, 1-ounce fish taken from Pawnee Springs near North Platte on December 3, 1965.

WSC Pitcher Solano Gets Grand Slam for Wildcats

Wayne State pitcher Charlie Solano kept up the batting tradition of his mound mates Tuesday night, thus flouting the tradition that pitchers don't hit.

He smacked a grand slam in the third inning of the opener, and went on to win, 6-0, with a one-hitter over the University of Nebraska at Omaha. He is the third Wayne chucker to post that single-hit feat this year. Greg Kamp and Kevin Petersen previously did it.

Petersen, however, suffered a downfall in the nightcap as he lost the 5-2 contest played at Balfston.

Kamp and another leading Wayne pitcher, Ron Nelson, saw no action against UNO, but they have been in the forefront of Wayne hitting—Kamp with two home runs and several other timely hits, Nelson with a batch of game-winning safeties.

For Solano, it was a dilemma to decide whether his pitching or batting proved more rewarding. He has suffered occasionally from wildness and late-inning letdowns, but against UNO he maintained flawless control all the way, Coach Darryl Lehnus observed.

The Wildcats totaled nine hits in the opener and managed five over Chadron State here, 3-1 and 3-2. Kamp hurled the opener—a one-hitter—and Nelson claimed the second game on a six-hit effort.

Monday Wayne got a jump on the conference race with two wins over Chadron State here, 3-1 and 3-2. Kamp hurled the opener—a one-hitter—and Nelson claimed the second game on a six-hit effort.

Third Baseman Steve Hying continued his batting heroics with five for five in the twin bill. It was a Hying hit combined with a Jack Shupe triple that won the nightcap in the seventh. Chadron had gone ahead, 2-1, in the third.

Wayne tied it in the fifth.

Wakefield Takes Third in Match

The Wakefield golf team carded a 191 Monday to place third in a match at Hartington involving four teams.

Hartington Cedar Catholic won the event with a 173 total, followed by cross-town rival Hartington High School scoring 177 and O'Neill St. Mary's taking fourth with 201.

For the Trojans, Randy Johnson and Devon Fischer each had scores of 46 as teammates Brad Schwartz and Dave Berns carded 48 and 51 respectively.

Wakefield's record, according to Golf Coach Lyle Trullinger, stands at 3-6, with a Thursday dual to be played at home against Oakland.

Norfolk Blitzes Wayne Golfers

Cold winds didn't help the Wayne HI golfers Tuesday as the Blue Devils lost to Norfolk Central Catholic, 319-341.

In a dual match at Norfolk, Norfolk Central Catholic, led by Larry Sock with a 72, blitzed the Wayne team with other scores of 77, 84 and 88 as Wayne, led by Scott Ehlers with a 84, Todd Bornhorst-86, Kyle Wills-87, and Mark Schram's 88, could not seem to warm up.

In a team action, the Blue Devils took an easy victory, 186-217, behind the swinging of Randy Workman and Todd Bigelow, both having a 46, and Robin Kudrna and Rod Hooper, both carding a 47.

Both the A and B squads will play Thursday (tonight) against Norfolk High School at Norfolk.

L. B. Fby of Sidney holds the state hook-and-line record for brook trout with a 11-pound, 4 ounce fish taken from Lake McCaughy in 1950.

'Humble Bluegill' Highly Underrated In Sporting Potential, Management

LINCOLN — Which is Nebraska's most important species of fish? Some might say it is the largemouth bass, the walleye, rainbow trout, or even the channel catfish. But, Phil Agee, chief of the Game and Parks Commission's Bureau of Wildlife Services, nominates the humble bluegill.

"The bluegill is the key to much of the warmwater fishing in Nebraska, including the Salt Valley lakes, Sand Hills lakes, and the thousands of farm ponds throughout the state," he said, "but, the bluegill's role is highly underrated, both in fisheries management and in sporting potential."

"Fishermen have often heard fisheries biologists plead with them to take more bluegill, but I don't believe anglers fully understand why we ask this," he said.

"Most anglers know that bass and bluegill live in the same waters, that bluegill are very prolific and can overpopulate a lake, and that bass keep overpopulation partially under control by feeding on small bluegill."

"But, they do not seem to realize that they thwart management of bluegill if they insist on fishing for nothing but bass. An angler concentrating exclusively on bass automatically eliminates himself and the bass he catches as harvesters of bluegill," he said.

"What man calls 'stunting' with bluegill seems to be an inevitable natural condition in most lakes and ponds, unless man intervenes, according to Agee.

This apparently natural condition is far from what the angler considers ideal. Instead, he wants a somewhat unnatural fish population somehow tailored to his standards, with many bass of all sizes, including a number of lunkers. He also wants an assortment of panfish that provides a keeper for his stringer as well as smaller ones to serve as forage for the bass, Agee said. "Nature does not often provide such a population, so man must manipulate fish numbers to produce this. Here is where fishing for bluegill comes into play."

"Over the years, fisheries biologists have determined that a body of water will support a given number of pounds of fish, in certain ratios of different species. These figures have been projected to harvest ratios so that, if an angler takes a pair of 5-pound bass from a lake, he or another fisherman would have to balance his effort by harvesting 50 to 100 pounds of bluegill."

"Since the majority of anglers concentrate on bass rather than bluegill, this ideal harvest ratio is seldom achieved. As a result, most bluegill populations are badly underfished," Agee said.

Despite his tendency to overpopulate, the bluegill is still the panfish most compatible with largemouth bass, and he does well in conjunction with crappie and northern pike. Other sunfish are more prone to overpopulation than the bluegill, and they are smaller in size and less appealing to anglers. Crappie are also likely to overpopulate, and they compete with bass and other predators for minnows, while bluegill live on plankton and insects.

Among the bluegill's endearing traits are his gameness on light tackle, the variety of methods that will take him, and his excellence on the table.

that the State Aeronautics Board rejected earlier plans for a circular hangar.

The Board rejected the plans, he said, because the proposed six hangars would be too congestive for the airport.

Magdanz said that new plans were sent to the Board which included only four carousel hangars but that it might be better and more faster to submit plans for a T-hangar so that bids could be let before the June 1 deadline.

According to Magdanz, the Board was more receptive to the T-hangar plans and would probably accept the plans in order for the council to let bids and still retain state aid.

"If we don't do this," he said, "we might end up losing the state aid if we do not let the bids out by June 1."

Magdanz told the group that many plane owners in Wayne are leary of the carousel hangar because any person who stores his plane in the hangar could have access to all the planes.

The council unanimously voted to have City Attorney Addison draw up an ordinance in favor of the city vacating an alley east of Dearborn between Sixth and Seventh to allow new business in the area.

Army Reserves Observe 64th Birthday

Persons or organizations which celebrate anniversaries normally receive gifts, but the United States Army Reserve, which marks its 64th birthday in April, prefers to give them. Many of the Reserve's 3,500 units and almost 1,000,000 members will observe its founding by Congress in 1908 with a Community Month—a program of projects throughout April designed to improve the places in which its members live, work and train.

This is the fourth consecutive year in which the Army Reserve has observed its anniversary with a Community Month, but this year special emphasis is scheduled for projects tackling the most serious problems plaguing the nation's communities.

The project will range from efforts to preserve the ecology to providing services for civilian hospitals and clinics short of skilled personnel. The program also will stress aid for the physically and economically deprived and for alienated youth in communities across the nation.

Army Reservists are particularly suited to take on such community betterment efforts because many of the skills their units require parallel those in the civilian community. They increasingly are undertaking this broadscale program as part of their regular training to reinforce their readiness to meet any national emergency.

Moist Hands, Metal Combine to Make A Perfect Conductor for Electricity

Though electricity is one of modern society's greatest assets, the Nebraska Medical Association urges families to be aware of electrical safety.

Any adult may use a fork to spear a piece of toast from the electric toaster with great aplomb, hazardous as it is. Imagination of the same act by a child who does not even realize the hazard, and may imitate incorrectly, can be fatal. The incident has happened.

Moist hands, a metal fork, and the toaster's metal casing are a perfect combination for the most fatal building measuring 40 by 28, dedicated in 1927, two years after the congregation's founding. This building is located today at 413 E. Seventh and is occupied as Kay's Repair Shop.

At the time of the dedication of this chapel the congregation numbered 40 communicant members and a Sunday school of nine pupils.

On March 15, 1942 the congregation dedicated a new face-brick edifice which served adequately until the late '50's when it became necessary to house some Sunday school classes in a former residence which stood at the corner of Ninth and Main. Groundbreaking ceremonies for the present enlarged and renovated church building were held April 1, 1962 and in November of that year the completed addition was formally dedicated. The congregation today numbers approximately 600 baptized persons.

In recent years an undergraduate seminary student has assisted, serving also as a campus pastor at Wayne State. Present intern is Vicar Don Wells.

Folks buying upholstered furniture today can be better informed on the cleaning methods recommended for the particular fabric used on the item. Cleaning codes appearing on woven fabric swatch cards have been worked out by a joint industry Upholstery Standards Committee in cooperation with the fabric mills to make approved cleaning methods available to consumers.

Symbols and their meaning as adopted by the Joint Committee are summarized as follows: W—Water-based cleaning agents or foam may be used for cleaning.

S—Only mild, pure water-free dry cleaning solvents may be used for cleaning.

W-S—Water-based cleaning agents and foam may be used for cleaning.

X—This fabric should be vacuumed or brushed lightly to remove soil. Do not use foam or liquid cleaning agents of any type.

Easy care Olefins and fabrics with soil-repellent finishes are becoming more evident on the market. Olefin fibers have a built-in resistance to soil and can be sponged free of soil.

Meet the Candidates Bill Workman Pleads for Tighter School Budgeting

Editor's Note: Bill Workman of 704 Crainland Road is a candidate for the 1972, District 17 School Board. At The Wayne Herald's invitation, he prepared the following comments for publication:

"I have labeled myself a 'Concerned Individual.' I believe I am correct in this assumption. I am concerned that out of some 2,000 adults only approximately 800 to 900 actually voted last election.

"My concerns, as well as most individuals', stem primarily from the problems at hand. These problems, I feel, are basically high taxes and the need for tighter budgeting.

"High taxes." I believe that expresses it mildly. But, on the other hand, I have no solutions, no answers, no big promises. I can only say, if elected, I will try to find some answers. I do know, in order to continue to have as fine a school system as we now have, and in order to continue to have the number of highly qualified teachers we now have, lowering our present tax levy will not be an easy job.

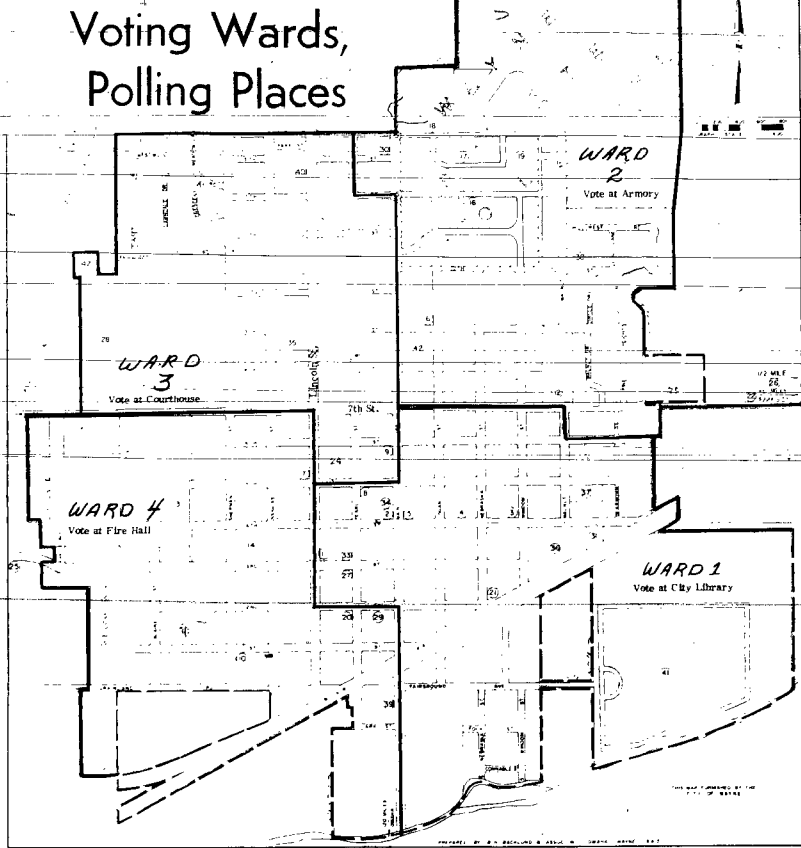

"Tighter budgeting." Let's spend our money on the things that will contribute to the teaching of our children, not the beautification of our parking lots or the housing of our school buses. Let's improve our present teaching methods and existing facilities.

Bill Workman

"I believe that all governing bodies will prosper with new faces, new ideas, new desires and new enthusiasm. I, as a candidate for school board, would like to help supply some of these new ways.

"I would like to close with an appeal. I appeal to you young people who have recently acquired this 'great privilege' of voting, to you middle-aged people who are raising your families in this school district, and to the older generation who has had the privilege of voting many years. Register and then get out and vote for the candidate of your choice on May 9, 1972.

Meet the Candidates Parr Stresses Quality of Education, Burden on Public to Pay High Taxes

Editor's Note: John D. Parr, 806 W. First, is a candidate for the Wayne-Carroll Board of Education. At The Wayne Herald's invitation, he prepared the following views for publication:

John D. Parr

My fellow Americans—Education is my business, so I am deeply concerned with both quality of instruction and the taxpayers' ability to pay.

I have been an elementary teacher and principal, high school teacher, guidance counselor, superintendent of schools, head of a college department of education and psychology, director of student teaching, placement, certification, and other related positions.

My relatives have been farmers, home owners, businessmen, church builders and students in the Wayne-Carroll area for over 50 years (the Wright family), so the financial outcomes and current problems are not totally unknown.

The tax burden is far too heavy for farmers, people on low incomes and the hard working middlemen who all are trying to keep their heads above water in times of high prices.

There's a time to go forward and a time to retreat, perhaps, we're "living too high on the hog" in our schools, considering the ability to pay in this area is quite conservative.

We all want good schools and teachers, but there is a limit, perhaps our philosophy, goals and objectives need revisiting so that our tax dollars are meeting the basic needs in education.

This rural area cannot afford private lessons at public expense. We cannot afford special programs that our Educational Service Unit is intended to serve.

Our students need discipline, moral and ethical values taught. And in intramural programs that keeps them off the streets, physically fit and socially ready for tomorrow's responsibilities.

Think about this—John D. Parr.

NE Nebraska Soil Conservationists Honor Leonard Miller Friday Night

Over 70 Soil Conservation Board members, supervisors, personnel and contractors, representing all 12 districts in Northeast Nebraska, attended the recognition dinner Friday at the Laurel Wagon Wheel honoring District Conservationist Leonard Miller, Hartington. Miller will retire at the end of the month after serving with the Soil Conservation Service for 27 years.

He was known throughout the district as a strong advocate for grasslands and tree planting.

Master of ceremonies was Warren Patefield, Laurel, representing Cedar County Soil and Water Conservation District supervisors. Other speakers were Norman Custer, Hartington ASCS; Bob Wagner, Hartington, former county extension agent; Bob Childers, district conservationist from Neligh; Wild Burney, Hartington, SCS technician. Walt Steffen, vice-chairman of the Cedar County Supervisors, presented Miller a plaque of appreciation. Mr. Miller received a corsage and Capt. James Miller, the couple's son, was introduced.

Miller started with the Soil Conservation Service in May of 1941 at Hebron, spent some time in the U. S. Army, and returned to Soil Conservation Service work in Columbus. He came to Cedar County Jan. 1, 1945, where he had worked since.

Seidenburg: Make Life Meaningful

Loneliness. A word, according to Webster's International Dictionary, means a state of depression or dejection from being alone. But Paul Seidenburg still doesn't know what the word means.

"I've learned to live one day at a time," Seidenburg told about 250 people at the third annual Wayne and Stanton County Farm Bureau banquet, "which has given me a new meaning to life."

Seidenburg's "new meaning to life" developed, he said, when his wife, Virginia, died three years ago of an incurable disease.

"You don't know what it is to lose something you love, until it happens. And then you feel that you have lost everything."

But Seidenburg and his family of two sons and one daughter, Rebbe and Mrs. Kenneth Victor, set four goals to retain what they have and build a new future.

"Our goals were to obtain the finest medical care for Virginia; two, keep the children informed of what was happening in the world and what was being done about it; three, contact Virginia's family and keep them informed; and lastly, make each day meaningful, productive and happy as possible."

The first three were the Seidenburg family.

Way Back When

Playing No Favorites

The letter read: "This is a request I hope you can take care of. I have just sent in some money for a fine I had to pay." "I asked the judge if she could keep it out of the paper, but she said she had no control over this." "So I was wondering if you could just omit this if you should come across this line. It would be greatly appreciated." Unless it would be the expressed desire for an editor to leave town or "drop dead," there probably is no request more oftentimes made than to keep a police or court docket entry out of the newspaper.

And, the idea that the home town newspaper keeps the names of its more influential persons or bigger advertisers out of the police news is probably as common as the coffee shop talk of how every person who has run for a political office accepted under-the-table money when construction contracts were let.

We have never, known an editor who would consent to such "subtle" tactics. We have listened to all types of sob stories in a plea to keep a name out of the paper when a law was violated—some of them as "academy award performances" and others that were downright heart-rippers, cases where a job or marriage could be in jeopardy with the publication of the name.

Then, there have been the threats. If we printed the name of the person found guilty by the courts. Not often, and usually a last-ditch maneuver, but most editors have experienced the "don't print it or else" ultimatum.

On those occasions you darn sure wish you were selling neckties for a living or sacking groceries—or anything besides being an editor.

But never, knowingly, have we omitted printing a court docket entry—after there has been a disposition of the case.

This is where many persons are unfamiliar about the functions of the law, courts and news media.

A person may be detained by law enforcement officials for an alleged misdemeanor—but no charges filed. If the person is freed by the law and no further action taken, his or her name will not appear in print in connection with any alleged misdemeanor.

This constantly brings up the cry of " favoritism" by some people, who were aware that the person had been detained by the courts.

Most newspapers protect the identity of juveniles, except in felony cases, until there is some disposition by the courts.

Many persons believe the news media is getting privileged information. Not so. Dockets are open to the public, so, if you were picked up for beating up on the Little Mrs. last night, that record may have been read by several persons before the reporter went on his beat.

Seemingly contradicting ourselves, not ALL records are public information. We respect the right of a person to have his name omitted from the hospital entry or dismissal record if he or she requests. And, while your neighbor may find out how much taxes you paid in 1971, he'd get a cold shoulder if he tried to find out the amount of your gas, light or water bill last month.

Newspaper employees commonly hear the complaint that "your name wouldn't be published if you were picked up by the police and fined."

Come look at the south wall of our composing room sometime. On it are taped any ticket that any employee has received—even warnings.

What's more, it is The Herald's custom to shout it to the world when a co-worker has been fined by putting the story on the front page.

One recent offender not only had to pay a fine, but had to write the story and headlines as well for the paper—to be put on Page 1.

To which he commented "that's the same as making a person carry his own cross."

An Indiana editor recently found that some days it just doesn't pay to leave the house.

He had a completely blank mind on filling his column space, so he simply printed the Ten Commandments—with no editorial comment.

After the newspaper was published, the editor received a letter from a disgruntled reader saying:

"Cancel my subscription; you're getting personal."

That's a real guilty conscience.

Both Sides Now

Voices, both from the light and dark sides of the Viet Nam issue, have cried until all that remains are echoes.

For a son of a people whose echoes, ranging from "Hell no, we won't go" to "one, two, three, four... what are we fighting for?" have bounced off the eardrums too many times to make the argument relatively unrelative to the issues of the "War of the people."

But for those who still believe in doing what is right, whether preaching for war or praying for peace, their job still remains at hand. And who is to say either party is wrong? Except, of course, history itself.

It may seem a "copout" to say neither may be wrong or right, in which case, maybe it is a copout.

But is the war, or should the war, be the central issue? What about the men who fought the war and are now disabled or prisoners of war? Is it fair to say they were right or wrong in their actions in fighting the Vietnam war?

If they were wrong in fighting, does that make those men and their families who moved to Canada to escape the draft right?

The same can be said in the reverse. If our American soldiers believed that they were right in fighting that war, are those people who some call "draft dodgers" wrong in their beliefs and should be banned from ever entering this country again?

The central point seems to be "what about those persons who stood up and made the decision to fight or not fight. Should either be condemned for his actions because at the time the action was made, the country did not agree?"

Since the time when many young people were children, parents have tried to stress the importance of making a decision and following through with that decision. If a person believes that his actions are right, for example not fighting a war that seems unjust, and feels the best way to show that his actions are right is not to partake, then he or she has made a decision to the best of his or her knowledge.

Sen. Robert Taft Jr. proposed a bill in Congress that would give amnesty to those people who avoided the draft in going to Canada or another foreign country by putting these people on projects that would serve the country.

It is nice of Sen. Taft to be so generous to let the "draft dodgers" gain their freedom back after fighting for a cause they believed.

State Aid to Education A 'Hot Potato' for Years

LINCOLN—The state's role in financing elementary and secondary education has been a hot legislative topic for at least a decade.

Back at the turn of the century, there was a state mill levy to provide funds for local schools, but the state dropped out and didn't get back in until 1967.

With the adoption of a state sales and income tax package, formulas for distributing some of the state-collected revenues to the school districts were adopted. The funding level was set at $25 million per year.

In 1969, another $10 million was added to the kitty and $35 million has been allocated ever since. The 1971 Legislature tried to add $50 million to the pot, but two attempts to override Gov. J. James Exon's veto failed by a single vote.

The lawmakers this year tried a different approach. Instead of increasing or trying to the existing formula funding, they proposed a new one which sponsors said would guarantee property tax relief and prevent school districts from expanding their budgets.

That bill, too, bounced against the veto hurdle.

And, now, the look is to 1973.

Exon says he will organize a committee to help him devise a state aid bill and attack the problem of property tax rates.

Meanwhile, Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly is asking state-wide organizations to join with his interim study committee to do the same thing.

Warner, who has been called the "father of state aid," headed a committee which put together the ill-fated 1972 bill. He was the sponsor of the breakthrough 1969 legislation.

Warner says he has written letters to more than two-score organizations asking them to send representatives to committee meetings to put together proposed legislation for consideration in the 1973 session.

He says the governor—with whom he had a heated running battle in the 1972 session—is welcome to provide testimony to the legislative committee.

Russian Duke Was Nebraska's First Royal 'Tourist'

With Centennial celebrations cascading over Mid-America, it might be recalled that 1972 is also the 100th anniversary of the visit of the first royal tourist to the state of Nebraska: Grand Duke Alexis Romanoff of Russia, the third son of Czar Alexander.

Nebraska doesn't often have the honor of entertaining royalty and would not have had then, had not General Philip Sheridan in Washington hit on the idea of a Great Plains buffalo hunt to amuse the visitor.

President Grant had given Alexis the cold shoulder due to strained relations with Russian Minister Catasary, and the duke was glad to accept the overtures of the friendly military hero of the Civil War.

Young Duke Alexis was here primarily because his father wished to separate him from one Alexandra Zhukovskaya, a lady in waiting at the court. The Czar thought his son wanted to devote to the young lady and dictated separation as a means of cooling their ardor.

It is interesting to note that the duke and his entourage were accompanied by a mustachioed chap not unlike in appearance the serious swain to today, spoke English with some ease and wowed the ladies in Boston and New York—as well as in Petrograd. And he is reputed to have become entranced on a cool moonlit evening with an Indian girl somewhere out on Red Willow Creek, Hayes County, in January of 1872.

Between Washington and Nebraska, the duke made the rounds of the East—Philadelphia, Buffalo, Harvard University, Niagara Falls, into Canada, Chicago—accepting the adulation of the socialites. Tailors rushed into production suits patterned after Alexis' naval uniform; bars served "Alexis cocktails."

The Omaha Daily Herald, one of the many Nebraska State Historical Society sources detailing the arrival of the Duke in Nebraska, on Jan. 12, 1872, saluted his royal visitor: "Omaha, with one heart and accord greets the Grand Duke Alexis... The older residents of Omaha have particularly pleasing recollections that Dr. W. R. Thrall was one of a considerable number of surgeons... In the great war of the Crimea (1854), Dr. Thrall was in the habit of recounting his experiences in the Russian Army and bears strong testimony to the goodness of a people..." By Jan. 14 the duke's party was in North Platte, where it de-trained and moved westward into the celebrated Pawnee reservation about 50 miles to the southwest. William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody had selected the camp and made arrangements for Chief Spotted Tail's Indian band to meet the Russians. The Indian camp was to the southwest of Red Willow Creek, the soldier camp north of it. On the lower ground was the main camp of U. S. Army officers General Sherman and George A. Custer) and the 22-man Russian Contingent.

Custer was the life of the party and the colorful Cody came in for a good share of the attention. He knew the country, hunting methods, and served tactfully as guide for the Duke, who would not have fared so well without him.

The camp site, where interested area historians have erected a marker, has been the locale for a number of historical meetings, the last of which was in October, 1971, by the North Platte Posse of the Westerners.

The Imperial Highness supposedly shot a total of eight Buffalo, and a Kansas City reporter sent to cover the hunt commented on his "masterful horsemanship," though he once fell from his mount into the mud. Also taking a header was one of his spangled royal servants, whose mishap was reported by an awed but illiterate Army orderly: "Cimnel, sah, one of them there kings done fell onto his hons."

When the Russian band moved by train through Wyoming to Denver, then to Kit Carson, in eastern Colorado, where there was a second buffalo hunt. A stop was made at Topeka, where Governor James Harvey entertained the party at the state house. One rustic Jayhawker explained to the cultured duke, who was interested in the state motto "Dei astra per spera": "Them words, your honor, is Latin." To which election. They don't have any opposition, barring write-in campaigns.

The unopposed lawmakers are Sens. Eugene T. Mahoney of Omaha, Richard Marvel of Hastings and Thomas C. Kennedy of Newman Grove.

Among other duties of the voters May 9 will be the selection of the Nebraska delegations to the Democratic and Republican national conventions.

The GOP primary voters will select 16 delegates—four in the second district and six in each of the other two—and the Democrats will choose 22—eight each in the first and second districts and six in the third.

Three districts have five candidates vying for general election ballot spots. One is the rural Sarge County district in which Sen. Orval Keyes of Springfield is asking for re-election. The others are the downtown Lincoln district in which Sen. Swanson is again a candidate and the Panhandle district in which Sen. Robert L. Clark of Sidney is the incumbent.

Clark's district includes Cheyenne, Kimball and Banner counties and a portion of Scotts Bluff County.

Roger Nelson, president of the Elkhorn Valley Iris Society, and Larry Harder, a member of the group, recently attended a meeting of the Greater Omaha Iris Society, where Nelson filled a speaking engagement. He reviewed iris varieties in general, with special emphasis on the good and bad features of newer varieties. At the Elkhorn Valley meeting held Friday in Woodland Park, Nelson announced that a garden tour would be held in Norfolk following Memorial Day. The tour will be open to members of the local society and area garden clubs.

An October harvest party, under the direction of Mrs. Roy Johnson, was scheduled. Mrs. John Cox presented the program, "Median Iris." Mrs. Lillian Blerman reviewed the Standard Tall Bearded, Intermediate Bearded, Miniature Tall Bearded and border Bearded Iris, and Larry Harder presented a slide program on all classes, miniatures through tall bearded varieties. Guests were Mrs. Lea Collins and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Muehlmeier. Winside, Lunch was served by Mrs. Emma Pederson and Mrs. Pauline Marquardt.

color in several hues. Some other plants that can add ground cover variety are prostrate raspberry, miniature rhubarb and wild strawberries.

Perennials can be selected for variation in time of flowering to add color throughout the season. Bulb species and iris provide early blooming color. Mid and late season color is supplied by hollyhock, peonies, dahlias, day lilies, columbine and carnations. Asters and gay feather can give late season blossoms.

Annuals cannot be overlooked as they cost less and are easily seeded. Zinnia, verbena, cockscomb, snapdragon and petunia vary in height and color. These can be planted in conjunction with perennials—both low growing and tall—as seen in marigolds.

Ornamental vegetables add color of green, bronze, yellow, red and orange. These included flowering kale, gourds, ornamental corn as well as others.

Examples of these plants can be seen in catalogues or shown to you by your nurseryman. By careful planning, an exotic garden can be planned and maintained easily. Plant low growing plants is abundant.

Silver chrysanthemum develops as a ball of silver from 12 to 18 inches across which is very effective as a border.

The sedums are succulents in several foliage colors and textures and effective in rock gardens.

Creeping phlox is a mass of in the foreground and then gradually increase height in the background. This arrangement creates a picturesque scene. Color can be found throughout the season by the selection of different species and varieties.

In any event some of the most pleasurable hours can be spent in planning, planting and caring for a flower garden. Good luck and enjoyment.

Shouldn't Mix

Mixing corn herbicide and insecticide granules in the same hopper is not advisable. The best bet is for separate application equipment.

There are four basic reasons for not mixing. First, pesticides are not presently registered by the Environmental Protection Agency for use this way (there are no label directions for this kind of application). Second, the granules are often quite different densities, making it difficult to maintain a uniform mix of the two chemicals. Third, some of the insecticides are highly toxic and present a hazard to the person mixing them with the herbicide granules. Fourth, band width and depth of incorporation or coverage vary with herbicide and insecticide applications.

A 12-14 inch wide band for pre-emergence herbicides on surface planted corn is suggested and application should be made behind the packer wheel. A 7-inch band for insecticides is recommended and should be applied ahead of the packer wheel.

Packers Reluctant to Buy Hogs From Farms Known to Be Infested With TB

LINCOLN—Recent changes in meat inspection regulations have made market hogs with tuberculosis (TB) undesirable property, and are making packers reluctant to buy from farms known to be infested with TB, Nebraska swine producers have been warned.

Dr. William Ahlswede, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension swine specialist, said inspection procedures which went into effect in mid-February have resulted in a number of pork carcasses being passed for cooking. Cooking of meat from such carcasses at 170 degrees before it leaves the packing house reduces the value of the carcass by 50 to 65 per cent, Ahlswede explained.

"It has been estimated that these losses could exceed $2 million this year," he added. Tuberculosis is not a particular health problem for pigs, but pork from infected animals is one of several animal products which can transmit TB to humans, the NU specialist stated.

"The loss in value to packers is causing them to buy more carefully. Many markets are beginning to tattoo pigs so problem farms can be identified and the disease eliminated," Ahlswede reported.

Nearly all TB in pigs is avian tuberculosis, the poultry type of TB. Most cases of swine tuberculosis can be traced to old hens, Ahlswede advised. "More TB in pigs is found in areas where farm flocks of laying hens are common, and old hens have higher infection rates than young hens. The TB problem seems to be centered in a relatively few herds, each with high infection rates."

Owners of commercial herds with high rates of TB infection should consider depopulation and cleaning up, to avoid losing their market, Ahlswede urged. Purebred breeders with infected herds of expensive breeding stock may choose to test all of their animals and eliminate carriers, he said. One of the problems, he said, is that test reagents are not currently available in Nebraska.

"Since there are no visible signs of TB in pigs, testing is required to determine carriers," Ahlswede emphasized.

The NU specialist summarized the four steps producers should take to reduce the incidence of TB in swine:

—Avoid contact by pigs with old hens.

—Rotate swine lots and pastures frequently. Infected buildings and lots have been known to be contaminated for two years or longer.

—Eliminate infected stock from herds where the disease has been detected.

—Depopulate entire infected herd if necessary.

Flower Garden for 1972
If you haven't noticed, spring is here; or at least the calendar tells us so. And if decisions aren't already made for this year's flower garden, right now is the time to start.

The University of Nebraska Horticultural Department planted many annuals, perennials and ground covers at the University of Nebraska's Lincoln campus in 1971 to determine plantings best suited for the area.

A series of ground cover material for plantings around walks, under trees and places where it is difficult to reach with a mower showed several species adapted to our climate.

Vinca minor is a shade tolerant, slow-growing plant with small blue flowers. It is especially desirable for plantings around trees, buildings and where shade is abundant.

Silver chrysanthemum develops as a ball of silver from 12 to 18 inches across which is very effective as a border.

Bean Growers Sprouting In Back Yards

It's a snap-growing snapbeans in your "own back yard."

Results of numerous research trial plantings between 1954 and 1966 show that snap beans may be successfully grown in all regions of Nebraska, writes R. E. Neid, associate professor of horticulture, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, in Extension Circular 72-1223.

"When planted at the right time and given proper care, they are one of the more easily grown vegetables in home gardens," says Neid.

He says snap beans require relatively small space, their seed is large and easily planted, and they require little preparation for canning or freezing.

An adequate supply of moisture is essential and a high content of soil organic matter is desirable, Neid writes.

Copies of the Extension circular, "Growing Snap Beans in the Home Garden," can be obtained from county Extension agents around the state.

Bob Boals, Dakota City; Glen Tremayne, Walthill; George Olson, Wamego; Henry, Ron and Leon Bruns, Pender; and a lot in the Wayne area. These selection meetings and the final market day, probably at Iowa Beef Processors Plant at Dakota City are open to the public.

Women Experts at 'Manipulation'

The way to a man's heart is through his stomach. And a farmer's heart is no exception. But how is a farmer's wife going to stay close to his heart without a garden?

Well, the farmer's wife is no less feminine than any city wife when it comes to manipulating her mate.

And it seems like such a simple request. All he would have to do is make one or two swipes across the garden with his mammoth dirt-fiddling machinery.

From past experience every farm wife knows she must begin telling him about her plans for the garden plot the very minute he pulls the plow out of the shed.

And few things get better results than sweet, patient, feminine, artifice, constant reminding. Better known to her mate as nagging.

Yet, seldom does he even show the faintest acknowledgment of your pleadings until about a week or two before the plowing has been done.

Then one day as he comes in the house for dinner he wonders aloud what you are doing. There you are stirring the gravy and pouring the coffee and he wonders what you are doing.

His question really requires no answer nor does he expect one. So he continues, "Well, I drove past the garden and since you weren't out there I didn't know where to plow."

Of course he drove past the garden. Just as he does every time he comes in or goes out the lane. But nonetheless he's thinking about it.

The 'Primer'

You set a plate of golden brown, freshly baked beans on the table—one of the best influencing foods known to a farmer's wife.

Then you sweetly tell him as soon as he's finished eating you'll gladly show him where to plow the garden. The same place he's been plowing it for the past 10 years.

After dinner while he's fueling the tractor you run to the garden to make sure everything is in perfect readiness.

You've spent several afternoops laboriously unwiring and rolling the cribbing from around three sides of the garden plot. Only the posts remain.

And he's always missed them before. That is he's missed those that are still standing.

Anyway, here he comes. He starts to make his usual swing around through the edge of the grove, thus getting a straight shot at the garden. A loud cracking, limb-breaking sound, brings him to an abrupt halt.

Oh, oh. The last 10 years when he made that swing he didn't have a cab on the tractor.

Survey Damage

When he gets the tractor and plow backed out of the trees you are there to help survey the damages. Only a couple of scratches.

Luckily the tree limbs hit the front of the cab and he stopped before it hit the aerial on top. But he doesn't consider that an consolation whatsoever.

You suggest several other angles of approach. He could at least try some other way of entering the garden. But he flatly rejects your suggestions by informing you that he doesn't have a toy that can be turned on a dime. Besides he has more important things to do.

That's okay by you. You didn't want to break your back hoeing a garden all summer. Then you must have thought about the tomatoes and fresh-creamed peas he would be without.

Suddenly he mounts the tractor again. He roars across the yard and stops at the far end of the garden, drops the plow in the ground and starts across the garden.

Berries Transplanted

As a result several feet of your strawberry patch is dug into the garden. No wonder you have the best patch in the country. It gets transplanted regularly every year.

You had no real idea what a mammoth piece of machinery that tractor was until it is corralled into such a small space. When the radiator of the tractor reaches one end of the garden, the tail wheel of the plow is just crossing the other end. The section of the drag that he pulls behind the plow isn't even in the garden.

He has to stop at the beginning of each round and lift the drag off and stop at the other end to put it back on the plow. Thus avoiding any sudden, unnecessary contact with stationary objects.

Just as you are secretly praising him for knowing how to expertly operate such a complicated piece of machinery you hear a thud, see him temporarily halt, spin the wheels and lunge ahead again.

One less post to wire the cribbing to.

But it looks like you're saved again. At least the post broke off even with the ground and didn't jab into the tractor tire. Well, at least the air didn't come out of it.

But you can almost see the windows of the tractor cab fogging over from the rising temperature inside.

To avoid running over the broken-off post during the next round, he makes a large, rounding curve at the end of the garden. Oh, well, you don't mind planting on the contour.

Then he stops to ask if you want him to make another trip across the garden. He is still a long ways from the fence. Yet another time across means the land wheel of the tractor will be against the fence.

And on top of your rhubarb, raspberry bushes, and asparagus and onions.

But you're willing to wager their comeback against you losing several feet of weeds all summer for nothing. So you give him the go ahead.

After he finishes the last round, he stops to put the drag on the plow before going out to the field. After finding little damage done to the tire and cab his temperature, as usual, returns to normal. He even takes more time out and helps you unroll the cribbing. And unless you are a farmer's wife you can't really appreciate what this extra half-hour detour means to a farmer.

Just for that maybe you'll swipe a bucketful of his commercial fertilizer and grow even bigger tomatoes this year. Guess he's earned them—again.

Besides, by the time they're due you may need them to help persuade him to do something else.

Orchardist: Fire Blight on the Loose

Orchardists beware! Fire blight is on the loose.

This disease continues to be one of the most serious diseases of apples and pears. As the name suggests, the typical symptom is a burned appearance on infected foliage. Newly infected twigs become watery, dark green and somewhat oily. The succulent tissue then dries, shrivels, darkens and the end of the twig bends over at the tip. The infected blossoms, leaves and twigs have the appearance of being scorched by fire.

Fire blight is caused by a bacterium that lives from one season to the next in cankers on infected twigs, branches or trunks. In the spring, the bacteria multiply rapidly and start oozing to the surface of "old" cankers in the form of clear, milky or amber-colored droplets. Rain, wind and insects help to spread bacteria from oozing cankers to blossoms and new leaves. Infected blossoms will, turn brown and die.

Losses from this disease can be reduced if growers follow a blight-prevention program of sanitation and spraying. Since the source of infection is old cankers it is wise to cut out the diseased wood. This should be done while the trees are dormant in order to reduce the chances of spreading the bacteria on saws and other cutting tools. When removing the infected branches or twigs, cut at least eight inches below the visible signs of infection. Disinfect all pruning tools after each cut by dipping them into a five per cent chlorox solution.

Commercial antibiotics are also available. A commercial formulation containing streptomycin (Agrimycin 17), when applied at a dosage level of 50-100 parts per million, is an effective spray material for controlling fire blight. It should be applied first at the pink stage (3-4 days before blossoms open) and repeated every 5-7 days for about three weeks.

Rapidly growing twigs which have been stimulated by excessive fertility or heavy pruning are extremely susceptible to infection. Therefore, it is best to use either manure or one of the slow-release fertilizers on young trees and susceptible varieties. If new plantings are planned in the future, resistant varieties are available. These include Delicious, Winesap and Northwestern Greening apples and Magness or Moonglow pears.

Yard & Garden Tips...

Q.—How much water should be put on a lawn, and how often should it be watered?

A.—It is impossible to say in any given instance how often water should be applied, because this depends on the amount of rainfall. Quite often, in the spring, laws are dry, especially around trees and shrubs which take a lot of water. This time of year, with lawns out of dormancy and growing, it's not uncommon for them to require one inch of moisture per week. Later in this summer, they'll require much more. A homeowner must gauge the situation by observing the temperature, wind and amount of rain received. A steel rod can be pushed into the ground to determine the depth of moisture.

Nursery Rhyme Characters Come to Life

LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN, Ga.—For more than two and a half centuries, the nursery rhymes of Mother Goose have sprung to life from the pages of picture books to delight the imaginations of countless millions of youngsters.

Now, in a place called Fairyland Caverns on Lookout Mountain near Chattanooga, Tenn., children are able actually to walk into the world of Mother Goose and see the nursery rhyme characters they know so well acting out their familiar scenes.

The unique creation is Mother Goose Village, the world's most complete presentation of Mother Goose nursery rhymes. It is located at Rock City Gardens, a 10-acre natural preserve that attracts nearly a million people each year to view its scenic beauty.

The entire setting for Mother Goose Village and each of the more than a hundred nursery rhyme characters were created at Rock City's own studio, and each is an original.

Youngsters view them by walking around a huge landscape crowded by a tall castle, which looks out over hills and valleys with streams and waterfalls, where the various storybook scenes are taking place.

They see such old friends as Humpty Dumpty, Little Bo-Peep and her sheep, Little Miss Muffet, Jack and Jill falling down the hill and even the cow jumping over the moon.

The colorful scenes are illuminated by ultra-violet, or "black" light, to add to the magical quality of the presentation.

Mother Goose Village is the newest addition to Fairyland Caverns, where additional fairytales are recreated, including Snow White, Cinderella, Jack and the Beanstalk, Little Red Riding Hood, Goldilocks and the Three Bears and many others.

And Santa Claus stops at Fairyland Caverns each December to have a personal chat with each young visitor.

Information on Mother Goose Village and Fairyland Caverns may be obtained by writing to P. O. Box 173, Chattanooga, Tenn. 37401.
