

Prather and Thomas Win Contested Races for Wayne City Council Seats

Frank Prather defeated incumbent R. H. Banister and John Strave failed in his attempt to unseat Jim Thomas in the two contested races for City Council seats in Tuesday's election.

The only other opposition was an unsuccessful write-in campaign by Arnold Zach for incumbent Darrel Fuelberth's spot in the Second Ward.

The newly-created First Ward had two seats to fill and neither candidate, Ivan Beeks nor Vernon Russell, was opposed.

Prather ousted Banister by a 189-134 margin in the Third Ward and Thomas had a 30-vote margin over Strave in the Fourth Ward, 165 to 135.

Fuelberth counted 259 votes in the Second Ward, with Zach receiving 48 write-in ballots.

Beeks, running for the four-year term in the First Ward, received 174 votes. Russell, seeking the two-year term in the same ward, wound up with 171 votes.

A total of 1,258 votes were cast in the four wards out of a total of 2,173 registered for a total of 2,000 at the polls. 58 per cent turned out at the polls. There were 244 votes cast out of 451 registered in the First Ward (54 per cent); 346 out of 613 in the Second Ward (56 per cent); 333 out of 528 in the Third Ward (63 per cent) and 335 of 581 in the Fourth Ward (58 per cent).

If many Wayne residents were found to be sleepy-eyed by their employers Wednesday morning, it is understandable. The voting tabulation at the Wayne County Courthouse was not completed until after midnight.

A large crowd was gathered in the hallway at the courthouse as County Treasurer Leon Meyer recorded the votes for city, county, state and national ballots on a large blackboard as the results were called out over a loudspeaker by County Clerk Norris Weible.

There were 13 county pre-chets, plus Whiside and the four Wayne wards, to be recorded after being brought in to the county seat from those voting places, where they had been tabulated by a counting board after the closing of the polls at 8 p.m.

Legislative Race Tight

A light-as-a-rum race developed in the 17th District Legislative race with the outcome for the two general election nominees to be decided by absentee ballot.

There were 245 absentee ballots set to be counted, 115 in Dakota County, 89 in Dixon County and 50 in Wayne County.

Voting by counties:

City Council Delays Action on Proposed Three Per Cent Tax on Telephone Co.

A decision to charge a three per cent occupation tax to the Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. was held off by the City Council Tuesday night after the council members voted to study the proposed tax.

F. A. Jaksha, a representative of Northwestern Bell Co., told the members that if a three per cent tax was charged to the company, Northwestern Bell would then levy, to the telephone user, the amount needed to cover the project cannot be built this year. During an open discussion period, the council heard from Wes Pfleger concerning the rental rates for the next 20 years for the use of T-hangers.

According to Pfleger, the proposed $45 per month rental fee should be set up for a 10-12 year period instead of a 20-year term because the future needs of the airport hangars cannot be determined now.

Concerning the Comprehensive Plan for the City of Wayne, the council decided to have Addison study the plan to check the legal See COUNCIL, page 7 three per cent charge.

Jaksha explained that the Nebraska Railway Commission allows the telephone company to transfer the cost, such as an occupational tax, upon the consumer.

"In effect," he said, "you would be taxing your own city."

Presently, Jaksha continued, Northwestern Bell services 99 towns in 78 counties. "Of those 99 or so towns, 62 have an occupational tax."

The council, under a motion made by Darrel Fuelberth, decided to have City Attorney John Addison study a proposed ordinance that would charge the telephone company with an occupational tax before the council would come to a decision.

NORTHEAST EXTENSION Notes

Wall paneling with a wood effect is usually made of plywood or hardboard. Wood effects are produced either by (1) veneers of thin top ply of hardboard facing or wood, or (2) simulated grain photographically produced either directly on the panel (plywood or hardboard) or printed on paper or a vinyl film laminated to the panel. Sometimes the panels are embossed to feel like real wood grain also. Questions to consider when buying wall paneling are: 1. Where is it to be used? Playroom, kitchen or living room? 2. Is it an economical size? Check dimensions needed before buying panels which vary from 36", 48", to 48x10 feet in size. 3. Are all the panels in the batch of similar lightness or darkness? One off-color grained panel can spoil the lot. 4. What about the thickness of the panel? Thickness ranges from 1/8 inch to 1/4 inch. Thin sheets can be used over walls or special backing while the thicker 1/4 inch sheets are better for going over studs or furring strips. 5. Is the panel treated on the back to guard against damage? Paneling may warp if subjected to excessive variations of moisture and temperature. 6. What is the flame spread of the product? A seal that shows the product has a spread of no more than 200 would be something to watch for in buying paneling for a kitchen or furnace room.

Wakefield Advances to Baseball Finals, Homer to Battle Wayne in Semi-Finals

The Wakefield Trojans advanced to the finals of the District 4 baseball tournament Tuesday by slipping past Randolph, 4-1.

Playing on the home field, the Trojans jumped on Randolph pitcher Randy Van Slyke in the second inning with Kevin Peters reaching base on an error with one out.

Kirk Gardner then singled and stole second to put runners at second and third. Peters scored on a passed ball to make the score 1-0 and advancing Gardner to third. Doug Soderberg reached base on an infield error and Gardner scored on an infield grounder by Bob Twite to make the Trojan lead 2-0.

Randolph picked up a run in the bottom of the third inning on two errors and an infield grounder.

The Trojans boosted their score to 3-1 when consecutive singles by Mike Barge and Steven Kay drove in another run. In the top of the seventh, the Wakefield team added its fourth and final run on a walk to Twite, a double by Gardner and another single by Kay to put the game away.

Next action for the Trojans will be in the championship game against the winner of the Homer-Wayne game Thursday. It will be the first time in the history of Trojan baseball that the Trojans have been in the championship game of the district tournament.

The winner of that game will play Wakefield in the championship game May 16 at 1 p.m. In the first round of district action, Homer blasted Ponca, 17-3.

Homer (0-7) was eager for its first season win and began early in the game by scoring in each of the six innings to stop the game after six on the 10-run rule. After four innings, the Knights led 7-0, with Ponca up to bat.

The Indians managed to score three runs but this was not enough as Homer batted across 10 more runs in the last two innings to put the game out of reach.

Homer takes its 1-7 record against top seeded Wayne, 7-2 in semi-final action at Wakefield Thursday at 1 p.m.

HAVE YOU HEARD ABOUT THE NEW

Rumbles

The Rumbles, the new Rumbles to be exact, is one of the Midwest's top rock groups. It consists of five guys from Omaha and Council Bluffs: Joe Brunworth, guitar; Bud Phillips, bass; Bob Ford, guitar; Scotti Hastings, drums and Bob Beardmore, organ.

They stay right on top of current trends in music, including their show selections from groups like Yes, Santana and Elton John to Led Zeppelin, Grand Funk and Alice Cooper plus many more. The Rumbles' own self-contained light show causes comment wherever they go.

There is a group effort to communicate to their audience not only music but a feeling of enthusiasm for life. It's impossible not to feel better at the end of a Rumbles' performance than when you came in. That is a pretty valuable product. "We're there with the intention that people have a good time and feel better," said guitarist Bob Ford. "Everything we do is done with the audience in mind. You can dance or just listen. It doesn't really matter."

The Rumbles come across strong whether you are a dancer or a listener, so don't miss them. They will be appearing at the WAYNE CITY AUDITORIUM, SATURDAY, MAY 13, from 9:00 p.m. til midnight.

If you have seen the new Rumbles you know. If you haven't, don't wait any longer. BE THERE.

Salaries Again Discussed For Employees Of Wayne-Carroll School District No. 17

Salaries for the classified staff of Wayne-Carroll School District No. 17 for the 1972-73 school year were referred to the negotiating team of Irvin Brandt and Wilbur Giese during the May meeting of the Board of Education Tuesday night at the board room at Wayne High School.

The classified staff includes secretaries, bus drivers and school nurses.

Mrs. Warren (Marge) Summers, head cook, was spokesman for the kitchen workers and asked that her employees be covered by insurance and be given 10 days a year sick leave, cumulative to 45 days.

In addition, she requested a raise from $150 to $165 for the first-year employee, from $170 to $180 for the second year, from $175 to $190 for three years, from $180 to $195 for four years, from $185 to $2 for five years, from $190 to $2.05 for six years, from $1.95 to $2.10 for seven years and an addition of an eight-year employee at $2.15. She asked that the assistant cook (now $2.02), the head cook at Carroll ($2.08), the head cook at Carroll ($1.95) all receive 20 cent raises per hour and that her own salary be raised from the present $2.42 per hour to $2.75 for 9 1/2 months.

The custodians were represented by Richard Powers, who asked that his six employees receive 20-cent-an-hour increases and that his own salary of $625 per month be considered for a raise. Presently, the six persons under Powers have a salary range from $2.65 per hour down to $1.80.

Powers also spoke for the bus drivers, who presently receive $135 a month the first year, $140 the second year, $145 the third year, $150 the fourth year, $155 the fifth year and $160 the sixth year and one driver who receives $165 a month. Powers asked for a $5 a month raise in addition to the automatic $5 raise given for each year of experience.

Herold (Gorris) Daniels spoke for the secretaries, also asking a 20-cent raise for four secretaries, who range from $2.45 per hour to $1.85. Mrs. Daniels asked a similar raise for her own salary of $500 per month and also suggested that the board approve car mileage, coffee breaks and regard all secretaries as full-time employees.

Three of which now are classified as part-time.

Another issue referred to the negotiations team concerned a letter to the board from the Wayne Education Association, requesting "exploratory discussions" on sabbatical leaves and leaves of absences and co-curricular activities and teacher assignments.

A lengthy discussion was held on plans for a storage building to house lawn and snow removal equipment but no specifications were submitted. Pierson made the motion to find out what the cost would be for a building to house small equipment now stored in the boiler room, fronted upon by the state fire marshal, and the costs of a larger building that would house buses and be large enough to facilitate the servicing of and providing minor maintenance for those buses.

Supt. Hahn announced that plans were being made to hold a four-week Title I summer session in June for students, kindergarten through eighth grade, needing work in remedial math and reading and an additional three-week remedial session in math for those students who will be participating in language disability workshop sponsored by Wayne State and the Wayne Public Schools the latter part of July.

Letters are being sent to parents of children eligible to attend summer school, including pupils from Carroll, Wayne and St. Mary's, at the West Elementary School.

The are now 88 students enrolled, those below the 40th percentile and who qualify economically.

In other business the board: Approved April bills in the amount of $5,601.59.

The council allocated $400 to the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department to sponsor several firemen to attend the state fire school May 19-21.

According to Fire Chief Pinkelman, seven to nine firemen were like to attend the meeting. "Since the city furnished the expenses last year I thought you would do it again this year. The program has proven to be very beneficial to the older members and could be of great help to the new members."

A request by Cecil Reed to add four more trailer lots to his trailer court was denied, because the council felt that the proposed addition of the trailers would only crowd the congested area.

The council further added that the people in the area objected to more trailer homes as well as the possible fluctuations in property values.

The members voted to delay the final decision in order to help the residents in the area a preliminary cost sheet to determine the amount each resident would have to pay.

Police Week • May 7-13

National Police Week. What better time to give special recognition to the men whose responsibility it is to insure the safety and well-being of Wayne residents and visitors. These men deserve public gratitude for their dedication to duty and the services they perform. For example, in 1971 the Wayne Police Force:

Answered 1,020 requests for service, investigated 168 traffic accidents and 96 criminal complaints, made 384 total arrests, spent 207½ hours in training, either assisted the ambulance or went on rescue runs 101 times, and logged 47,269 miles patrolling city streets.

In addition, Wayne police presented the following special courses to school-age youngsters: traffic safety, natural disaster, bicycle safety, municipal law enforcement, gun safety, pedestrian safety, self-protection, and the dangers of alcohol-drug abuse.

New Repair Shop Will Open in Carroll Soon

Curt and Cory Nelson don't mind playing in concrete, especially when it's just been poured for their dad's new garage in Carroll.

Curt, 5, and Cory, 2, got together with their eight-year-old sister, Dana, and their mother, Mrs. Letty Nelson, and put their hands in the freshly-poured concrete at the site of Nelson's Repair Shop.

"I hope to have the building finished and open for business by the middle of May," Letty Nelson said.

Construction for the 40 by 72-foot building began March 24. According to Nelson, present plans will be for a seven-car stall operation at an estimated cost from $10,000-$12,000.

Mrs. Nelson pointed out that the "friends and relatives were the biggest help in getting the project going."

Nelson is a 1970 graduate of Manpower Training School in Omaha. After graduation, he worked at Andrew Van Lines and later as a general mechanic at H. McLain Oil Co., Carroll.

The repair shop will provide ignition, transmission, air conditioning services as well as diesel and gas motor repairs.

VA Administration Questions, Answers

Q — I changed from college to a vocational school and now would like to make a second change. Is this permissible under the GI Bill?

A — Yes, the Veterans Administration may approve the second change if after consulting the new program is found to be in keeping with your abilities and interest and if there is a reasonable chance you can successfully complete the program.

Assisting Nelson in the operations will be a well-known celebrity in the Nelson family — Mrs. bookkeeping chores around the office.

Construction on Nelson's Repair, Carroll, is near completion as owner-operator Leroy Nelson and friends and relatives working on the 40x70 feet building. Also pitching in were his two sons, Curt 5, and Cory 2. Not pictured giving a helping hand were Mrs. Nelson and the Nelson's daughter Dana, eight months.

Q — I enlisted in the Air Force in 1964 and served four years. I was separated honorably in October, 1968. Am I entitled to 48 months of educational assistance?

A. No, unless you are or were also entitled to educational assistance under another VA law. You may then receive a combined total of up to 48 months. Otherwise, your maximum entitlement is 36 months of educational assistance under the GI Bill.

Way Back When

Water

Water. A nice drink to have around when you're thirsty. And it can be a nice substance to drink to help save your teeth.

But water, itself, can not do the trick. It takes fluoridated water.

"Many people are skeptical about fluoridated water," said Dr. R. E. Gormley, DDS, "because they thought it would put a funny taste into the water. Actually, the fluoridation doesn't affect the water at all."

Dr. Gormley, along with four other Wayne dentists, agreed that fluoridated water is the best thing for helping a person to save his teeth.

Presently Lincoln and Omaha are among the major Nebraska cities now using fluoridated water. But the list is increasing.

At a meeting of the Nebraska Dental Association governing body recently in Omaha, delegates approved a resolution to seek a bill in the 1973 Legislature requiring fluoridation of all community water supplies in the state.

"I'm all for it," said Dr. Richard DeNayer, "Studies have shown that fluoridated water is the best thing for the oral cavity in helping to prevent tooth decay. Water fluoridation, which helps protect the tooth enamel and makes it stronger, would cost the public about 10 cents per person per year.

"I support this kind of program 100 per cent," Dr. Gordon W. Shupe pointed out. "It is an inexpensive way to save a lot of money on teeth repair."

Dr. E. Wessie explained that fluoridated water would be a "wonderful thing." Already, he said, about 650,000 of the state's 1.5 million Nebraska residents live in areas which have fluoridated water. "I believe that installation of fluoridated water in this area as well as the state would be a good investment for each person."

Dr. R. E. Gormley and George H. Gohlisch both agreed that fluoridated water would help protect a person's teeth against cavities at a relatively low price of 10 cents per person.

At this point the price seems significant when it comes to welfare of a child's dental health. At 10 cents a year, who could complain?

Already six states have adopted the use of fluoridated water. Although some dentists agree that it takes about 10 years for net results to be known, it is not such a bad price to pay for that period. Of course, inflation will take its toll. But even 13 cents a year isn't bad.

Promises, Promises

With many of the elections now a thing of the past for a couple more years, it is going to be interesting to see how some of those who campaigned on a "hold the line on taxes" stand while advocating added programs and better educational facilities pull it off.

The line is about as old as the ones that Adam and Eve traded around the apple tree.

Not that candidates were not sincere in most cases—but feasibility is questionable. You can either have a cut in taxes platform or you can stump for improvements.

But it is as tough to have both the cake and frosting as it would be to demand from your "boss at home" to have steak on the table every night but trim the food budget at the same time.

Not to say there isn't a lot of fat that could be trimmed from most governmental operating budgets. But a penny saved here isn't going to offset the dollar spent on new programs.

Arch Booth, executive vice-president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, asks "How do you promise people more costly federal programs without admitting that their taxes will have to go up to pay the bills?"

Booth goes on to say that "for most of them, the solution has been to suggest that there are huge, untapped sources of revenue among the 'super rich.'"

It isn't all that simple, but, as Booth adds, "the facts seldom bother a political candidate in pursuit of votes."

Many of the "super rich" have escaped paying a single penny income tax with the major portion of the tax burden falling on the "little guy."

A drive to correct this inequity is commendable and meets with our get-gam-eter response. But even closing that gate isn't a financial cure-all by any means.

Confiscating all the income of those who make more than $100,000 a year would produce $8.5 billion more revenue.

A mighty respectable figure—right. But, actually a drop in the old bucket considering that the government spends more than $245 billion a year.

Policemen give much more than speeding tickets.

Most Only Amused by 'Superstate' Merger Proposal

(Editor's note: The following story was written as an assignment in the University of Nebraska-Lincoln School of Journalism depth reporting class. The author is a senior from Omaha.)

By Linda Larson

Imagine a new state larger than Texas... a vast state of plains and hills and prairies and mountains.

A state that produces corn, wheat, cotton, hay, peanuts, dairy products, cattle and hogs, yet engages in manufacturing, meat industry, mining, finance, transportation, aircraft production, tourist attraction and is the site of many military installations.

Imagine a single state having the three top football teams in the nation.

This is what Rep. Frederick A. Linde proposed in a bill he introduced in the Kansas House of Representatives this year.

The bill would have set up a commission to study the possibility of merging Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma into one superstate. The bill was killed in committee but Linde, who says most people were amused by his plan, vowed to introduce it again next year.

Sixth Largest

The state Linde proposes would have a population of about 5,490,000, making it the sixth largest in the United States after New York, California, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Texas.

It would come in second behind Alaska in area with 322,625 square miles. And it would be an auto-license designer's nightmare with a national high of 338 counties.

The state would produce about 543 million bushels of wheat and 479 million bushels of corn a year. At least 10 metropolitan areas would be part of such a superstate.

Linde said he just thought of the idea of merging states one day and "it seemed logical."

There are many advantages to the proposal, he said. State services would be more efficient and effective if combined, Linde said, and salaries would be higher.

Two years ago Kansas hired the Nebraska state health director for the same job in Kansas, posing an unnecessary replacement problem for Nebraska, Linde said.

"Our director can administer four states as well as one, because problems and solutions are the same."

Linde said "the present director of the Colorado legislative services was hired from a similar job in Kansas" and could easily handle the services for a combined legislature.

"Rivers flow and air travels from state to state and it is rather silly for a Kansas legislator to be stopped at the Colorado line in investigating a fish bill on the Arkansas River," Linde said, "or for his Colorado counterpart to stop at the Kansas line when tracing the extent of the kill on the same river."

Less Competition

Another advantage is that competition between states would be reduced, according to Linde.

Most damaging is competition to be the location of new industries and businesses, he commented.

"It is almost absurd—each session the director of the Kansas Department of Economic Development recites the attractions offered business to locate in Oklahoma or Arkansas, such as rebates on sales taxes, income taxes, free city services... and says we must have the same collection of incentives to counter the other states."

"But should Kansas do all the things Oklahoma does?" Linde asked. "Then Oklahoma would discover more things to offer and in a very short time the balance would be upset again."

States also compete needlessly to be as regional offices, resorts, river harbors, army facilities and research laboratories, Linde said.

"The Air Force Academy was located at Colorado Springs after years of vicious arguments between eight or 10 states."

"Another prime competitive area is highway locations, particularly the interstates," he said. "Each state must jockey around to be sure its highway doesn't end at the state line, with the link-up in the other state 10 or 20 miles away."

The legislative process also would benefit, according to Linde.

Government Costs

"The costs of all governments are high and a growing burden upon all people," he said in the bill, "economies are slight and the cost of maintaining four separate governments, four separate legislatures and hosts of separate agencies, in the four states is responsible for much extra expense."

Each of the four states has part-time legislatures. Things happen so fast today that everything cannot be covered in three to six months, Linde said.

"A single legislature could be in session all year at less expense," he asserted.

Besides, "All states are taking critical looks at their constitutions and administrative functions," Linde said. "What better way to streamline government than to do it once instead of four individual times?"

But streamlined government would cost the region six United States senators. If the states merged, the new state would have two senators instead of the region's present eight.

Linde said he thought the loss of the six senators was the most serious flaw in his proposal.

"However, I have tried to compare the impact the eight present senators have on the political system in general and their influence throughout the country against the impact of senators from such states as New York, California, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Texas," he said, "and it seems to me... that our eight are not any better now, nor have a greater influence than such men as Javits, Cranston, Towers, Taft, Scott and Percy."

Numbers-Quality

"Numbers are important in our political system but so is quality," he remarked.

One state might have more clout than the four individual states in the Electoral College.

Each state is entitled to as many electors as it has senators and representatives combined.

Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma together have 26 electors. Subtracting the six senators lost in merging, the new state would have 20 electors. But this would give the state power closer to that of Michigan, Illinois, Texas and Ohio and might force greater attention to the region from national political figures.

As the world shrinks, so does the need for states, Linde said.

"Technological changes in the methods of transportation, distribution of goods, travel and communications have shrunk our world and rendered sterile the earlier need for small, compact and easily transferred administrative areas," he said.

State boundaries are artificial, Linde pointed out.

"I feel there's nothing God-given about lated, Linde said. What would the state be named? Where would the capital be located?

Calling this attitude "not too gripping," Linde said the location of the capital seemed unimportant to him.

A state capital is just an administrative center, he said.

"Capitals were never intended to be ends in themselves." They often become too self-centered, developing a vested interest in the state government until it "almost seems to exist for the welfare of the state capital," he said.

Linde also said another reason for combining the four states is that they are similar in sizes, populations and economies.

Some Differences

However, some differences do exist. Nebraska has a population of about 1,480,000 and the other three states have populations of more than 2 million each. Thus, Nebraska would become a rural area competing for representation with more urban areas.

Colorado is growing faster than the other three states and is boosted by immigration. Kansas and Nebraska lose people each year and Oklahoma's population stays about the same or increases due to natural increase, not immigration.

As for economies, Nebraska and Kansas are mainly agricultural states. Colorado's chief activities include manufacturing, government programs, trade, services and tourist attraction. Oklahoma engages in lumber, oil and manufacturing based on its agricultural and mineral wealth.

A state combining all these attributes would, indeed, be a superstate. And one thing is certain: a Cornhusker-Sooners-Buffalo football team would be the terror of the land.

Holmquist's Successor To Serve Until January

LINCOLN—Voters in the 16th legislative district will elect a successor to Sen. C. W. Holmquist next fall.

According to Atty. Gen. Clarence Meyer, Gov. J. James Exon's appointment to the seat vacated by Holmquist's death recently will serve only until next January.

At that time, a new senator selected by the district's voters will take over. Because Holmquist's death came shortly before the primary election, there will be no nominees for the Nov. 7 general election.

The attorney general said persons wishing to serve should file for the general election ballot by position. Holmquist was from Oakland. His district includes Thurston, Durt and Washington Counties.

As of the middle of last week, Exon still hadn't named anyone to serve in the vacancy. The Exon appointee—unless he is elected this fall—probably won't serve during any legislative sessions. No special sessions are considered likely and the elected senator will take over with the start of the 1973 Legislature.

Exon has filled one other legislative vacancy by appointment.

When Sen. Elmer Wallway of Emerson resigned shortly before the start of the 1972 session, Exon appointed Leroy Pfister of South Sioux City to replace him.

Pfister filed this year for election to the post and faced three opponents in Tuesday's primary.

Interim Studies

The senator the governor appoints in Holmquist's district will serve with other legislators this year on interim study committees.

The committees will take a hard look at a variety of state problems—ranging from housing to power distribution rates—and report their findings to the 1973 Legislature.

For the first time, the Legislative Council, the unemancipated administrative and research arm, is using standing committees to conduct the between-sessions studies.

It has been the practice to divide the legislators into different committees and assign them study topics.

Chairman William F. Swanson of the council's executive board said it was decided this year to use the standing committees to provide continuity between the studies and the handling of any bills which develop as a result of the studies.

Here's a rundown on the topics due for interim studies this year:

Tax equalization plan, assessment, housing, agency rules and regulations, improvement of local government, operations of the State Department of Institutions, recreational facilities, traffic safety, state employee fringe benefits and salaries, highway bridges, consumer protection, health care facilities, power rates, the practice of cosmetology, public education in Omaha, youth activities and services, state telecommunications, welfare programs, family farm system, auditing procedures, design of the state banner, state government services, coordination of higher education and mortgage escrow accounts.

Drivers Surveyed

Lincoln isn't known as a "swinging" city, but a recent survey showed that Nebraska's capital has a problem with drinking drivers.

The study was conducted on behalf of the Lincoln Alcohol Safety Action Project, a federally-financed program.

During the survey, 773 motorists were tested and interviewed during the evening and early-morning hours. The results showed that about one out of five of them had been drinking—if only a little—before they got behind the wheel.

Between 11 p.m. and 3 a.m., the survey showed, one driver in six was impaired by alcohol, one in 19 had more alcohol in his bloodstream than the law allows (10 per cent) and one in 77 was seriously impaired.

"Now just stop and think of the time it takes for 19 cars to pass the intersection of 48th and 'O' Streets around midnight on a Saturday night," Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf said.

Don Nugent, who directs the alcohol safety project in Lincoln, said about a third of those interviewed classified themselves as moderate drinkers, but had seven or more drinks at least one day during the week they were checked.

Nugent said the survey showed most people don't realize how many drinks it would take for them to become legally drunk (in relation to their body weight).

Information gathered from the survey, Nugent said, would provide baseline data for the safety project. Surveys will be taken later during the three-year project to see if enforcement and education programs have made any difference, he said.

The Agent's Angle

by Harold Ingalls

a hectare.

The main difference between metric measurement and the foot-pound system is the basic standards used. In the metric system, length has its basis in the meter. This unit is converted to weight through the common material, water. A cubic centimeter of water at four degrees centigrade weighs one gram.

Conversion to metric units of measurement can have some advantages. In this system, steps from one length unit or weight unit to the next are made in orderly changes of 10.

Even multiples of 10 consistent with our numbering system, and the logic relation between weight and length make the metric system easier to use.

But custom and convenience have prevented people from converting wholly to the metric system. A kilogram package is too large for the convenience of many items in the grocery store. Some countries that have the kilogram as a unit weight for trade also trade in pounds. These pounds are not the English pounds, but instead are 500 grams—one half of a kilogram.

A metric ton, 1,000 kilograms, is 10 per cent bigger than a U. S. ton, but only slightly smaller than a British ton or long ton. It is 2,205 pounds.

Farm products such as grain, hay and silage vary greatly in moisture content, making a damp weight basis of trade a difficult unit for fair trade. Trade on the basis of the weight of dry matter in the product is more likely to give fair value to both the buyer and the seller.

Grain markets of the future possibly could be priced on value of 10 kilograms of dry matter. However, two things stand in the road of immediate and smooth change to the metric system.

The first factor is the fact that most of our measuring instruments—rulers, scales, thermometers, and all of the advertising instructional material pertaining to these meters are in the pound, foot system. Change-over would be expensive.

But the longer we wait, the more costly the change will be. Conversion to the metric system will not solve our confusion of units, but it will put us in step with the rest of the world.

Dig Deep for Dandelion

A few scattered dandelion plants in a lawn can be effectively controlled by digging. However, dig deep—at least five to six inches. The plant will be back if you simply cut at the crown level. Control of scattered plants can be done also by spot treating.

Sprinkle them with a few 2,4-D granules or "paint-on" weed killer using the can and brush method. When you "paint-on" a weed killer, mix the 2,4-D at the rate suggested for spray applications.

If you treat your entire lawn with 2,4-D for dandelion control, consider the use of non-pressure applicators such as gallon jars with nozzles, hollow cane tubes and liquid spreaders. They eliminate fine droplet and mist hazards. If you use a pressure sprayer, operate it at low pressure. This assures larger droplets and less drift.

Ready to use granular formulations of lawn herbicides should be used as prescribed on the bag. Two half-rate applications made at 90 degree angles provide more uniform coverage than a single application in one direction.

Besides dandelions, 2,4-D applications made now will control shepherds-purse, plantain, knotweed and thistles. Mixtures of 2,4-D and silvex, mecoprop or dicamba are necessary for chickweed and ground ivy control.

Black Spot a Common Rose Disease

Few flowers inspire people more than the common cultivated rose. These flowers require special care throughout the growing season. This care should include fungicidal control of Black Spot, a common destructive disease on roses grown in Nebraska.

Black spot is caused by fungus that remains alive throughout the winter in partially decayed plant residue in the rose bed. As temperatures rise in the spring, the fungus produces spores which will infect this year's foliage.

This disease occurs from spring until fall. Symptoms appear as black spots which have a "feathery" type margin. These spots may vary in size from small dots to spots one-half inch in diameter. The infected leaves tend to turn yellow and drop, often causing extensive defoliation. When this occurs, the plants are weakened and become subject to winter injury and other diseases. Defoliated plants will also produce fewer blossoms the following year.

To prevent an outbreak of black spot, begin control in the fall. Remove old leaves and refuse surrounding the plant to help decrease the disease potential.

Sprays usually give better control than dust. Phaltan is the preferred fungicide for black spot control because it also controls powdery mildew. Benlate, a very new fungicide, is systemic and gives excellent control of both black spot and mildew. Maneb, Zineb and Daconil 2787 also give good control of black spot but not mildew. A wetting agent should be added to the spray solution to help insure proper coverage.

Backyard Farmer

Can a heavy piece of black plastic be used in mulching tomatoes?

Yes, the black plastic works very well in this situation. It helps control weeds, conserves moisture, and allows the soil to warm up better. Use about a three-foot wide piece of plastic over the area where the tomatoes are to be planted. Turn under about six inches of the plastic on each side, throw dirt over the edges to anchor it and plant through the plastic.

Bores have killed a six-year-old peach tree. What can be done to prevent them from spreading to other trees?

Right now, the bores should be cut out of the trees with a very sharp knife. In June, July and August, spray Lindane on the ground surrounding the trees and about a foot up the tree trunks.

Fear Grasshopper Invasion To Be Worse Than in 1971

LINCOLN—If Nebraska farmers thought things were hopping with grasshoppers last year, they can expect even greater activity from the perennial pests this spring and summer.

According to Ierold Bell, USDA research entomologist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, surveys last summer and fall showed a large enough grasshopper population to cause a problem in 1972.

Bell said this high population, coupled with the prolonged warm weather last fall, ensured maximum egg laying. Favorable weather conditions throughout the winter probably assured a high survival rate of eggs.

Current cool, damp weather has not been conducive to hatching of the grasshopper eggs, Bell said, but if temperatures warm up, eggs should be hatching in about two weeks.

The USDA entomologist pointed out that no area in Nebraska is absolutely free of grasshoppers.

An area around Decatur, and northwest to Bloomfield, had extremely high infestations last year, Bell noted.

For grasshopper control, Bell suggests spraying with Sevin or malathion as soon after hatching as possible. The most likely places to find young grasshoppers will be in high grass areas along fences, alfalfa fields, pastures or anywhere there are fibrous roots available for them to feed on.

Never carve any sizable piece of meat or poultry right after it comes out of the oven. Give a big roast, turkey or capon at least twenty minutes to set into itself and it will be much easier to slice.

Did You Know?

William Vost, district conservationist at Wakefield, submits these "did you know" questions.

Did you know: It takes up to 50 gallons of water to produce one stalk and ear of corn?

Northwest Nebraska's average moisture received is approximately 24 inches per year. This amounts to nearly 650,000 gallons per acre.

The loss from a two-inch rain will be twice as much from "straight row" farming as versus contouring with terraces.

Did you know: Silt is the most widespread source of water pollution we know of? It costs 20 times as much to dredge sediment out of water, as it would have cost to keep it on the land where it belongs?

The cost of sediment in reservoirs alone is 100 million dollars per year.

Did you know: It takes 400 to 1,000 years to develop one inch of soil? That without conservation some farms lose one inch in five to 10 years?

Land is a many splended thing—crops grow on it. We use land for homes, cities, highways, forests, junkyards, and parks. To some of us, land is a piece of earth to be cherished, to some it is a commodity to be exploited. We have been fortunate in having much land of many types; but we have been wasteful.

Livestock Pollution Raises Questions

LINCOLN—Who should pay? With pollution control requirements in the picture for livestock operations of the kind and size covered by law, the question arises as to how pollution control measures are to be financed and by whom.

This report comes from Dr. Phillip A. Henderson, Extension economist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Should the landowner pay for their installation? Or should this be left up to the tenant?

Prof. Henderson says that "perhaps the first thing a landowner should do is to satisfy himself that the location of the farmstead, including the pollution control facility, and the probable nature of the farming operation in the future justifies consideration of installing pollution control facilities."

"Inasmuch as any pollution control facilities added will become a part of the real estate and presumably should improve the rentability of the farm, one rather logical conclusion would be that the landowner should pay for the installation."

"But in view of the difficulty of getting cash rents high enough to cover the cost of maintaining improvements, landowners can scarcely be blamed if they take the position that they will add pollution control facilities only if they can see their way clear to recovering the estimated cost of ownership, that is, depreciation, interest on investment, maintenance costs and taxes."

Several courses of action are suggested by Prof. Henderson:

1. One possibility is for the landowner to pay the cost of installing the facility and then increase the cash rent for the improvements by enough to cover the cost of annual ownership.

2. A possible variation would be for the landowner and tenant to negotiate a longer term lease. Length of the contract could be sufficient to permit a complete write-off of the cost of the facility. Cash rent would be high enough to cover ownership costs.
3. Another variation might be to write a three- or five-year lease with enough cash rent during the contract period to cover interest, maintenance and taxes and perhaps half or two thirds of the total depreciation.
4. Another possibility would be for the owner and tenant to negotiate a long-term lease with the understanding that the tenant would finance the installation of the pollution control facility. If this option were selected, according to Prof. Henderson, there should be a compensating clause in the lease. This clause would provide that if the tenant had to leave for reasons outside his control prior to the termination of the lease contract, the landowner would reimburse him for some previously agreed upon portion of the original cost.

"Should a son or son-in-law wish to install a pollution control facility on land owned by the father or father-in-law, it would be well to protect the investment of the younger man by having an agreement in writing which would give the son a prior claim on the estate to the extent of his investment in the pollution control facility or some portion thereof (according to some predetermined write-off schedule)," Prof. Henderson explained.

Another House to Clean

While we are rambling about the spring work, let's not overlook a very important, annual job of the farmer's wife—house-cleaning.

Hopefully a relatively warm day can be selected to accomplish this feat. Then you can open the windows and air out the entire place. The stale air needs to get out and let in the fresh, spring air.

The windows need washing inside and out. The cobwebs need sweeping down. The light fixtures need washing and dusting. All the broken or burned out bulbs need to be replaced.

All the stuff that has been stashed out of the way, needs to be stashed away somewhere else. The wall's present. Roll call was to name a favorite color.

Mrs. Martin Hansen, leader, demonstrated sewing and judging scissors. Kaylyn and Lynette Hansen gave a cooking demonstration.

Hostesses were Jeanine Farmer, Renay Harmer and Shelley Davis. Next meeting will be May 11 at 7:30 p.m.

Pioneer Farm Families Sought By Ak-Sar-Ben

OMAHA—The Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben and the Nebraska Association of Farm Managers today announced that for the seventeenth straight year they will continue their program to discover and recognize Nebraska Pioneer Farm families whose land has been owned by the same family for 100 years or more.

Orville Koch of Oco County, president of the Association, pointed out that 679 farm families have been honored at various county fairs during the first 16 years of the project.

Koch and vice-president Hoy Moeller, Cumby County, said that again this year the honored families will receive a beautiful engraved walnut plaque and an aluminum gate post marker for each farm from the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben, plus a special framed citation from the Nebraska Association of Farm Managers.

In addition, Ak-Sar-Ben will host the honored families at a special banquet during the organization's annual Livestock Show and Rodeo, Sept. 22-30.

All nominations must be submitted by June 1 to the secretary of the local County Fair Board, Koch said.

—Gays and Dolls—

The Gays and Dolls 4-H Club met Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at the Allen fire hall. Jovelyn Smith, area extension agent, spoke to the group on judging flocks. Following the talk members practiced food judging.

Demonstrations were given by Bryce Chapman on how to make a bark whistle, Mark Chapman on how to judge dairy cattle and Colleen Chapman on international traveling signs. A petcock lunch was served.

Next meeting will be May 27 at the fire hall.

—Twins and Teens—

The Twins and Teens 4-H Club met Apr. 24 in the Winton Wallin home. Eight members and two leaders were present.

A film was shown on sewing and members decided which projects they wanted to complete.

Lunch was served by the Wallins. Next meeting will be May 30 at 7:30 p.m. in the Verdel Erwin home.

Nancy Wallin, news reporter.

—Coon Creek—

The Coon Creek 4-H Club met Wednesday night in the Jim Gustafson home with 13 members present. Jack Sievers presided and opened the meeting with the 4-H pledge.

The club voted to sponsor three members to attend Club Week in Lincoln during June. Plans were made to clean La Porte Cemetery. Discussion was held on attending the rodeo, June 22 in Ponca and having a campout.

Carolyn Roberts will attend the 4-H Citizenship Short Course in Washington, D. C., June 2-7 and will tour places of interest in New York, returning June 17. LeRoy Sievers gave suggestions on judging of livestock.

Next meeting is May 15 in the Robert Thomsen home.

Labor Saver

And while you're at the barn getting the scoop, the thought occurs to you that maybe you should get the spreader, too. Just as well put it right by the door and throw the stuff in it. Sure would save yourself some unnecessary trips to the trash pile.

If you hadn't been doing some extra chores and helping in the field, you might have had this job done. No matter what it is, no matter how important it is, the farm wife's work always seems to come last.

Then when you learn that you have to have that house cleaned by tomorrow, you have to do two weeks' work in one day. Every year you threaten to do a better job in the fall. That way you wouldn't have to do so much cleaning in the spring.

As you're familiar with the smaller tractor, you're glad it's in the shed today. First of all you check the gas. You can easily tell if it's full or not.

But you decide not to check the oil. If it's low you wouldn't know what to do about it anyway. Besides, no more than you'll have it running it can't hurt too much.

So you hook onto the spreader. Being thankful that no one saw you trying to line up the drawbar with the spreader tongue.

Second Thoughts

Next is to get it near the door. About this time you're having second thoughts about making all those trips to the trash pile. But it just isn't natural for a farm wife to leave herself vulnerable to her husband's laughter. And he surely would laugh if he knew you were trying to get that spreader near the open door and had to quit simply because you couldn't get near the building.

Get with the yard fence along one side and a tree near the other corner, it's almost impossible to get near by driving alongside the house.

Well, of course! Back the thing in to the door! Why, you've seen him do this hundreds of times. And it looked so simple. Just get the tractor and spreader in line with the door and back it straight in.

But jobs that often look simple to do, are sometimes the hardest.

The back end of the spreader doesn't keep going straight. And when you turn the tractor, the spreader goes in the opposite direction. After about an hour of trying and turning and getting farther away each time, you decide to get as close as you can and then unhook the spreader. Then you can push it a little ways back, by hand.

Close Enough

And, thank goodness, no one came in the lane or no one was around to see you do that. Finally one corner of the spreader is within three feet of the door so you decide to quit.

If you miss the spreader, at least it will be outside the house. Maybe you'll get a chance to clean that up later.

And by now most of the morning has passed. Maybe you would have had it cleaned otherwise but it's too late to think of that now. So you tie a bandana around your head and give a little prayer of thanks because no one will be home for dinner today.

Contest Deadline Is Extended to June 1

LINCOLN—Deadline for entries in the Wheat Production Contest of the Nebraska Grain Improvement Association has been extended to June 1, according to Association secretary Duane Foote of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Foote said entry blanks and rules for the wheat contest are available at local county Extension offices.

Recognition will be given to producers of high quality wheat, as well as to those with high yields, Foote explained. Proteins will be run on all wheat samples submitted, and some of the samples will be baked.

Foote also said entries for the corn, grain sorghum and soybean contests must be submitted by Aug. 1.

Optometry's History Related to Kiwanis

Dr. William A. Koerber, Wayne optometrist, briefed the Kiwanis Club of the history of optometry Monday noon at the club's weekly dinner and showed a film on the most recent methods of eye-testing.

He opened by describing the type of glasses worn in Ben Franklin's time. "Since then the profession has constantly improved lenses but now we have made the cycle—many frames back to the type similar to that worn in Ben Franklin's day."

However, the Wayne doctor said there is no comparison in the lens quality of years ago, demonstrating contact lenses and a lens that automatically tints to a degree depending on the light intensity.

The film revealed that many diseases, including diabetes and multiple sclerosis, are discovered in the testing of eyes and that 80 per cent of learning is through vision, blaming the problems of a slow-learning child many times on eye troubles.

"Optometry is in an expansive mood and an expansive state," the narrator of the film said.

Adult Education and Dual Job Holder Survey to Be Conducted in This Area

How many people are supplementing their regular paychecks with second jobs? How many people are enrolled in adult educational courses or are taking vocational training?
Walter A. Freeman Jr., director of the Bureau of the Census Data Collection Center in Denver, announced today that information on these subjects will be collected during the week of May 15 from a sample of households in this area. The questions are in addition to the usual ones asked in the monthly survey on employment and unemployment conducted nationwide by the Bureau for the U. S. Department of Labor.

Results of this monthly survey provide a continuing measure of economic conditions in the country. The March survey showed that employment had increased by 620,000, bringing the total to 81.2 million, seasonally adjusted, the largest monthly gain since June, 1967. The overall unemployment rate was 5.9 per cent in March, slightly higher than the 5.7 per cent in February.

Elementary School Experience Big Help In Preparing WSC Students for Careers

One of life's big decisions—"What career shall I prepare for?"—is being investigated currently by 53 Wayne State College students enrolled in a course called Elementary School Experience.

The course puts them in a classroom for four weeks as observers. Dr. Lyle Skov, director of elementary education at Wayne, describes their classroom role as "more than teacher aides but less than student teachers."

The 53 students are sophomores, and all are now at least preparing to teach. When they are seniors and still planning to teach, they will enroll in the Directed Teaching term and spend nine of 15 weeks as student teachers.

Right now the sophomores are "getting a taste" of teaching, watching teachers and students in action. And they are trying to compare classroom practice with facts they learned in Introduction to Teaching, the only education course they have taken so far.

The other day Dr. Skov brought all the observers back to campus for a day-long seminar. His purpose: to get their reactions after two weeks of observing in 12 school systems. How do they like it? What kinds of teaching systems have they seen? Which are most effective? Any complaints? Still want to be a teacher?

Dr. Skov spent some time bringing their scattered reactions into focus and pointed out how theory matched practice.

Then he divided them into groups according to the grades they are observing and let them share experiences. There was no dearth of talk. In fact, some students had trouble getting a word in.

Out of the seminar Dr. Skov came up with several observations:

—The observers consider the experience valuable—"good idea to visit a classroom early instead of waiting until the senior year."

—Few students had complaints, and those minor.

—Many said they wished the course lasted longer than four weeks.

—The students clearly recognized effective teaching, and some not so effective.

—Not a one said, "Teaching's not for me."

—The seminar went an hour overtime because of student interest. Said Dr. Skov: "We finally had to shut them off."

Schools where the students are observing: Millard, Omaha Westside, Schuyler, Stanton, Wayne, South Sioux City, Tokamah and West Point in Nebraska; Sioux City, Holstein and Missouri Valley in Iowa; Cherry Creek District in Englewood, Colo.

Up till now the Elementary

Teaching Experience course has been optional, but it will be required of students entering Wayne State next fall.

Celebrity Auction Saturday

The AFS Celebrity Auction and Rummage Sale will be Saturday, May 13, in the commons of the High School Building from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. AFS (American Field Service) is the group that sponsors the foreign exchange student at the Wayne-Carroll High School.

The celebrity items will be sold at a silent auction. To participate in a silent auction, a person files the amount he would be willing to pay for the item with a clerk. The AFS Chapter will have the celebrity items displayed Thursday night from 6:30-8:30 p.m. at the People's Natural Gas Co. and will accept bids for them at that time. The highest amount bid by 2 p.m. on Saturday will be the winner.

The most unusual item on the auction block is a personal photo call from Tom Laughlin, star of the movie "Billy Jack." Laughlin suggested the idea in replying to the appeal sent by the AFS committee. High bidder on this item will receive the call at a time convenient for both parties.

Gordon MacRae, who has married a Nebraska girl and spends part of the year in the state, signed an 8x10 photo, "Love and Peace from your fellow Nebraskan," included in this item is a handwritten letter from MacRae in which he extols the virtues of Nebraska as a place to live.

"Patricia Nixon 1972" is handwritten on the mat of an engraving-like photo of the White House. Edie Carlett has written a droll letter and enclosed a pen he has used.

An 8x10 print of Charlie Brown and Snoopy is autographed by the artist. Lawrence Welk has signed a large color picture, "Musically Yours." 1960 Hope scrawled "Thanks for the Memory" across the top of his picture. Hope also sent a gold key chain with a bas-relief of his famous profile.

Fourteen autographed glossy pictures of Big Red football greats include John Adkins, Gary Dixon, Johnny Rodgers, Carl Johnson, Pat Morell, Tom McClelland, Larry Jacobson, Phil Harvey, Edith Wortman, Bruce Weber, Jerry Tagge and Edie Glover.

Bids may be registered in advance with Robert Porter, instructor at the high school, or during the rummage sale on Saturday afternoon.

Social Security Questions, Answers

Q: I'm receiving monthly disability payments from Social Security. If I continue to get disability benefits for five or six years before I recover and return to work, would my retirement payments at 65 be less because I was disabled and unable to work?

A: No, your retirement benefits would not be reduced because you were disabled. Furthermore, the years while you were disabled will not be used in figuring your retirement benefits later. This gives you the advantage of retaining a high yearly average of earnings.

Many Unaware of Highway Use Tax

OMAHA—A thorough check to insure compliance with provisions of the Federal Highway Use Tax will soon be made by the Internal Revenue Service.

Richard P. Vinal, district director of Internal Revenue for Nebraska, said today that preliminary results of a recent survey indicate a high degree of unawareness as to the taxability of vehicles under the Highway Revenue Act of 1956. For example, in recent years many farmers have begun to use the large type vehicles which are taxable and may not be aware of the tax.

The Federal Highway Use Tax is imposed on certain trucks, truck trailers or truck-tractor combinations and buses that ride the public highways. This includes, said Vinal, any public roadway, city street, county road or public highway.

The amount of tax is dependent on a combination of the number of axles and gross weight of the vehicle. Generally, single unit vehicles having an empty weight of 13,000 pounds or more, or vehicles used in combinations having an empty weight of 5,500 pounds or more are taxable.

As a result of the recent survey, said Vinal, the Omaha district plans a concerted effort in the next several months to identify all non-filers in this tax area. During the interim period, taxpayers should file all returns for which they may be liable in order to avoid additional penalties and interest.

Vinal said that an annual return is due by Aug. 31 each year, covering vehicles in use during the month of July.

In addition to the annual return, a return is due for any month after July in which newly-acquired vehicles are first put into use.

The returns are filed on Form 2290, Federal Use Tax Return on Highway Motor Vehicles.

Vinal added that IRS publications 349, Federal Use Tax on Trucks, Truck-tractors and Buses, gives detailed information on this subject and is available free by calling the IRS, toll-free 800-842-8960.

Boat Owners Warned to Beware Of False Registration Scheme

Boat owners in other states have been taken in by a fraudulent boat registration scheme, and Nebraskans may also be exposed to the ruse, warns Willard H. Harbee, director of the Game and Parks Commission.

The scheme first came to light in Alabama when boat owners received official-looking forms and letters saying that the U.S. Merchant Marine was accepting registration of boats and motors. Fees varied from $2 to $5. However, investigation by the Coast Guard revealed that the operation was in no way connected with either state or federal government.

According to the Coast Guard, recreational boat registration is the responsibility of state government in all but three states and the District of Columbia. Harbee said that Nebraskans should ignore such boat registration offers, since the Game and Parks Commission is the only agency that registers boats in the state.

Anyone receiving an offer to register boats from anyone except the Game and Parks Commission should report the matter to the Postal Service, Postal authorities and Coast Guard personnel are investigating the matter.

Move to Reduce Secrecy in Government

classified documents will automatically become public within 10 years. President Nixon recently signed an executive order designed to lift the 'paper curtain' that has fallen over Washington.

"Too much secrecy in government breeds error and deception. When the truth is cloaked by the government, the public begins to doubt statements of government officials. This undermining of public confidence is extremely dangerous for without such voter confidence a representative government cannot work.

"Even in military matters, secrecy has gotten out of hand. In 1971, a retired Pentagon security officer estimated that the Department of Defense files contained about 20 million classified documents. His conclusion was that only one per cent to five per cent 'must legitimately be guarded in the national interest.'

"To a Nebraska farm boy like me, it is incredible and almost beyond comprehension that between 1946 and 1954, 160 million pages of government documents were marked 'top secret,' 'secret' or 'confidential.'

"A portion of the President's executive order says 'In no case shall information be classified in order to conceal inefficiency or administrative error, to prevent embarrassment to a person or a department, to restrain competition or independent initiative, or to prevent for any other reason the release of information which does not require protection in the interest of national security.' President Nixon's order includes provisions for disciplinary action against any officials who abuse their classification privileges.

"It is not only legitimate but absolutely necessary for the government to keep some secrets. Matters deeply affecting national security must be kept secret, and certain foreign diplomatic negotiations must be conducted in confidence. Since the beginning of World War II, however, our federal government has been guilty of classifying too much. Too often the security involved has not been the nation's but the job security of a bungling employee whose mistakes were covered up by a 'secret' stamp.

"It is time for the Congress to follow the lead of the President and conduct much more of its committee business in public rather than in executive session.

"Representative government depends upon an informed electorate. We must make certain ours is an open and democratic society. One of the best means of uniting the nation is through steps to close the 'credibility gap.'"
