

Chamber Manager Tells Taxpayers Forum City Is Negotiating for a New Industry

Floyd Bracken, manager of the Wayne Chamber of Commerce, told the Taxpayers Forum Thursday night that the city is currently negotiating with an out-of-state firm in hopes of landing a new industry for Wayne.

"We have made a good pitch and have consulted with officials of the firm," Bracken said. "No other information can be released until a decision on location is made by the corporation, expected within six weeks, sites that include Wayne and other small cities in several neighboring states, but Bracken added, "It would not be a large-scale employer at the start, probably 25-35 persons, but has possibilities for expansion and would help to attract other industries."

The Chamber manager gave the history of Chambers of Commerce, stating that the organization is by far from new, Persia having originated a form of Chamber of Commerce hundreds of years ago.

"But, the concepts have changed immensely from that time," Bracken added. "It was first begun as a means of promotion for business firms, but now must get involved in every city problem," some of which include city restructuring, manpower and career development, education, social problems, legislation, etc.

"Things taught at schools for Chamber managers six years ago no longer hold true," he said.

"There have been complete changes in its structure," and, as far as Wayne is concerned, he added, "there have been many changes for progress in the past five months—some in the last 10 days—that could not have taken place two years ago."

The speaker lashed out at the welfare program, which, he said "is getting to be quite a load and quite a mess, especially in the proposed $2,400 guaranteed wage."

"I am for helping the elderly, indigent or financially needy who are unable to work, but am against subsidizing those who are able, but not willing to work," Bracken said, adding "History shows that a non-productive society is doomed and eventually disappears."

Supporting a public works program such as the WPA in depression times, he said, "at least then the taxpayer had something to show for the dollar that he contributed to welfare."

Using the slogan, "Why send it to Washington?" he said that local groups could be formed to make improvements throughout the city, downtown development.

Horse Racing—A Family Occupation

Who says the "big time" can't start in Wayne? Anyway, it seems like it did for Irving Anderson, Hoskins, a former race horse jockey and presently a steward at the Atokah Race Track in Omaha.

"Racing was about all I had for entertainment during the depression," Anderson reminisces, "foot races, sack races included, but the most exciting were the horse races. My dad had some pretty nice race horses so we would enter them in the county fairs and things."

"My big chance came when I was riding in the Wayne County Fair races," he tells, "some horse buyers from the East were buying horses in Wayne for dray wagons and milk wagons. And they were watching the race that day."

"I had to do some pretty good maneuvering with my horse to get him around the others. And these horse buyers liked that," Anderson continues.

"When coming into the last turn of the race my horse was gaining on the leading horses but they wouldn't give me enough room to get through. Finally I saw a little hole but I was afraid my horse would get scared and shy when we got close to that tight spot. So when we got close and started into the turn, I reached up and took my little ball cap off my head and used it to cover up one eye of the horse. That way he couldn't see all the other horses. As a result he kept on running hard and we won the race."

"The buyers wanted me to go back East with them right away. They had lots of contacts that could use me but Dad thought I should finish high school at Winside the next year," Irving says. "By the time school was out the next year things had gone from bad to worse with farming. So I signed a contract to ride for Calumet Farms in Kentucky."

Main Highlights

When talking about his riding career, Anderson recalls three main highlights.

First Big Race

"Of course the first highlight is winning that first big race which is the dream of every jockey. Mine was at Hialeah Race Track in 1936. I rode a horse named Captain Jerry. And the funny thing about it was that it was Captain Jerry's 13th race."

Anderson continued, "He had been trained by an Irishman who probably would have objected entering such a big race when he was his superstitious numbered race. Then after we won and I reminded the trainer about it, he sure got excited."

"And then every horseman has

Anderson's favorite helper, his daughter, Cathy, also loves horses.

The Rev. Gerald Gottberg gave the invocation and benediction, followed by the commencement address given by Brad Warnemunde.

Principal Ronald Kramer presented the awards with diplomas from School District 95R.

Wayne State District Baseball Champs

Wayne State mounted the baseball throne of NAAIA District 11 for the second straight year Friday night when Ron Nelson pitched a 14-strikeout shutout over Dana College, 5-1, at Tekamah.

The victory sends Wayne to the Area 3 playoff starting Thursday at Enid, Okla. The Wildcats are matched against Oklahoma Christian, champion of District 9. Northern State of Aberdeen, S.D., District 12 victor, will go against the Kansas champ, still undecided Saturday morning.

The Area 3 winner goes on to the NAAIA nationals at Phoenix, Ariz., in June. Last year Wayne lost its first two games in the double elimination area meet. The Wildcats ran their season to 24-9 as they won a trio in the district tourney. They took on Dana after the Vikings battled nearly four hours to defeat the University of Nebraska at Omaha, 9-8, in 11 innings. TNO had beaten Dana in 1970, then lost to Wayne Thursday night, 4-2.

Nelson had firm control all the way against Dana. Besides fanning 14, the Wausa junior walked only one and scattered six hits. Only one inning, the eighth, did he give up two hits.

Dana starter Kirk McLaughlin didn't give Wayne much either, though he struck out only four and gave up nine hits.

The Wildcats scored in the top of the first when leadoff batter George Jones singled, advanced on an error, then reached home on Marty Goring's deep sacrifice fly.

Third baseman Steve Heying added another run in the third after two singles followed his single. Then in the eighth—following a heated rhabur over freakish play—Heying smashed a three-run homer, his sixth of the year.

The disputed play, Dana claimed, should have been ruled a double out which would have retired Wayne before Heying came to bat.

Wayne had beaten Kearney, 9-4, and Omaha U., 4-2, in a Thursday twin bill en route to the finals.

Laurel, Beemer Students Are Graduated 'With Distinction' from NU at Lincoln

Jerry Lee Schroeder of Laurel was graduated with distinction from the College of Agriculture at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Friday when another record number of graduates, about 2,300, received degrees at the annual spring commencement.

Other area students graduated with distinction were from West Point, Ruth Miserez and Judith Kathleen Schulzkump Thietje in Teachers College and Glenn Leo Prinz in the College of Business Administration.

The commencement, held at Pershing Auditorium, was in two sessions because of the large number of seniors. The 1972 class brings to more than 97,500 the number of degrees conferred since classes were first begun in 1971.

The University presented Nebraska Buller Awards to Poet Laureate John G. Nehardt and Lyell Bremser, Omaha broadcasting executive. Two distinguished alumni also were honored. Waldo Wedel of Washington D. C., senior archeologist of the U. S. National Museum, Smithsonian Institution, was given an honorary doctor of science degree, and Henry Bechtell, head of variety improvement, International Rice Research Institute, The Philippines, an honorary doctor of agriculture degree.

Reporting Emergencies

"My house is on fire—get out here quick."

What if you were on the other end of the telephone line for this panic-stricken message? What would you do? No name, no address, no idea where the fire is at. So far as we know, there has never been any calls quite as incomplete as this, but we have heard of calls in which people have not given (1) their names or (2) their address or (3) the correct or complete address of a fire.

Fire Chief Cliff Hakelmann stated there was one case in recent years where a person gave the location of the fire being east of town, when actually it was west of town—or vice-versa. "My men were out looking for the fire but had to come back, thinking by that time it was a bad joke."

It certainly was no joke, as the person who suffered heavy loss because of his careless direction-giving would testify. In no way can a fire which destroys a person's property or belongings be considered humorous.

And the statement that firemen were out looking for a fire is not in any way intended to be humorous.

But the possibilities of this happening is certainly not remote. It very well could happen should a person reporting a fire become rattled to the point that he or she hangs up the telephone before the exact location of the fire is verified.

It would be difficult to "keep your cool," but it is imperative to do so, when calling for firemen, police, ambulance, doctor or reporting any other emergency situation.

With flames leaping up nearby, it takes a cool head to speak slowly, enunciate clearly and make certain you give the location of the fire correctly.

But try your utmost to do just that before ending the conversation.

Then hang up and get the heck out of there.

Laws

By now, most everyone has heard or read about Alabama Gov. George Wallace being shot several times.

Those shots, to coin a phrase from history, were probably heard around the world, together with the shots that slayed President John Kennedy, his brother, Robert, Medgar Evers and Dr. Martin Luther King.

The sounds of those shots seem to be ringing out, more often and more loud because people just keeping shaking their heads in disgust, saying "what is this world coming to?"

Why are people so concerned with where the world is going, when it is America that needs the help and concern of its people?

The killings and robberies that are going on today are real. But no one seems to take them seriously because of the lack of application of the laws.

Although some people may not agree with Gov. Wallace's political philosophies, the idea of law and order, preached by most political candidates, needs to be taken more seriously. Laws are the basic seeds that a society must have in order to function properly and prosperously—laws that show no prejudice or favor but give business but give everyone an equal chance.

At the first sound of "more or better laws," people sometimes feel that this rationale is a giant step towards a police state. Any form of a police state would violate the American principle of freedom.

On the other hand, any violation of the laws can be considered a violation of the principle of freedom. What is even worse, if a person is found guilty of a violation and the proper penalty is not enforced.

This step, in itself, can be a basis for a growing disrespect of the laws. It seems that what this country needs is an improved system for meting out punishment for violation of the laws rather than more laws that would only cover up the problem of disrespect for the laws.

—Bob Bartlett

Persons living off main highways or ungraveled roads had their problems during the recent rainy spell. This heavily-traveled stretch of old Highway 35, a mile north of Hesking, was a typical problem-maker, with travel limited to four-wheel-drive vehicles until the sun finally came out and dried out the road enough to enable traffic to move normally again. The picture here was taken looking north.

Cigarette Smoking Increases Half-million Dollar Habit

Special to The Wayne Herald)—NEW YORK—How much smoking have residents of Wayne County been doing since cigarette commercials were ruled off the air, a little more than a year?

Have they cut back as a result? Are they smoking more or less today than people in other parts of the country?

Judging from the latest regional figures, although many people are smoking less than they did before or have given up the habit completely, others have started smoking for the first time.

The overall picture appears to be, according to tobacco distributors, that the decrease is chiefly among older people and among those who have never been heavy users.

On the other hand, for every one of them who quits, there are two or three young persons who are just beginning to smoke.

The net result of these ups and downs, reports the Department of Agriculture, is that there has been an increase of nearly three per cent in the past year in the number of cigarettes smoked by Americans.

Mobile Home 'Anchors' Tornado Safeguard

LINCOLN—Most mobile homes aren't anchored to the ground as securely as "ordinary" or "regular" homes.

And most strong winds don't know—or care—if your mobile home is "tied down" or not—so they'll huff and they'll puff and they'll blow it over or away if you, the owner, let them.

The wind, that great unseen menace, can devastate your way of life in seconds if you give it half a chance.

Every year thousands of persons are killed or injured, and property damage is run up into the millions of dollars, because of failure to use a proper mobile home tie-down system.

With a little time and a small investment you can protect your home, your belongings and—more important—your family and yourself against the wind.

Wind striking a mobile home tends to lift it up and push it sideways.

The upward action can lift the mobile home off its blocks and must be counteracted by overhead ties anchoring the home securely to the ground.

Overhead ties should be located at each end of the home and over cabanas and awnings.

The sideways action can shift the home off the blocks and must be counteracted by having frame ties connect the home to the ground. (Overhead ties alone won't securely anchor the home).

If the metal frame extends the full length of the home, frame and overhead ties on each side should be attached to the same anchor. However, if the metal frame does not extend the full length of the home, a separate frame tie must be installed at the end of the frame.

Between the ties at each end of the home, frame ties must be installed at intervals of 10 feet or less.

Remember—before you tie your mobile home down, you must block it properly. There are several good blocking systems. One preferred system uses a heavy concrete footer block (16" by 16" by 4" minimum), then two (at least) standard concrete blocks, with cells aligned vertically for greatest strength, then a concrete cap to provide a solid bearing area for the frame, plus wood shims to level the home and correct any faulty settling.

The blocks should be located along the full length of the frame, spaced no more than 10 feet apart, and not more than five feet from the ends of the home.

With blocks and shims in place, the tie-down job can start. First, however, anchors are needed, to which the ties will be attached.

There are several types of anchors. The holes to accept them should be dug to a depth of three feet and should slant about 45 degrees, away from the home.

Whichever tie-down system you use, be sure it is approved by your insurance company and/or local authorities.

In Wayne County, an estimated $464,000 was spent last year by local residents for cigarettes. It was at the rate of $68 per smoker.

It is pointed out that these figures are based upon the number of packs on which taxes were paid. They do not take into account the large quantity of cigarettes that were bootlegged to avoid taxes.

Because the tax on a pack of cigarettes has been rising and now averages 19 cents in the United States, bootlegging has become more of a problem and smoking a more expensive luxury.

Every year thousands of persons are killed or injured, and property damage is run up into the millions of dollars, because of failure to use a proper mobile home tie-down system.

With a little time and a small investment you can protect your home, your belongings and—more important—your family and yourself against the wind.

Four youths were very lucky to escape serious injury May 5, according to State Trooper E. E. Pearson, who investigated a head-on collision just east of Bloomfield at the James Burbidge driveway. The accident occurred about 9:15 p.m. on Highway 84, when a car driven by Patricia L. Kumm, 17, Wausa, made a U-turn on the highway. As the car started back west it was in collision with a car driven by Robert R. Beaudette, 19, Bloomfield. Both cars were totaled. Miss Kumm suffered a facial laceration and bruises. Beaudette was not injured. Passengers in the Kumm car, Jean Molhe, 16, and Mary Hassman, 17, suffered bruises. They were treated by a local physician and released.

"Billy Jack" Star Phones AFS Family

Mrs. Max Lundstrom, her daughter Marjole, and her AFS daughter, Rosa Mery Castillo, received a phone call last week from Tom Laughlin, star of "Billy Jack." Laughlin, who was calling from Los Angeles, Calif., where he was working on "Trial of Billy Jack," had called to say that he had just completed his call to Judy Farrow in Coon Rapids, Minn. The phone call, donated by Laughlin for the AFS celebrity sale held May 13, had been purchased by a local high school student as a gift to the Minnesota girl.

Mrs. Lundstrom noted that the AFS members had cleared about $30 on the celebrity sale, and over $100, with the rummage sale held that same day in the high school commons.

A bake sale, scheduled for June 10 at People's Natural Gas Co., office, will be the final fund raising event for this year. Wayne needs $850 to bring an exchange student to town for a year.

Trojans Drop Wayne, 8-4

Wayne High was out to represent District B-4 for the fifth year in a row Wednesday when the Wakefield Trojans stopped the Blue Devils' chances, 8-4. Wakefield substitute pitcher Pat Starzl got the win for his club in relief of Bob Twite. But Starzl's pitching wasn't the only performance that saved his team. Starzl blasted in four runs while scoring one run in the final game of district play at Wakefield.

Wakefield didn't get into the game until the sixth inning when two costly Wayne errors aided the Trojans in scoring five runs to take the lead, 5-4. Earlier, Wayne collected two runs in the first inning off pitcher Mike Ginn's two run homer. The next two innings proved to be cold for both teams. Ginn struck out two while Randy Nelson threw out Starzl at first. Wakefield collected its three outs with two fly balls and a tag at first.

In the fourth inning, Wayne added two more runs via Charles Roland and Randy Nelson to make the score 4-0.

During the last two innings Wayne Coach Mike Mallette substituted Roger Saul and Roland in place of Ginn.

But the seventh inning turned out to be in favor of the Trojans as they collected three more

State's Pheasant Crop Size Depends On Many People

Hen pheasants across the state are now producing Nebraska's 1972 crop of ringnecks, and the success or failure of their effort depends largely on Nebraska's farmers, ranchers, and local government officials.

To a large extent, hen pheasants rely on last year's carry-over vegetation for nesting, Game and Parks Commission biologists point out. However, much of Nebraska's prime nesting cover is cultivated each year by burning or mowing, leaving hens with no place to lay their eggs and rear their chicks.

Research by the Commission indicates that county roadsides, which comprised less than one per cent of the total acreage in the study area, produced more than 25 per cent of the pheasant crop. On the average, roadsides produce about 10 chicks per mile.

In areas where roadsides are cleared, pheasants move nesting operations to less-desirable cover such as alfalfa fields. Although sometimes selected by the hen for her nest, alfalfa is not a good pheasant producer. The first cutting of alfalfa usually occurs before the hen's first clutch of eggs hatches, and the time between subsequent cuttings is not sufficient to allow successful re-nesting. Observations over a 10-year period in a test area showed that only about one in 250 nests established in alfalfa fields produces chicks.

Through the co-operation of many county commissions and the State Department of Roads, many miles of right-of-way are not being mowed, thus providing many potential nesting sites.

Unfortunately, though, many miles of roadsides are still being burned or mowed each year just before or during the nesting season. If this were stopped, or even delayed a few weeks, many more pheasants could be hatched.

The prime requisite is a patch of vegetation that provides good concealment and will remain undisturbed from the time the nest is established until the eggs are hatched. Usually, this takes about 35 days.

Pheasants also nest in patches of weed along creeks and drains, along the edges of marshes, railroad rights-of-way, and anywhere else that standing cover is left unmolested.

In many cases, these nesting areas are destroyed for no reason other than to "tidy up" the land. If county authorities, railroad officials, and farmers would reassess their land-management policies, rather than habitually mowing or burning, Nebraska would have many more pheasants.

State Lowers Age For Deer Hunters

For the first time, 14-year-olds will be allowed to hunt deer and wild turkey when accompanied by a licensed adult, who is at least 21 years old.

However, they will not be able to apply for a rifle-antelope permit this year, since legislation enabling the Commission to issue them big-game permits does not become effective until after the antelope application period.

For archery-antelope, the 14-year olds will be eligible provided they apply after July.

Bag and possession limit on northern pike in Nebraska is six.

Teach Your Child Early to Handle Money

Training in the delicate art of handling money can't be started too soon. Here are a few good rules.

1. A regular allowance. Even a modest amount, received at regular intervals, helps a child learn the ABC's of regular income management and gives him the sense of independence that comes with being able to provide a realistic balance between cash for day-to-day needs, including emergencies, and money banked in either a savings or checking account?

To deal effectively with sudden emergencies and be teaching a very valuable lesson—how to borrow responsibly—if you let him borrow on future allowance and then hold him to the responsibility of paying back. But if you find it's taking a long time to repay the debt, don't hesitate to wipe it out. The next time he borrows from you he may do better—and that's what training is all about!

3. Your example. One of the strongest factors in your child's training in money management will be the example you set him. Do you tend to rely heavily on credit cards and charge accounts even when you have the cash? Does your family budget opportunities that demand substantial amounts of cash, it's a good idea to have $500 or at least $200 in travelers checks right at home. Put them in a safe place and keep track of their serial numbers because—unlike cash—they are quickly refundable if lost or buy some small items on his own. This fixed amount should be something he can depend on; if you withhold part of his allowance regularly as punishment you may be defeating this purpose. For the same reason, be firm about not giving unearned extra allowance.

2. The importance of credit. There are times, however, when a child may need extra money in stolen. First National City Travelers Checks are recommended since they are available through most banks, can be used in millions of places everywhere, and are refundable "on the spot" in more locations (30,000) than any other travelers checks.

4. Saving. Open a savings account in his name, and let him keep the passbook so he can watch the totals increase. A word of warning from the financial experts: don't insist that a youngster of any age save a large slice of his allowance. He needs practice in spending as well as in saving!

Some Old Proverbs Laced with Cynicism

WASHINGTON—An old Chinese proverb says, "Talk does not cook rice."

Traditional Chinese wisdom also holds that a great talker never wants for enemies; mischief all comes from much opening of the mouth; and one word may be better than hundreds or thousands.

These and dozens of similar Chinese sayings all add up to talk is cheap and a button your lip in spite of many Oriental and Western warnings against loquacity, hundreds and thousands of words were uttered at the recent Peking summit meeting.

But then both sides may have had in mind another Chinese proverb: "Listen to a man's words if you wish to know his mind" and the Western: "A bird is known by its note and a man by his talk."

Many strikingly similar proverbs crop up in widely separated parts of the world, the National Geographic Society says.

The Chinese say that too many bricklayers build a lopsided house, echoing the English belief that too many cooks spoil the broth and the Russian fear that a child with seven nurses loses an eye.

Anthropologists believe proverbs were man's first great attempt at abstract thinking, coming after magical thinking, and before deductive reasoning. When a civilization reaches the proverb stage, it has the beginnings of philosophy, ethics and law.

The importance of proverbs in a primitive society is summed up by a West African saying: "Talking a palaver without proverbs is like going on a journey without rice in your bag."

Certain themes are universal—wealth and poverty for example—and laced with cynicism. West African: "Being poor makes it hard to have friends but not impossible." Chinese: "He who has wealth and wine will always have friends." English: "When poverty comes in at the door, love flies out the window." Italian: "It is easier to praise poverty than to bear it."

But being poor has its compensations, according to the English: "Little goods, little care" and the Chinese: "He who has wealth has many cares; he who has none can sleep soundly."

Thousands of proverbs have been coined about women. A group of West African sayings has a familiar ring: "If you want peace, give ear to your wives' proposals... Who marries a beautiful woman marries torment... Women take up their market baskets and also take up gossip."

The Japanese pay tribute to the tenacity of women by saying, "A woman's hair is strong enough to keep an elephant tied," while the English claim, "One hair of a woman draws more than a team of oxen."

Though useful, proverbs may

ETV Spotlight Beamed on Ecology

The Nebraska Educational Television Network this week gives its viewers a full circle of television experience... from an ecological documentary to drama and classical musical entertainment.

On Monday at 7 p.m., the PBS Special of the Week is a hard-hitting documentary entitled "Black Coal, Red Power." It explores the effects of strip mining on Navajo and Hopi Indians living on reservation lands in Arizona.

To the Navajos it is the strip mining which is destroying grazing land for their sheep—their primary income. The thin overburden—topsoil removed to get to the coal, then respread—could make reclamation difficult in a climate with little rainfall.

Although the battle for ecological awareness has just begun, Americans have been forced in recent years to face the problems of racial minorities. "Rush Toward Freedom," to be broadcast Tuesdays at 8:30 p.m., follows the agonizing struggle during which the American colored man was replaced by the American black man: with a new identity, a new dignity, and a new role in American culture. Julian Bond, the young Georgia legislator, is host for the series' first program on May 23, "States Against Nation."

An Academy Award-nominated film, "Other Voices," also scheduled Tuesday at 6:30 p.m., follows the 18-month progress of five mental patients.

The treatment, which takes place in a unique homelife situation, is administered by Dr. Albert M. Helling, Medical Director of the Delaware Valley Mental Health Foundation. The struggles to make the patients face the reality of their illness, and not escape into fantasy, are often harsh and verbal—but at times are physical as well.

Art Linkletter talks to young people about today's drug problem on "Linkletter Talks on Drugs" Friday at 6:30 p.m. A man whose own daughter jumped to her death during a flashback from an earlier LSD experience, he feels that the crisis of drug abuse can be fought effectively by using three steps: education, parental responsibility and enforcement of laws.

A very different and involving kind of drama is in store for Nebraska ETV Network viewers when Masterpiece Theater presents "The Possessed," Fyodor Dostoyevsky's prophetic novel of pre-revolution Russia. Episode I, "The Sins of Others," which airs Monday at 10:30 p.m., introduces restless young Nikolay Stavrogin—the disdainful and arrogant aristocrat who is completely bored with life.

The unusual production on "Playhouse New York: The Forties" Thursday (May 25) at 7:30 p.m., is a three-part dramatic exploration of American G.I.'s during and after World War II. Part one of "The Last G.I." is a short play "Breweis and Willie" by Gertrude Stein, about American soldiers occupying Paris at the end of the war. Part II is made up of two excerpts from "Huisan," a play by Roberto Rossellini.

Part III, a radio play by Norman Corwin, "Unlabeled" is the remembrance of a dead G.I. through the eyes of people who knew him.

Monday at 8:30 p.m. noted Nebraska pianist, Audun Ravman, will be featured.

race tracks. Warren, a former Wayne State student, is presently stationed at the Fort Riley, Kan. Following his discharge, he plans to work in the filming department of Atokad for the summer and return to Wayne State this fall.

His oldest son, Wayne, is among the top leading riders at Grand Island's Pioneer Park Race Track. Last season he was one of the leading riders at Lincoln and South Sioux City race tracks.

"I didn't encourage him to have a riding career," his dad says, "but when a boy is over 21 and has two years of college and the armed forces behind him, you can't tell him what to do anymore."

Good Life "Really it's a good life for children as they meet many interesting people and they are kept busy and travel quite a bit."

"I don't judge races out of the state any more even though I've had numerous opportunities," Irving says. "But I don't think people realize how much of the money taken in at the races goes to educational funds. In fact, the money from every fine that I impose on a horse and its rider goes to the state for education."

Anderson's feeling for education is also reflected in his home office.

The bookcase wall contains classical literature, encyclopedias, reference books and numerous fiction and non-fiction books.

In addition to deep, studious reading, his office contains proof, memos and other articles pertaining to his occupation. Such as a skeleton of a horse's leg which he uses to demonstrate the exact bone a horse injured or failed to use cor. "I during a race. It's hard to tell what you could find in there," his wife tells, "It could be anything from Shakespeare to The Godfather novel to horse medicine."
