

Council Vetoes Annexation of Strip Of Land Adjoining Grainland Road

The City Council, after a 45-minute debate Tuesday night, vetoed Ordinance No. 724 to annex a 150-foot strip of land south of Grainland Road between Maple and Sherman Streets.

The debate started when Attorney Charles McDermott, representing Dean Pierson who owns the strip of land, explained to the council that annexation of the property would not benefit his client.

"Your main purpose for annexing the land would be to create a paving district in order to pave Grainland Road," he told the council.

"Your reasoning is weak," McDermott continued, "because the city does not have the authority to annex this land under present ordinances which affects Wayne as a second class city."

"As we both know, Wayne is a first class city."

McDermott pointed out that his client would not benefit from having a part of his property annexed.

The capacity crowd heard McDermott note that there is a possibility of Wayne getting federal funds to defray the costs of paving Grainland Road—instead of his client having to pay.

Clair Swanson, one of the property owners along Grainland Road, presented the council with a petition in favor of having the road paved.

"That road needs to be paved," Swanson said, "and it needs it right away."

Councilman Pat Gross pointed out, along with City Engineer Sid

Magdanz, that the city's cost of paving the road would be $12-$15,000 if Pierson's land was not annexed and taxed.

"I understand Dean's position," Gross said, "and I believe he is right. But the question is, should the city pay the other half of the project or not?"

After Attorney McDermott explained to the group that the city possibly could get federal aid in the paving of the road, Magdanz pointed out that federal assistance could take as long as three years before the city would have the project completed if the government okays the plan.

The council then defeated the ordinance and decided to further study the paving of Grainland Road in the Council's Street and Alley Committee.

In other action, the council withheld any decision on the future of adding four more courts to Wriedt Trailer Court.

"No one is here from the planning commission," said Mayor Kent Hall, "to verify or explain the figures we have here. Therefore I think it would be best for all concerned to delay the decision until our next meeting when a representative of the commission can explain the situation."

Earlier, the planning commission rejected Cecil Wriedt's request for an addition of four trailers lots because the lot sizes were believed to be smaller than the requirements.

But in figures released by the COUNCIL, page 5

Minimum Tillage Appeals to Younger Farmer

By Brenda Gustafson

"The answers to this question are many and varied," is a practically standardized beginning to essay tests used by college and high school students throughout the United States.

The answers to the question, "How do farmers plant corn?" most certainly are many and varied, according to Wayne Fisher, district agricultural engineer at the University of Nebraska's Northeast Station at Concord.

Fisher describes seven of many methods of planting corn. The conventional method of planting corn involves a series of steps. Fertilizer is applied early. Then the old corn stalks must be knocked down either by discing or by shredding and discing.

Next the ground is plowed. The plowed ground is then worked down with a disc or field cultivator. After the plowed ground has been disced, generally the ground has to be harrowed to break up the clods and to keep the weeds down. Finally the corn is planted with a corn planter.

Lister Method

The lister method became common in the 1930's as a means of getting the seed to moist soil in dry or drought conditions. Fertilizer is applied, the ground is disced once or maybe even twice, and then the lister opens furrows for the seed.

Lister is still a commonly used method of planting in Dakota County, where the soil is quite heavy.

Another method used in Dakota County is called middle bust. Middle bust is a form of lister. Following fertilization and discing, the farmer goes out with the lister and makes ridges. The second time he lists between those original rows. This gives a drier seed bed.

The heavy duty disc allows still another option for planting corn. This machine will penetrate solid ground as deep as six inches. The heavy duty disc is used after the application of

When using the till plant method of planting corn the fields have a "washy" look because the ground is not disced or plowed. Notice the corn stalks and other residue visible by the tractor wheel.

GED Classes End Area 4-H Members to Study Citizenship in Washington

General Educational Development Classes (GED) which have been conducted for adults at Wayne State College the past school year, will terminate for the summer months.

About 22 students, most of whom were brushing up on finishing requirements for high school diploma certificates, attended classes; some of them finding it necessary to attend the classes only a few weeks, others attending regularly for several months.

Fifteen of the students took and passed their examinations enabling them to receive their diplomas. Only one student found she needed further coaching, and will continue her English studies in the Fall, and try again for her diploma.

The classes are open to all interested persons in Wayne and area communities, according to Mrs. Stan Willis, instructor, and are geared to each individual's needs. Mrs. Willis emphasizes that adults who have a high school diploma but who wish to brush up in math or English are also encouraged to register for the Fall session. Studies may be begun at any time.

Those interested should call the WSC registrar or contact Mrs. Willis.

It will be "off to Washington" for 44 area 4-H members beginning June 2 for a two-week short course on "what citizenship means to you."

The members, from Cedar, Dakota, Dixon, Thurston and Wayne Counties, will be a part of the 1972 4-H citizenship tour at the National 4-H Center in the nation's capital.

Eleven Wayne members will participate in the program. They are: Mike Dunklau, Deb Nelson, Douglas and Karen Temme, Dan Hansen, Dave Anderson, Cheryl Meyer, Carolyn Roberts, Sharon Strafe, Karla Miller and Joy Rethwisch.

All the members will leave at 7 p.m. by bus from the Northeast Station near Concord and arrive at the Center June 4.

The purpose of the program is to get the students involved in learning more about government, gain a better understanding of national problems and citizenship responsibilities.

The short course will include discussion, tours, lectures, skits and recreational programs designed to broaden their citizenship awareness and leadership training.

NORTHEAST EXTENSION

by Anna Marie Krefels

Buying merchandise marked "seconds" can be risky, but if you shop carefully you can save as much as 30% to 50% off the normal retail price. "Seconds" sales are usually final—no returns and no refunds. "Seconds" are substandard or flawed merchandise that falls below a manufacturer's specifications for first-quality. As a general rule, the term "irregulars" refers to goods with the least serious imperfections, and the term "seconds" refers to goods with more apparent or extensive damage. Articles so labeled should not be confused with merchandise tagged "samples," "soiled," "shop-worn," "end of the line," etc. Such terms identify goods that are usually first quality, but reduced in price because they are no longer readily salable. Merchandise labeled "seconds" is most commonly found in wholesale and manufacturer's outlet stores, in discount stores, and in department stores with bargain basements. The best way to find out where "seconds" are available is to ask a friend in the retail business or ask a "seasoned" shopper. The Federal Trade Commission with the cooperation of industry associations and manufacturers establishes broad standards and guides for trade practices. These usually require "irregulars" and "seconds" to be so identified for consumers. Shoppers should remember that the degree of imperfections in regular merchandise can vary greatly, and all flaws in seconds are not obvious or even apparent.

Wright he claimed his lots were within the city requirements. As a result, Mayor Hall decided to wait for the final decision until the next meeting, June 13.

The council, in a five to one decision, gave the go-ahead to impose a three per cent occupational tax on Northwestern Bell Telephone Company.

The majority of the members agreed that it was only fair that the telephone company should have to pay the tax since all the other utility companies, including the gas company and cable TV, pay an occupational tax.

Councilman Jim Thomas, who vetoed the motion, said that the telephone company would only pass the tax onto the customers.

The council also approved the paving of the alley behind the city auditorium and the L-shaped alley running north and west behind the Gay Theater.

By unanimous decision, the council approved the measure while rejecting the paving of the Fairground Road and the alley running east and west between First and Second Streets.

Other business:

The council approved a measure allowing City Attorney John Addison to enter negotiations with the county for the use of the county jail.

Submitted the plans of the Mads Subdivision to the Planning Commission.

Granted a razing permit to tear down a building near Wayne Auto Parts.

Authorized the signing of an easement allowing Northern Natural Gas to relocate its gas main on Logan Creek.

Voted Ordinance No. 726 for a zoning change.

Passed Ordinance No. 730, allowing the city to establish landfill rates by a resolution rather than an ordinance. The council also discussed the possibility of leasing out the landfill.

Referred to the Park Committee two bids, from Yakok Construction and Richard Carlson, on a proposed shelterhouse on the Lion's cub land.

Agreed to pay for the Danes Dinner to be held June 26 at the Wayne Country Club. Each year several Danish teachers and students visit Wayne. The council decided to continue the program.

Ordered the construction of a storm sewer in the Meadow Lane area.

Approved the Building Valuation Data concerning the costs of permits based upon per square footage.

Decided to study further plans for a water line in the college area.

Discussed the purchase of new machinery for the sewer treatment plant.

Decided to further study the possible widening of Logan Street for truck use. The cost of the proposed widening would be about $40,000. According to councilman Darrel Fuehrber, he would rather have the trucks travel down Main in order to save the taxpayers extra expense.

The council gave Councilman Harvey Brauch and the park committee authorization to look for new area available for park construction.

Flag Smut in Grass Brought on By Abnormal Cool and Damp Weather

Early spring periods of cool, damp weather have favored the development of stripe and flag smut of turgrass. In most years, this disease is relatively unimportant but due to abnormally cool temperatures this spring smut has developed in some lawns.
Infected plants are first noticed in small patches from a few inches to a foot or more in diameter. These areas make slow vegetative growth. Long yellow-green streaks develop on the leaf blade of infected plants, and as the disease progresses, the streaks become gray in color. In the final stages of disease development a black soot-like dust rubs off from these stripes. As this blackening occurs, the leaves split into ribbons and curl from the tips downward. As the weather warms, the infected leaf blades turn light brown, wither and die.

Certain varieties of Kentucky Bluegrass show some resistance to turgrass smut. The varieties Park and Newport are highly resistant to stripe smut whereas Merion is highly susceptible to smut. Common Kentucky Bluegrass is moderately susceptible. In severe outbreaks, chemical control may be warranted. Benomyl (Benlate) has eliminated the smut fungi within bluegrass plants when applied as a soil drench in several applications at 2-4 week intervals. Follow manufacturers' directions as to rates and methods of application.

If someone tells you he has a friend who plants corn with a Buffalo, don't conjure up visions of rice paddies and coolie hats. Your friend is simply referring to one of the many brands of planters. In the till plant method of planting corn, fertilizer is applied, the old corn stalks are shredded, and the corn is planted. Notice the sweep below the planter box that clears the "trash" away ahead of the runner.

Minimum Tillage Appeals

fertilizer. After disking, the farmer plants his corn with a conventional planter.

Till Planting

In the till plant method, fertilizer is applied, the old stalks are shredded, and the corn is planted. A till planter has a sweep that clears the "trash" away ahead of the runner. This leaves a tilled path for the runner to put the seed in.

Some farmers, such as Harold George of Concord, use a variation of the till plant method and disk instead of or in addition to shredding stalks.

The chisel plant method involves the same steps as till planting, that is—fertilizing, shredding and planting. The difference is in the planter. The chisel plow is a wide machine with heavy finger-like prongs. It creates the same type of action as a plow, but leaves more residue, according to Fisher.

Although the conventional method of planting corn takes more time and requires more equipment, it is still the most popular method.

Fisher credits this to the fact that "it looks nice. It gives the farmer a good feeling, a sense of accomplishment. He can see, physically, that he has done something," he said.

Also, the farmer knows from experience that this method will work—that is, a corn crop can be produced.

Hoskins Native Leaves Thursday For Philippines

A Hoskins native, Dr. Merwyn Gene Ulrich, left last week for the Philippines where he has accepted a position teaching biology at Silliman University beginning June 1.

Dr. Ulrich, a 1954 graduate of Hoskins High School, and his wife were accompanied to the Sioux City Airport Thursday by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Ulrich, Hoskins.

Dr. Ulrich has taught the past six years in the biology department at Westmar College, LeMars, Ia. He received his BA in 1958 from Westmar, and taught in junior high schools at Rock Rapids and LeMars, Ia., prior to going to South Dakota State University at Vermillion, where he received his masters degree in 1962. Ulrich received his doctor of philosophy in zoology from Carbondale, Ill., in 1965.

During the summer of 1967, Ulrich spent 12 weeks at Roswell Park Memorial Institute, New York, working with Dr. E. A. Mirand, assistant director, and with Dr. A. Fiedle, senior scientist.

Since 1967, Westmar College biologists have been on field trips conducted in the southern states each spring by Dr. Ulrich and other instructors in the biology department. Also the past three years, the class has been in Jamaica during the interim, and this year was in the Virgin Islands.

The minimum tillage systems have been slow in catching on. "When the programs were first initiated, there were lots of difficulties. Persons who minimum tilled had more weeds than their neighbors. As early trials flopped, even people in extension hated to push the idea; they didn't want to get burned again," he said.

Fisher noted that weeds are no longer such a great problem. "The big item of difference now is pre and post emergence herbicides," he explained.

Fisher does not contend that till planting will necessarily increase the farmer's income by increasing his corn production. Instead he emphasizes the possible increased return from all of the farmer's resources.

According to Fisher, two of the three following advantages of reduced tillage can be applied to most farms.

Advantages

- "Making better use of the land resources by conserving soil and water."
  - "Making better use of the labor and management resources by spreading them over a larger enterprise."
  - "Making better use of the capital resource by lessening the investment in equipment. This capital can then be used for more land or animals."
- The limited planting season in this area is a related reason to consider till planting, according to Fisher.
- In northeast Nebraska we need to consider the minimum tillage more than they do in other areas because of our limited planting season. At best we can only plan on six out of 10 days in the field," he said.
- To switch to minimum tillage the farmer does not have to invest in a lot of new equipment, according to Fisher.

Modifications

"Lots of common equipment can, by ingenuity, be modified to fit minimum tillage. Harold George uses a converted Allis Chalmers planter. Others have converted planters and field cultivators," he said.

Fisher cited an Iowa survey on minimum tillage practices for 1968-70 which showed a slight decrease in chisel planting and rotary strip tillage, an increase in till planting and no-till planting, and a marked increase in a miscellaneous category called "all other tillage."

The "all other tillage" category referred to all other non-growing planting methods. Fisher felt that this was the significant column as it represented the innovated planters "created" by individual farmers to meet their individual needs.

Fisher feels that minimum tillage will appeal to young people. "This is a new generation. You have to give them a handle that fits the real world. Now young people are coming onto farms. They are coming to farms because they want to. This is a good time to put ideas like this into a perspective that young people accept."

"One thing that will grasp young people on minimum tillage is that it is nature's way to do things; it utilizes the natural. A plant grows, produces seed, dies, decays. The residue which remains provides mulch, protection for soil surface," Fisher said.

Wayne Harboring a Criminal?

Wayne is in danger! There is a menace lurking near, capable of base violence and unsympathetic cruelty. Not found on the FBI's most wanted list, he's periodically arrested but ever turns up to plague society anew.

He's not always recognizable, being a master of disguise. He's one with the deadliest criminals about, and is responsible for countless cases each year of blindness, crippling, sterility, death.

The culprit—VD. Venereal diseases, the most common of which are syphilis and gonorrhea, strike 430 teenagers per day. That's one every three minutes. It is estimated that at least two million cases of gonorrhea and as many as 75,000 cases of syphilis occur each year.

Teenagers are not the only target. No one is immune, even those who have had previous bouts with the diseases. There is, as yet, no vaccine for syphilis, which untreated can cause insanity, paralysis, blindness, deafness and death. And there is no positive blood test for gonorrhea, which without treatment can lead to sterility, crippling, blindness and death.

Black as the picture may seem, there is hope. Precautions can be taken; symptoms can be learned and watched for; medical checkups can be arranged, and the diseases can be treated.

Perhaps your reaction is to lash out with "Hush! This is a nice town; we don't talk about such things; don't give the kids ideas!"

And yet, being a part of what we hope to be a progressive and growing community, we must face reality in this instance just as we have admitted needing a larger hospital, an enlarged police force; a new county jail; more prohibitive traffic regulations.

We are proud of our foresight in these instances of preparing for the problems caused by a growing population. It is not reasonable, therefore, to hide our heads in the sand like the foolish ostrich when it comes to another threat, just as real.

It is not logical to assume that a type of disease which attacked over 300,000 individuals in the U. S. in 1952, and an overwhelming 700,000 in 1971, cannot strike us. The odds are simply against it!

We as a nation, have too long let embarrassment stand in the way of progress in combating this problem. VD cannot be controlled until it is treated; cannot be treated until it is recognized.

Have you done all you could? Have you read and passed on the many publications on VD prepared by the National Communicable Disease Center, U. S. Public Health Service, 11 S. Printing Office, Washington, D. C.?

Have you encouraged your organization or school to research the films available to lay audiences by Churchill Films, Suite 1520, 6651 Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles, Calif., and AIMS Instructional Media, Inc., P.O. Box 1010, Hollywood, Calif., 90028?

Have you written for any of the publications available from the New York City Department of Health, 125 Worth Street, New York, N. Y., 10017?

Have you ordered reprints on "National Survey of VD Incidence," and "Every Two Minutes," from the New York Times, 229 W. 43rd, New York, N. Y., 10036?

Have you contacted School Management Magazine, 22 W. Putnam Ave., Greenwich, Conn., for their copy of "VD: Growing Menace to Your Students"?

Have you considered sponsoring public service announcements on VD?

Then do!

—Sandra Breikreutz

Vacation Guides Touring State

A seven-day bus tour of Nebraska's tourist attractions started from the State Capitol Friday morning for 32 vacation guides who will be working at Interstate rest areas this summer. The tour will give the guides a first-hand look at areas they will be explaining to temp vacationers to spend some time in the state.

The vacation guides are part of Nebraska's 1972 tourism program and the bus tour is the final phase of a highly intensified training program the guides are completing in preparation for the opening of information centers on the Interstate June 5.

The guides, for the most part, are college students hired for the tourist season by the Department of Economic Development. Over half are on work-study programs with colleges and universities in the state. This year marks the first time a vacation guide program has been tried in Nebraska on a statewide basis.

The vacation guides have been employed to assist the Department's Tourism Division in achieving goals set last winter to double Nebraska's share of the tourist market. John Rosenow, state travel coordinator, and Bruce Christenson, program coordinator, will accompany the vacation guides on the tour. Rosenow explained,

"If we can convince travelers to pull off the Interstate to see just one two to four-hour 'impulse' attractions such as the State Capitol, Stur Museum, or Buffalo Bill's Ranch, we will have successfully encouraged the visitors to stay in Nebraska a day longer. The additional day will double the present average length of stay, double our share of the market, and double the travel industry's profits."

Christenson was responsible for the development of the vacation guide program. He said, "Sixteen information centers at Interstate rest areas, from Meila Hill in the east to (Sralala) in the west, will be staffed by the guides to welcome tourists to Nebraska and to influence the summer traveler to get off the Interstate and spend time seeing Nebraska's many attractions."

The information centers were designed and renovated by the Department of Roads. "The Roads Department cooperation has been invaluable to our tourism program," he added.

"An important aspect of the training process has been a complete orientation of the areas surrounding the rest stops where the individual guides will be working. The leadership for this part of the training was undertaken by local sponsoring groups. Most of the arrangements for the bus tour campus closed-circuit television system. Nine full-power, color-capable transmitters, supplemented by four translators, comprise the Nebraska Educational Television Network. Network stations are on the air seven days a week the year round and during the academic year offer approximately 95 hours of programming each week.

The Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center is the first such facility in the country designed to bring under one roof total educational telecommunications capabilities. With the latest equipment and the promise of increased cooperation and easier communication between agencies and personnel; the benefits of the center will accrue to Nebraskans for many decades to come.

The chief executives of three major public broadcasting organizations will be among the dignitaries taking part in dedicating the new Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center. The guests include: John Macy, president of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting; Hartford N. Gunn Jr., president of the Public Broadcasting Service; and William Harley, president of the National Association of Educational Broadcasters.

Several Nebraska governmental and educational leaders also will participate in the ceremonies which will be broadcast live at 2:30 p.m. on the statewide Nebraska ETV Network. The list includes: U. S. Senator Carl Curtis, Governor J. James Exon, State Senator Terry Carpenter, Education Commissioner Cecil Stanley, Lincoln Mayor Sam Schwartz, University of Nebraska Regent Edward Schwartzkopf, UN President Durward Varner and UN-L Chancellor Dr. James Zumbeke.

Others to participate in the hour-long program entitled "Tomorrow is Today," Dr. Philip Heckman, chairman of the Nebraska ETV Commission; Joseph Maresch, chairman of the commission's building committee; Arnett J. Bonner, a member of a network advisory committee on minority programs; J. Arthur Danielson, president of Nebraskans for Public Television, Inc.; and Jack McBriffe, general manager of the Nebraska ETV Network.

IRS Is Checking For Compliance With Airport Act

A thorough check to insure compliance with the provisions of the Airport and Airway Revenue Act of 1970 is now being made by the Internal Revenue Service. Richard F. Vnal, district director of Internal Revenue for Nebraska, said that in spite of publicity efforts by the Internal Revenue Service, there is still an apparent lack of understanding and compliance on the part of many airport operators and others.

The Airport and Airway Revenue Act of 1970 imposed air facility taxes on the transportation of persons or property by air; gasoline used in non-commercial aviation; fuels for aircraft other than gasoline; and international travel facilities head tax. These taxes are filed on Form 720, Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return. The act also provides for an aircraft use tax which is filed on Form 4638, Federal Use Tax Return on Civil Aircraft. This is an annual return due by Aug. 31 of each year, covering aircraft in use during the month of July. If an aircraft is put into use after the month of July, a return must be filed in the month following the month the aircraft was first used in the taxable year.

Vnal said the Omaha district plans a concerted effort in the next several months to identify all non-filers in this tax area. ## Telecommunications Center Realization of ETV Dream

The dedication of the Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center on June 4 will mark the realization of a dream for Nebraska educational television. Since its inception in 1954 with the activation of the University of Nebraska's KUON-TV, Channel 12; educational television facilities in Nebraska had evolved from one small basement room on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus to nine separate locations throughout the city. Located at 1800 N. 33rd the new Telecommunications Center will house a unique combination of production and programming agencies.

The Nebraska Educational Television Commission was established by the Unicameral in 1963 to develop and administer the state's non-commercial ETV network. The commission is in charge of all aspects of network operation and has ultimate responsibility for all broadcasts presented on the network.

The Nebraska Council for Educational Television (NCET) has demonstrated that television can be used effectively to supplement elementary and secondary school classroom teaching. NCET pioneered in planning and developing significant instructional resources for distribution to voluntary member school districts in Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming. Beginning in September, the Nebraska Educational Television will administer instructional television through appropriations from the state general fund, and all of Nebraska's schools will have the opportunity to use television in the classroom without charge.

The Nebraska Educational Television Council for Higher Education Inc., (NETCHE) is a non-profit corporation which enables public and private institutions throughout the state to share their talented faculty members and instructional resources via television. Drawing upon the expertise of nationally prominent academics and others who are leaders in their respective fields, NETCHE has developed some 700 lessons for use by its 16 member colleges in Nebraska and eight associate members in six surrounding states.

The 2.4 million Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center at Lincoln, which will be dedicated Sunday, June 4.

The Nebraska Television Council for Nursing Education, Inc. (NTCNE) has provided an economic and effective instructional program for nursing students. NTCNE now claims a membership of 12 three-year diploma schools of nursing in Nebraska, South Dakota and Iowa.

The State University of Nebraska (SUN) project is a new concept in higher education. The objective of the project is to offer first and second-year college courses for credit by way of educational television, audio and video cassettes, films, tests and other means of communication. Nebraska citizens of all ages will be able to take college courses at home, and have the opportunity to visit nearby regional resource centers for assistance. Great Plains National Instructional Television Library (GPNITL) identifies, acquires, makes available and distributes on a lease basis, videotaped instructional television courses. The largest facility of its type in the world, it offers more than 100 courses for use at all levels from kindergarten through college. This past academic year, GPNITL instructional units went to public television stations; CCTV systems and other uses throughout the U. S. and several foreign countries.

University of Nebraska Television (KUON-TV, Channel 12) is responsible for the continuing education and public television programs broadcast by the state's ETV network during the evening and weekend hours. The University Television operation also encompasses the

The Work Has Only Begun

Whee! The plowing is done. The corn is planted. Too late to worry about using that other kind of insecticide. Fertilizing is all done. Unless it rains about the middle of June and it looks like you can afford to put in some anhydrous.

Sure is nice to have the work all caught up. That's what you thought during church on Sunday morning. But on your way home the good Lord shows you that your work has just begun.

He shows you by having the thick, dark green alfalfa leaves wave in the summer breeze and show the little purple flowers blooming underneath. That stuff surely wasn't in bloom when you went to church!

Well, you might not have looked at it either. You were a bit rushed on the way in to church. And the good Lord probably knew if you'd have seen such a sight as those purple blossoms, you wouldn't have enjoyed the sermon. Or even listened to it.

You can't understand why its blooming when it doesn't look tall enough to cut. Probably just waste your gas and wear out your machinery for one measly little stack. To say nothing of wearing out your back.

Sunday afternoon is spent in town trying to locate Zeke to help with the hay. Great emphasis is put on him to be out early Tuesday morning.

You'll mow on Monday. He can rake on Tuesday while you get the loader and sweep ready. Then on Wednesday you'll be ready to stack hay.

Now, how's that for a haying schedule? And how many farmers have planned such a hay cutting? And how many times has it worked that way?

But there is something magic and oblivious about farming. Each year you plan for the almost impossible, forgetting or overlooking the problems of last year and the possibility of it happening again. And again.

On Monday morning you start to the field with the mower. As you make the first round you keep alert for objects near the outside of the field.

If someone tossed something into the field most likely you'll find it while making that first swath. But it looks all clear.

So you confidently start to make the back swath. The sickle is making its rapid, rhythmic, wicked clattering sound as it moves back and forth in the guards.

Sawmill Sound
About half way around the field the rhythmic clattering sound is interrupted by a sawmill sound.

NE Station Hosts 4-H Dairy Camp

The annual 4-H Dairy Camp for 4-H dairy members in northeast Nebraska was held at the Northeast Station near Concord recently with 14 4-H'ers in attendance.

The 4-H Dairy Camp is provided to give 4-H'ers additional information concerning their dairy projects.

Don Kubik, area dairy specialist, was in charge of the program and Roy Stohler, Dixon County Agent and area youth specialist was in charge of the reservations, meals, recreation and other arrangements.

Mrs. Stohler assisted with the food arrangements.

The 4-H'ers had a mixture of recreation and education experiences. Appearing on the program were: Dr. Robert Applemore, professor of Animal Science with Nebraska University; Gene Ebel, with the Mid-America Dairyman, Inc. of Norfolk; Bill Mithaud, with Midwest Breeders Cooperative of Fremont, and Don Kubik, area dairy specialist, from the Northeast Station.

Consider All Aspects When Buying Irrigation Sprinkler

The price of an agricultural sprinkler system should not be the only criterion used when purchasing this type of irrigation equipment. Many times the system requiring the lowest original investment may be the most expensive in the long run, according to Robert Mulliner, University of Nebraska extension irrigationist at the South Central Station, Clay Center.

Wind velocity, rainfall during the growing season, and soil texture have a big influence on how effective any particular sprinkler system will operate.

Solid-set sprinklers and tractor-tow systems, which operate in a stationary position, require good engineering so that they fit the site where they are to operate. The original investment can be reduced considerably by spacing the sprinkler heads and lateral lines further apart and/or reducing the diameter of the lateral pipes. Both of the above changes, when recommended design, will reduce water coverage to a point where crop yields can be reduced.

Sprinkler spacing experiments near Hastings resulted in corn grain yield reductions of 13 bushels per acre when the sprinkler spacing was increased from 60 feet by 60 feet to 60 feet by 75 feet. In this experiment the spacings compared were as follows: 40 feet by 50 feet, 40 feet by 60 feet, 60 feet by 60 feet, and 60 feet by 75 feet.

Distortion, caused by wind, of a sprinkler water distribution pattern becomes very noticeable when spacings begin to exceed 60 feet by 60 feet in central Nebraska. Evenly distributed rains, help to cover up dry spots from poor distribution of water when sprinkler spacings are too far apart. Rainfall usually decreases in amounts from east to west across the state. Wind velocities normally increase when moving from east to west across the state. Because of the previous two climatic factors, stretching sprinkler spacings beyond recommended distances will probably be more successful in the southeastern one-third of Nebraska than any other part of the state.

Another disadvantage of wider sprinkler spacing can be soil compaction. Sprinklers spaced farther apart require larger volumes of water coming from a sprinkler, result in larger water droplet sizes, which in turn aid in soil compaction.

A tractor-towline sprinkler system, which is designed to cover 160 acres of land with 5 1/2 inches of water (gross) in 14 days at an application rate of 0.25 inches per hour, will require six quarter-mile lateral lines. The above design is based on moving the sprinkler lines laterally 60 feet on each move. Under the same conditions, if the laterals are moved 90 feet laterally each move, only four laterals are required.

The wider spacing of sprinkler nozzles and wider moves with the lateral lines will result in a saving of approximately $3,200 in the original investment for irrigating a quarter section of land with a tractor towline.

Assuming that the sprinkler irrigation distribution system has a life expectancy of 10 years, the yearly savings per acre on the equipment for 160 acres is approximately $2 per acre per year. In the sprinkler spacing experiments near Hastings, corn yields were reduced 13 bushels per acre when spacing exceeded 60 feet by 60 feet. Based on a corn price of $1 per bushel, this would be a loss of $13 per acre per year. If the original savings in equipment amounted to $2 per acre per year, the wider spacing would result in a net loss of $11 per acre per year.

—Dads Helpers—
Eighteen members of Dads Helpers 4-H club met Monday evening at the Northeast Station. Roll call was answered by naming the project they have chosen.

The group discussed making 4-H signs and having a future achievement day. Projects were discussed following the business meeting.

John Youngs, Don Roeders and Duane Whites furnished refreshments. Next meeting will be June 19 at 8 p.m. at the Northeast Station.

4-H CLUB NEWS

Two specialized camps for 4-H members in the District III area will share the spotlight at the University of Nebraska Northeast Station near Concord. A crops camp will be held June 26-27 and a tractor camp July 20-21.

The crops camp will be open to all 4-H'ers carrying plant science projects, crops, gardening, weeds, or horticulture. The program for the two-day camp will include crops judging, weed and crop identification, opportunities in agronomy, tour of crop research projects, a local elevator and a look at pollution.

The two-day tractor camp will be limited to 4-H tractor members 12 years or over. The program will include discussions on "Opportunities in Engineering," daily care of tractors, tractor knowledge, "The Nebraska Tractor Testing Program," safety, and noise pollution. The area tractor driving contest will be held on the second day.

Additional information and registration blanks will be available through northeast Nebraska county agents approximately three weeks prior to the camp.

KANSAS CITY-Nebraska Junior Hereford Association members are staging their annual field day Saturday, June 10, at Harold Melcher & Sons, Page, according to Ken Stephens, NJHA president, Broken Bow.

A long line of trophies and special awards will be on hand for those excelling in the morning judging contest, including awards for in-state teams and individuals, out-of-state teams and individuals, as well as a senior men's team award. Separate awards will be available for the adult classes for men and women individuals.

No Chemical Control

LINCOLN-Questions regarding authorized control measures for prairie dogs have been voiced by Nebraska farmers and landowners since new federal regulations governing predator control have gone into effect, a U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service official said here this week.

While prairie dogs are not predators, as small mammals they come under federal legislation passed in February which does not allow the use of toxic bait or any type of chemical control on mammals by federal agencies, according to Robert Kelly.

Legal methods of control include trapping, shooting, snaring and aerial hunting for predators, and under the provisions of the legislation, this would also include prairie dogs, Kelly said. Kelly said the law does allow private individuals to use chemical control on private land as long as federal assistance is not involved.

CROSSBREEDING -

is a big milk producer will need more feed than one that is average or less. Such a high producing cow would not very well fit into a typical range operation where forage may be scarce.

Gossey reports that it is necessary to know what combination of breeds will best fit each feed situation to produce the maximum conversion of milk and feed stuffs to calf gains under that situation.

Some essentials for a crossbreeding system, says Gossey, are:

Large operations should be self-sustaining in the production of replacement heifers.

If natural service is used there should be enough separate pastures to accommodate each of the breeding groups.

The system must result in enough hybrid vigor to offset extra costs such as labor or fencing.

The system, whether crossbred or purebred, must be one in which truly superior sires are selected.

Many cattlemen are using crossbreeding concepts enthusiastically, Gossey writes, with research showing that a well-planned crossbreeding program can increase the number of calves alive at weaning and the pounds of calf weaned per cow—and that is where the potential for profit lies in a cow-calf operation.

Five basic crossbreeding systems are described in a publication available from county Extension agents or from the Department of Information, College of Agriculture, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Nebr. 68503.

Sunset

By the time you're ready to mow again, the sun is slipping out of sight. The Mrs. has started chores. And the rest of the hay will have to stand until Tuesday.

Tuesday morning while you're milking, Zeke comes out to rake hay.

Now how does he expect to rake hay when you're not out mowing? Well, guess you should have called him last night. So you send him back to town until the next morning. You start out to mow again.

It doesn't take long until you're finished. The center rounds get shorter and vanish real quick. With the hot sun and wind, it should be ready to rake by mid-afternoon.

You should have kept Zeke here when you had him this morning. But how were you to know things would work better today?

Well, it'll just have to wait until Wednesday. You're only running one day behind. That's not too bad.

Dark Clouds

All goes well until about noon Wednesday. As Zeke comes in for dinner he complains about the dark clouds gathering in the northwest.

When you move the hay cage to the field after dinner, you see what he was talking about. Only now they aren't in the northwest. They are directly overhead.

Suddenly the bottom drops out of every cloud in the sky. As you hurry back to the house you think the board and varnish mound because your hay isn't in a nicely-rounded stack. But it's in a wind-row and as soon as it dries up—

Today's modern farmer, using a self-propelled automatic bale wagon, can pick up, haul and stack up to 200,000 pounds of hay in an eight-hour day.
