The Friday night dedication of the new grandstand at the Wayne County Fairgrounds in memory of the late A. Bahle, long-time secretary-manager of the Wayne County Fair and Agricultural Association, will be the only somber moments during the three-day fair which opens today (Thursday).

The remainder of the time will be set aside as fun-time.

Today is Winside, Hoskins and Altona Day, with entry deadline at 10 a.m. and activities to get underway at 1 p.m. with the judging of horses in the 4-H building. At 3 p.m. will be the judging of open class economics and dairy cattle, with all exhibits and booths open to the public.

Local Wayne merchants, businessmen and individuals have donated food money and items to this popular annual feature, and will be on hand to serve heaping plates of steaming barbecue fare to the long queue of hungry fairgoers.

The barbecue will be from 4 to 7:30 p.m., followed by a performance of the "Harbor Band" from Stanton-Pitger, and the 4-H Livestock Parade at 7:15.

The dedication of the grandstand at 7:30 p.m. will be followed by the introduction of Ak Sar Ben and Nebraska State Fair dignitaries, an 8 o'clock performance by the Crimson Cadets and the Red Blanchard Show and "Hungry Five" band at 8:15.

day festivities will be a 7 p.m. tractor pull, with weigh-in at the Westside Elevator, four blocks west of First Street and a block south, to commence at 5 p.m. A $10 entry fee will enable a total of $1,200 to be returned in prize money. Tractors in four classes, from 5,000 through 12,000 pounds, and two hot rod classes, 5,000 and 7,000 pounds, will compete, using a mechanical sled.

Fairgoers are reminded to visit the exhibition buildings where their friends and neighbors have on display their best efforts in the way of club work, school work, handiwork, culinary expertise and garden produce.

Many merchants will be offering free gifts and conduct drawings for prizes.

An innovation this year will be the exhibition of new Grains and Sheaves Class which will include exhibits of oats, barley, sorghum, clover, alfalfa, bromegrass and grasses.

Shows lovers in particular should make a point of stopping by the Belgian horse exhibit.

The gates to the fairgrounds will be open, with no admission charged, after 8:30 p.m. Saturday. At other times, daily tickets will be $1.50 or a season (three-day) ticket may be purchased for a bargain $3.75.

Children up to 15 will be admitted free on Friday and Saturday, but will be charged 75 cents for evening performances. Also on Friday and Saturday, up to 5 p.m., there will be a reduced price for children's rides operated by the Thomas Shows which will set up on the midway.

Dixon Alumni Plan Fighting Irish Day

A "Fighting Irish" alumni picnic has been scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 13, at 2 p.m. at the Dixon Elementary School. It is hoped that the event, tentatively scheduled to be held every five years will take the place of the one-time popular August 15 Dixon Picnic, which was an annual event similar to the Winside Old Settlers' Picnic and County Fairs.

Dixon Alumni Association members met in the Art Anderson home, Laurel, Saturday night to plan the event. Officers in charge are Mrs. Clarabelle Anderson and Mrs. Muriel Johnson, Laurel, and Mrs. Norma Warner, Allen.

According to association members, an overwhelming response has been received through the round-robin letters sent out in January to all Dixon High School alumni.

The Dixon Alumni Association organized in 1927, has compiled complete records with addresses of all graduates. Two hundred sixty-seven students received their high school diplomas at Dixon High School from 1928 through 1958, when the high school closed. The largest graduating class (16 students) was in 1938, and the smallest (two girls and one boy) was in 1928. The first graduating class in 1928 had the distinction of graduating again in 1929, when the school grew from an 11-year program to a 12-year program.

The building, which now houses only kindergarten through eighth grade pupils, was built in 1932 and included six modern class rooms, with no provision for a physical education program or cafeteria. There were no elective courses, and no P.T.A.

In 1935 green and gray were adopted as the school's colors, to complement their nickname, "Fighting Irish." Despite their size, Dixon's basketball teams stacked up some impressive scores through the years.

School Budget Raised $84,642

In a meeting Tuesday evening which followed the Allen Consolidated School budget hearing, the Board of Education approved the budget for the 1972-73 school year. Through the new budget estimates were up $84,642 over last year, the Allen school administration does not anticipate a raise in the school district's mill levy.

"Unless we have a change in the school district's evaluation, we expect little if any change in our present mill levy," said Superintendent Gail Miller.

"The anticipated raise in other revenues will take care of new commitments. Our budget is principally on the basis of our greatly expanded vocational education curriculum and facilities," he added.

Triple-feature Offered In Weekly Film Series

The tenth week in the series of films shown by the Wayne Police Department will be a triple feature Sunday at Vikeen Park, 10th and Walnut.

"Alcohol and You" is a 28 minute color film, geared for those in junior and senior high. "Rapping" is intended for junior high age on up, and is a 15 minute color film, and "Self Defense for Girls" is 17 minutes in length, a color film special for those in elementary, junior high and senior high schools.

"Alcohol and You" answers the question "what are the consequences of dependences on alcohol?" This documented treatment of drinking explores the social pressures and the drinking habits that can lead an individual into becoming an alcoholic. Medical authorities testify to the ill effects of alcohol, contributing to an awareness of the many physical and mental maladies of the chronic drinker.

"Rapping" presents a discussion of current news and personal beliefs concerning drug use by those involved in the drug scene. The film is intended to stimulate intelligent and concerned discussion by the audience.

"Self Defense for Girls" is a training film that teaches girls to defend themselves against attack and injury in threatening situations. Methods are demonstrated that enable girls to get out of a dangerous situation without harm to the attacker, but with safety to themselves. In the event of inclement weather, the films will be shown at the police garage.

Mrs. Ley Is Candidate For Democratic Post

A Wayne woman is being considered for the post of vice-chairwoman of the state democratic party.

Mrs. Ley (Dorothy) Ley said she was contacted by State Democratic Chairman H. S. Dyas, asking her if she would be interested in taking the position.

According to Mrs. Ley, the state executive committee will meet in Lincoln Sunday to possibly ratify her appointment. Mrs. Ley pointed out to Dyas that she would accept the post if the committee ratified her to the position.

If she would be accepted, Mrs. Ley went on, she and the state chairman would be among the state delegation going to Washington to select a new vice-presidential candidate for presidential candidate George McGovern. Earlier this week, Missouri Senator Tom Eagleton stepped down from that position.

Mrs. Ley explained that a new law passed at the state convention recently, sends four representatives from each state to the National Committee instead of the regular two. The two main representatives are the state chairman and committee woman.

Language Disability Program Held Here

Language disability means the discussions and lectures concerning what can be done and how it can be accomplished to help the child with a learning disability.

Mary Lee Enfield, Bloomington, Minn., one of the leading instructors at one of the largest specific Language Disability programs in the United States, discussed various program developments during a two-day session at Wayne State College.

It can be hard to understand, especially when someone close to you is affected with a speech impediment.

But teachers around the nation are learning new methods and theories to help the person or child overcome the disabilities to lead a happy, normal life.

About 37 teachers from the Northeast Nebraska area are getting that chance to learn more about language disabilities at a special three week shop being held in Wayne.

Mrs. Henry Ley, directing the workshop, said the program, which started July 24, includes two basic types of instruction.

"First, we study the learning methods used with a child of different abilities," she said, "This step, she said, is called the practical."

"Our second step includes the theory side of the problem,"

NORTHEAST EXTENSION
Notes
by Anna Marie Kreifals

It takes time, determination and stamina but you can cut your food bill. Advice from consumer experts boils down to several rules worth repeating. Impulse purchases are costly. Making a shopping list before you go to the store reduces impulse buying and keeps your spending in line with your budget.

Check ads, especially for weekend specials. Compare prices of specials at different stores. You might benefit from shopping at more than one store, picking the best buys at each. Settle for cheaper, but just as nutritious, meals and canned goods. For example, mushroom pieces rather than button mushrooms, or stew meat instead of luxury priced steaks.

Plan careful use of leftovers and check present supplies before going to the store for more grocery items.

If you shop for a large family, shop less often and buy in bigger quantities. Leave the children, and maybe your husband, at home.

Choose canned vegetables instead of frozen, and frozen instead of fresh, except when fresh vegetables are in season.

Cash in price-saving coupons on items you'd be buying anyway, and use unit prices to determine cost per saving, per pound, ounce or pint.

The First National City Bank of New York reported on two housewives who bought the same grocery items—one following the above advice, the other buying with little planning. One homemaker spent $11.18, the other $25.12.

Knit Packing Is Okay

Notice how your family's wardrobe is filling up with knits? You'll be especially glad at vacation time. Knits are good travelers. They're comfortable, pack well, and wrinkle little.

Today's washable knits add an extra bonus for vacationers—easy care.

Most towels and campsites have coin laundries where an hour or so of your time will take care of the family's soiled clothes.

Handpress each garment as it comes out of the dryer (take along hangers for dresses and suits) and fold them neatly.

Gerda Pelterson, extension Clothing Specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, suggests you keep a few things in mind when you're shopping for knits for vacation.

Read care labels and hand tags carefully. Polyester double knits—favorites for pantsuits and menswear—will not shrink when washed. You may have had some experience with polyester garments that fit snugly after it went through the family wash than it did when purchased. Washing and drying will pull a knit garment back to its true shape if it is stretched and blocked during construction. In any case, this type of snap back shrinkage will be minimal.

Polyester knits are still among the most stable fabrics you can buy. If you're sewing your own polyester wear, be sure to wash the fabric before beginning construction.

Cotton knits—long a favorite for children's wear and summerwear for everyone—are apt to shrink when washed. It is the nature of cotton fiber to do this. Closely follow instructions for care on the label or hand tag, suggests Miss Petersen. You can also minimize wrinkles by washing these knits in cool water and being careful not to over-dry the clothes.

"Don't eliminate cotton knits from your family's summer wardrobe because they may shrink a little," she says. "Cotton knit is the most comfortable knit to wear in hot weather because of its absorbency."

A good compromise, the clothing specialist points out, is choosing cotton-polyester blends. These knits have much of the absorbency and feel of all cotton knits with the wrinkle-free and stabilizing qualities of polyester.

Even old standbys like T-shirts and sweatshirts are being made up in blends.

CONSUMER CORNER
DISCOLORATION AT HOME—KEEP IT CLEAN!

Is the paint in your home becoming discolored? Paints sometimes develop mildew—usually a gray or black film—with constant exposure to warmth and moisture. So if discoloration won't wipe off easily with soap and water, try a mixture of household bleach and water.

Eliminate excessive humidity, too. Adequate exhaust fans in kitchen, bathroom, and laundry will help a great deal. Connect moisture exhaust vents from your automatic clothes dryer to the outdoors. Use a concrete sealant paint on the foundation walls and floors of a damp basement. And there's always the dehumidifier. . . if you don't have one, check out brands and prices . . . there's sure to be one that meets your needs.

Mr. NEBRASKAland

A. I. "Dutch" Rausch of Holdrege, retired banker, gets two for his money when he goes fishing, which is almost daily except in winter when he's a full-time rockhound. Dutch scores his double by fishing for minnows and then for his fish. The minnows he catches are bigger than most; they're chubs running from four to eight inches.

Dutch fishes for chubs as he does for trout. Using a fly rod, he ties a four-foot length of monofilament leader to the end of the fly line, and on the tail of that, a No. eight hook. No ten hooks are swallowed often and are more apt to injure the chubs. Bait is a kernel of corn which is threaded over the barb and onto the shank of the hook. Action comes fast!

The other afternoon I telephoned Dutch from Lexington and said I was on my way to Holdrege. When I arrived, Dutch was raring to go, complete with chubs. After I called, he had gone to one of his favorite chub stations, a drainage ditch in Phelps County, and nailed 20 chubs within 15 minutes. He promised to show me how it was done the next morning.

We drove to the state-owned pits south of the Platte River on No. 183. This area is quite a few good-looking pits, most of which were joined at one time, but road building in the area divided a number of them. With Dutch using a bait casting reel and me, a spin cast reel, we rigged up, using a light sinker about 28 inches from a No. one hook. Dutch showed how, he hooked his chub through the open mouth, down through the membranous tissues of the lower jaw, out and back through the body just behind and under the dorsal fin. They don't come off that way.

Clouds were threatening when we left Holdrege, and our lines weren't water soaked five minutes before the skies opened. When the rain finally abated, we went back to our unattended rods. I had cast my line parallel to Dutch's, out where he said there was a channel. But now my line lay off in another direction. I'm just as I was about to pick up my rod and check the chub, the line started moving out slowly. A cat had knocked it. I set the hook and was in business... nothing tumultuous, just heavy resistance. I worked the fish, certainly a channel cat of several pounds, to within about 15 feet when he heaved the brakes. As he did, we parted company, he with my chub, and me with my broken line. Meanwhile, Dutch was firing a cat toying with his line. Finally the fish started moving out and Dutch responded but missed. The rain, seemingly holding back patiently while we attended our lines, now opened with buckets so much so that the trip was called.

Next morning Dutch took me minnow fishing, and it was everything he had promised. Action was immediate, and we took about 25 chubs in short order, most by casting in the current and in holes. The chubs hit the corn as it began to sink. Dutch says they hit trout in the afternoon; they smack the corn the instant it hits the surface.

The state pits rank No. one with Dutch, and for good reason. He has taken more than 150 catfish this summer, including a 16-pounder. While he caught most on chubs, he has also taken some on carp. He cuts small triangular pieces, leaving the skin on but removing the scales. Either way, Dutch likes to catch his bait first, his fish second.

Trout Crazy About Reekers

Spent an evening and very early morning on McConaughy with Ken Carter of Omaha, fishing manufacturer's representative, and Jim Maxwell, president of Maxwell Manufacturing Co. on the latter's 20-foot-long research boat. This was a return trip for both, experimenting with outriggers and testing various lures on rainbow trout. The most consistent trout producer was Jim's red and white No. two Andy Reekers trolling spoon fished at about 60 feet. Using outriggers, a coming thing for trolling in Nebraska's deep waters, you can go down to whatever depth the fish are and remain there. Jim is a well-traveled angler, and in his opinion McConaughy is about as good a trout lake as there is.

MISHMAASH. Red Willow, 11 miles north of McCook on No. 83, ranks as Nebraska's smallmouth bass capital. An unconfirmed report has it that a fisherman recently boated a five-pound, seven-ounce smallmouth, bettering the state record. But the stringer and all, including other bass, was lost overboard. Still at Red Willow. Retired carpenter Weaver Van Fleet of Oberlin, Kan., after reeling in a bass, found that he also caught a bullhead at the same time. Somehow it became entangled in the moss as he pulled in the bass... Roy Auble at Swanson Lake says white bass fishing should get underway there within a few days. The past couple of weeks, one boat took about 100 white bass, another 25, and a third around 40. No other significant catches were reported.

The new Safari Inn campground just north of the Kearney interchange on I-80 is now open. Camping is big business. Lois and Karel Walek, Winnebago dealers in Lincoln, report that motor homes or motor coaches are currently their No. one seller. They begin at $6,700 and run up to $21,000. Next in line are travel trailers and pickup campers, followed by chop vans, fifth wheels, and tent trailers.

PLACES-A-GO-GO. Summer Theater at Fort Robinson (Crawford), Aug. 4-7; Nebraska Czech Festival (Wilber), Aug. 5-6; Waterama at Lake North (Columbus), Aug. 6; Perkins County Rodeo (Grant), Aug. 8-9, and Nebraska's Big Rodeo (Broken Bow), Aug. 9-12.

Off to St. Paul

Wayne will see action Monday at 6 p.m. against Auburn, according to Hank Overin. A Monday win would put Wayne in the championship game Tuesday at the same time.

Nelson collected three RBIs in a slugfest that saw both Midget clubs pound out seven runs.

Lonely Left Fielder Marty Hansen was the only Wayne runner who failed to get any accounts at bat but Hansen was the big scorer of the night, crossing the plate four times while being left stranded on second once.

Hansen got on base via five walks, the only local player to see first base that often during the seven-inning contest.

Wayne came charging out in the first with one run by Hansen on a bunt sacrifice by Catcher Bill Schwartz.

But the home team, West Point, struck back with its solo off three hits. Third Baseman Glen Randall slapped a single to set up the run, followed by Shortstop Greg Schreiner's single. An error by Wayne Second Sacker Kim Baker allowed Schreier to take second while Randall skipped into home.

A single by Left Fielder Warren Ortmeier looked like a good chance for the home team to score its second run. But an alert Wayne defense stopped the runner at home with a tag out by Schwartz.

The visiting club took over the game in its portions of the third, fourth and fifth frames, ripping out the remaining 11 runs off six hits.

Relief Pitcher Charlie Roland, Center Fielder Gordon Cook and Hansen all knocked doubles, two of which, by Nelson and Cook, were ground rule doubles. Both hits bounced over the right fielder fence.

Cook was the only Wayne player to steal home out of the five thefts accounted for by the power club. As a result of Cook's steal, Wayne scored its 10th run.

At the end of 4 1/2 innings, the picture painted a Wayne victory with the locals leading 12-2, and

Wakefield-Dodge Rain Delays Finals

Unless old man weather sprinkles his rain on the area again, the finals of the Area A Class B American Junior Legion game between Wakefield and Dodge was scheduled for Wednesday at 7 p.m.

Last Thursday, the locals dropped their first contest of the double elimination tourney to the Dodge club, 2-0. But Wakefield fought its way back, defeating Pender Saturday night, 7-2, and ripping Gretna, 5-1, Sunday for the right to face Dodge, which is undefeated in tourney play. The winner will represent the area in the Class B State Tournament in St. Paul.

If Wakefield beats Dodge in the first game, both squads will face off again the same night for the area title.

Sunday night, Coach Paul Eaton's club ran past Gretna, 5-1.

The Legionnaires scored one run in the second, fourth and fifth frames and then rapped two in the sixth for their five runs. Gretna followed with one run in its half of the sixth.

Wakefield's Mike Barge was the team's strongest hitter, going three for three at the plate. Third Baseman Sam Utech was next in line, blasting a triple in the first and a double in the fifth.

Both clubs were at bat 26 times with Wakefield getting eight hits and Gretna slapping three safeties.

Sidewalk superintendents in Winside were rewarded recently when a crew of men swung a big sign into position in front of the Winside State Bank building. The new sign tells the temperature and time regularly throughout the day, every day of the year. According to Dave Warnemunde, bank officer, The weather station is located within the sign and transmits readings electronically. Wind and sun have no direct effect on temperature reports. The bank is the first institution to offer this service in Winside.

Music Camp Recital Friday

A couple of hundred high school students got together Sunday at Wayne State College, and though most were strangers to each other, they had a common interest—music.

Monday morning they played or sang the first notes of Summer Music Camp rehearsal. By week's end the camp's bands, choirs, orchestra, stage band and a flock of small ensembles will have polished a repertoire for the public to hear.

The first major public performance comes Friday morning at 10 when two select groups, the symphonic wind ensemble and the concert choir, provide the program for Wayne State's summer commencement in the Willow Bowl. That evening at 8:30 in the Fine Arts Center, the same groups, plus the string orchestra, will present a public recital.

Saturday night will give the stage band its first time in the spotlight, playing for a camp dance.

The final concert at 2:30 Sunday in Rice Auditorium will wrap up the week with a varied performance of instrumental and vocal groups.

Camp Director Raymond Kelton listed campers selected for the honor groups, including these from the Wayne area:

Concert choir—Mary Nelson and David Bloom, Laurel; Dan Proett, Wayne.

A Look at Carroll

by Betty Kavanaugh

Community spirit has played a major part in the second rejuvenation of the little town of Carroll.

Carroll grew from a railroad depot in 1880 to an industrious town of about 500 population at its peak during the 20's. After fires, floods, tornados and the depression, the town slowly was becoming a ghost town until about eight years ago when new businesses, homes and recreational facilities began springing up. Since then practically every business in Carroll is either an entirely new business place or under new management.

New business places are still springing up. This spring Leroy Nelson completed a new building and opened his mechanic shop, Nelson Repair.

Last fall Maurice Sandahl, owner of Sandahl Repair, added a new addition to his welding shop, doubling it in size.

Most of the labor on both shops was done by friends and relatives who interrupted their jobs and field work to assist in the construction of the buildings.

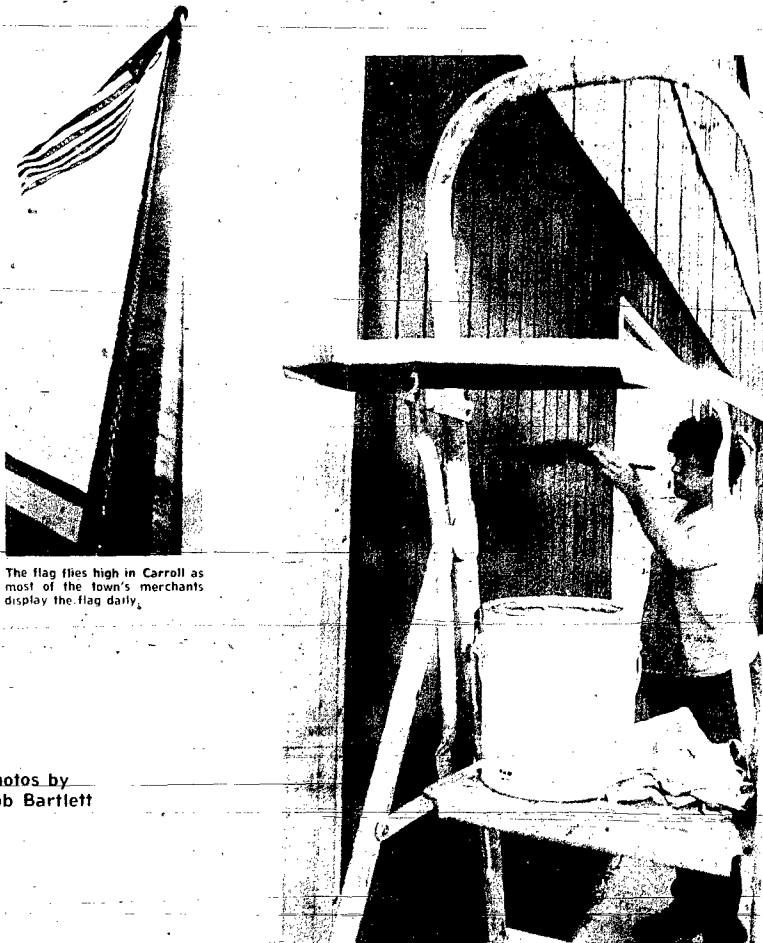

Richard Brown, formerly of Carter Lake, Ia., bought a home and moved his family to Carroll after becoming a partner with John Lambert in the Litho Speed Printing shop.

Farmers and business men joined finances and machinery to build the Saddle Club Arena about seven years ago. They also joined forces again last year to build the new Carroll Community Ball Park.

Practically all of the $1500 material cost of the ball park was donated. According to Bob Hank, men's league manager, plans are being made for adding sand, grass and other necessary things to the park when time and donations permit.

The Carroll Senior Citizens Center is another busy place with area residents working on a variety of projects, with some on a sale at the Center's Colonial Gift-Shoppe.

The flag flies high in Carroll as most of the town's merchants display the flag daily.

Fixing up means a new paint coat at Sandahl Repair. Putting on the fresh coats is Eddie Sandahl, son of Maurice Sandahl.

Photos by Bob Bartlett

The Farmer's State Bank is among the town's businesses that's adding a new touch to the area with the installation of new windows.

Carroll's clean-up project is not just a summer job. The citizens are always keeping their town clean.

A new sign at the Village Wash adds a flavor of the old.

One of the area's businesses that is expanding is Litho Speed with its addition of new press and shop equipment. Recently the business purchased a press weighing over 4,500 pounds.

Open House Honors Yale Kessler

WSC Librarian 'Recalled'

Retired librarian Yale Kessler was something like Danny Murtaugh, the baseball manager who was called out of retirement to manage the National League All Stars Friday.

Kessler retired a year ago after 32 years as a Wayne State College librarian. Then his former colleagues called him back Sunday to make a speech at a Conn Library open house.

There was a difference in that Murtaugh knew what his job would be. Kessler thought he knew. But he had no idea what the librarians really had in mind—an open house in his honor.

They went so far as to tell him that the library had decided to start an art collection, that the first painting was to be received at the open house. "Would he make a few remarks?"

Yes, he'd be happy to. So Kessler wrote some notes for a speech.

It turned out he had to discard the notes and improvise a new speech, resulting in the surprise that developed.

that Hautzinger practices in addition to his business, an art glass company which has created stained glass for hundreds of churches.

In response to revelation of the painting, Kessler rapidly revised his speech and reminisced about his librarian career.

He paid special tribute to Miss M. Lois Crouch, head librarian when he came to Wayne in 1939 who was present for the open house. She retired in 1961 and now lives in Sioux City.

Kessler recalled that in 1939 the library, with a staff of two, was located on the ground floor of a building which also housed science and mathematics classes. Miss Crouch and Kessler had a major role in planning the

Giddy-Up, Daddy

What a great day for a ride. 13 month old Katie Rall doesn't mind getting a ride on her dad's back during Sunday's warm weather. Katie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Rall, Wayne.

Poison Symptoms

A mother found her three year old son crying in the bath room. Noticing the half empty container by his side, she correctly assumed her son had just swallowed some of mommy's hand lotion. The mother grabbed him up and drove off in haste for the hospital emergency room. Any mother might have reacted in the same way, often the wrong way. Her correct response would have been to 1) note the substance and amount ingested and 2) call the local poison control center, her pediatrician or the hospital emergency room. She would have learned that most hand lotions are non toxic, avoided the hospital anguish and the risk of an automobile accident while driving to the hospital.

The Council on Family Health, sponsored by the manufacturers of medicines as a public service, urges mothers to be aware that many common household products are relatively safe if ingested by children.

The list, according to the Council, includes perfume (in normally small volume), sham poo, liquid makeup, floor wax, birth control pills, indoor plants, toy pistol caps, plastic putty and vitamins (though not iron pills). With thousands of accidental poisonings occurring each year, primarily among children under age five, parents should strive to keep all non-food products stored out of children's sight and reach. This especially true of medicines, petroleum products such as lighter fluid, dishwashing liquids, ammonia and bleach.

But, the Council adds, it is equally important to know what action should be taken in an accident situation. The Council suggests to all mothers that they keep the telephone numbers of the doctor, hospital, poison control center and police emergency center close to the phone. The fast advice of a trained expert can be worth a great deal.

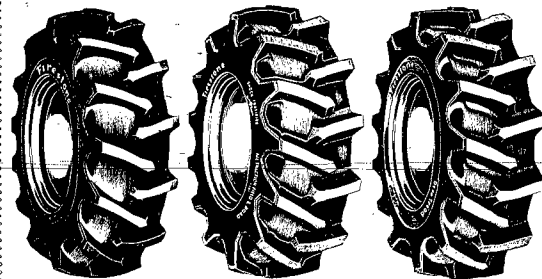

The moon's gravitational pull affects more than the oceans. A full moon directly overhead may lift the North American continent six inches, and the earth's atmosphere may bulge out a mile or more toward the moon. Even people respond to the moon's gravity, gaining and losing a fraction of an ounce with each rise and fall of the tides.

This means that slightly more than 56 per cent of all deaths in Nebraska in 1970 were caused by some form of cardiovascular disease...

Cost of Car Operation Up Past 2 Years

Have you been thinking about buying a new car? Have you been wondering how much the cost of driving has gone up recently? If you fit within the guidelines of a recent governmental study, each mile you drive in a standard size 1972 model auto will cost you 14 per cent more than it did in 1970...

Laurel Students En route Home

Two exchange students, Oscar Vega of Paraguay, South America, and Tom Beutcher from Germany, were honored recently with farewell parties held for them in Laurel.

Oscar, who spent six months in Laurel in the Marlen Kraemer family, left for home July 16. He received an honorary diploma as a senior at Laurel High School, and upon his return home will complete four additional months of study to receive his high school degree. About 150 friends and classmates were in the Kraemer home July 15 to see him off. No-hos' luncheon was served.

Tom, who has spent the past year in the Walter Chace home, Laurel, left for his home this week. A swimming party, followed by a picnic at the Lions Club Park, was his farewell fete.

Both youths were placed in Laurel under the Youth for Understanding Program.

MELONS MAKE HOT SELLER

Livingstone reported from central Africa that watermelons were growing well. Marco Polo wrote of delicious melons of the East and Christopher Columbus took the trouble to carry cantaloupes to the New World.

This appreciation of the tasty melon has been handed down to our generation. The farm value of watermelons and cantaloups combined was $162 million last year, and was exceeded only by lettuce and tomatoes, the two leading vegetable crops.

Cantaloups accounted for half of all melon sales. They also merited the most research—as scientists aim toward higher quality and more disease resistance—and they've even managed to gain slightly in per capita consumption in an era when fresh vegetables use has been going down.

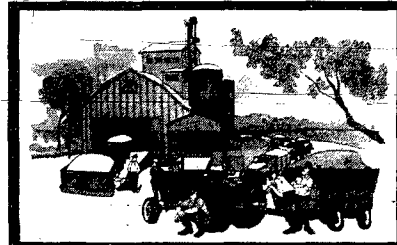

The story's not quite the same with watermelons. Though they add up to 40 per cent of melon sales, they've been fighting a losing battle in per capita consumption figures.

Size Problem

One of the reasons is the watermelon's very size. Today's smaller family can't eat a large melon at one sitting, and doesn't like it filling up the refrigerator for a week.

That's why most of the watermelon research is aimed at producing smaller, high-quality melons that have "shipability."

In addition to grains, feed manufacturers used more than

CHIEF HAS STORAGE

CHIEF BINS ARE BEST

It's been proved repeatedly that on-the-farm storage and drying make you more money. It's also been proved on the farm that Chief bins are your best choice.

CONSIDER THESE EXCLUSIVE FEATURES

- Chief bins are the strongest on the market today because they are rigidly reinforced with heavy duty vertical stiffeners. These provide added strength to support grain drying loads and stirring devices.
- When bin is used for drying, condensed moisture can't drip back on the grain because it runs freely down the steep pitched roof (5% defrost) and harmlessly out the eaves.
- Chief bins are the only ones on the market that give you tight airtight seals for storage or open airtight for drying.
- When installed according to specifications, Chief bins carry a lifetime warranty.

Irrigated Acres Triple in 25 Years

In 1945, Nebraska had 873,960 acres of irrigated land, according to the State Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics.

By 1970 the number of irrigated acres had increased to 3,995,000, an increase of 357.1 per cent in 25 years.

What could happen? This remarkable increase in irrigated acres in Nebraska, if adjusted on the basis of a constant growth rate compounded annually over the 25-year period, 1945-1970, amounts to 6.268 per cent.

Starting in 1953 with an increase of 109,765 acres, there were six successive years with over 100,000 acres annual increase.

This period of very rapid growth in irrigation was followed by another six-year period, 1958-64, of relatively slow growth with less than 100,000 acres of annual increase in irrigated acres.

During the six-year period 1965-70, 100,000 irrigated acres were added annually.

The actual increase in irrigated acres for the seven-year period 1964-70 closely coincides with the long range 25-year constant growth rate of 6.268 per cent compounded annually during that same seven-year period.

Projections explained

Projection A for the 10-year period 1971-1980 is based on a continuation of the 6.268 per cent annual growth rate compounded annually. To achieve this level of increase in irrigation by 1980 would require relatively optimum conditions for the many factors which tend to encourage irrigation development in Nebraska.

Projection B is based on a constant annual increase in irrigated acres at the same level as the average increase in irrigated acres for the six-year period 1965-1970. The number of irrigated acres would increase each year by 216,200 acres.

Among the factors which might result in such a condition might be relatively low prices for grain and soybeans, high prices for all energy or fuel sources as electricity, natural gas, propane and diesel fuel; lack of sufficient volume of credit at reasonable rates of interest for irrigation investments; and lack of federal and state funding for irrigation projects based on surface water development.

Projection C is based on both a decline in the percentage rate of growth in irrigation and a declining rate of the number of acres of increase in irrigation each year between 1971-1980.

Factors which might result in this slower growth rate might include unfavorable farm program developments with relatively low prices for feed grains and livestock.

Very slow rate of expansion in electricity and natural gas lines necessary for expanded irrigation acreage would cause a decline as would a long period of tight money supply conditions accompanied by high interest rates. Another factor could be more rapid decline in ground water supplies than anticipated, accompanied by legal restrictions on drilling of irrigation wells in Nebraska. A lack of federal and state funding for surface water irrigation projects in Nebraska would slow down increases.

Energy crisis

Undoubtedly one of the most serious problems which could adversely affect the rate of irrigation development in Nebraska is the "energy crisis."

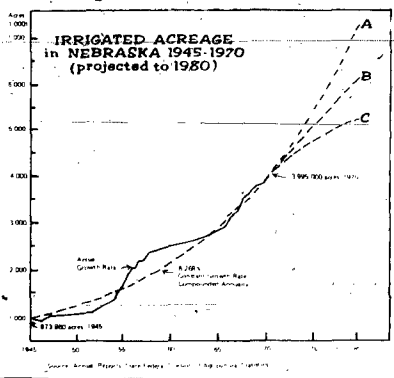

The United States has a large potential of energy resources, but shortages and increasing prices pose a serious problem.

The demand for electric energy has been doubling every 10 years. According to Dr. Hubert Risser, mineral economist with the U.S. Geological Survey of the Department of the Interior, the projected consumption of electric power in the 1970's is equal to the total amount consumed from 1900 through 1969.

Evidence of the energy crisis is already being felt. Increases in electric power rates will soon affect all of the rural electric power districts and most of the electric power retail firms serving towns and cities in Nebraska. This is the first rise in the rates for electric power for many years. In a few cases it is the first increase ever for some rural electric districts. Increases in electric rates have ranged from 11.5 per cent to 18.5 per cent for the rural electric districts in Nebraska.

The rise in natural gas supplied to farmers with irrigation motors on direct transmission lines were increased by about 30 per cent in 1971.

A particularly serious problem which is restricting expansion of irrigation in Nebraska is the so-called ratchet effect on Projection A. 7,388,000 irrigated acres by 1980, an increase of 83.7 percent. Based on a continuing growth rate of 6.268 percent.

Projection B. 6,157,000 irrigated acres by 1980, an increase of 54.1 percent. Based on the 1965-70 rate of increase in irrigated acres.

Projection C. 5,262,000 irrigated acres by 1980, an increase of 31.7 percent. Based on the premise that the number of irrigated acres added each year is 10 percent less than the number added in the previous year starting with 216,200 in 1970.

power supplied by the Nebraska Public Power District to the rural electric districts. The "ratchet" or irregularity in demand, is the result of the high peak load requirements for electric energy during the irrigation season.

This happens most often during the months of July and August, a time when air conditioning also contributes to a heavy load.

The electric distribution and transmission systems must be designed and built to accommodate these peak load periods, as a result, costs of building and maintaining electric facilities for July and August far exceed what would be necessary the rest of the year. This underuse of facilities represents an added cost.

According to NPPD's "ratchet clause" in the rate structure, each rural electric district supplied by NPPD must pay for the total kilowatts of electric energy used for a given month. This must be no less than 70 per cent of the highest month's total of kilowatts demand within the previous 12 months.

In several of Nebraska's rural electric districts the ratchet effect has resulted primarily from rapid irrigation powered by electric motors. This means in some cases the district must pay for thousands of kilowatt-hours of unused electricity during all but the summer months when irrigation demand is at its peak.

Several of the rural electric districts in Nebraska have had to restrict the number of irrigation wells for which they can provide electric power. Some districts, where the "ratchet effect" has been most acute, have declined to accept any new installations of electric motors for irrigation wells.

The power use by one of Nebraska's rural electric districts said in mid-December 1971 that his district had over 900 applications for electric motors for irrigations wells. At that district's normal rate of addition and expansion of services for irrigation, however, it would be at least five years before all of these applications could be handled.

For those farmers and ranchers who do not have access to natural gas or cannot obtain electric service for a planned irrigation installation, the principal alternatives are diesel or propane motors. Here again, the cost of both diesel fuel and propane has increased somewhat in recent years and there is no assurance these fuels will not become more costly in the near future.

Since the United States must depend upon imports to supplement the petroleum produced in this country and the prices negotiated with the principal oil exporting nations has been increasing, these higher costs are almost certain to be reflected in the retail prices for petroleum fuels of all kinds.

While the price outlook for all energy sources is gloomy for the individual farmer or rancher, the fuel or energy cost represents just one segment of the total irrigation picture.

One factor of paramount concern is what is going to happen to farm prices for feed grains grown under irrigation. Prices for corn and other feedgrains in the fall of 1971 were down sharply as compared to 1970 because of the 5.4 billion bushel bumper corn crop produced in 1971. One of the big unanswered questions is what type of farm programs and price support structure will be available during the remainder of the 1970's.

As farmers' costs of production have soared during the last few years of inflation, prices for products they sell—except for cattle—have declined or barely held their own. An ever-increasing squeeze has been felt on already narrow margins.

Cost and returns

Increased livestock production in Nebraska will tend to strengthen the market for feed grains and forages produced by irrigation. The combination of irrigated forage and feed with livestock production tends to be a more stable operation than either operation handled exclusively.

However, the individual farm or ranch owner and operator must use good management in both his irrigation and livestock enterprises if he is to be successful.

between costs and returns to farmers.

While the outlook for agriculture in general, and irrigation in particular is cloudy, Nebraska has many plus factors in its favor.

Nebraska farmers and ranchers are among the most efficient producers of the main agricultural commodities. The generally favorable supply of underground water places Nebraska as the state with the greatest potential for growth in irrigation, if other factors remain generally favorable.

The relative price and tax structure for agricultural land which has the potential for irrigation development is generally more favorable than is the case in many states.

This is also true in investment costs on a per acre basis to convert dryland to irrigated land. The growing season and climate also favor irrigation expansion.

Other factors

Nebraska's position as a leader in animal agriculture (cattle production, swine and cow calf production), enhances its potential for irrigation growth.

The likelihood of continued expansion of livestock production to meet the steadily increasing markets for red meat is a healthy sign for continued expansion of irrigation. Dr. Frank Baker, Chairman of the Department of Animal Science at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, estimates that Nebraska could capture as much as one-third of the new cattle feeding business, one-fourth of the new feeder cattle production, and one-fifth of the new pork production of the United States during the 1970's.

Increased livestock production in Nebraska will tend to strengthen the market for feed grains and forages produced by irrigation. The combination of irrigated forage and feed with livestock production tends to be a more stable operation than either operation handled exclusively.

However, the individual farm or ranch owner and operator must use good management in both his irrigation and livestock enterprises if he is to be successful.

The surprising Maverick.

It's a comfortable, 6-cylinder American compact that's actually priced below the Volkswagen 113.

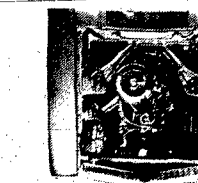

If you can afford a Volkswagen 113 — or almost any little import — you can afford a Maverick. Look:

FORD MAVERICK	2-door	6-cylinder	$2,140*
VW 113 (Super Beetle)	2-door	4-cylinder	$2,159*
TOYOTA COROLLA 1600	2-door	4-cylinder	$2,109*
DATSUN PL 510	2-door	4-cylinder	$2,306*

*Manufacturer's suggested retail price for 2-door models. Excludes dealer preparation charges if any, destination charges, title and taxes.

NOTE: People ask us how we can afford to offer a roomy, 6-cylinder compact at about the same price as the little imports. First, we've been making small cars since 1908. Experience helps. Second, we haven't changed Maverick — except for mechanical improvements — since we first introduced it. That kind of continuity helps to control costs. Third, recent currency revaluations and devaluations have helped restore the competitive stance of American manufacturers.

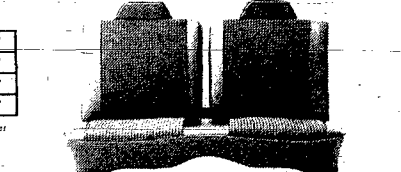

A good car for long trips.

—Maverick's rear track is 2.9" wider than Volkswagen's. Its wheelbase is 7.7" longer. There's a bit more weight, too. By themselves, these differences aren't very big — but they can add up to a big difference in the way Maverick drives and handles the open road.

Most little imports give you 4-cylinder engines. Maverick gives you a 6-cylinder engine.

It's smooth. It's reliable. It lets you accelerate into turnpike traffic with confidence and hold your own on steep hills. And it delivers surprisingly good gas mileage.

Better idea for safety — buckle up!

Ample room inside. Maverick's front seat, for example, over 8" more shoulder room than Volkswagen 113. There's no wasted space inside Maverick. At the same time, none of that small-car crowded feeling.

Maintenance: Even simpler, more convenient than the little imports. VW, for example, recommends normal service every 3000 miles or three months, whichever comes first. On Maverick, it's 6000 miles or six months. So Maverick's recommended service interval is twice as long as Volkswagen's.

We also designed Maverick to be a simple machine to care for. In fact, we've even prepared a manual which tells you how to do many maintenance jobs yourself. One more convenience: there are over 5,600 Ford dealers in the country. VW has about 1,100.

Today's Farm Population Third of Half-Century Ago

If Old MacDonald had a farm today, he'd probably be thinking about moving to town. Aid on that farm there would be no horse, sheep, or milk cow—unless the MacDonald place was the theoretical average farm.

Down on the new American farm, the National Geographic Society says, fewer farmers on fewer but bigger farms are raising a somewhat different barrel of livestock for the needs of more people than ever. Many a farm family, long reckoned to be as solid as a silo in making the American way of life, is being plowed under in competition with big business agriculture highly tuned to efficiency, cost accounting, market trends and scientific management of crops and livestock.

More and more farmers are selling to a bigger neighbor who is buying up and consolidating their spreads into farm factories.

The Department of Agriculture and the Bureau of the Census tell the story in statistics.

In the last 51 years, the number of farmers, families, and hired hands living on American farms has dropped from 37 million to just under 10 million. Today only one out of 21 Americans is on a farm.

At the same time, the 6.5 million farms averaging 147 acres in 1929 have been combined into 2.7 million averaging 389 acres. The nation's total farm fields and pastures have increased from 956 million acres to 1,118 million acres.

Last year the American farmer still on the job produced enough food and other products for 47 people, about 40 at home and seven abroad. Ten years ago he supplied the agricultural needs of only about 26.

Out in the barn, some of Old MacDonald's friends may be missing, or at least becoming scarce.

Greenbug Invasion Expected

Sorghum growers throughout this area should be on the alert for more insect problems in the next few weeks.

Greenbugs are on the upswing again, after a vicious attack on the crop earlier this year. The second surge of the pest is expected in August throughout central and western Kansas, Nebraska and South Dakota, according to university reports in those states.

Even if farmers treated for the first infestation another spray treatment will be needed to prevent further damage. Spraying should begin when lower leaves have been killed, entomologists point out.

Treatment should be made with an insecticide like Diazinon which is approved for greenbug control. Specific recommendations are available through local extension offices. Spraying may be done by air or ground, whichever is suitable.

A close watch will be needed to prevent further severe damage. The earlier infestation caused loss of the seedling crop in some areas, although growers were able to reseed most fields. Damage will still probably be the highest in four or five years, reports say. Even if populations are small, the pest reproduces rapidly, causing severe damage in just a few days. Damage is caused by a toxin injected into the sorghum plant.

Milk cows are not yet a vanishing species, but the nation's dairy herd of 12.3 million head is only half as big as it was at the end of World War II.

Sheep flocks total only 18.5 million head today, compared with 19 million 130 years ago or 44.7 million just after the Civil War. Man-made cloth has blanketed much of the wool industry, and many sheep-men have ignored the range wars of the Old West to become cattlemen.

Horses and mules may be found only on big Western ranches. The last time they were counted, in 1959, there were 3 million, about three-fourths as many as in 1840, but far less than the all-time peak of 27 million horses and mules on America's farms in 1915.

With horses now mostly a curiosity, more than ever there is a rattle rattle here and a rattle rattle there on Old MacDonald's farm. In 1965 farmers were driving 3.5 million cars, and by 1971 3 million-plus trucks and pickups.

Pest Control Study Undertaken at NU

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln, in cooperation with 18 other universities across the nation, will be exploring all facts of insect pest population regulations in search of practical alternatives to the extreme use of toxic chemicals.

The research is being done through the several-million-dollar International Biological Program (IBP) project with its goal being a better system of pest management on a national basis. Six crop areas are being studied—alfalfa, citrus, cotton, soybeans, fruit and pine trees.

The University of Nebraska contributions will be from experiments using alfalfa, cooperatively planned and conducted in the Departments of Agronomy, Entomology, and Biochemistry and Nutrition.

Dr. William R. Kehr, Professor of Agronomy at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and primary organizer of the research project in Nebraska, said Dr. Kehr, research Agronomist (USDA), the best way to control disease, insects and nematodes is to use resistant varieties. These varieties offer insurance against damage to forage and seed yield, quality and persistence.

"The work planned for NU in the IBP project is a continuation of previously related work started in the 1930's in which numerous significant accomplishments were made," Kehr said. Research under the IBP program will further studies in Nebraska five more years.

NU will research insects and diseases of economic importance to alfalfa which influence forage yield and quality in Nebraska and adjacent states.

"The primary objective," Kehr noted, "is to investigate the importance of insect resistant varieties, cutting management, level of insect infestation and insecticides on damage done by the alfalfa weevil and other potentially destructive insects."

The initial funding for the IBP project in Nebraska is provided by the USDA Agricultural Research Service, The National Science Foundation (NSF) and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) will provide future funds.

Dr. Donald G. Hanway and Dr. Elvis A. Dickason, chairmen in the University departments of agronomy and entomology, respectively, are the project directors in Nebraska. Along with Kehr, other supporting investigators are Robert L. Ogden from the Department of Biochemistry and Nutrition and George R. Mangiltz and S. Dean Kinder, both USDA research entomologists and faculty members in the Entomology Department.

Estimate 38-bushel '72 Wheat

"Nebraska will complete harvest with another good wheat crop this year, but yields will certainly not be as good statewide as last year," W. Duane Foote, secretary of the Nebraska Grain Improvement Association and Extension agronomist, said this week.

The July 1972 crop report estimated wheat harvest at 38 bushels per acre compared to 42 bushels per acre last year.

In addition to lower yield, test weight will also be down this year, Foote said. "The three hot days—June 7-9—was the largest contributing factor to the low test weight." Foote said. In isolated areas wheat streak mosaic, stem rust, lodging and hail also reduced yield and test weight.

Commenting on the progress of the wheat harvest this year, Foote said, "It was not a rapid harvest as showers and high humidity slowed the operations considerably." Lodging that occurred in the eastern part of the state also slowed combining he added.

The increase of rye in wheat is causing considerable concern, Foote noted. Wheat processors and handlers are concerned about the increased amount of wheat containing rye because it lowers the wheat quality. To alleviate this problem growers who had rye in their wheat fields this season need to change their source of seed. Certified seed should be planted to assure

County Ag Programs Total $1.2 Million

Wayne County residents received $1,268,800 in cash benefits from U. S. Department of Agriculture during 1971, according to a report released by Representative Charles Thone.

In the feed grant program, 1,081 county farmers received $1,178,046 for setting aside 118,073 acres.

In the wheat program, Thone said that two farmers and 558 acres were involved for certificate payments that totaled $528.

To increase U. S. production of wool, the USDA supports shorn wool at a current price of 72 cents a pound. The difference between the free market and the support price provided 65 farmers in the county with $6,310 in 1971.

In the Rural Environmental Agricultural Program, 119 participating farms received $30,839 in 1971 for work to prevent soil erosion, the congressman pointed out.

The Cropland Adjustment Program is a program under the 1965 agricultural act providing payments for shifting cropland to non-crop conservation use. Although this program has been superseded by the current agriculture act, 24 farmers in the county had 10-year contracts under the program and received $33,077 for 1,991 acres in 1971, Thone explained.

Political Contributions Affect '72 Tax Liability

Political contributions made this year may affect your 1972 tax liability, Richard P. Vinal, Internal Revenue Service District Director for Nebraska, announced today.

Under the Revenue Act of 1971, political contributions after 1971 to candidates for elections to Federal, State or local offices, in primary, special or general elections may be claimed as a credit or a deduction on your 1972 tax return.

Vinal stated that you may claim a credit for one half of the political contributions made during the year, with a maximum credit of $25.00 allowed on a joint return, $12.50 on the return of a single person (or married person filing separately). This credit is applied directly against your tax liability.

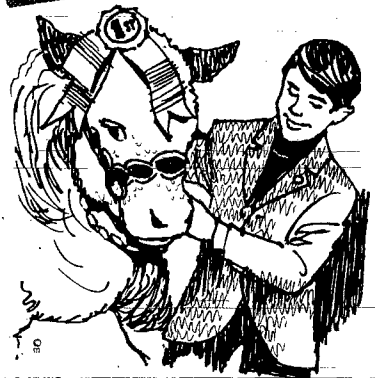

He went on to explain that instead of the credit, you may deduct the amount of the political contribution as an itemized deduction. This deduction, on a joint return, cannot exceed $100.00, and on the return of a single person (or married person filing separately) cannot exceed $50.00. Contributions made to National political party committees are also included under this new ruling.

Vinal urged taxpayers planning or claiming the credit or deduction to keep accurate records of their contributions, and to secure a receipt from the candidate or committee to which they contributed.

Further information may be obtained from your local IRS Office.

Egg in Spoon Race

These ladies are sitting straight in the saddle for a good reason—they are holding spoons in their mouth and in those spoons are fresh eggs. The large number of entries in the fun event at the Laurel Bit and Bridle 4-H Club Horse Show Wednesday night dwindled quickly, eliminated when eggs dropped from the spoons. At left is the eventual winner, Tracy Kramer of Norfolk and runner-up was Tami Kramer of Howells, right.
