

President of Bus Company Disagrees

Was Change in Bus Operation Legal? State Railway Commission Says No

A question of legality has arisen concerning the dropping of bus passenger service to towns along Highway 20, including Laurel, Randolph and Belden — and the change in scheduling along the Sioux City to Norfolk route by Arrow Stage Lines.

The schedule change, which affects service to area towns such as Wakefield, Winside, Wayne and Hoskins, and the deletion of passenger service was effective Sept. 18.

A call to Ralph Saahtoff, acting director of the motor transportation department of the Nebraska Railway Commission, unveiled the fact that no application for a schedule change or deletion of any towns along the lines had been received at that office.

Saahtoff said the required procedure was for a carrier to file an application for any change whatsoever in its service with the State Railway Commission.

"This application is published as a legal in the Omaha Daily Record giving objectors 30 days to file any protests," Saahtoff said, adding "at the end of that 30 days, the Railway Commission will set up a hearing on the requested changes."

"If this procedure is not followed," Saahtoff said, "the carrier could be jeopardizing his certificate."

A copy of the publication normally is sent by the RC to cities and towns along the route involved, Saahtoff said, although the state is not required to do so.

C. D. Busskohl, president of Arrow Stage Lines, with offices in Sioux City, Ia., had an altogether different interpretation of the law.

"A hearing is no longer mandatory," he claimed. "This procedure was changed some time ago, but the Railway Commission has the authority to call a public hearing if they wish."

Busskohl added he was under the assumption that a fitting in both the scheduling and discontinuation of service had been made with the Railway Commission, but Saahtoff said nothing could be found in the bus line's files to that effect. "We haven't approved a schedule change for Arrow Stage Lines since 1968," he commented.

The bus line president said "in most cases a hearing would be a total waste of time and they (Railway Commission) know it. They grant the schedule changes or service dropping request — or they don't — depending on the circumstances."

A return call to Saahtoff with this information brought an "absolutely incorrect" response. "The purpose of the Railway Commission," he said, "is to protect customers or shippers along routes of the carrier. If we were not required to approve all changes concerning bus operations, we would have no control at all."

Saahtoff said he knew of no such change in the procedural requirements for bus changes. "We have a number of requests on file right now for bus route and schedule changes — and each will have a hearing after objectors are given a chance to protest."

The RC official said as far as he was concerned, the Arrow Stage Lines had not been authorized.

Sales Blitz at Wayne Businesses To Follow Veterans Day Parade

The Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion and their Auxiliaries are co-sponsoring a Veterans' Day parade Monday morning, which will begin at 10:30 a. m. at Wayne State College.

The parade route will be south down Main Street and will disband after turning right at First Street.

Norb Dargatz, in charge of the parade preparations, asks that all VFW and Legion members and Auxiliaries participate in the parade. He said area bands had been invited to participate in the parade and several owners of antique cars have intentions of entering the parade.

In addition to VFW and American Legion Color Guards, the National Guard will have displays of equipment, including four armored personnel carriers, tracked vehicles, trucks and jeeps.

The parade will pause momentarily at Third and Main, where a prayer will be given by Cletus Sharer.

Most business places in Wayne will be closed Monday morning, but will open for a 5 1/2-hour sales blitz at noon, with some real bargains promised by store owners. Also, following the parade, an open house will be held at the National Guard Armory, up to 1 P.M.

Most city, county, state and federal offices will be closed all day on Veterans' Day, including the city offices in the auditorium, all offices in the Wayne County courthouse and the ASCS office at 119 Main.

The post office will observe its usual holiday hours, with no window service but the lobby is open for post office box patrons from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Winside residents will mark the Veterans' Day celebration with a benediction and several speeches at the high school about 1 p. m.

The Rev. G. W. Gottberg will offer the prayer with Bryan Backstrom and Jean Weible, 1971 Boys and Girls State representatives, giving short speeches.

Post 752 of the American Legion will present the colors. The high school band and vocal students also will participate in the program as well as the Brownie and Girl Scout troops from Winside.

Classes will be held in the morning, said Ron Kramer, principal, but the students will be dismissed at 2 p. m. or when the services are completed.

Most other area towns have not planned special observances for the 23rd, though post offices will be on a holiday schedule and most banks will close. Businesses in Wakefield will be closed for the entire day.

Gene Erb, Dixon County American Legion commander, announced that the Dixon County Legion Posts will observe Veterans Day on Nov. 11 with a county convention to be held at Wakefield. The business meeting at 5 p. m. will be held at the Legion Hall, to be followed by a 7 p. m. banquet at the Wakefield Elementary School auditorium. There will be a guest speaker. The meeting will conclude with a dance at the Legion Hall.

Plan Feed

Members of the Wakefield City Budget committee are making plans for their 23rd annual Pancake Day to be held election day, Nov. 7.

Work Stoppage Ordered Fatal Crash Near Pilger

A temporary work stop order was issued to the CVD Construction Co., last week to stop all pouring of concrete until the company has corrected a water drainage problem and installed a sidewalk for pedestrians.

Richard Carlson, city building inspector, said the order was issued last Friday because the company failed to build or mark a sidewalk for pedestrians and construct proper drainage facilities for water coming off the roof of the building.

Carlson said he and construction officials made a verbal agreement to continue all other phases of work on the building except for the pouring of the concrete.

When the company complies with the order, he went on, then it can begin working on the laying of concrete.

A rural Pilger woman, Mrs. Ed (Frances) Schaffer, 51, was killed Saturday around midnight when her car left a county road about a mile west and three miles south of Pilger and struck a tree.

The Nebraska Highway Patrol report said Mrs. Schaffer was alone at the time of the accident.

Mrs. Schaffer was a daughter of Mrs. Anna Behmer of Hoskins.

Winside Offers New T-I Program

By Pat Oswald

For the first time Winside Public School is offering a Trade and Industrial program to high school students in the 11th and 12th grades.

Randall Shaw, T and I instructor, said the program will coordinate with classroom and shop work. Shaw, originally from Orchard, noted that the students enrolled in the program are expected to demonstrate a degree of proficiency in understanding of principles and skills in maintaining, repairing, constructing and fabricating related objects.

To help the students master the principles and practices, the class will conduct group discussions, workshops, quizzes and individual and group activities.

Shaw went on to say that the objects of the program are to acquire knowledge of industrial and occupational opportunities, to develop understanding of related principles and technical knowledge, to develop skills in the use of tools and equipment, produce attitudes towards safety, responsibility and cooperation and to develop a feeling of confidence and pride.

Shaw said, "Twelfth grade students will receive one year in auto mechanics and the 11th grade members will have arc welding the first semester and building construction in the second term."

"This is the first year it will be possible for seniors to take welding also," he added.

Classes

Presently, Shaw has two two-hour classes each day with 15 students in each class. "The boys are very interested in the classes," he said.

In the welding class, the students learn about arc and oxy-acetylene methods of joining metals together. Safety is always stressed, he said, as well as knowing the different types of equipment and identification of metals. Cutting and the various positions of welding also are taught.

The construction classes center on use of equipment, building materials used, laying out and leveling of foundation. Shaw also pointed out that the students learn about footings and foundations along with block laying and framings.

Included in the program is the study of interior and exterior wall finishing and door and window making.

Auto Mechanics

Senior class members have an opportunity to learn about small engines—also safety and principles—tuneups and troubleshooting as well as overhauling. Auto mechanics offers students a chance to learn about the various parts and functions of the car parts. Shaw emphasized, "Among some of the listed studies are fuel system and electrical service, complete engine tuneup, automotive brake service, complete engine overhaul procedures, cooling system, lubrication and air-conditioning. Before coming to Winside, Shaw taught at Coleridge for three years after receiving his Master's Degree at Wayne State. He is a graduate of Page High.

Building

The building housing the trade and Industrial educational program is the former cafeteria of the old school. Remodeling of the 90 by 50-foot building was started during the second week of August with the equipment delivered later the same month. An open house is being planned in the near future, he said.

River Basin Study Set

Platte River Basin study director Carroll Hamon of Lincoln says three meetings—Oct. 24 at Norfolk, Oct. 25 at North Platte and Oct. 26 at Broken Bow—have been scheduled to form Citizens Advisory Committees for the study in the Elkhorn, Loup and Upper Platte sub-basins.

The joint federal-state study is being directed by the newly-formed Missouri River Basic Commission. The study area covers all of the Platte River drainage in Nebraska which includes over 50 per cent of the entire state.

The major purpose of the study is to prepare a plan for future water management, looking especially at needs and opportunities for the next 15-20 years. Hamon says that participation by local citizens throughout the three-year study period is a major new concept in this type of study. Members of the Citizens Advisory Committee will work directly with study task force members who are representatives of state and federal water planning agencies.

They will be expected to provide counsel and guidance to the task forces and to report back to the local residents on the study progress.

The meeting at Norfolk, to begin at 7:30 p. m., will be held at the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resource District office, located 1 1/2 miles south of the Highway 25-81 intersection on the west side of Highway 81.

Earlier, Busskohl had said the Sioux City-O'Neill-Winner, S.D., line, which includes the three area towns along Highway 20, had suffered a heavy loss of revenue due to the fact that not even half paying its cost," he said. The scheduling change affects those bus riders in Wayne, Wakefield, Winside and Hoskins who have business to conduct in Norfolk. The new schedule in effect the past month allows only a half-hour layover in Norfolk before the return trip, from 11:30 a.m. to noon. Busskohl did not elaborate, but he said "new times are expected to provide better conditions at both ends of the line." He said towns along Highway 20 were notified of the possible loss of bus passenger service a month before the change went into effect, asking the general consensus of the citizens and business people in those towns pertaining to the service. He added that a notice of schedule change also was sent to newspapers in the towns involved. The Herald did receive such a notice — but after the story already had been printed.

About 115 boys from 10 troops camped from Friday night until Saturday. The canoeing took all Saturday, in expeditions of eight canoes carrying three boys each. There were a few mishaps as river currents played tricks on some of the less experienced paddlers. But no matter. Sooner or later, most of the boys were soggy from wading in the river. The warm, sunny Saturday the dunking felt pretty good. But as night came, the temperature dropped somewhere near freezing, and heat from the campfire topped off a dandy day. LAUREL Second Graders Involved In Community Affairs

Mrs. Marlan Kraemer
Phone 256-3585

Fourteen Laurel elementary second graders are becoming involved citizens with a study program which got underway at the beginning of the school year. Invitations to talk to the class were extended to various individuals involved in the school and community and compositions were written by the students afterwards.

Duties and problems were explained by Principal Fenton Crookshank, school lunch administrator, Mrs. Marie Mallatt and school nurse, Mrs. Gana Marlin.

A menu of the students' favorite foods was compiled which called for pizza, mashed potatoes, carrot strips, cake and chocolate milk, according to Mrs. Mallatt.

The composition written on the duties of the school principal noted, Mr. C is a busy man. He has to be at all the games. He has to line up all the bus drivers. He hires and fires teachers. If students don't behave, he talks to them and sometimes they are sent home. He has lots of paper work. Mr. C works with the janitors. He talks to people to get their ideas or explains things. He registers people for classes. He can listen to us over the speaker and can talk to us, too.

Two field trips have also been taken in conjunction with the project. Students visited the Laurel Security National Bank where Mrs. Dolores Morten, bank clerk, explained her duties and showed the students the vault and various machines that help do the work. A tour was also taken of the Laurel Fire Hall. Fireman, Verneal Gade, permitted the students to try on masks and boots, sound the fire siren and answered questions.

Second grade teacher is Mrs. Don Drediker.

Gail Jean, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Cox of Dakota City, is this year's Poster Child for the Nebraska Association for Retarded Children. As NebrARC Poster Child, she will be Nebraska's entry in the selection of the National Association for Retarded Children's Poster Child. Gail Jean is one of eight children enrolled in the Stepping Stone School in Dakota City, a program for trainable retarded children operated by Educational Service Unit 1. She was one of the school's first students almost two years ago.

This young lady is very talkative about her school, her home, and the things she enjoys doing. Her favorite subject at school is reading and she says, "Math makes me tired!" She really enjoys and looks forward to the visits her class makes to lots of different places, especially the ones to farms.

"Gail Jean is quite a help around the home," says her mother. "Yep, I sweep and dust and make my bed and..." The list goes on.

She took swimming lessons this past summer and is anxious for next summer to get here so she can go swimming again.

As NebrARC Poster Child, Gail Jean will have a part in the publicity for Honey Sunday and will be a guest at the state convention of NebrARC next spring in Norfolk.

Dog Tugs Over 3,000 Pounds

Largest: The world's heaviest breed is the St. Bernard. "Baron Von Bruno," owned by Ronald G. Sarlo of Pueblo, Colo., was weighed at 2500 pounds in May, 1963.

Smallest: The world's smallest breed is the Chihuahua. Some specimens of which weigh only 16 ounces.

Strongest: The greatest load ever shifted by one dog was a 3,142 pound sledge pulled by "Charlie," a husky owned by Ledy Clendenen, in a test at Anchor Point, Alaska, on Feb. 11, 1961.

Fastest: The fastest breed of domestic dog is the Saluki, which may attain a maximum speed of 43 m.p.h.

Oldest: The oldest reliably reported dog was "Adjutant," a black Labrador gun dog who lived 27 years, three months, owned by James Hawkes of Littlecote, England.

Largest litter: The largest recorded litter of puppies is one of 23 whelped on Feb. 11, 1945, by "Lena," a Foxhound bitch owned by Commander W. N. Ely of Ambler, Pa.

Tallest: This dog record is held by "Broadbridge Michael," an Irish Wolfhound (born 1926) owned by Mrs. Mary Beynon of Kent, England. He stood 39 1/2 inches at the shoulder.

Did you know that since 1965, Russia has issued six stamps depicting these dogs: Causasian Sheepdog, South Russian Sheepdog, Turkistan Sheepdog, Laika (the famous mixed breed astronaut dog), and an Irish (Irish?) Setter.

Many are familiar with famous dogs of today and yesterday, like Lyndon Johnson's beagles, President Nixon's Irish Setter, the Welsh Gorgis of Britain's Royal Family.

But did you know that Michelangelo's Pomeranian accompanied his master to the Sistine Chapel; that Wagner's Poodle sat in the orchestra pit pricking his ears at the sound of Valkyries; that Chopin's Minnie Waltz was written for a Poodle? And that a Fox Terrier named Laurel followed Napoleon into exile?

Remember, your pet's best friend is the veterinarian!

'Rent Watch' Booklet Aids Beneficiaries

Copies of a booklet describing the Rent Watch program, recently announced by the Cost of Living Council, are now available at the Norfolk Social Security Office, Carrol C. Clarke, Social Security acting district manager said.

The "Rent Watch" program, Clarke said, is aimed at preventing landlords from illegally boosting rents to take advantage of the increased social security benefits which became payable this month.

The booklet tells Social Security beneficiaries what to do if they receive a notice of a proposed rent increase and how to file a complaint with the Internal Revenue Service if they believe that the increase is in violation of Economic Stabilization Program regulations.

Odd Spuds

Albert Soules of 1071 S. Lincoln, grew some weird looking potatoes this year and has given them names. Here he is shown with his "B. 79" and "Donald Duck." With a little imagination the third spud (left) could be labeled "Mother Goose" (squatted down).

200 Million Afflicted by Disease Almost Unheard of in the U.S.

What are the world's greatest health problems? Malaria? Malnutrition? Perhaps. But there is an equally serious one that most Americans have never heard of. It is called schistosomiasis or Bilharzia. It is a chronic infection that leads to such symptoms as anemia, perforated intestines and painful swelling of the abdomen. The sufferers lose body function and energy. In severe cases they are unable to work at all.

Some 200 million persons in Asia, Africa, South America and the tropical regions have the disease. Developing nations in those areas list the disease as one of the major obstacles to their development.

The disease is caused by small worms called schistosomes which live in the veins that serve the digestive organs and the intestines. There they mate and release eggs. Many of the eggs penetrate the walls of the alimentary canal or the bladder, others become trapped in the liver or in the lungs. The body is damaged through complications arising from its own immune reaction to the eggs.

Some of the eggs pass out through the digestive wastes and in fresh water hatch into free swimming larvae which infect snails living in the water.

Another developmental form of the worm emerges from the snails and enters, by skin penetration, humans who happen to touch or be in the water. These forms develop into adults in their human hosts, release eggs and start the cycle all over again.

It is easy to see why the disease is widespread in tropical underdeveloped countries. Sanitary treatment of human wastes is rare. A source of fertilizer is inadequate and the people are exposed to river or lake water through irrigation, bathing and other activities.

Several serious efforts at controlling the disease have been made by treating streams with poisons to destroy the snails, or by changing the water usage habits of the people. But the success has been limited by the costs and manpower required. Now evidence is accumulating that a vaccine to immunize against schistosomiasis may be feasible. Recently scientists at The Salk Institute who conducted an informal review of the problem concluded that a vaccine was the most promising approach.

In the last few years, researchers have moved much closer to an understanding of the infection and the immune response. In England, experimental systems have been developed that permit most of the life cycle of the worm to be carried out in vitro that is, in test tubes in the laboratory without animal hosts. Thus detailed analysis of the worms can be made even at the cellular and molecular levels. Elsewhere, vaccination experiments with cattle have already been started.

If the nature of the immunity and of the adult worms' de-

Nail Biting Symptom Of a Deeper Problem

Jenny is twelve years old. She has been biting her nails since she was three, and the skin around them often bleeds. She is worried about getting an infection and wants to know how she can stop biting her nails.

Her parents should be asked to take her to a pediatrician who can find out why she bites her nails. The Nebraska Medical Association points out that biting the nails is a symptom of a deeper problem that can be helped with medical advice.

Finding out why can help Jenny overcome her habit. Yes, Jenny might get an infection, but that is the least important part of the problem.

Whether or not you bite your nails, brittle nails can be a problem too. The cause of brittle nails is not definitely known, and contrary to a popular legend, they are not caused by a deficiency in protein, vitamins, calcium or other known nutrient. The probable cause: external stresses such as detergents, solvents, or manicure preparations. And brittleness also increases with age.

When moist, the nails are very plastic. When dehydrated they are brittle and rigid. The constant use of polish removers, which contain solvents, probably leads to a loss of the water holding capacity. Although some studies indicate that gelatin taken daily in large doses may be beneficial, the present consensus among dermatologists is that significant improvement does not result from treatment with gelatin. Some cases of brittleness can be attributed to systematic disorders, such as circulatory disturbances and impaired thyroid function.

If brittleness occurs without a known external cause and is persistent or severe, the Nebraska Medical Association suggests you consult your physician.
