Winside Watchman Early-day Paper

By Pat Oswald
(Second of two-part series)

(Editor's note: Our correspondent has informed us that in the beginning Northside was located west of the present site of Winside. When the railroad came through, two areas were selected for a depot site, including Northside and another. Northside lost the decision and the present site was the winner. Therefore, the town got its name of Winside.)

Several Winside residents recall when they had their own newspaper, but cannot remember when the first paper, The Winside Watchman, was started. A later publication, the Winside Tribune changed hands several times, with F. J. Dimmel taking over in 1920 and publishing the paper for many years.

Free movies also were shown weekly until several years ago when those popular shows, which also served as a meeting place for people in the area, died out in all of the smaller communities.

Voter Registration Deadline Friday

A total of 4,869 Wayne County voters had registered to vote in the Nov. 7 general election up to Monday afternoon, according to County Clerk Norris Weible.

The deadline for registration is Friday for (1) those persons not already registered; (2) for newcomers to the county; (3) for anyone moving from one precinct to another; or (4) for persons who change name because of marriage or for any other reason.

Those persons who had registered earlier and who do not fall into any of the above categories do not need to re-register.

The past two weeks have seen the biggest registration rush, with 111 persons becoming eligible voters during that time.

Persons living within the boundaries of Wayne County may register with the village clerk at the Hoskins and Winside and at the Farmers State Bank at Carroll.

The deadline to make application for absentee ballots is Nov. 3 and for disabled voter ballots up to 4 p.m. on Nov. 6, the day before the general election.

Those absentee and disabled ballots must be in the hands of the county clerk by midnight Nov. 6.

Up to Monday afternoon there had been 101 absentee and disabled applications made, a sizeable increase over the last general election in 1970 when there were 74 absentee ballots cast. There were 98 absentee ballots for the May 9 primaries.

Probably the most watched at race as far as state election is concerned is for the 17th District seat in the Nebraska Legislature with John R. (Bob) Murphy and incumbent LeRoy G. Pfister, both of South Sioux City, after the job.

There will be considerable interest in the Ninth district

NORTHEAST EXTENSION Notes

Halloween Costumes—Danger or Delight? Trick-or-treat time offers possible dangers for children who aren't properly equipped for the holiday. Costumes, masks, wigs and beads can convert from fun to flame in a mere instant.

When buying Halloween costumes for the children check the labels to be sure the items have been treated with flame-retardant chemicals or are made of flame resistant materials. It could mean the difference between danger and delight.

Home sewn costumes of cotton can be made flame-resistant by dipping them in a solution of seven ounces of borax and three ounces of boric acid dissolved in two quarts of water. Your druggist can supply you with the products needed to make fabrics flame-resistant.

Legislative Candidate Bob Murphy. "Legislature is becoming a larger and larger part of your state government."

Lions Add Members; Murphy Guest Speaker

Three new members were initiated into Lions International Tuesday night during the club's monthly meeting at the Wayne Vets Club. Richard Mencl, Harold Slotenbergh and Bob Barlett were officially sworn in by Lion Zone Chairman Cletus Sharer. During the two-hour dinner, Nebraska Legislative Candidate Bob Murphy, South Sioux City, told the group that he is in favor of the states controlling the various governmental policies within their own area instead of the federal government in charge of different departments. "The Legislature is becoming a larger and larger part of your state government," the candidate for the 17th District stressed. "I do feel," he continued, "that we the people should retain the control of the Legislature's salaries although the incumbent Senator LeRoy Pfister) believes that the legislators should set their own salaries."

Murphy said he felt that his own opinions will not be the sole judgment in the Legislature. After all, it is the person's opinions that govern a legislator's decision in the Unicameral. At least that is the way it should be, he explained.

Murphy also touched upon the idea of issuing revenue bonds to construct highways in the state. "The roads are far from being in good shape," he added. Monday night at 7 p.m. Murphy and Sen. Pfister will be on ETV along with Sen. Jules Burbach and Candidate Tom Kennedy, Madison County area, to discuss the political issues concerning Nebraska.

The Agent's Angle

by Harold Ingalls

er should be stored for the winter.

First, clean the mower. Remove the hood or blower housing from over the flywheel. Remove dirt and trash from the cooling fins and on other mower parts.

Remove dirt and oil from the engine and housing by using a grease remover, kerosene or hot soapy water. Do not use gasoline for cleaning, as it is very flammable and also causes a "burning sensation" to the skin. Be careful not to get water or cleaning agents inside the engine.

Change the crankcase oil. Drain the old oil through the drain plug under the deck of the mower or through the oil filler plug.

When filling the mower, keep the carburetor on the high side. Also, if your mower has an oil bath air cleaner, be sure to remove it before filling the mower or the oil will spill all over the engine and into the carburetor.

After draining, refill the crankcase with fresh oil of the type recommended in the operator's manual. A good quality 30-weight oil would work well.

Clean the air cleaner. For the oil bath type, pour the oil out, wipe the bowl clean and refill with clean oil to the full mark. This oil is usually the same as that used in the crankcase.

Some mowers use a polyurethane sponge air cleaner. Wash it in kerosene or hot soapy water. Squeeze out all excess cleaner and allow the sponge to dry. Then add a small quantity of oil to the sponge and squeeze out excess oil. Replace the sponge.

The fuel system should be drained. Drain all gasoline from the tank by removing the fuel line between the tank and carburetor. After draining, reconnect the gas tank, start the engine and let it run until all fuel is removed. Be sure to replace the fuel lines and tank cover securely.

Remove all gasoline from the tank, since the gasoline ages and forms gums and deposits which can clog the fuel system.

Remove the spark plug and place a small quantity of oil in the cylinder. One or two tea spoons should be enough. With the spark plug out, crank the engine causing it to turn over several times allowing the oil to coat the cylinder walls and piston rings. Replace the spark plug, leaving the plug wire off for safety reasons. Store the mower in a clean, dry place that has good air ventilation. Finally, you may wish to lubricate the wheels, do some spot painting and sharpen the mower blade.

Doing these things will make your mower ready to go next spring.

Market News Wire

A new addition to the University of Nebraska Lincoln Animal Science Department, a teletype machine connected to the Denver Cattle Fax wire and the Kansas City Livestock and Feed Market News wire, gives NU students insight into the marketing phase of the livestock industry. Checking the 10:30 a.m. market hog prices are animal science associate professor Dr. John Ward (left) and animal science students Barb Young, Hyannis, Terry Potter, Concord, and Larry Thornton, Lincoln.

The oil that is spilled does a fair job of cleaning the engine, but it is often called a "flag" since it is carried out by a banner when the animal becomes frightened and bounds away.

Farm Receipts Higher Ag Department Says

Nebraska showed an increase of 5.4 per cent from 1970 to 1971 in total cash receipts from farm marketings, including cash sales and CCC loans, but excluding direct government payments to farmers, according to calculations based on figures released recently by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

When government payments were taken into consideration, however, the state's rate of increase was only 3.6 per cent.

This and other information on farm income in Nebraska and other states in the West North Central Region appears in an article in the October issue of "Business in Nebraska" authored by Mrs. Dorothy Switzer, editorial assistant, and Dr. E. S. Wallace, director, of the Bureau of Business Research, University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

In rate of increase from 1970 to 1971, Nebraska, among the seven states in the region, was fifth in livestock marketings, fourth in crop sales and fifth in total cash receipts from farming.

Because of year-to-year fluctuations in farm production and prices, the researchers point out that percentage changes for two-year periods may be more significant than annual changes. On the basis of increase from 1969 to 1971, four states—Nebraska, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota—recorded gains in cash farm marketings of between 14 and 15 per cent, somewhat above the regional increase, 13.1 per cent, and considerably above the national increase, 10.2 per cent.

All states in the region showed a greater percentage increase in cash receipts from crops than from livestock for the two-year period.

It was pointed out that a notable feature of the two-year comparison is a marked decline nationally and in all states in the region in dependence of agriculture on government payments as a source of cash income.

Five states in the West North Central Region in 1971, as in 1970, were in the top 10 agricultural states in the nation in terms of cash receipts from farm marketings, but there were some conspicuous changes in rank among the states. Nebraska dropped from fifth to seventh place, but retained its fourth place rank in receipts from livestock. It ranked third among states of the nation in corn and sorghum grain, fourth in cattle and calves, fifth in hogs and pigs, seventh in sugar beets and 10th in hay.

A chart accompanying the article shows for the state and nation the percentage relationship of net farm income to realized gross farm income for the period 1959 to 1971. The percentage for the nation is shown to be much more stable than for the state. For the period 1959 to 1971 total realized net income of Nebraska farmers constituted only 25.9 per cent of total realized gross income. When the change of farm inventories is taken into account, however, the proportion was slightly higher, 27.2 per cent. Both proportions were considerably below those for the region and for the nation in the same time period.

High Moisture Corn Better for Cattle?

High moisture corn can be better cattle feed than the same corn dried, but not always. Northeast Station experiments over several years show high moisture shelled corn stored whole will produce more rapid and efficient gains than the same corn dried. On the other hand, high moisture corn ground before storing has produced less rapid gains and less feed more feed than the dried corn.

Storing high moisture corn ground may be justified by harvest economies and early harvest to avoid field losses, but not by its feed value in our experience, researcher Walt Tolman says. "We have, however, improved this feed by adding 17/10 pound or more of ground limestone or bentonite at feeding time. We will be experimenting more with these additions."

Misconception About Business

There's a popular myth making the rounds that if business is taxed heavily enough, there will be adequate funds to solve all the nation's problems. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States attempted to dispel this myth in its statement of recommendations to the platform committee of the Democratic Party at a national convention.

The Chamber's reasoning goes like this:

"Maturity demands an acceptance of reality. Our resources are not sufficient to cover all of our needs and desires. Therefore, difficult choices must be made. Priorities must be set. Costs must be faced."

"It is the unhappy responsibility of our public officeholders to make many of these decisions. The burden of such decision-making will not be eased by encouraging people to believe that all things are possible, if they will only vote for the right man."

"Nor will the burden be eased by undermining public confidence in the competitive enterprise system through wanton attacks on business; misrepresentation of the level, value and function of profit; and calculated disregard of the private economy's contribution to human progress and desire. Therefore, difficult choices must be made. Priorities must be set. Costs must be faced. We will all be stronger for it."

"We urge you, credit your fellow citizens with the wisdom to know that you don't get something for nothing in this life. Invite their participation in the establishment of priorities. Discuss costs, as well as benefits, honestly and openly. We will all be stronger for it."

In Nebraska, pine seed, grass, wild seeds, oats, and grasshoppers make up most of the diet of wild turkeys.

Rebellious Chickens

For some reason chickens never seem to be ranked socially among the human, farmer type of animals. Chickens are supposed to belong to the Mrs. category of farming responsibility.

Chickens also belong to a rebellious category. If they don't get everything peaceful and quiet like they want, they rebel. If they suffer any sudden changes in atmosphere, diet or daily routine, they immediately go on strike. Then you have to feed them all that good, high priced feed for the next two months without getting a case of eggs. Every time you grind for them you think of how many pounds it would put on the fat hogs or cattle, yet it has to be fed to those—those chickens.

Undoubtedly there isn't a farmer anywhere who hasn't thought that same thought at one time or another.

Well, maybe not thought about it in exactly those words.

Chickens have to be pampered. So it is necessary to put them in a nice, warm, draft free building for the winter. After a week of preparation in the hen house, culling the old hens, putting new bedding in the nests, disinfecting the roosts and walls and grinding a brand new egg producing formula, your egg "freeloaders" are ready for their long winter's nap.

But you have to catch them first.

Since early summer the new pullets have enjoyed complete freedom on the farm. That is, since they learned to fly over the fence. Now they are roosting in the barn, garage, hog shed, machine shed and practically every free on the farm.

Catching pullets requires the efforts of the entire family. And, here again, farming is such a nice, family togetherness occupation. Only this is one job that you would rather not be a part of.

But the Mrs. persuades you that it couldn't be done without your supervision. She neglects to add "help."

And, being the man of the house, you take charge. Yet you constantly remind her that chickens are her job.

Holding the flashlight in one hand, casting the beam of light directly on an unsuspecting bird, you quickly grab it by its feet and yank it completely upside down. The Mrs. gently takes the bird from you, turns it right side up and hands it to Sis or Junior who carries it to the hen house.

There are so many chickens roosting in obvious places and close to the ground that the work goes relatively fast and simple. Occasionally there is a smart one that flutters and squawks as it takes to a higher limb in a tree. Or drops to the ground and goes walking aimlessly and bewildered around the barn yard.

Then only the squawky, fluttery, high perched ones are left. Almost all of the top of the trees. Since you are in charge and since it doesn't look like the tree will be too hard to climb, you hand the flashlight to the Mrs. and start up the tree.

Here you are, up in a tree, acting like Tarzan for a dumb chicken. But the question is debatable at this point as to who is the dumb one.

You inform the Mrs. that you are fine and would she please shine the light on the chicken so you can catch it. Ah, there it is. Only a few feet from your head and out just a little farther on another limb.

But your old work shoes don't exactly fit around the limb like a pair of ballerina slippers. The farther out on the limb you go, the more slope there is to the limb.

You grab the limb on which the chicken is wobbling back and forth. Trying not to scare it or force it to go higher. As long as the Mrs. keeps the light

New School Bus

The Wakefield Community Schools has recently purchased a new 54-passenger school bus. One of the major differences between this bus and older ones is the new light system, which consists of two amber and two red lights in both the back and the front. The first new bus since 1968, this bus brings the total number of full-sized buses in the Wakefield fleet to nine, according to Bob Miner, transportation supervisor and bus mechanic for the Wakefield schools.

directly on the chicken, it can't see how close you are getting. And no one down below can see all the antics that you are performing while trying to walk in almost mid-air. At least you hope their silence means they can't see you.

As you hold on to the limb with the chicken, the limb bends and the white, glass eyed, wobbly chicken is within inches of your head. But you can't touch it. If you let go of the limb to grab the chicken, most likely the limb will go flying skyward and the chicken will sail into the wild, dark yonder. And you will probably sail onto the hard, brown earth.

Slowly you inch your fingers closer to the chicken. As your fingers creep under the chicken, it starts to raise up but you clamp its feet firmly to the tree.

Cheers come from beneath you. But it is difficult to tell if the cheers are for the capture of the chicken or for the fact that you actually did it.

You inch your way back to the trunk of the tree and hand the chicken down to Junior. One thing is for sure, if your expert supervision and help is required tomorrow night you can bet you'll actually have Junior do the tree antics.

And tomorrow when the Mrs. sets a big, delicious platter full of chicken on the dinner table, you'll forget all about tonight's ill thinking.

At least you made your point whatever it was.

Course Stresses Individual Need For Special Vocational Students

Dennis Poeschl of Stanton, a candidate for director-at-large on the Northeast Nebraska Tech College board, briefed the Wayne Kiwanis Club Monday on the history of LB 759, passed by the Legislature in 1971, concerning the division of the state into eight districts for the establishment of community colleges.

"The counties may select the district to which they want to belong up to Jan. 1, 1973," he said, but if no decision is reached by that time, the state will place those counties into a district that may not be of their choosing.

Originally, Northeast Nebraska Tech was intended as a school for only vocational and technical subjects, but the new legislation has changed that concept to include academic courses.

"This concerns me," the current president of the school's board of governors told the Kiwanians. "We have plenty of four-year colleges now that can handle the necessary academic courses."

"I will fight for no more academic courses than we have now on the junior college level," he said, adding that he may work toward phasing out some of those courses.

He explained that when the merger between Northeast Tech and Northeastern College at Norfolk is effected, by July of 1973, the consolidated school will have to absorb personnel as well as assuming the assets of Northeastern.

"There will be tough stumps to jump over, but we have to face it," Poeschl said.

The current enrollment at Tech is 460 with 17 courses offered. A new "news" power linesman course. The two schools began combining courses in September, when bylaws were adopted and athletics conducted as one program.

"The one-campus concept is high on the list," Poeschl said, noting the convenience of two colleges being merged in such a short distance. "The one campus concept will enable us to eliminate any duplication of facilities with only a minimum of problem in that area."

"My main objectives as a board member is to work out cooperative and harmonious relationships with all four year academic colleges, instead of competing with them," Poeschl concluded before a question and answer session.

As to financing of the com-

Halloween Safety

Besides ghosts and goblins, there's often real danger lurking in the Halloween night air. Every year many trick-or-treaters are seriously injured or poisoned from eating candy and other goodies given to them by strangers. Youngsters have been known to receive candy coated with rat poisoning and fruit containing razor blades. Parents should give their children strict instructions not to eat anything given to them by strangers until they arrive home. At home, parents should carefully inspect everything received.

Also, if youngsters trick-or-treat at night, be sure they wear light colors so they can be seen by cars, walk along the shoulder of the road facing traffic if there are no sidewalks, wear makeup instead of a mask to see better, wait outside of homes of strangers for treats and carry flashlights instead of candles or jack-o'-lanterns.

munty college concept, Poeschl pointed out that the state will fund 75 per cent of operational costs and the area will assume responsibility for the remaining 25 per cent.

The 75 per cent is likely to come from sales and income tax, he assumed, while the 25 per cent would be with a one-mill levy and student tuition.

At present, there is a two-mill maximum assessed to those in the Northeast Nebraska Tech district and $84 a quarter tuition is charged to area students.

Both Northeast Tech and Northeastern Junior College are free of bonded indebtedness, Poeschl pointed out in concluding his talk.

The at-large seat which Poeschl seeks encompasses all or parts of 14 counties.

It was pointed out that the speaker was not an opponent of Ray Schreiner of Wayne, who also is a candidate for the Northeast Nebraska Tech Board—the latter in a four-county area that includes Wayne, Pierce, Antelope and Wheeler Counties.

Poeschl is opposing Allen Burkhardt of Norfolk for the at-large berth, while Schreiner and Richard Corkle are the candidates for the two-year post in the four-county area.

Army Recruits To Be In Husker Platoons

"Help get rid of the draft. Join the Modern Volunteer Army."

This theme will have a special significance in Nebraska, according to statements by Governor J. James Exon today.

The governor announced the formation of four Army Platoons—"Husker platoons"—to be staffed entirely from Nebraska. "Young men and women from Nebraska," he said, "will have a distinguished role in establishing America's 'all volunteer Army'."

The governor urged Nebraska's young citizens to "consider the many opportunities offered by today's Army and to express pride in state and nation by joining the Husker Platoons."

Each of the Army units will represent a particular section of the state. All will be stationed at Fort Carson, Colo., following basic training. The Army expects to recruit nearly 150 young men and 35 women for three year enlistment in the Husker platoons.

Area Army representatives have more details on this and other training, travel and unit options offered by "Today's Army."

Huge 'Water Cooler'

The largest cooling tower in the world, big enough to handle the water supply of a city of 6 million people, has reached its full 50-story height of the John E. Amos plant of the American Electric Power System near Charleston. The Amos power plant steam condensers are cooled by closed water systems as auto engines are, with cooling towers performing the function of auto radiators. Such closed systems eliminate the need for a power plant to draw cool water from, and discharge heated water to, a river or lake. Engineers of the Hamon Cooling Tower Division of Research Cottrell, Inc., designer and builder of the towers at the Amos station, calculate that the concrete the new tower contains is enough to build 143 miles of sidewalk, its reinforcing and piping contain as much steel as 3500 automobiles, and the asbestos cement sheets it contains would cover 200 football fields. Its size enables the tower to cool 600,000 gallons of water per minute for re use in the power plant.

Thone Notes Shortcomings in Law

"The Freedom of Information Act has not fully lived up to its name. There has been a wide gap between the promise of access to federal records when the act was passed in 1966 and the ensuing practice in the past six years by the federal agencies which administer the law," according to Congressman Charles Thone.

"Some of the gaps between promise and performance need to be closed by legislation. Therefore, in the closing days of this Congress I joined some other members of the House Government Operations Committee in introducing a bill to make it easier for the public to obtain non-secret government information."

"Our bill died with adjournment of Congress, of course, and we will have to reintroduce it in January to get action. Our purpose in putting the bill in the hopper in October was to have it published and available for study. We will be asking for constructive suggestions from both the executive branch of the government and those outside government who have had experience in seeking information from federal authorities. With these suggestions in hand, we hope to legislate in 1973 to improve the Freedom of Information Act.

"The amendments to the Freedom of Information Act were drawn up partially as a result of testimony by 142 witnesses at 41 days of hearings during 1971 and 1972 by the Committee on Government Operations.

"The hearings showed that the purpose of the act were being evaded through excessive delays in responses to requests for information, excessive fees for copying documents and denials of information with the hope that high costs of going to court to force an agency to give up the requested material would prevent its release.

"The hearings revealed that when there was some question about whether some information should be released, major federal agencies took an average of 33 days to tell a person whether he would or would not be furnished the information he requested. One of our proposed amendments to the law would require that such a request be answered in 10 working days

"We propose to amend the law to discourage federal agencies from using legal costs as a means of scaring off citizens from seeking information that should be theirs. Our bill would provide that the court can assess reasonable legal fees against the government if it loses a case."

"Most importantly, we propose to amend the act to require each agency to report annually to the Congress on administration of the Freedom of Information Act.

"The fact that we are proposing improvements does not mean that the Freedom of Information Act has not been useful. The law has helped thousands of citizens gain access to information on government activities. News media, which serve as the main conduit of knowledge from government to the people, have been helped by the act.

"The changes we have suggested will help make the law more effective. Improvements must also come through policy level officials in agencies making certain that their subordinates carry out the law's intent. The main burden will remain on the news media to keep pressure on the government to release non secret materials.

"Free election mean nothing without freedom of information. A democracy works best when the people have all the information about their government that the security of the nation permits. We must all take an active interest to ensure that the United States is an open society in which the people's right to know is cherished and guarded."

Julie Roberts

Julie Roberts Traffic Victim

Julie Lynn Roberts, 12 year old daughter of former Wayne residents, was killed about 11 p.m. Saturday evening in a one-car accident near Fremont.

The Fremont High School student was reportedly driving on U. S. Highway 77, about a half-mile south of Fremont, when she lost control of her automobile, which skidded off the east side of the road and overturned several times. The automobile apparently rolled on Miss Roberts, according to Dodge County Deputy Sheriff Jim Bliven.

A passenger in the car, Cathy Sumner, 16, of Fremont, also was thrown from the car. She was hospitalized in Fremont with minor injuries.

Services were scheduled for 2 p.m. Tuesday afternoon at the Latin Dugan Funeral Home, Fremont, for the Roberts girl. She was born April 13, 1956, at Wahoo, and was baptized and confirmed at the Wahoo Presbyterian Church. She had been actively involved in sports activities at Fremont, where she was in her junior year of high school.

Julie was the daughter of Howell Roberts, Omaha, and Mrs. Marianne Roberts, Fremont. Her grandparents are Mr. Mrs. T. P. Roberts, Wayne, and

Mr. and Mrs. Philip March, Arizona, formerly of Wayne. Survivors also include two sisters, Mrs. Ron Anderson, Cedar Bluffs, and Karen Sue Roberts, Omaha; a brother, Michael Scott Roberts, Fremont; uncles Jack March, Wayne, and Terry March, Spirit Lake, Ia., and aunts, Mrs. Virginia Alderson, Plainview, and Mrs. Wayne Kerline, Carroll.
