Dr. Robert Parenti, son of Mrs. Dorothy Parenti of Wayne and a 1960 graduate of Wayne State College, has won the 1973 Outstanding Faculty Award at Kansas State Teachers College in Emporia.

Dr. Parenti, associate professor of biology, was selected for the award by members of Xi Phi, honorary leadership fraternity.

Instituted in 1960, the award is based on the following criteria: five years or more on the KSTC faculty; exceptional qualities of leadership, cooperation, loyalty and service to the school; outstanding classroom presentation of subject matter, and recognition and credit for community,

12 Teachers At Winside Ink Contracts

Teacher contracts for the 1973-74 school year are to be turned in by the end of this week, said Don Loughton, Winside school superintendent.

By early last week 12 teachers at Winside had signed contracts and returned them to the board. "I should have the complete results by Saturday," he added, noting that Friday is the deadline for the teachers to hand in their contracts.

In business during the school board's regular meeting last week, the board approved renting or selling a private home, owned by the school. It stands south of the school.

Also, the Rev. Paul Schwaab, pastor at Ponca, was chosen as the May 14 commencement speaker.

Allen Man To Head Area Group

Kenneth Green of Allen was re-elected as president of the Northeast Nebraska Family and Community Affairs Council last week during the council's monthly meeting at the Northeast Station.

The Rev. Ron Nelson of Emerson was elected as vice president. Mrs. LaVerie Heimers, Hartington, was named secretary and Mrs. Harold George, Dixon, was picked as treasurer.

At the meeting, Neal Boeshart of Laurel, director of the Northeast Nebraska Alcoholism Program, announced that citizens interested in the community alcohol safety program are invited to attend a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Community Alcoholism Center in Norfolk.

Dr. Stanley Riess, Norfolk Regional Center, spoke to the group regarding the Dakota City satellite mental health clinic. He expressed the need for greater community interest and awareness of the clinic services.

Dr. Riess noted that he and other Regional Center staff members could see more clients on their one-day-per-month visit to the clinic in Dakota City. The clinic is staffed on the third Thursday of each month. At present there are no fees charged for services.

state and national service and activities.

A member of the KSTC faculty for six and a half years, Dr. Parenti received his bachelor's degree with majors in biology and physical science from WSC. His master's degree in biology from the University of South Dakota in 1962 and his doctorate in botany and biochemistry from the University of Oklahoma in 1968.

A widely published author, he is a member of Sigma Xi, honorary research fraternity, Phi Sigma, honorary biology fraternity, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

WSC Senate Votes Against College Bill

The Wayne State College student senate has voted to oppose the legislative proposal which would give the University of Nebraska Board of Regents authority to purchase facilities of Hiram Scott College at Scottsbluff and John J. Pershing College at Beatrice.

Both colleges are currently closed.

The action followed a request for opposition from Kearney State College representatives attending a Nebraska Association of Students meeting in Norfolk.

The KSC students said that if the University acquires Hiram Scott College two junior colleges in the area will close within six months and Chadron State College will be threatened with closing within two years.

NARC Is Conducting Drive for Members

The Nebraska Association for Retarded Children (NARC) is conducting its annual membership drive this month, according to Jim Russell of Allen, president of the Northeast Nebraska Association for Retarded Children.

Nebraska membership chairman is Delva M. Rickett of South Sioux City.

Local persons interested in NARC membership may contact Mrs. Herman Linder of Wayne. Information regarding membership in the Youth Association for Retarded Children (YARC) is available from Don Carroll, local president, or Mrs. Kenneth Siltman, local YARC advisor.

Members of the two associated organizations help support and become actively involved in providing opportunities for retarded persons in the area. Some are involved in public relations and speaking to various groups about the organizations' goals. The youth group organizes various activities for retarded youngsters throughout the year.

Recent accomplishments of the area association include completion of the South Sioux City Opportunity Center to provide training for retarded adults and a summer camp for youngsters, held for the first time last year in Ponca.

About 40 children and several adults in Wayne County are currently benefiting from the services of the NARC and YARC, association members report.

"There are over six million mentally retarded children and adults in America—an estimated three per cent of our population," says Mrs. Rickett.

"Between one and two thousand babies are born mentally retarded every year. During membership month, we hope many citizens of the Northeast Nebraska area will gain a better understanding of the needs of our mentally retarded children and adults."

Roads in Area in Fine Shape

Statewide damage to city streets and state highways is higher than normal, reports the state roads department, but in the Wayne area the 1972-73 winter did not take its toll.

Most of the heavy damage to roads can be seen in the southern part of the state," said Harold Schwarzenbach, maintenance superintendent at the Department of Roads office in Wayne.

Heavy rains in early fall, combined with intermittent rain and snow during the winter months, and alternating freezing and thawing has placed additional stress on the roadway surfaces, the highway officials say.

These freezing and thawing cycles, plus high speed traffic and heavy loads, have caused cracks and "potholes" in many road surfaces. They explain.

Schwarzenbach explained that the heavy "frost boils" in the area begin to thaw during the warmer weather and cause the breaks in the oil roads. "The shoulder breaks we are having this year are not as great as last year," he pointed out. "In fact I would say we are better off this year."

Presently Schwarzenbach has a five to six man crew covering Northeast Nebraska from as far north as Ponca and as far south as Lyons and Tekamah.

"Our biggest road damage is up north around Ponca and Newkirk on Highway 12. There have been a few minor shoulder breaks, because of the damp and wet weather, but it is nothing serious," he said.

Nine-Year-Old Winside Boy Dies at Home

Nine year old Tommy Gahl, a Winside youngster who had spent much of the past three years in the hospital, died Wednesday at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Gahl.

Doctors discovered that Tommy had a malignant brain tumor just over three years ago. Treatments slowed the course of the disease and Tommy was able to return home. He attended classes at Winside until last fall.

Born April 9, 1963, at Phoenix, Tommy came with his family to Winside in 1966. He was a baptized member of St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Winside and belonged to Den 2 of Cub Scout Pack 179.

Survivors include his parents, a brother, David, at home; his maternal grandmother, Jo Thompson of Winside, and aunts, uncles and cousins.

Services were held Saturday at St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Winside. The Rev. G. W. Gottberg officiated. J. Allen Schluefer sang "Jesus Lead Me Day by Day," and "Asleep in Jesus." The congregation sang "How Great Thou Art." Organist was Mrs. Victor Mann.

Honorary pallbearers were members of the Winside fire department and rescue unit. Pallbearers were Dale Miller, Willard Jeffrey, Jay Morse and Michael Thompson.

Burial was in the Pleasant View Cemetery in Winside.

Local Firm Gets Bid From ASC

Milo Meyer Construction of Wayne last week was awarded the contract to tear up several slabs of concrete which served as foundation for the Federal government grain storage bins which formerly stood just south of Wayne.

The company turned in low bid on the project, $1,650.

Also bidding on the work were Francis Leiting, Randolph, $1,800, and Swinney Bridge and Construction Co., Wayne, $2,235.

Approving letting the bid to the Wayne firm were Agricultural and Stabilization Conservation county commissioners Harry Heinemann, Aiden Johnson and Ralph Olsen.

Torn up will be 10 large slabs of concrete and 24 smaller ones. They served as foundations for the 13 large bins and the 15 smaller ones recently removed from the site.

Using part of the concrete for fill on the North Logan Creek about two and a half miles northeast of Wayne will be the county.

IT'S ALWAYS SPRING for the greenhouse owner, with various plants blooming throughout the year. Mrs. Luff works with a prize pot of yellow mums. Bright geraniums add a splash of red to the background. (Colorphoto by Norvin Hansen).

Greenhouse on Area Farm Adds Touch of Life to Drab Winters

By SANDRA BREITKREUTZ

With "spring" making promises to appear, the seed catalog moves up to the best seller list, numerous gardens are plotted on the back of grocery lists and wives start planning trips to the nursery for young plants to set out at home.

For Mrs. Duane Luff, however, being a part-time gardener wasn't enough, and about six years ago she and her husband added a greenhouse to their farm home northeast of Wayne so they could enjoy nature's wealth year round.

This first greenhouse, 16 feet long and eight feet wide, soon proved too small, as all the books they had read promised it would, and when the roof needed replacing about a year ago the Luffs replaced the greenhouse with a new 16 x 22-foot structure.

Added to the east side of the house, the greenhouse is constructed of redwood where moisture damage is a threat, with walls and roof of fiber glass. Glass windows can be opened for ventilation. The foundation is of creosote planks rather than concrete which conducts the cold more easily.

A 60 degree temperature is maintained throughout the winter by means of a propane furnace, and a fan is used for cooling.

A brick walk runs picturesquely amid the plant benches. Colorful greenery hangs in baskets from the ceiling. Planters near the door and potted varieties of dozens of house plants make the visitor feel he's stepped into a corner of California or Florida.

A comfortable chair waits in a bright corner for a mid-morning cup of coffee or a five-minute break with the day's mail.

Youngsters find the year-round availability of sand a special attraction and the Luff's year and a half-old daughter, Jill, eagerly points out her swing which can be quickly hooked up in one of the walkways.

Jill also spends a lot of time in the fountain with the goldfish, grins her mother.

Last winter the greenhouse furnace went out unnoticed and the fish were nearly lost. Their water was frozen, but they and some of the plants as well survived the gradual thawing out process.

"I did lose a 52-year-old Christmas cactus that year, though," noted Mrs. Luff.

What are the advantages of having your own greenhouse?

Many, according to Mrs. Luff. "But the best part is in being able to work with something growing when everything outside is so drab," she explained. Tulips and daffodils can be forced to bloom in February, an especially dreary time of the year, she said. Also, because it is so much less expensive to buy seed rather than plants, Mrs. Luff says she can afford to have a larger variety of flowers and vegetables. Most could not be started outside from seed simply because the growing season is not long enough. Friends and relatives have purchased some of Mrs. Luff's excess plants and this helps cover the expense of maintaining the greenhouse project. Mrs. Luff encourages those interested in gardening and plants to get involved in the fascinating hobby, and says window greenhouses may be the answer for those who don't wish to get as involved as she has.

THE GREENHOUSE also provides a nice spot for this grapefruit tree which grew from a seed planted by Mr. Luff's grandfather about eight years ago. Young Jill spends more time in the fountain with the goldfish, though her older brothers from time to time try their hands at making something grow.

A Real Leprechaun

ST. PATRICK'S DAY fans were in for an early thrill Thursday night when a leprechaun bounced his way through the downtown area selling tickets to the annual Lions' Club St. Pat's dance. Helping the little green man (Don Langston) in purchasing a few tickets are, from left, Tina Bargnotz, Tammy Lesberg and Todd Stokam. According to Lions president John Vokoc, ticket sales by Friday numbered about 800. The dance was held Saturday night at the city auditorium.

'The fuel shortage is here now and it's going to get worse'

The marketing end of the petroleum business has been predicting for several years that we would soon be faced with a shortage of petroleum that would cause this nation to sit up and take notice. Few, if any, believed what was being said and, if fact, there were those in the industry and in government who came out and said that the industry was in no straits and that there would be no shortage in the foreseeable future. These remarks were made as recent as last fall.

Here's another look at the fuel crisis, something which touched the lives of many residents in the Wayne area this winter. The article appeared as an editorial in the March issue of Nebraska Oil Jobber, a monthly publication of Nebraska Petroleum Marketers, Inc.

However, it is here and it is going to get much worse before it gets any better. And, before it is over we are going to see gasoline in very short supply and this will happen come about April.

Here is why: just as soon as warm weather hits, every farmer in the country is going to hit the fields at once. There is much work left over from last fall that did not get finished, and there will be the normal spring work to be done. The demand is going to be so great that the refiners will have to continue pushing out No. 2, and the end result will be no stock-piling of gasoline and an immediate shortage come the big travel season.

There is one essential thing that all distributors can do to help alleviate the squeeze for the coming spring and the several winters and springs in the immediate future. Encourage your customers to increase their storage capacity. The day is gone when a farmer can expect not to run out of fuel while only using a 300 gallon storage tank. The day is here when he is going to have to stock up during the off seasons on diesel fuel, heating oil, LP gas and even gasoline.

Jobbers would be wise to get an order in for additional storage tanks to sell to his customers. In the case of LP gas, this is the only way that the user can be assured of ample supply. There is not one so much of being short of supply, but of not having the pipe lines to transport it during the heavy season. So it is a matter of buying in the off season and storing it until it is needed. Standby customers surely have learned a valuable lesson this winter—they will fill up during the summer months after this, and you will find them increasing their storage also.

The shortage is here and in order to get along we are all going to have to adjust our way of life and learn to live with it. No more can we be sure of getting supply by merely calling up and placing an order to be delivered this afternoon.

'How can students appreciate literature if they can't read?'

Since World War II, the cost of education in America has been increasing at a rate twice that of the Gross National Product—the annual value of all the goods and services we produce.

If this trend continues, by the year 2080 the entire GNP will be needed for education.

In terms of resources allocated, our public school system is the most expensive in the world. But what are we getting for our money?

An estimated 15 million students are functionally illiterate.

The dropout rate in poverty-stricken urban areas is 70 per cent.

The 11th-grade-level Armed Forces Qualifying Exam is flunked by one third of those taking it.

Employers are confronted with job applicants who can't read, write or calculate.

Arch Booth, executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, takes a hard look at education as it is being practiced across the nation... and comes up with some striking thoughts on how we might improve it.

Arch Booth, executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, takes a hard look at education as it is being practiced across the nation... and comes up with some striking thoughts on how we might improve it.

Private consultants have estimated that the same kind of help will save $18 million a year for the Ohio school system, $28 million in Oregon, $100 million in Massachusetts, $84 million in Indiana.

Besides, improving the teaching of that which is measurable may well benefit the intangible areas as well. I doubt that many students develop an appreciation of good literature if they cannot read.

"blame," we cannot devote the entire GNP to education. The problem demands some practical solutions, not a round of finger-pointing.

The easiest education problems to solve are management problems. Schools are big business. But their overworked administrators often lack the sophisticated staffs that advise the heads of major corporations. And yet many of the management techniques which have been tested and proven in the corporate world are directly transferable to school administration.

Wise school administration and community minded businessmen have been getting together in cities and states all over the country to take advantage of this fact.

Dallas is a good example. The superintendent of schools there asked the Dallas Chamber of Commerce for help. A 50-man team of volunteer executives studied the operations of the school system and made recommendations. They have saved that city $500,000 a year through such expedients as streamlined school purchasing, formal bidding and specification writing procedures, a new office of school planning, use of a regional computer network, a central kitchen serving 13 schools.

Such administrative savings make a sense inherently. And they are also a good, quick stopgap measure to gain time against the rising tide of educational expense. But at the rate salaries and related benefits are increasing, every dollar in the school budget will soon be needed just to pay the teachers. Obviously then, we must also find ways to reduce instructional costs.

The most enlightened route to this goal is through increasing the effectiveness of instruction.

"Accountability" will be necessary to accomplish that. This is a dirty word in some educational circles, but it shouldn't be. "Accountability" simply means that the effectiveness of the educational process should be gauged by its end product, rather than by "inputs" such as spending per pupil, the faculty-degree ratio and so on.

Teachers should be required to set measurable goals and should be judged by how well they attain them and at what unit cost. Ultimately, such a system will lead to the identification and development of more effective teaching methods. The only way instructional salaries can continue to climb without bankrupting the taxpayer.

There are some valid objections to such practices, mostly centering around the difficulty of measuring intangibles such as an appreciation of good literature. But none of these objections outweigh the fact that we are rapidly approaching the point where we cannot afford our school system.

Besides, improving the teaching of that which is measurable may well benefit the intangible areas as well. I doubt that many students develop an appreciation of good literature if they cannot read.

OBSERVATIONS

Thought-provoker

At the top of this page you'll find a bold new design. Below it are two articles offering some fresh ideas on two continuing problems in today's society — the cost and quality of education, the fuel shortage.

The design has been drawn up for several reasons. First, it tells the reader that the article or articles underneath it are going to contain some unusual and little-known views. Second, it makes clear that the views may well be in striking opposition to your thinking and even our thinking. Third, it shows that these differing ideas are going to create conflict and dispute. Hopefully, they also will occasionally produce a synthesis, a blending of the opposing ideas into a new one.

This is nothing new for newspapers, the offering of conflicting opinions on topical subjects on the editorial or opinion page. Daily newspapers have long done it. Weekly and twin weeklies occasionally do it. We hope to do it on something of a regular basis, hopefully at least every other issue.

We don't necessarily agree with the views expressed in today's offering. We can safely assume that a lot of our readers won't agree with them, either. But that's exactly the reason for allotting the articles generous space and display on this page. We want to start people — ourselves included — into considering views other than the ones they have long held.

We hope the "thesis-antithesis" feature on this page will have one other result, too. We hope it prompts our readers to reply to the articles. Whether the reply is in agreement or disagreement is of little concern to us. The ideas contained in the reply, however, are of major importance to us.

If you wish to submit an article for use under the new design, please do so. Although it does not have to be written by you, we would prefer that it were. We do ask that it contain thought-provoking ideas

Letters to the editor may be published with a pseudonym or with the author's name omitted if so desired; however, the writer's signature must be a part of the original letter. Unsigned letters will not be printed. Letters should be timely, brief and must contain no libelous statements. We reserve the right to edit or reject any letter.

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank you and your fine staff for the coverage you have given the Wakefield High wrestling team and the other excellent teams in our immediate area.

Your sports editor, Bob Bartlett, has spent many hours and traveled many miles in covering wrestling. This sport is long overdue in receiving the pictures, stories and comments in Northeast Nebraska.

Wrestling in the area has improved so fast that we no longer have to take a back seat to longer established programs. There is no sport which I have been associated with that calls for so much dedication on the part of the competitor and no sport that teaches the humility of defeat and the graciousness of winning as well.

Again, to your staff and especially to Bob Bartlett. Thank you.

Lyle Trullinger,
Wakefield Wrestling Coach

Dear Editor:

The better one studies and becomes acquainted with the impacts of the Equal Rights Amendment, the more one becomes convinced that it is not the kind of legislation that any man or woman in our nation could appreciate.

This is what more and more people of our state of Nebraska have come to realize. In their concern for holding on to the rights and privileges we now have, and not endangering them with an ERA, thousands upon thousands of letters have been flowing onto the desks of our senators at Lincoln. At the same time, prayers from every corner of our state and nation have been ascending to the throne of God, asking His help and blessing to stem the early, frightening tide of the ERA.

Those prayers were answered last Thursday when our Nebraska senators voted 31 to 17 to withdraw last year's ratification of the ERA. Now mothers are rejoicing that their daughters will not be forced into military service and combat duty. Girls can keep on dreaming of their future home and family and of a providing husband. Boys are all smiles because they are assured that there'll still be girls to date and love and marry and care for.

Even the ardent proponents of the ERA can be assured that they will be granted all the good things they thought the ERA would give them, and at the same time be spared all the sad disappointments the ERA would surely have brought upon them.

So, we're singing praises to our God for His great and wonderful blessings; we're expressing our gratefulness to our senators for giving heed to our wishes; and we're promising each other that from henceforth we'll do more watching and praying, we'll remember that we are responsible citizens of a wonderful state and nation, we'll keep in mind that the senators we elect and send to Lincoln are waiting and wanting to hear from us, so that they will be able to more wisely represent us; and finally we won't try to kid ourselves any longer that everything is O.K. in our land. It can be, if we strive and fight to keep it that way, but it can get terribly bad, awfully fast, if we keep on soundly sleeping.

So, be a good Christian, by rendering unto God the things that are God's; and then also be a good citizen, by rendering unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's.

Rev. Ervin A. Binger

Our liberty depends on the freedom of the press, and that cannot be limited without being lost. — Thomas Jefferson, Letter, 1786

A closer look...

Running process color in the news paper something we haven't been doing very regularly lately is both a pleasure and a pain.

If the picture has good composition, interesting subject matter and striking color, it can't be beat as far as a plus for the newspaper. It's a rare weekly or twin weekly in the state which offers its readers process color even once a year let alone about once a month as the Herald does.

But running a full color picture is not all that easy. It involves extra work by almost everybody on the staff.

News and advertisements were written, set and displayed on the pages a day early because the four page section with the color picture had to be printed Friday afternoon so it was done and ready for the inserting of the second section Saturday afternoon.

The press run is a whole new ball game when it comes to process color. Three colors—red, blue and yellow—are used in the press to get the full range of colors in the original picture.

The man responsible for the quality of the picture as it comes off the press, Ray Murray, has to make numerous slight adjustments to get the colors to print on each other as perfectly as possible so they are not off register even a 16th of an inch. Then he has to keep a constant watch on the papers as they are being printed to make sure just the right amount of each color is being used so the picture comes as near as possible to being the same as the original.

That's quite a trick, considering that the press is cranking out some 8,500 copies an hour—about two thirds, its normal speed.

Another thing that might add a little spice to an otherwise dreary time of the year is a bit of beer. At least that's what the U.S. Brewers Association says.

The association has sent out news releases suggesting that beer be used for making popcorn balls and corn meal balls. You use just a few tablespoons of beer when making the popcorn balls, one-third cup when making the corn meal balls.

People in car wrecks are often thrown through windows and doors distances of 50 to 100 feet or more, says the Nebraska Medical Association, and this is often the reason for the injuries they suffer.

But seat belts keep a person from becoming a projectile on impact, and persons who wear them are at least 50 per cent less apt to be seriously injured than those who don't.

So the next time you get in your car, strap up. It might keep you from going unexpected places.

The craziest thing I've ever seen is being used by Nebraska Public Power District to backfill the poles being put in for the new power line which will run between Dakota City and Norfolk.

The stuff is called Poloseit. It's sprayed in something of a liquid form into the space between the ground and the pole, and in a few short minutes the stuff has expanded and hardened to lock the pole in place. If you didn't know better, you would think it was some weird kind of mold growing out of the ground.

The stuff works when two compounds come together and result in an "exothermic action" which causes it to foam, expand to 15 times in volume and harden into a polyurethane foam.

Great idea. Now, if only NPPD would come up with something which would erase those huge scars it trails along behind it as the trucks, cats, cranes and men erect those poles.

Members of the Coleridge Commercial Club voted last week to provide $2,000 to the Medical Clinic Committee to aid in moving a doctor and his family to Coleridge. The money will be given to Dr. Asterio Bulatao and his family if he decides to practice in Coleridge. He is presently at the Norfolk Regional Center and is in the process of taking state medical exams. He is a native of the Philippine Islands where his family still lives.

Pierce postmaster Mel Kruse last week said that despite the switch to "Area Mailing processing," the local postmark is still available to anyone who wants it. Kruse was reacting to items in recent newspapers stating that the local postmark is a thing of the past.

A new emergency telephone number became available to O'Neill residents Thursday. Anyone whose telephone number begins with 330 can now call 911 for help in an emergency. When 911 is dialed the caller is immediately connected to the city's emergency center. The 911 system is the 17th to be put into operation in Nebraska. Throughout the nation more than 150 communities have 911 service.

Members of the Madison Chamber of Commerce have been working with Dr. Jim DeBoer, a dentist who is seriously considering locating in Madison. A 1971 graduate of the University of Nebraska, DeBoer is presently serving in the Army in Alaska. Due to be discharged in July, he hopes to find a location to begin private practice this summer.

The proposal was referred to the Sewer Committee and engineers to resolve.

The paving of Grainland Road was again considered as increased traffic and early rainy weather has left the road in an almost impassible condition.

It was moved by Councilman Gross and seconded by Councilman Fielberth that the engineers be authorized to draw up a preliminary assessment schedule on paving of Grainland Road from Maple Street to Blaine Street and the Attorney be authorized to check signatures and footage on the petition to determine whether they are sufficient to form a district.

City, County Should Combine Jails 6-County Regional Study Advises

The city and county jails in Wayne should be combined so the 24-hour surveillance city police now provided could be taken advantage of.

That's one of the recommendations in a study of county jails in six Northeast Nebraska counties.

The study called Wayne County's jail "adequate for the present and foreseeable future. It is a safe and sanitary facility."

Cedar County, however, was advised to build a new jail because its present 80-year-old facility is "Beyond refurbishment."

The county needs to take steps necessary to bring its facility to the safe and humane standards called for under penal codes, the report concluded.

Dixon County's jail is structurally sound enough so it could be remodeled "to provide holding facilities for overnight use only."

But the county was advised to "continue to contract with the other counties for holding longer term misdemeanants."

The study, released last week, was made for the Region 11 and 25 Joint Planning Commission for Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice.

More than 100 pages in length, the report contains extensive statistical information on the county jails in six of the eight counties in the two regions.

Wayne County is in the region composed of Stanton, Antelope, Pierce and Madison Counties. Dixon, Cedar and Knox Counties make up the other region. Antelope and Knox did not take part in the study.

The study was made to determine the feasibility of creating regional correction facilities for the two planning regions, and involved a town by town, county by county statistical review and projection of jail needs to 1990.

If the city and county combines jails at Wayne it would be necessary to build additional office space onto the county jail facility for space for local police. This would permit city police to maintain 24-hour watch over the prisoners, something which is currently done at the city jail.

The addition could be built for about $18,000, the study says.

Vern Fairchild, local chief of police, said the study is the result of considerable hard work and much thought.

"There are some very good points made in the study," he said, "but there are some things I'm not too sold on yet."

One possible disadvantage to the recommendation for Wayne County is the "possible loss of local control," he said.

"Any time you talk about consolidation, you're talking about some loss of local control," he said.

Although the report says an addition for the local police could be built onto the present county facility for $18,000 it would probably take more money than that to do the job right, according to Fairchild.

The study offers the area an innovative "offender pick up service" to be operated by the Norfolk police.

This program calls for a police vehicle to make a tour of a route determined by "pickup requests" from sheriffs and town police throughout Madison, Pierce and Stanton Counties.

The offenders would be taken to a consolidated facility.

This would mean that county sheriffs would be able to devote more time to law enforcement and less to prisoner delivery, and that only one vehicle and officer would be required for the job.

To activate the recommendations, the regional commission was requested to organize and appoint a regional executive committee comprised of official representation from four areas.

The committee would immediately start work to put the plans into effect, having the option to apply for federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration matching funds to undertake their programs.

It was also recommended that the six-county area fund a program that would employ a regional corrections coordinator under the supervision of the district courts. The coordinator would work out of Norfolk, coordinating all of the community and governmental agencies which might help decrease the number of repeat offenders.

With Harry Fisher, of Fisher County, Jorgensen worked with a road crew in Norway, moving to the United States in 1962.

Wayne Woman Gets Degree, Twins Begin Nursing Study at Tech

One Wayne woman graduated Thursday and a pair of Wayne twins begins classes today (Monday) in the practical nursing program at Northeast Nebraska Technical Community College at Norfolk.

Graduating with the eighth nursing class at the college was Mrs. George (Cynthia) Eynon, who has accepted employment at the Norfolk Opportunity Center.

The class of 27 will bring the total number of graduates to about 720 since the practical nursing program at Norfolk started in 1968, reports Mrs. Breneman.

The class began studies at Northeastern Nebraska College in downtown Norfolk, where the program was initiated. It was the first class to use the new nursing facilities at the North east Tech Campus when the program moved there last summer. The two colleges are to complete the merger onto the new campus this year.

The ninth class (this year's freshmen) was the first to use the new facilities during the entire 50-week program.

Thirty-two students selected for the 10th group begins classes today.

The new class includes Gerelda and Teresa Lühr, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Lühr of Wayne, and Mrs. Norris (Carolyn) Westerhouse, rural Winside.

Juniors from Wayne, Winside to Participate In Government Day

A total of 32 high school juniors from Wayne and Winside will have a chance to get a first hand look at the operation of county government Wednesday when the American Legion and Auxiliaries sponsor the annual County Government Day.

Chris Bargholz of Wayne, chairman, said registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the county courthouse. At that time the students may visit the various offices and officials.

At 10:30, the group will hold a general assembly in the district courtroom before hearing Dr. Freeman Decker of Wayne State College talk about the college.

After the students take the oath of office, given by associate county judge Luverna Hilton, the group will break for lunch.

Bargholz pointed out that the elections to the office will take place about 1:30; the day long event is scheduled to end about 3:30.

Helping Bargholz with the event will be LeRoy Clark of Wayne.

So far Wayne High has submitted its list of representatives.

According to Winside High School principal Ron Kramer, Winside will elect representatives today (Monday).

Attending the meeting are Francis Haun, head of the Wayne-Carroll school system, and Don Leighton, head of the school district at Winside.

College Keeping up With Trend To the 'Easier Life'

Recreation becomes increasingly important in the American way of life, and Wayne State College has adopted a new major field of study to meet the needs for recreation.

As a result, a variety of organizations in the Wayne community will find themselves beneficiaries of the recreation major—organizations like the Senior Citizens Center, Scouts, the city recreation program, and probably others.

Dr. Ralph Barclay, chairman of the WSC division of health and physical education, said students enrolled in the recreation major will fulfill some of their assignments by helping community organizations.

His division originated the major as an answer to the need for people trained in recreation. Dr. Barclay said graduates may head for careers in YMCA, outdoor education, industrial recreation, Scouting and the like.

The demand for such people increases, Barclay said, as work weeks get shorter and people find more time for entertainment.

Both a major requiring 50 credit hours and a minor of 20 hours will go into effect next fall, although many courses involved in them are currently being offered. The major is a non-teaching field, but the minor can be used in a teaching degree under certain conditions.

Barclay said students majoring in recreation will take courses outside of health and physical education. Depending on what kind of recreational career they choose, they might study some business, sociology, psychology, art, industrial arts, theatre, home economics, safety.
