WSC Prof Takes Part in State Confab

Dr. Don Merriman, vice president of student affairs at Wayne State College, was one of 35 counselor teachers and supervisors who met in Lincoln on Friday.

An outgrowth of discussion in the Nebraska Personnel and Guidance Association convention last fall, the conference was an effort to improve counselor education and supervision in the state.

Included on the program were Dr. Fred Kempf, counselor teacher from Kearney State College; Dr. John Engler, Creighton University counselor teacher; and a panel of five Nebraska school counselors.

Following the program and a discussion between the counselors and counselor teachers, the teachers considered the major issues presented during the day. Plans for improving counselor education and supervision in the colleges and universities throughout Nebraska were formulated.

Faculty, department and administrative representatives who will serve on the presidential search committee at Wayne State College have been named.

The representatives will join students and area residents to seek a permanent replacement for Dr. W.A. Brandenburg, who resigned as college head the first of March.

Named to represent the faculty during balloting Thursday were Maurice Anderson, mathematics teacher; James Day, music teacher; and Dr. Katherine Lewis, English teacher.

The department chairman named to the committee was Dr. Frank Prather of the mathematics department.

Faculty alternate is Wes Fritz, chemistry instructor. Dr. Niel Edmunds, industrial education, is the department chairman alternate.

Named Friday to represent the administration at the college was Dr. Ed Elliott, director of graduate studies at the college.

Students were to complete selection of their three representatives on the search group over the weekend.

Yet to be named to the committee are four area residents representing Wayne State alumni, Wayne State Foundation and interested area residents. They are expected to be named within a few days.

The search group will meet over the next several months, reviewing qualifications of applicants for the president's job and seeking out others who may be interested in it.

The group will narrow the number of applicants down to about four or five before referring them to the Board of Trustees of the Nebraska State Colleges. The board will make the final decision on Dr. Brandenburg's replacement.

Alan Cramer of Wayne, board member, said it will probably take several months of work by the committee before the number of applicants can be narrowed to the top few.

Serving as interim president at the college is Dr. Lyle Seymour, vice president for academic affairs before taking over the president's job.

WS Prof Reminds: Al Capone's Brother, '2-Gun Hart,' Always Got His Man

While notorious gangster Al "Scarface" Capone was making millions as a bootlegger, his elder brother, James, was upholding federal prohibition law in Nebraska and South Dakota as "Two-Gun Hart."

The diverse careers of the Capone brothers will be the subject of one of 30 papers on Dakota area history presented at the Dakota History Conference at Dakota State College at Madison Friday and Saturday.

Monte B. McLaws, associate professor of American history at Wayne State College, will tell how James "Two-Gun Hart" Capone "always got his man."

Says McLaws, "At a time when such books and movies as 'Godfather' and the 'Valachi Papers' are popular, we must remember that not all Italians participated in organized crime."

"Ironically, James Capone was a federal prohibition law enforcement officer while his younger brother, Al 'Scarface' Capone, amassed millions in Chicago bootlegging," says McLaws.

James left his Brooklyn home when 16, and after some 15 years, under the name of Richard Joseph Hart, settled in the small town of Homer, according to McLaws.

Lost to the Capone family until 1940, and known popularly as "Two-Gun Hart," James built a reputation as the tough cop that always got his man and as the Elliot Ness of Nebraska and South, he explains.

Methodists to Vote on New Church April 28-29

Members of the First United Methodist Church in Wayne will decide on April 28 and 29 whether to build a new $330,000 church.

The governing board of the church last week approved the building plan drawn up by the building committee and set the dates for the congregational vote.

The new church would replace the present facility at the corner of Sixth and Main Streets. The present church was built shortly after the turn of the century.

Located west of Highway 15 across from Rice Auditorium, the new facility would be a large, two-level brick building featuring 10 classrooms and fellowship hall.

Included in the building plans are such things as landscaping, air conditioning, hardsurface parking, furniture and pews, kitchen equipment and partial cost of repair and moving the church organ, according to Loren Park, chairman of the building committee.

The church is currently conducting a fund raising drive which has a goal of $365,000 over a nine-year period. As of December, the congregation had donated about $75,400 out of the $120,240 pledged for the first three years.

'Government control of news would mean government control of our lives'

CHARLES THONE

Congressman says 'free time' idea could destroy this nation's news media

By CHARLES THONE

Proposals that broadcasting stations be required to carry anti-advertising messages could destroy America's independent news media.

The Federal Trade Commission on Jan. 6, 1972 proposed that the "fairness doctrine" of the Federal Communications Commission be revised to provide that people objecting to advertising on radio and television stations could demand free time to carry a counter advertising proposal.

I am urging legislation drafted that would prevent any requirement for counter advertising.

Every newspaper and magazine should be as dedicated in opposition to any proposal for counter advertising in broadcasting as those involved in operating radio and television stations.

The Federal Trade Commission is charged with exposing false advertising in any media on a case-by-case basis.

One of the drawbacks to counter advertising is that those ads that are most informative are most likely to be challenged by the anti-advertising advocates.

Another frightening aspect of the thought of counter advertising is the cost. According to FCC records, expenses of a TV network usually require 95 per cent of income.

Requiring counter advertising would eventually require the government to intervene as to what messages to put on the air.

The scariest part of the proposal for counter advertising is the idea behind it that there are an elite group of people who have the "truth" to pass down to the rest of us poor-misguided, unenlightened souls.

Strangely, some of those who are afraid of erosion of freedom of the press through government secrecy are advocating counter advertising, which is a greater threat to free dissemination of news.

Government control of news would mean government control of our lives. News media must be strong economically in order to avoid government control.

Now that we have a recycling center coming to Northeast Nebraska, groups in the Wayne area should start drives to collect such things as glass, tin cans and aluminum objects.

The drives would be perfect for 4-H clubs, service groups and the like.

The recycling center will open in Norfolk this coming Saturday at the corner of Maple Avenue and Queen City Boulevard. It will accept glass, tin-plated steel cans and bi-metal cans, aluminum objects such as frozen food trays and window frames, and paper products such as newspapers, brown paper sacks, computer cards, magazines and telephone books.

I still can't understand why the local city council saw fit to take the tons and tons of glass which had been collected by area residents, toss it in the landfill and cover it up for posterity.

The ecology group which was quite active at Wayne State College at one time and The Wayne Herald put a lot of work in getting people to collect their glass bottles, jars and the like for the drive.

I'm convinced collecting material such as this is an excellent way for people concerned about the environment to do something to help clean it up and keep it that way.

The case of the missing airplane part was solved in Wayne recently.

A local pilot sent a cylinder from his airplane engine to Texas to be repaired. The Texas firm fixed it, boxed it up and sent it right back to Wayne.

And what really tops it off, the package all the time had the correct zip code on the address. I always thought that zip codes were supposed to speed up the mail and eliminate goofs such as this.

I never knew it took so much equipment to televise something for cable television until I walked into the city council meeting Tuesday night.

Wayne State students under the direction of Bill Hagerman, coordinator of educational television at the college, had pretty well taken over the meeting room.

I haven't heard too many comments on the production, but those I have heard have been good ones.

Procrastinators rejoice! National Procrastination Week never got off the ground. The Philadelphia-based group whose motto is never do today what you can put off and put off was going to observe the week this month.

OBSERVATIONS

Televised meeting is 'major breakthrough'

The televised meeting of the Wayne city council Tuesday night went over much better than a lot of people thought it would.

We were not sure if people who had cable television in their homes would watch it or not.

A spot survey we conducted Wednesday and Thursday showed that just more than half of those with cable TV did watch the meeting.

The surprising thing is that some people who do not have cable television went to a friend's home in order to watch the program on his set.

What this all means, it seems, is that citizens are much more concerned with local government than many of us realize.

Whether residents would watch all meetings televised is difficult to say, but it's probably fair to say that many of them would watch when they know the council is considering interesting, important or controversial subjects.

We will have to agree with the mayor, Kent Hall, after hearing several comments in favor of televising the meetings.

The residents who watch the televised meetings are going to be more informed about what's going on in city government, he noted, and are going to be better citizens because of it.

Out of Old

State Fair Entertainment

Every year it seems as if the State Fair Board goes out of its way to provide good entertainment for the visitors of the fair.

"I hereby challenge any pony in the world not over twelve hands high to a trial of speed with my trotting dog 'Doc' conditions to be as follows: Pony and dog to be harnessed to cart and both to trot half mile beats, best two in three.

they seemed at a stand still.

Such laudatory comments and the possible financial gain tended to produce numerous challenges for Doc. When Doc came to Lincoln for the State Fair in September of 1891, he was indeed challenged.

For these races, Doc, a powerfully built Irish Setter, was attached to a small two-wheeled vehicle and moved "at a clipping gait, square trotting, without a break."

RAIN AND COLD failed to stop about 200 youths and adults from staging the second annual Hike for HOPE Saturday. Outfitted with raincoats, boots, umbrellas and the like, the hikers took off Saturday morning for a walk to Wakefield and back to raise money for the USS HOPE, a mercy ship which visits nations in need. Members of the Phi Mu Sorority at Wayne State College, sponsor of the hike again this year, said if all the hikers made the 20 mile trip they would raise more than $5,000. Heading out of town are some of the hikers (above) while girls count the amounts pledged for each mile the hikers cover (right). Figuring out the amounts are Nancy Morcroft, Nebraska Wesleyan University student, right, Sue Fellers, Wayne State College graduate, center, and Marly Johnson, Nebraska Wesleyan student.

'Fiddler' Packs Them in on Opening Night at WHS

BY SANDRA BREITKREUTZ
The lecture hall was packed and people were turned away for the opening night of "Fiddler on the Roof," popular musical production staged Friday and Saturday at Wayne High School.

In "Fiddler on the Roof," the sorrow of a persecuted race peeps out from clever lines and sentimental lyrics. Tevye, the father, is a poor dairyman, who makes his home with his wife and five daughters in a small Russian village.

The year is 1905, it is the eve of the Russian revolutionary period and Tevye, his family and his neighbors are Jews.

The high school presentation, featuring the vocal music department, was directed by Ernest Bedell, assisted by Ted Blenderman.

Joe Manley, who has exhibited his theatrical talents in previous high school productions, was cast in the lead of Tevye. His performance was an outstanding portrayal of a gentle man caught up in the throes of change.

At ease on stage, his command of his part, which extended to include a charming Jewish dialect, kept the three-hour show from dragging.

Playing opposite Manley was Kay Pankratz as Golde, the wife and mother. Miss Pankratz proved at home with her role and endeared the audience to her character.

Like Manley, she understood her part and was able to convey the picture of a family with little to their name but love, but aware of the value of that one treasure.

The scenes between Manley and Miss Pankratz were touching episodes of near perfection and left the audience alternately chuckling and weeping.

Tevye and Golde have five daughters and no dowries for them. The story involves the parents' acceptance of their daughters' choices for husbands and the beginning of a break with tradition.

Marjie Lundsrom, as Tzeitel, the oldest daughter, and Gigi Goblirsch as Hodel, the second daughter, were particularly good in their parts and scenes between them and their suitors were delicate and tender.

Mike Nuss played Motel Kamzoi, who seeks Tzeitel's hand in marriage. Nuss showed a unique ability to throw himself entirely into a part and his enthusiasm was a distinct plus for the show.

His performance might have been improved had he played more to Tzeitel and less to the audience.

Lisa Lesh, playing the third daughter, Chava, had her best moments in a scene where her father turns his back on her and leaves her sobbing. Chava's gentle husband, Fyedka, was played by Jay Kohl.

Cast as the two younger daughters, Shprintze and Bielke were Peggy Langston and Nancy Proett.

Debi Woisko delighted the audience with her representation of the matchmaker, Yente. An apparent inability to capture the typical Jewish dialect which would have added realism to the loud, gossiping character of Yente was offset by Miss Woisko's remarkable ability to project and her ease on stage.

The Rabbi was a minor role but Mark Cramer with each brief speech and several well executed silences coaxed the audience into smiling through some of the somber realities in the play.

Lazar Wolf, the butcher, was played by Brian Nelson; Mordechai, the inn keeper by Lane Ostendorf; Mendel, the Rabbi's son, by Phil Koerber; Avrahm, the bookseller, by Mike Schmoldt; Nachum, the beggar, by Ken Baier; the ghost of Grandma Tzeitel by Brenda Gaunt; the ghost of Fruma Sarah by Kay Pierson; the constable by Doug Temme; Shaindel, Motel's mother, by Kathy Nelson and the fiddler by Marco Garlick.

Villagers were portrayed by Kim Allen, Beth Baier, Catherine Cook, Gordon Cook, Donna Johnson, Sally Leseberg, Renee Milligan, Kim Schmidt and Mary Shufelt.

Special mention should be made of Bob Bergt, who played one of the Russians. With no lines to speak of, he still made an impact on the audience.

Other Russians were Don Nelson, David Owens, and Barry Ruback. Teri Bigelow, Kaye Coan, Judy McLain and Lisa Tooker were the bottle dancers.

Costuming was superb, although the ghost of Fruma Sarah seemed a little on the bizarre side. The scenery was quaint and complemented the production but space was at a minimum. The songs were charming and the blending of voices and orchestra evidenced much work. Choreography, however, was weak.

Applause at the curtain call expressed the pleasure of the audience with both the production and actors.

Is This Happening to Me?

JEFF FARREN, playing the role of Bill Vandemere in the Winside High School play "It's Cold in Them Thar Hills," can't believe his eyes when he is almost caught in the marriage trap with Shoddy, played by Vickie Holtgren. Ready to marry them off is preacher Mike Anderson. The play, one of three one act performances at the school, was a sophomore junior production. The three one acts were performed Friday night.

Live Television Coverage of Council Meeting Proves Popular

A random survey by The Wayne Herald shows that more than half of those persons with cable television hookups in their homes watched the live television coverage of Tuesday night's city council meeting.

The newspaper telephoned 40 homes which have cable television. Results: 20 persons watched either part or all of the program, 18 failed to tune it in. And of those 20 who watched the program, almost all of them commented favorably on the coverage, the first time a council meeting has been televised live.

Among the comments: "My whole family watched it, kids too for a while. I think it should be continued."

"We really enjoyed it and stayed until it was over. I sure will continue to watch it."

"I missed the excitement, but got in at the recess and watched the rest of it. Councilmen are to be commended for doing it."

"Thought it was quite interesting. I wish they would do it more often."

One woman remarked that the ladies at a bridge club meeting turned the program on and watched it while playing cards. "The women could hardly concentrate on their gossip," she noted.

A few people said they would have watched the program if they had been home, hadn't had company or hadn't forgot about it.

One person said the Academy Awards show on another channel was just too important to miss, but he would watch council meetings if televised in the future.

The next two or three meetings of the council also will be televised live over Channel 2, according to Larry Hanson.

manager technician of Wayne Cablevision, Inc.

Televising the meetings may have to be discontinued for a time after that, he said, because there may not be enough broadcasting students at Wayne State College during the summer to handle the equipment.

Several students under the direction of William Hagerman, coordinator of instructional television at WSC, manned the cameras, switching console and other equipment during Tuesday night's program.

Although the students have televised other events on the campus, covering an event live was almost completely new to them, Hagerman said.

If they were new at it, they got better than passing grades on the production from persons who watched the program.

A few viewers said the picture and sound were poor, but most said the technical quality of the program was quite good.

Hagerman noted during the production that the students would be able to do a better job the next time they televised a meeting.

Mayor Kent Hall called the program a "major breakthrough in communication between the council and the people."

"I think it's a terrific aid to the council because people will be more aware of what the council is basing their decisions on," he added.

Although the students didn't do a perfect job with the production, Hall complimented them: "They're amateurs, but they did a professional job."

Laurel High School principal Fenton Crookshank spent three days last week attending an invitational Navy Blue and Gold program held at Annapolis Naval Academy.

The Nebraska group visited with 25 Nebraska boys at the Academy, toured Washington, D.C. and spent a short time with Nebraska senators and representatives.

Car, Truck Collide Near 7th, Main

A car and semi-trailer truck collided near the intersection of Seventh and Main about 6 p.m. Wednesday when the truck driver, Alvin R. Van Fossen of Laurel, attempted to make a left turn from Main to Seventh in the through lane.

According to the police report a car operated by Lisa A. Lesh, 505 E. 10th, was in the left turning lane when the truck clipped the car's right front tender.

No one was hurt. Earlier that day, about 5 p.m., a parked car owned by Vern D. or Alice Fairchild, 528 E. Fourth, was hit by a car backing out of a parking stall near Fourth and Dearborn.

Deanborn Granquist, the driver, told police he did not see the Fairchild car at the time of the accident.

Mishap Story Contains Error

The newspaper incorrectly reported how an accident occurred in Wayne on Saturday, March 24, in last Thursday's issue.

The accident involved cars driven by Thomas Burns of Laurel and Patricia Emry of Wayne and took place at the intersection of Main and Sixth Streets.

The Burns vehicle ran into the rear of the Emry car as Patricia Emry was attempting to make a left turn off Main onto Sixth. The newspaper incorrectly reported that the Emry vehicle struck the rear of the Burns car.
