Firemen Elected at Concord

All the officials of the Concord volunteer fire department were re-elected last week to their same positions with the exception of Meredith Johnson, who was replaced by Roy Stohler as vice-president.

Norman Anderson will keep his job as president of the group, while Jack Erwin will remain as secretary-treasurer; Fritz Reith as fire chief, Duane Harder as first assistant fire chief and Bud Hansen as second assistant fire chief.

During the group's election Tuesday night the members voted in favor of applying for an army surplus vehicle from the state forestry department. Anderson pointed out that the vehicle will not cost the rural and town fire departments anything. The rural department will order the truck and it will be used by both departments.

The only stipulation in obtaining the truck is that the department has to furnish the equipment. The arrival of the used vehicle is scheduled sometime in May if the application is approved.

Former Teacher Honored

A former teacher at Wayne and Wakefield, Dr. Gayle B. Childs, was honored by his colleagues in the National University Extension Association during a banquet in Omaha Friday.

The occasion was the national meeting of the association.

Dr. Childs, director of the Extension Division at University of Nebraska Lincoln, taught in Wayne in the late 1930's. He served for 15 years as a public school teacher and administrator at Wayne, Wakefield, Wynot and West Point.

Dr. Childs has served the University and the Extension Division for the past 27 years, as a specialist in curriculum development for supervised correspondence study, head of class and correspondence instruction, assistant director, and since 1966 as Director of the Extension Division. In addition, he served as assistant professor of secondary education from 1951-53, associate professor from 1953-57 and professor since 1957.

His contributions to correspondence study, curriculum development, and adult and continuing education are many and varied. He has given major addresses throughout the United States and in Canada, Sweden. See TEACHER, page 8.

Community Sing Tonight at WSC

The community sing through of the Easter section of Handel's "Messiah," is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. tonight at the Wayne State College Ramsey Theatre.

All area persons interested in singing are invited to attend. Dr. Cornell Runestad, associate professor of music at WSC, will direct. Music for all choral parts will be provided, though participants may bring their own scores if they wish.

Though the program is not intended to be a professional performance, others who do not wish to participate may attend. Refreshments will be served afterward.

The program is being sponsored by the Wayne chapter of the American Association of University Women. If successful, it may be continued in coming years.

Police Ask Cures for Problems

The Wayne police department is asking for help from adults and youths in controlling two current problems: dogs running loose and youths shooting BB guns in the city limits.

E. L. "Pat" Hailey, acting chief, said that several persons have complained that dogs are running loose, leaping up newly planted gardens and the like.

He noted that dogs have to be kept on their owners' property and are not to be allowed to run loose. If they are not kept penned up on a leash, they will be picked up and the owners fined, he said.

He noted also that some youngsters have been shooting birds near the city ball park with BB guns. Parents should make sure that their children do not fire their BB guns in the city limits because there is a city ordinance prohibiting it.

Safety Specialist: Tractor Turnovers Are Big Killer

A total of 58 people in Nebraska were killed last year in farm accidents, said Rollie Schnieder, safety specialist from the University of Nebraska, with the majority of deaths attributed to tractor turnovers.

Turnovers, he told an attentive audience at Thursday night's special meeting on tractor deaths in Allen, occur mainly off the road while the tractor is being moved from one spot to another.

Last year, 85 per cent of those killed in tractor turnovers died when the vehicle turned over on its side," he said. Fourteen per cent were killed when the tractor

NE Station Schedules 2-Day Camp

A two day 4 H Swine Camp is scheduled for the Northeast Station near Concord Friday and Saturday, April 27-28.

The camp is designed especially for 4 H'ers enrolled in swine projects who are 12 years of age and older. Four H leaders may attend also.

Scheduled to start at 5 p.m. on the 27th, the camp will include instruction on judging, filling and showing, swine management and care, nutrition and promotion of the product. A tour of the swine research facilities at the station, discussion of opportunities in livestock and recreation activities are planned also.

Appearing on the program from the University of Nebraska Lincoln will be Dr. Keith Giltner and Dr. Robert Moser. Terry Schrick, executive secretary of the Nebraska Pork Producers, is also on the program.

Northeast Station personnel helping with the camp will be Roy Stohler, Dixon County agent and area youth specialist, and Robert Fritschen, swine specialist.

Persons attending the camp may bring sleeping bags and the like if they are going to spend the night at the station.

for flipped over backwards, and one per cent died when the tractor tipped over forwards, he explained.

In a further breakdown, he said that 42 per cent of all tractor accidents occurred when driving on public roadways rather than farm roadways. Only about 24 per cent of the accidents take place on farm roads, he said.

Schnieder noted that the greatest number of turnovers happen to persons under 20 years of age who are driving too fast and those over 55 who drive up too steep an incline. "As a result, about 20 to 25 people in the state are killed each year," he noted.

Although Wayne and Dixon Counties' only average about one death a year, another neighboring county — Cedar — had three farm accident deaths last year. That is just two short of last year's leader, Hamilton County. "It was kind of a surprise that Hamilton led the state," Schnieder said, noting that he would have expected such counties as Holt, Madison, Platte or Saunders Counties to have the most tractor turnover deaths.

Schnieder explained that turnovers usually happen when the center of gravity is too high. The use of a front-end loader is one example where the center of gravity is raised and makes a tractor vulnerable to flipping over.

Right now, he said, many farmers are using a different type of farm machinery with articulated steering. "This type of steering involves what is normally referred to as four-wheel drive," he said, where all four wheels turn at once.

The biggest problem is training the farmer how to use it properly and be able to prevent it from turning over.

He said the tractor does provide the farmer with more power than the conventional two wheel model, "but the farmer must first learn how to use the machinery and be prepared."

After Schnieder's discussion, Roy Stohler, Dixon County agricultural agent, told the group that proper disposal of pesticide containers includes rinsing the containers three times before destroying it.

2 Automobiles Involved in Mishap Friday

Two automobiles suffered minor damages Friday afternoon about 3 o'clock in an accident two miles east of Wayne on Highway 35.

State patrolman Bill Watson of Wayne, who investigated the accident, said cars involved were driven by Margaret Stringer, 61, rural Wayne and Dennis Urbano, 29, Wayne.

Urbano struck the rear end of the Stringer automobile which was slowing down to make a left turn off the highway, Watson said. Both automobiles were eastbound.

There were no injuries, Watson said.

Guard Event Called Off

Saturday night's open house at the National Guard Armory at Wayne was called off Thursday because not enough area persons could attend.

Dennis Spangler, administrative technician of the local National Guard unit, said not enough time was given to the individuals invited for them to take in the event.

He said the event will be scheduled sometime in the future, probably within a few weeks.

The event was to be the local unit's part in the statewide effort to tell the Guard's story to the public. Invited were mayors, civil defense directors and newspaper editors from Wayne and several surrounding communities.

National Guard units across the state and nation are attempting to explain the functions and services of the National Guard to attract more young men into it.

Scouts Expected At WSC Tonight

More than 100 Scouts are expected to turn out tonight (Monday) for a Scout-O-Rama Swim Night at Wayne State College.

Scouts are expected to attend the 7:30 p.m. event from Wayne, Dixon, Cedar, Thurston and Cuming Counties.

Project Cleanup

JAMEY GUNTER and Bryan Backstrom start the ball rolling in Winside for the first annual clean up campaign sponsored by the town and the school. Gunter and Backstrom, both high school students, joined other class members in a project to clean up the park and repaint the benches.

Local School Is Approved

The Wayne Carroll school system has received notice that it has been approved for the current school year by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Approval was given during a meeting of the association in Chicago in March.

The association approved the school system after noting that there were no violations.

Truck Strikes Car in Carroll

A truck parked on a Carroll street rolled backwards nearly 250 feet Friday morning and struck a parked car, reports the Wayne County sheriff's office.

The truck was owned by McClain Oil Co. in Carroll, the car by Maurice and Elaine Lage, also of Carroll. The right side of the car was damaged and the rear of the truck received minor damage, the sheriff's office said.

Officials Tour Plant

Several Wayne County officials were in a group of seven which toured the large Caterpillar Tractor Co. plant at Peoria, Ill., last week.

Taking part in the tour were Norris Weible, county clerk; Robert Nissen, road superintendent, and commissioners Ken Eddie of Carroll and Joe Wilson of rural Wakefield.

The group, which also included two persons from Bancroft and one from Blair, left Monday and returned Thursday.

Highway 15 Construction Still Couple Years Away

Gotters worried about what the proposed improvement of Highway 15 will do to the Wayne golf course needn't be. At least for another couple years.

Tom McCarthy, highway engineer at the Nebraska Department of Roads district office at Norfolk, said work on the highway will probably not begin until sometime in fiscal 1975 — between July, 1974 and July, 1975.

The project is still in the planning stage, he said, and the state department is not certain yet exactly how the four-lane stretch of road will affect the golf course.

The highway will be changed into four lanes from the city limits on the north side of town to the end of the housing development, he said.

A proposal for the work has been sent to the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation for comments, he said, because recreation land is involved. When the proposal comes back, more studies will be conducted and a public hearing will be held, McCarthy noted.

No work will be done before the public hearing when interested persons will have a chance to voice their ideas about the improvement, he said.

The hearing probably will be held later this year, McCarthy said.

Because the federal government has not commented on the department's proposal and because some studies have not been completed, the highway department is not certain what the project will do to the golf course, he said.

The state department is considering several plans for the improvement, each of them affecting the golf course differently, according to McCarthy. A four-lane highway usually requires 52 feet of pavement surface and considerable amount of right of way, McCarthy said.

Learning the Basics

EXPLORER POST ADVISOR Lionel Moore, physics instructor at Wayne State College, goes over some basic information about flying with aviation Explorers Ron Boyce and Susan Jacobmeier. Also in the post are Mike Rhodes, Gordon Emery and Steve Brandt, all Wayne High School students. They have been meeting every Wednesday for several weeks, learning how planes fly and what knowledge it takes to keep them airborne. The group is trying to raise funds to take a flight trip to the Sandhills, Badlands and Black Hills this summer. Moore said anybody who wishes to have their airplanes washed or waxed should contact him so the Explorers can undertake the project.

Mistaken Identity

STAN PERRY and Duane Mitchell wrestle Wayne Rastede to the floor in a case of mistaken identity in a scene in Allen High's senior class play, "Come Out of The Closet." The play was presented Friday afternoon and evening.

OBSERVATIONS

Here's our chance

Groups and individuals in the Wayne area interested in attracting doctors to their communities are being offered a chance to tell the benefits of living and practicing in a rural area during the Fourth Annual Rural Medical Day.

The event is scheduled for Thursday, April 26, at the University of Nebraska Hospital in Omaha. Communities and groups are offered a chance to set up exhibits and talk with students, interns and residents during the day, telling them of the benefits their towns offer.

Some of the efforts during the first three annual programs have proven successful, according to the president of the Nebraska Medical Association, which is helping sponsor the event. "Through this flow of information about rural practice, our young men who will become physicians have learned at first-hand about rural practice," he said. "More and more, the communities which persist in their efforts to tell their story, and who work at the same time to build facilities where quality medicine can be practiced, are attracting the interests of young doctors."

Dr. Robert Bentback of Wayne, chairman for the 1973 Rural Medicine Day, said much the same thing in a news release last week. "It takes time, persistence and follow-up for a community to tell its story well. This is of vital importance in attracting the younger doctor. Communities which have done a good job of telling their story are realizing it can pay off."

Persons in the area are in an enviable position right now. Construction is about to begin in Wayne on a large, modern hospital which promises to serve not only Wayne but the surrounding area as well. If that isn't a plus for those trying to attract doctors to their communities, nothing is.

However, because the hospital will be built in Wayne does not mean that doctors are going to flock to this community or one close by. We're still going to have to go out and sell what we have to offer. It would be a good idea if groups or individuals from Wayne and a few neighboring towns took part in the coming medical day.

To save lives

Volunteer firemen across Nebraska and the state fire marshal are sponsoring Fire Recognition Day on May 12.

All Nebraskans are being urged to participate simultaneously in exit drills in their home at 8:30 p.m. on that day to give them knowledge and experience in how to react in the case of a fire. To get ready for the event, Nebraskans are asked to hold simulated fire evacuation drills at least once each week until the statewide effort, tabbed "Operation EDITH."

Purpose of the effort, of course, is to cut down on the number of deaths and injuries which result each year from fires. There are an average of 12,000 home fires each day across the country, and each year more than 12,500 persons die in fires. About 60 per cent of those deaths occur in the home, many of them needlessly.

Sponsors of the statewide drill hope that it will spur families to hold regular drills so they will be prepared in case of a real fire. They are asking that all members of volunteer and paid fire departments, school students and members of fraternal and civic organizations participate in the drill to reach as many Nebraskans as possible.

The idea sounds like a good one. We hope individuals and groups in Wayne and the surrounding area take part in it.

Another inconsistency

In some surprisingly quick moves, the Wayne city council last week agreed to recommend to the state that the package liquor license currently held by Scotty's Place be given to Wayne Liquors, Inc.

What the council in effect did in recommending that Wayne Liquors receive the license was to back up a private agreement between several persons. The agreement, according to information given the council, was that the license at Scotty's would not be renewed when it comes due this spring so that one could be issued to Wayne Liquors.

Although the law does not permit buying and selling of liquor licenses, this is just what the council permitted. And to top it off, an attorney explained to the council that there is a law against buying and selling liquor licenses before the council voted on granting one to Wayne Liquors.

Less than a month earlier the council turned down another person who applied for a package liquor license, arguing that it wished to keep the number in existence in the city at five. But at that time the council agreed that from then on it would issue additional ones on the basis of who had asked for them in the past. That is, those who had attempted to get licenses in the past would have priority over somebody asking for one for the first time.

Then the council turns around and agrees to issue a license that is going to be available to somebody who was lucky enough to find out that it was no longer wanted by the person who had it. The person who less than a month earlier had asked for the same kind of license had absolutely no chance to buy to obtain it. The agreement had been reached, a majority of the council didn't question the propriety of it and the action was taken.

That, in our opinion, is gross inconsistency. And it is not the only instance where the council has been inconsistent, following one line of thought at one meeting and then turning around and following another one at the next meeting. It's getting to the point where the public has little idea about how the council will vote on issues before it.

Was the chief that wrong?

Did the Wayne chief of police make such a terrible error in conducting an investigation of local taverns and bottle clubs that the mayor was justified in firing him?

We do not think it was that gross an error, if it was an error at all. We think the mayor has acted without just cause and has created several problems.

First, he has blemished a man's record. Even if the chief takes the issue to court and is proven right, that blemish is likely to stay on his record.

Second, he has raised the question of whether the mayor and city council will back other city employees in conducting their duties. The mayor told the chief to conduct the investigation, and when it was over the mayor decided that it had been conducted in such an incorrect manner that the chief should be fired for it. No member of the council saw fit to question the mayor's action.

The major reason for dismissing the chief, according to the mayor, was that the chief told an undercover man to break the law in the bars by spiking beer to see if the bartenders would permit it. There have been minor problems between the mayor and the chief in the past, the mayor notes, but this was the key issue.

We cannot see how that is justification for firing the chief. There seems to be little difference between that and bringing an undercover man into a community to attempt to purchase drugs so charges can be brought against those persons selling them. Nor is it much different than having detectives frequent a place suspected of prostitution to see if they are propositioned.

The investigation made many people angry, some of them enough so that they strongly criticized the mayor for permitting it. One can only wonder whether those criticisms played an important part in the dismissal and whether the chief was a scapegoat.

A wealth going to waste

We are glad to see that the mandatory retirement age for teachers in the Wayne-Carroll school system has been raised from 64 to 65 years.

We would like to see if omitted some of the same method devised which would permit the school to take advantage of the vast knowledge and experience teachers accumulate down through the years.

One of the worst aspects of our society is the way we treat our elderly citizens. We arbitrarily and senselessly say that at this or that age a person is no longer of use to society and therefore must be refused the right to continue working. We do it with teachers, laborers, cooks, janitors, construction workers and numerous other trades and professions.

Without a doubt, everybody begins to slow down as they reach their 60's and 70's. They can't pound a nail as well as somebody 20 or 30 years younger than they. Their reading speed might slow down with diminishing eyesight. They may not be able to work on an fast a production line as a younger person. They might not be able to sponsor as many groups or teach as heavy a load as a teacher several years younger.

But to flaily tell them that they are useless at such and such an age is a terrible injustice. There is a huge wealth in our elderly population, a wealth which we are letting go to waste because of our silly emphasis on youth.

By Norvin Hansen

...not all housewives are boycotting.

That's what a Chicago woman wrote to Mr. and Mrs. Merle Ring of rural Wayne after she read Merle's letter in the Chicago Tribune.

Merle's letter and a copy of a grocery advertisement which showed that food prices have risen much less than such things as postal rates or auto insurance costs were sent to the Chicago Tribune, New York Times, Omaha World Herald and Sioux City Journal.

The Tribune printed at least part of his letter, prompting the reply from Mrs. Marie Allen of Mundelein, Ill. Here's what she said:

"I have just read your letter that appeared in this morning's Tribune. As I sit here having my breakfast coffee, I feel that I must let you know that not all housewives are boycotting.

"Some of us take time and effort to read of the situation. The law of supply is simple to understand. As our husbands reap higher salaries from hard work and return on investments, so should your husbands.

"The way I feel is that the market place is the place for bargaining — and those who carry protest signs and stir up irrational emotions are ill-informed and followers of a fad. As with most characters of this type, their attention span is short. Be patient, and eventually your message will be coming through."

Merle's letter included these comments:

"Only in recent weeks have cattle prices risen to levels of 20 years ago. How many other segments of the economy would be content to operate at price levels of 20 years ago? I had a serviceman help repair a grain roller yesterday — at $8 per hour. This roller which sold a few years ago for about $800 is now $1,325. I purchased iodized salt blocks for cattle in the feedlot yesterday.

A few months ago they were 90 cents, the next purchase was $1.12, then $1.20, $1.30, yesterday $1.40 with indications the next shipment would be higher.

"Most segments of the economy have shared a gradual, continual rise in the price structure for 20 years. The meat industry, to the contrary, has its ups and downs effected by supply and demand. Because meat is high now is no guarantee at all that it won't be considerably lower at some time in the future.

"We wonder where the President found any basis for singling out meat in his price controls order. As everything the farmer-feeder buys is spiraling upward, there certainly can be no alternative but that these price controls be clamped on machinery, appliances, autos, clothing, labor, feed additive. The ultimate result of such actions in the past have not been successful.

"I do not know the answer to this rising inflationary trend — but President Nixon's recent selective action cannot be it!"

The chart that Merle sent along with his letter showed that food prices rose 29 per cent between 1961 and 1971.

That's a considerable rise, it is true, but it is nothing compared to what has happened to prices of other things during the same period: clothing up 33 per cent, auto repairs up 45, dentist fees up 54, postal costs up 56, daily newspaper prices and physician fees up 44 per cent, auto insurance rates up 81, movie admissions up 101 and hospital room charges up way over 100 per cent.

Farmers have a difficult task before them if they hope to educate the public about why they should not be singled out for price ceilings. But it's a job which is going to have to be done if they hope to share in the prosperity of the nation. There are fewer and fewer farmers every year, and it's just too much of a temptation for a politician to use them as a scapegoat to please the other large groups of voters.

A pre-school boy in Wayne had just one request after he was sent to bed by his father for not eating his dinner. When his mother asked him what he wanted for supper, he replied: "Mom, please fix me something I like so daddy won't send me to bed again."

He had only one thing to say about his father after the incident: "He sure gets uptight when I don't eat my food."

Goals for Nebraska Tri-County Meeting Held at Coleridge

Thirty Knox, Cedar and Dixon County residents attended a meeting recently at Coleridge, held as a part of a statewide survey concerning the newly organized Goals for Nebraska program.

Participants divided into three groups, naming a leader and recorder for each group. Suggestions were made to be presented to the Nebraska Study Committee involving education, environment, industry, land use, health and welfare, housing, transportation, recreation and cultural enhancement for Nebraska.

In 1971 the League of Nebraska Municipalities, the County Officials Association and the Nebraska Press Association sponsored a meeting of 200 interested Nebraskans to discuss goals for the state in the areas of population, growth, education, health care and cultural opportunities.

A steering group, known as the Goals for Nebraska Advisory Committee, was chosen from the 200 individuals who attended the 1971 meeting. It meets monthly in an effort to implement a program which would be based on citizen involvement.

Phase I of the program got underway when a statewide opinion survey was conducted in 1972 to discover how Nebraskans feel about Nebraska.

Phase II began this year with the setting up of regional and state advisory committees. The surveying the findings of the survey and 62 county meetings to be held across the state this year.

Phase IV, schedule for 1974-75, will provide for sharing the findings with Nebraska citizens, who will then have the opportunity to discuss the goals, recommend priorities and suggest means of implementation. Phase IV reactions will be shared with government officials and departments involved in Nebraska's development.

As a result of the meeting at Coleridge, three county meetings were scheduled. Laurel will host the Cedar County meeting. The date will be announced later.

The Rev. Robert Neu of Coleridge is serving as regional chairman.

Winside's Krueger Selected Athlete of Year

Winside High's Dean Krueger was awarded the Athlete of the Year honors Friday night at the high school's annual athletic banquet.

Krueger, a four-year letterman in football and wrestling, was the coaches' choice for the award, presented yearly to the outstanding senior performer in the school's sports activities.

This year Krueger won third place in the Class C state wrestling meet in the 155-pound class.

During the athletic banquet, coaches in the five sports—football, wrestling, basketball, volleyball and track—announced letter winners for the year.

Cited as the Most Improved and Most Valuable Wrestler was Ed Lienemann—second in the state meet in the 185-pound division. Lienemann received plaques for both honors.

Football coach Doug Barry, quitting this year, was presented an autographed football by members of the team.

Before presentation of the awards, Creighton University head basketball coach Eddie Sutton, featured speaker, told the audience of about 175 people that sports plays a big role in forging the lives of today's and tomorrow's young people.

Sutton explained the competitiveness of sports teaches people how to work with people. "You need complete cooperation and teamwork in sports to be a successful team," he said. And the same is true in life, he added.

"We all strive toward a common goal and we need to work with others around us if we are to achieve the goals we set for ourselves."

The Blue Jay's boss pointed out that in sports one learns the value of hard work as well as how to be a competitor.

"All these ideas plus learning the meaning of discipline and sportsmanship are very important in building a better you," Sutton stressed.

When Wayne State Baseball Coach Fred Pierce says his team has been "playing well defensively," it's an understatement.

The Wildcats added their fourth shutout in an undefeated six games when they beat Creighton, 1-0, Thursday in Omaha. Winner Greg Kamp lowered his earned run average to .39 (on one earned run in 23 innings). For the season, Wildcat hurlers, have a combined ERA of 5.88 with Kevin Peterson boasting a zero ERA in 10 innings and Ron Nelson an even 1.0.

Wayne bats rapped out 10 hits against three Creighton pitchers.

Winside Names Cheerleaders For 1973-74

Winside High School released the names of the 1973-74 cheerleaders during the school's athletic banquet Friday night.

Returning cheerleaders Joann and Theresa Kleensang, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Kleensang of Hoskins, will again lead the cheers for the school.

Helping them will be Carla Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Miller; Tami Koll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Koll; Janelle Trautwein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Fleer; and alternate Nancy Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erv Morris. All are from Winside.

Cats Hit Creighton, 1-0, for 6-0 Record

When Wayne State Baseball Coach Fred Pierce says his team has been "playing well defensively," it's an understatement.

Door-to-Door Sales Persons May Owe Tax

Cosmetics, cleansers, cooking oils and clothing are among the most common items sold by a million-and-a-half to three million Americans who ring their neighbors' doorbells or arrange "house parties" almost every day.

Unlike their fellow citizens who work in stores, factories, and offices; many of those in direct sales may not be aware of their responsibilities as taxpayers, Richard Vinal, district director for Nebraska said.

He explained that these sales people usually are not considered employees by the firms manufacturing or distributing the products they sell, but are treated as "independent dealers."

Because the dealers are not employees, they are not subject to income tax withholding, and they often mistakenly fail to file an income tax return or to include their income with their husband's or wife's return.

Independent dealers must file a return for purposes of reporting self-employment tax if net earnings are $400 or more even though they may not have sufficient income otherwise to require the filing of an income tax return. Schedule C reflecting gross sales income and related expenses should be completed and filed with Form 1040.

Salespeople who are unsure of their tax obligations should contact their nearest IRS office, immediately for information and assistance, Vinal said.

The lesson, "Slick Tricks" was presented by Mrs. Neitzke. Next meeting will be May 8 in the Verl Gunter home. The lesson on crafts will be presented by Mrs. James Miller.

By Sandra Bloom, Farm & Home Food Consultant

In a survey of over 2,000 families in all sections of the United States, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service found that tuna is the most frequently served type of canned fish in all parts of the country. About 80 percent of the families queried had served it at least once . . . and some up to five times . . . in a four-week period. It's interesting to note that 82 percent of the users said they generally served canned tuna in salads.

Noted for its superior quality protein (tuna has more complete protein than a comparable serving of red meat), also popular of flavor, canned tuna is ideal for addition to your favorite dishes.

THE ATHENS OF THE PRAIRIE

Eliel Saarinen's creation — Northside Christian Church.

by Bill Thomas

This small country town of 30,000 calls itself "The Athens of the Prairie" — and with good reason. Seldom, if ever, has so small a community contained so many examples of innovative architectural achievements.

Columbus has averaged two masterpieces a year since 1954, according to an eight-page review in The Architectural Forum; 20 buildings, including churches, schools, a country club and business concerns, were praised for "an exceptionally high level of first-rate contemporary building design."

All are the accomplishments of men such as I.M. Pei, designer of the John Fitzgerald Kennedy Library in Cambridge, Mass.; Robert Trent Jones, known the world over for his golf courses; Eliel Saarinen, co-designer of the national museum in Helsinki, and many others.

The transformation began in the late 1930s under the leadership of the Irwin family, founders of the Cummins Engine Company in Columbus, the world's largest producer of diesel engines. Irwin Miller, the grandson of an Irwin daughter, is present board chairman of Cummins.

Miller's first concrete interest in the redevelopment of Columbus came in 1940, when Eliel Saarinen designed the Tabernacle Church of Christ, now known as the First Christian Church, to which the Irwin family contributed generously.

Columbus, 40 miles south of Indianapolis on busy Interstate 65, was initially an agricultural town and largely dependent on the surrounding countryside. That has changed. As an indication of the community's transition, the 1964 census showed 1,029 farms since 1959 and a loss of 536 farms since 1954, when there were 1,565 farms in the county.

World War II interrupted any new additions in Columbus' building program, but in the early fifties Miller commissioned a building of his own. He selected Eero Saarinen — Eliel's son and a former classmate — to design the Irwin Union Bank.

In designing the bank, Saarinen began with two major considerations; to provide an efficiently functioning structure for present-day banking that would still reflect a friendly old-fashioned atmosphere, and to create a new building that would not clash with its neighboring structures of 1910 vintage.

Shallow concrete domes give variety to the ceiling height and add a simple dignity to the structure. The bank and drive-in facilities are blended into groups of trees and flowers.

About the time the bank was built, the town completed its new high school and Miller decided that better things could be done. He implemented his architectural plans by establishing the Cummins Engine Foundation in 1954. Through it, he offered to pay the architect's fee for any new school building if the Board of Education would select the architect from a list compiled by experts in the field.

Each architect chosen would have total responsibility for the planning and design of that particular building, and would be allowed 12 months to draw of his project. Each new structure would also have a different architect.

So far, five schools have been built according to these ground rules, and a sixth is under way. The schools turned out to be less costly than more standardly conceived ones, and a valuable aid in attracting teachers and administrators.

The Lillian Schmitt Elementary School, designed by Harry Weese of Chicago — his credits include the United States Embassy in Ghana — was the first school to be designed and built under the Cummins Foundation program in 1956. It is impressive for its use of large picture windows and a pleasant feeling of contact with the outdoors.

McDowell Elementary School, designed by John Carl Warnecke and built in 1960, is an example of what the foundation has fostered. McDowell is a cluster of separate buildings resembling a futuristic pagoda.

Classrooms are in four clusters of three rooms, each group forming the corner of a rectangle. In the center of the rectangle are two larger buildings. These are linked with the classroom clusters by canopied walkways that flank the courtyards.

Or take the W.D. Richards Elementary School (1965), a product of the imagination of Edward Barnes. It has bold, sloping roofs forming angular silhouettes, which complement the First Baptist Church across the street. The saw-toothed skylight provide studio-type lighting and leave the walls free for work space.

Or the Lincoln School (1966) designed by Gunnar Birkerts, who also conceived the Fisher Administration Building at the University of Detroit. The center of the school is a free-standing multi-purpose room surrounded on three sides (on the second floor on four sides) by a wide corridor. During a regular day, the stage is removed and the room is used as a special classroom.

A grass path separates the street and play areas, and a depressed circular amphitheater provides seating around a huge tree. The classrooms are all carpeted, reducing floor-care costs and also improving the acoustics.

The efforts of the Irwin and Miller families have mushroomed into a townwide undertaking by industry to promote Columbus' architectural well-being. Attempts are being made to preserve the downtown commercial core against the competition of the edge-of-town shopping centers.

The most exciting effort to keep the town's main street busy is a storefront renovation project, the effect of which is strikingly visible in the first of 17 block-fronts to be completed. This facelifting — was directed by Alexander Girard, who designed the Fonda del Sol restaurant in New York's Time-Life Building — capitalizes on the one big architectural asset of downtown Columbus; its wealth of Victorian detail.

Perhaps the most striking and impressive example of contemporary architecture in Columbus is the North Christian Church, its spiral pinnacle piercing the sky from an open field on the north side of town.

This was Eero Saarinen's last design, completed only a short time before his death and built in 1964. "I want to solve (this design)," he said, "so that as an architect, when I face St. Peter, I am able to say that out of the buildings I did during my lifetime, one of the best was this little church . . . that speaks forth to all Christians as a witness to their faith."

The hexagonal shape of the church is a symbolic reminder of the Star of David and the church's roots in the Jewish faith; the cross atop the 192-foot spire proclaims Christian faith to the world.

The church rises alongside U.S. 31 where that road enters town from the north. The church stands isolated from the "ranch houses" of the neighborhood. Its self-contained form is unencumbered by wings, the worldly necessities of offices and classrooms being hidden beneath the stadium seating of the church itself and sheltered by its all-encompassing roof.

The First Baptist Church, designed by Weese and built in 1965, is the focal point in a residential area. The congregation wisely chose a low knoll on the northeast frontier of town, across the street from a new elementary school. Together, the two buildings with their violently angular silhouettes, look like an expressionist miniature of a medieval village; even the pointed evergreens nearby contribute to the effect.

The form of the church is an attempt to integrate the liturgical functions and educational requirements of the modern church. The sanctuary seats 500 on both sides of an off-center aisle that focuses on the communion table and cross.

The greatest contribution of Columbus' first modern building, the First Christian Church, is a well-designed public open space near the center of town. This church is as much a series of well-contained gardens as it is of serene building forms.

The Saarinen's placed the church itself on the eastern edge of the block, leaving most of the side for a sunken garden. The larger portion of the garden serves to offset the four old City Hall across the street.

Other community services have been provided, too. Otter Creek, a public golf course was designed by Robert Trent Jones, completed in 1964 and donated to the city by the Cummins Company. The par-72, 7,115-yard layout has been the site of the Indiana amateur tournament since 1966.

Jones is the designer of some of America's most beautiful courses, including Spyglass Hill in Pebble Beach, Calif., and the Firestone Country Club course in Akron, Ohio. Adjoining the Otter Creek layout is a Weese-designed clubhouse.

The Cleo Rogers Memorial County Library, designed by I.M. Pei and built in 1968 at a cost of $2.2-million, includes a brick pavilion whose east and west walls and cornice rise from a brick plaza. Courtyards out of the plaza bring daylight to the lower level. The library has a capacity of 175,000 volumes.

Columbus certainly has enough fine buildings already to make a visit worthwhile, but the future looks even brighter. A study of the town's "design potentials" by graduate students at the University of Illinois indicated some things that might eventually be done to the downtown core of the town. It proposes creation of four superblocks by converting existing streets to malls.

"The future of Columbus," Miller acknowledges, "depends on the attitudes of its people. The impact of these buildings on them is very subtle; it may take 100 years to show." For the present, he is sure that "there is less opposition to modern architecture than ever before."

A 32-page brochure on the city's architecture, including a suggested tour route and map, is available from the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce, Columbus, Ind. 47201 (50 cents each to cover cost of shipping and handling).

In that brochure, Sir Winston Churchill is quoted: "First we shape our buildings, then our buildings shape us."

“Blind Man

The horse sits down and takes a bow with his master in the show ring. Here Bud waves a greeting.

By Wally E. Schultz

Bud Jones is a blind trick rider that thrills many folks in the mid-west each summer. Only recently he appeared at the Delavan circus celebration and entertained many folks there with his amazing horse act.

"When I was about five years old, I picked up a bad case of pink eye, explained Bud. "The doctor treated me with some medicine that destroyed my vision. But I wanted to keep riding horses, as it's something I loved more than anything else in the world."

And with this strong determination, Bud did continue to ride and train horses.

He learned to spin the rope on horseback, break horses and rope them in the corral. He did this by listening to their movements in the distance.

"My mother used to ride a lead horse when I did the Roman stand on two horses," said Bud. "But then one day a pretty girl saw me perform at one of the shows I was working. She was impressed with my act. Later I was introduced to her and learned she lived not far from my home town. We fell in love and, in 1956 we were married."

Bud likes to tease her and tell her he couldn't run fast enough or he wouldn't have got married.

Dorothy, his pretty wife, loves horses, too, so they have much in common, as they ride, break, and train horses together.

They live on a 17-acre farm near Mt. Sterling, Illinois, where they have eight trick horses they have to keep in practice and training.

He owns a beautiful pair of brown and white spotted paint horses which he trick rides Roman style.

With one horse on each side of him, Bud dashes into the show ring. He grabs them by the mane and jumps upon their back. He needs no help.

Wins Many Admirers"

"The horses are called Captain and Colonel," said Bud. "I got them when they were about a year old and began teaching them at the age of two. They are very intelligent and dependable."

As you watch them perform, the horses respect the commands of their blind master.

Bud is accompanied into the arena with his pretty wife and from there her husband is on his own. She's on hand in the event something unforeseen happens and she can go to his aid. She stands on the side-line with her two sons, Rick, 6 and Jimmy, age 12.

"Both of our sons are picking up an interest in the trick riding and learning some of the stunts," said Dorothy. "Maybe someday it will be a father and son act."

One of the unusual and hardest tricks it was to teach Captain was to lie down and roll over upon his back. While he lies on his back, Bud does a hand stand between his front legs. The horse lays very still and arises only at the command of his master.

"And we teeter totter together, too," said Bud. "The horse stands on one end of the teeter totter and I at the other end. Then we switch places on the teeter board and I sit in front of him. My horses are very smart."

Bud and his family have traveled all over the United States putting on a 10-minute show for the folks at fairs, carnivals and celebrations of various kinds.

"We've also traveled into Canada a number of times," said Bud. "My wife does the driving and we pull our horse trailer behind the truck."

Folks are even more amazed when they learn that he made the entire horse trailer himself — even though he's blind.

Bud depends upon his keen hearing. If he wants to rope a horse in the corral, he'll do just that. He'll wait until he hears where they are and then toss the rope with deadly accuracy.

And what an expert he is with the lasso! He spins the lariat while on horseback and lays down over the backs of the two horses — still twirling his rope in a perfect circle.

Bud depends upon his sense of feeling in his fingers, too. When he performs with his one horse and has him do a high marching step, he walks beside the horse. With his hands outstretched, he can feel if the horse is picking up his feet high in the air.

Another stunt difficult enough for a fellow that has his sight is doing the "merry-go-round" stunt on horseback. This act consists of two horses. Mounted on them Roman style, Bud has the horses go in opposite directions, while he retains his position standing on their backs.

When they almost complete their stunt, he drops the reins and picks them up again. You can imagine how difficult it must be for a blind man, when a fellow with vision has a time remaining upright on the horse's backs.

It's quite a remarkable sight as you watch Bud's horses perform flawlessly for their blind rider. It's a touching sight, too, as you watch his wife and young sons standing proudly by at the side lines.

At home he knows every inch of their 17-acre farm, so he needs no help in finding his way around. He tends the horses, does the chores and leads a normal, happy life.

"You must treat your horses with kindness," said Bud. "From there the rest comes easy. A horse will respect you when it recognizes these qualifications in the trainer. If I ever lose a horse, it's like losing a member of the family. They've sort of grown on me."

Yes, here's an expert horse man that performs in total darkness. The sight is gone from his eyes, but he sees the beauty of living many with vision do not see.

As you watch him perform talentedly and courageously in the show arena, you feel nothing but admiration for him. Here's a fellow that counts his blessings — even though the sight has been taken from him.

Q True or false? Creams are better than soap-and-water facials.

A False, and here's why. Creams do not completely remove dirt which clings to fatty secretion from oil glands. Daily use of warm water and mild soap eliminates build-up of oily dirt, especially if the water is soft.

Q Which is better—soap or synthetic detergents?

A It depends on the hardness of your water. Detergents contain phosphates to counteract minerals in hard water and thus clean better in hard water. But phosphates are becoming a serious pollution problem. Soap contains no phosphates and in soft water actually does a better cleaning job than detergents.

Q I'd like a water softener, but where can I put one?

A The Lindsay Imperial doesn't take up as much room as the old cylindrical tanks you're probably thinking about. Any space 4' high, 1 1/2' deep and 2' wide near your water supply will do. The Lindsay is compact, good-looking, doesn't look like a "plumbing fixture."

Q Can hard water contribute to plumbing problems?

A Yes indeed. Hard water can result in soap and detergent curd that clogs traps and drains. It can also cause scale in water heaters. Scale and curd are minimal with soft water.

Q I know I have hard water, but how hard is it really?

A The only way you'll know for sure is to have it tested.

The Lindsay Division offers a direct-by-mail hard water test for only a dollar. Just send me your home address and a dollar. I'll send you a plastic bottle with a mailing box and simple instructions. Fill the bottle from your tap, return to me and I'll give you a written report from our laboratory.
