Allen Board Sets Budget Hearing

Budget Hearing The Allen school board tent fively set its 1973-74 budget hear-ing for Aug. 13, said superinten-dent Gait Miller. Miller explained that board members will take a prelimi-nary look at the budget about the end of July before the public bearing. As yet, he said, the budget has not been completed for the coming tiscal year. During its require monthfy-meeting last week, the board voted to keep the free high utilion rate at its present level of $1.700 per pupil. Also, the b o ar d accepted George Saunders' resignation as social science and German in. structor at the high school. Board members agreed that the U.S. and Nebraska Tlags at the school should not be flown the remainder of the summer months after Mille told them the new flags were stolen on July sto.

In vvayne Board members of the Lower Elikhorn Natural Resources Dis-trict will hold a regular meeting Thursday, June 26, in Wayne. The meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. at the Birch Room in the Student Center at Wayne State College. has been grinding out huge amounts of electricity to keep people cool and lawns green. Six times in the first 12 days in July the plant broke the previous record for electricity produced in a 24 hour period established late in June. And Wednesday last week was the biggest day, with the plant producing 112,100 kilowath hours in 24 hours. That is 11,400 kwh more than was produced on June 24 when the last record was set. If production continues at such a high rate, the plant could produce three million kwh this month, a total never-atlained in any single month since the plant has been in existence, according to plant superintendent Norbert Burgger. The highest monthy production in the past was in December last year, when 2440,500 kwh were produced. In the first 12 days of this month, production totaled 1,206,000 kwh-nearly, half of that pro-duced during all of December. Another record set last Wetinesday was peak load at the plant wet gives

I categorically deny being the father of seven children. That's just a rumor that got started the other night. I probably helped start it when I agreed (unfortunately) to take in the all-family night at the Ikes Lake north-west of Wayne. It just so happens that my two youngsters were joined by my borther's twins, who had been staying with us a few days, and by three youngsters of a friend of the family. That totals up to seven, six of which were insistent upon entering the fishing contest held for the kids during the evening.

were insistent upon entering the tisning contest held for the kids during the evening. Have you ever tried keeping six kids fishing at the same time in a lake where the fish bite without too much work? And with just three poles on top of 1? Why, they keep you hopping from one pole to another like a yo-yo, pulling off little crappies and bass until your fingers hurt, your back aches and your patience wanes. I swear I've never seen so many bobbers bobbing, reels snagged, knots and moss landed in such a short time. The evening started out real nice. Little Jack Dohrman slipped and fell in the lake, coming out probably a lot wetter than some kids do after their baths. His mother, Mass, Jerry Dorhman of. Wayne, was a step ahead of him, though. She had extra clothes stashed in among the picnic stuff we took along. Then came the real fun—the fishing cantest for the kids. Some body said if lasted probably test kin an hour. At the time, I thought they were running a langest, not catch the biggest or most fish.

Speaking of falling in Takes, that must be required initiation for kids just out of the toddler stage and entering whatever stage comes after that. I did it at Arnold. And little Jack is probably just the latest in a long line of youngsters who had to sneek a little closer look at those fish feeding on the edge of lkes, reaping the benefits of his curiousity.

Those "forks" were probably much like the bend on the creek up by Bloomfield where kids learned to swim if their parents weren't rich enough to take them over to the swimming pool at Yankton or Hartington. The water was just clean enough so you could see about the length of your arm on a bright, sunny day. The bottom was pure much but the banks usually had a dry place to step out on so you could linish swimming without being your could linish swimming without being to much dirtier than you were when you went in. Wayne volunteer firemen are planning on holding a practice tornado alert, possibly on this coming Thursday The firemen are using caution in planning the alert, no wanting to alarm people in case weather turns threatening. The practice warning will be announ-ced in a Thursday issue of The Wayne Herald, which goes out to most residents of Wayne on Wednesday afternoon so they will have time to read about it before it takes place. Cliff Pinkelman, fire chief, notes that the practice alert will not be held if weather turns bad after the newspaper goes out to those homes.

I think the idea is a good one. It could avoid a lot of confusion and just possibly might save some lives in case a real torse to save strike here. Maybe should start thinking about holding similar practice alerts to give their residents a taste of what their warning signal is like. The signals differ some from town to town, enough so that warve's solving in this town might be unsure about what Wayne's signal means. That's one reason why I've argued in the past for standardizing the state.
So it you hear Wayne's formado signal so its of you hear the next issue of the inewspacer. It's the practice alert that's precise and there is a stary in the next issue of the inewspacer. It's the practice alert that's precised by two is second periods of silence. The all clear signal is one solved bast.

We are refraining from commenting on this case until a judgement is handed down by the district court.

Although we agree completely with the idea that a man is innocent until proven guilty, we wonder if the court should not consider suspending the salary of Wayne County commissioner Floyd Burt until if is decided whether he is guilty of the charge of malféasance made against time.

charge of maileasance made against In will take weeks, possibly months before his case makes its way through district court. During that time, as if now-stands, he will be drawing his monthly salary of about $540. If he is found innocent of the charge, all is well and good if, however, he is found guilty of the charge, he will have been paid for all the time since commit-ting illegal purchases in the name of the bounty. That means county taxpayers-would have been paying salary to a man who was improperly representing them who functions that becember.

Per-sons participating in the Acres for Wildlife program leave portions of land untouched so they return to native grasses and vegetation to provide cover for wildlife. In a time when more and more land is being larmed, roads and highways are taking up more space, such a program is needed if we are to halt the decline in natural cover. We extend our congratulations and thanks to the likes. Their work in this program is commendable.

Several times in the past we have urged area groups and individuals to get involved in providing more natural cover for our wildlife. It is most important that this be done if we wish to keep songbirds, pheasants, rabbits, deer, covotes and other wildlife trom disappearing. We consider each generation's responsibility to leave the earth as healthy and bountiful as when they began using it. Now, a local group has been recognized for work in this very area. # For Wrestling Coach

Wayne State College is looking for a head wrestling coach, according to athletic director LeRoy Simpson. Simpson pointed out that he is looking for a coach with a teaching background to fill the spot formerly held by Gary Rosso, a graduate assiatant in charge of last year's program. Rosso took over for Dr Donald Pate, who was suspended from his coaching duties during the football season and now is head coach of wrestling at Richmond University. Va In addition Simpson went on, the school has decided not to hire an assistant basketball coach for replace Darryl Lehnus, who resigned last week Instead, Simpson is hoping to find a graduate assistant to help head coach Ron Jones.
