—Make full "use" of wheel weights to reduce slippage where pulling heavy loads, removing weights when doing lighter work.

—Match machinery and tractor size carefully to obtain full efficiency.

—When pulling lighter loads, shift to a higher gear and throttle back, maintaining the same speed and saving up to 25 per cent in fuel consumption per acre.

—Adjust diesel fuel pumps so excessive black smoke does not pour out of the stack. Black smoke means inefficiency and wasted fuel.

—Store fuel in a protected or shaded area, reducing loss through volatilization, a common fuel loss that most farmers do not consider.

If farmers will do these things and if business, industry and individuals will make efforts to cut back fuel consumption-this. winter, maybe, just maybe we can avoid direct fuel rationing by the federal; government. We've almost got fuel rationing right now, except a little of the sour taste of it has been taken away with the euphemism" allocation. The way things are going right now, blowever, we're going to end, up with fuel rationing You can bet on that. Some conservation now might make it a little less severe than it will be if we all don't cut back.

The self-sufficiency in the matter of home heating that was known to older generations of tarmers in the form of a big wood pile, a Coppte of trucks full of corri cobs and perhaps a coal bin filled with coal before winter set in, no longer exists. Some of the lessons learned by, the older farmers and ranchers during the layer bizzard should be brought out and reviewed. Many a farmer and rancher brought up a coal and wood range from the basement or a storage shed and set it in the klitchen to replace the gleaming new gas range for which there was no tuel. Some farmers and ranchers had to chop up old buildings and fence posts for fire wood. One can find many who went through the winter recalling how the family was reduced to living in one room where the heating or cook stove was, with just enough feat in the rest of the house to keep the water pipes from freezing (and not always doing that). Many vowed they would always keep a woodburning-cook stove or heating stove in storage for just such an emergency. Now would be a good time to be sure that old slove is located where it can be brought out and set up on short notice. these and make sure that one has the necessary stove pipe and elbows to make the connection between stove and chimney. For newer homes without brick chimneys, it would be well to get material together for an emergency venting arrangement that would withstand the chimney heat that goes with a roaring tire in a stove. A wood burning stove that someone fried to vent into the filmsy metal vents that are adequate for today's gas and fuel oil heating units would be a near-cinch to burn down the house some winter night when the temperature was down to 10 below zero.

A couple of cords of wood or. a fon of coal (if if can be obtained) stored in a shed would be good insurance to go with that old heating stove. ...enough to fide one over until the next load of conventional fuel arrived. Of course, some kerosene to use in getting a fire started more easily and to fuel a couple of kerosene independent of the stove place.

And a word of warning to anyone who has never lended a heating stove or old fashioned range — never pour kerosene on materials inside the heating compartment, as a live coal underneath and unobserved can produce a fatal explosion. Sprinkle the kerosene onto the kindling outside the stove, place it in the stove and then apply your match. Many a life was lost and a home burned down in the old days by people who insisted on doing it the other way.

That Time of the Year

STUDENTS AT SI: Mary's Catholic School in Wayne learned a little more about the ancestors in Jesus Christ's family by building a Jesse Tree for the holiday season. The tree, a project of fourth, fifth and sixth graders at the school, will be set up in the church during Christmas. It is made out of boxes covered with colored paper and decorations with ornaments as symbols of Jesus's ancestors. Fifth graders working on the project included Terri Dinges and John Melena (left front), Karen Starman and Nick Sieller (left rear), Pal McCright (right front), and Barbara Kovensky, Nancy Nuss, Teresa Ginn and Deena Sharer (right rear).

'It sure smells good'

It sure smells good

Basically I dislike kitchen work No matter how religiously I scrub the black marks out of the sink today, they will be back tomorrow. I can hardly wait "fill my range is old enough to trade in on a self cleaning model, and daily I offer thanks for my, no frost freezer and three kids to carry out the trash.

Actually, I'm not against the kitchen per se. It just seems fulled to spend so many hours over the stove when it has to all be done over again tomorrow.

But something deep inside me demands that in order for a house to smell like a home, you must cook in it. So periodically I brush aside the Hamburger Helper, look scorn fully past the 31-x minute casserole cookbook and set out to prove my worth as a homemaker by whipping up a little something extra.

Sometimes It's lasagne from scratch or beef stroganoff with homemade noodles. Occasionally it's a half dozen pies for the freezer. If I'm really feeling domestic it's elderberry jam or pickles.

Last week, having been tempted by the colorful illustrations in the holiday issue of Good Housekeeping. I decided to do cookies. Chocolate rum meringues it would be. I determined, visualizing our company that evening admiring the fulty mounds and begging for the recipe.

It didn't seem significant at that moment that in, 10 years of marriage. I had yet to turn out a perfect pan of meringues. For or that matter, even two pans of meringues that looked like they had come from the same recipe.

Spurred on by visions of televised cooking sessions with the Galloping Gourmef, I'd donned my mental che's hat and whipped egg whites until my mixer hummed threateningly. I shaved enough chocolate squares to turn my fingernails permanently cocca colored and I measured everything three times just to be sure.

The first batch bled all over the cookie sheet and lopked something like a very large deflated brownie. The second try stood in dainty swirts which crumpled when touched, and the third batch refused to budge off the pans.

There I was, t

no cookies.

Oh well, next week I'll dig out the never fail chocolate chip recipe and try again. In the meantime, the house sure does smell nice.

other wins came on decisions—a narrow 4.3 win by Roger Gustaf w son over Doug Lage in the 145 pound division and a 4.0 blank uning by 12e pound and a good lob. Barclay commented, noting that senior Dan Bowers won his weight class at 1855. Keith Suehl pinned his man in the 10st division, as did 112-pound Monte—Pteifter.

Barclay added that two of his rwestlers did a good job moving up one weight class. Although Brudigan (126) and Neil Wagner (155) lost their matches, both newcomers—to the team showed—"a lot of guts." Barclay said.

Bert Schwedherm, another new addition to the Cats lineup, pinned Kurt Dolph (132) to vin praise from the coach.

The Cats were strong in the lower and upper weights. Light weights Bob Bowers and Keith Suehl (98 and 105 respectively) overpowered their men with two quick pins in less than two and a half minutes.

In the upper weights Dwight Lienemann, Bowers and Mike Anderson each look wins over their opponents. Tuesday night Barclay's_crew. will be going after win No. 15 at Pender while Wakefield trys to untrack at Wisner-Pilger.

Dairy Farmers Get Posts at District Meet

District Meet

Dairy farmers from Wakefield and Wayne were named to district positions during the an nual district meeting of Mid America Dairymen, Inc. at Beemer last week.

Tamed member of the resolutions committee was Jim Stoutions of Wakefield Jerry Dorcey of Wayne was one of five delegates chosen during the meeting.

About 95 dairy farmers from the district furned out for the meeting. W. J. Grant. division manager for Mid-Am, spoke during the evening. He said the co-op had sharply increased the prices if charges processors for milk in recent months in order to substantially increased milk returns to farmers to cover their higher feed costs, and other production "expenses." He-noted that milk production is down both locality and nationally, and he expressed concern over the guantities of butter, dried milk and cheese to be imported into the United States. He said this would be bad for all dairymen but especially producers of Grade B milk Tormanutacturing purposes:

AHS Gets 6,000-Gallon Load of Fuel

Load of Fuel

A 6,000-gallon load of fuel has arrived at Allen High School, bringing he total amount of fuel to 12,000 gallons; superintendent Cail Miller told school, beard members Tuesday night.

The transport came from low about-a week and a half ago, he explained at the monthly meet, ing. "That amount should last us about a month and a half to two months, depending on the weather," Miller said. Both the school's-10,000 and new 2,000-aallon tanks are full.
