

Regional Meetings Set To Boost Bicentennial

Groups or individuals in the Wayne area interested in participating bicentennial projects or programs are invited to attend one of two regional meetings planned for Northeast Nebraska next month.

Residents of Dixon and Cedar Counties will meet with residents of Thurston and Dakota Counties on Feb. 14 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Paul United Methodist Church in South Sioux City.

Wayne County residents may meet with those from Stanton, Cumming, Colfax and Dodge Counties at 1:30 p.m. at the West Point city auditorium on Feb. 26.

Those are two of 19 bicentennial regional meetings scheduled through March across the state.

Conducting the meetings will be Don Searcy, executive director of the Nebraska Bicentennial Commission, and his assistant, Eleanor Crosier.

Main objective of the meetings is to acquaint Nebraskans with the ways their groups and organizations may participate in bicentennial activities. The regional meetings also will help familiarize county chairmen with the activities of the commission and encourage formation of committees to develop bicentennial-related projects for possible national recognition.

Projects already endorsed by the state commission and funded by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration have come from seven of the 19 regions in the state. Discussed during the meetings will be how matching funds are spent and how other regions may submit proposals to the commission.

Representatives of the state commission will discuss possible ways groups may want to market and sell bicentennial commemorative items in each of the counties. Also, they will discuss ways to coordinate similar activities.

Crash Kills Senior at Wakefield

Funeral services for a senior at Wakefield High School who died following a traffic accident northeast of Wakefield last week were held at the Methodist Church in Allen Tuesday afternoon.

Dead is LeAnn Hale, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hale of rural Allen.

She was seriously injured in a three-car crash on Highway 35 northeast of Wakefield late Wednesday night last week. She died at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Sioux City Saturday.

Hospitalized in critical condition in the same hospital was Dan Mahr, 22, of Sioux City. Mahr, a former student at Wayne State, was driving a van when it collided with one being driven by Denise Fischer, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Fischer of Concord. Miss Hale was a passenger in the car driven by Miss Fischer, who was hospitalized at Wakefield Community Hospital.

Driver of the third car involved in the wreck was Alex Hogg, 54, of Lincoln. Hogg, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension veterinarian, was not injured.

Dean Chase, Dixon County sheriff, said the accident apparently occurred when the headlight covers on the car being driven by Miss Fischer malfunctioned and closed while she was driving down the highway. The rear head on accident happened about three and a half miles east of the highway junction two miles north of Wakefield.

SLAP Group Sets Meeting For Next Week

Wayne County's new traffic accident prevention group will hold its first meeting on Wednesday evening next week.

The meeting of SLAP (Selective Localized Accident Prevention) will be held at the ASCS office in Wayne at 7:30.

Members are expected to name a chairman and vice chairman as well as discuss possible projects to help cut down on traffic accidents in the county.

Members of the group are Ray Butts, Dean Pierson, Kurt Otre, Orville Sherry, Al Wittig, Dick Kridel, Fred Brink and Robert Nissen, all of Wayne. Brink, city administrator, will serve as traffic and coordinator and secretary.

The group is similar to SLAP organizations already established in other counties across the state.

Buts noted that next week's meeting is open to the public. Anybody with suggestions on projects the group should undertake is welcome to contact any member of the group, he added.

Fairchild Case Now Up to Commission

By NORVIN HANSEN

Wayne's civil service commission will decide within the next few days whether to uphold Mayor Kent Hall's firing of chief of police Vern Fairchild or order the former chief reinstated.

The commission Tuesday afternoon ended its public hearing on the case, requested by Fairchild, after listening to several hours of testimony and receiving more than 30 pieces of evidence.

The decision by the three-member board must be handed down within 10 days of the close of the hearing. It is generally agreed the 10 days mean 10 working days, so the decision could come anytime between now and Feb. 5.

If the decision favors Fairchild, Mayor Hall apparently will abide by his public announcement not to fire the former chief for the third time. If the decision favors Hall, Fairchild is expected to appeal to district court as he has said he would.

Hall fired Fairchild on Dec. 27, 15 days after the district court ordered the city to enact civil service for paid members of the police department and to reinstate Fairchild. Hall had fired the chief the first time in April, a few days after an investigation of local liquor establishments.

Hall testified before the commission last week that the investigation was the "straw that broke the camel's back," prompting him to fire Fairchild.

Fairchild testified Tuesday afternoon, however, that Hall told him when he asked for his resignation that the liquor investigation was the main reason he wanted Fairchild out of the job.

The former chief said Hall told him that there were other "small, insignificant" reasons for asking for his resignation but that the investigation was the major reason. When he pressed him for other reasons, Fairchild testified, Hall said that there was a "morale problem in the department" and that Fairchild had failed to advertise for a new man to replace E. L. "Pat" Halley, the assistant chief who is nearing retirement age. The other reasons were "insignificant," Fairchild quoted Hall as saying.

Fairchild replied at that time, last April, that he never heard of another police department which didn't have a morale problem and that he was not going to advertise for a man to replace Halley until Halley announced he was going to resign.

Halley had not done so at that time, according to Fairchild.

Several other persons, including a former councilman and a policeman, testified in Fairchild's favor during Tuesday's session.

Dick Banister, councilman from 1967 to 1972, said he thought Fairchild ran a "very efficient" department and supplied the council with "excellent" reports on its operation. He testified he had heard several complaints about the police during his years on the council but he "never found any that were legitimate."

Hall has charged, among other things, that Fairchild kept inadequate records, was discourteous in his treatment of the public and failed to act on suggestions and orders from the mayor's office.

Police officer Melvin Lamb testified Tuesday that "the morale toward Fairchild" in the police department was very good. He said the complaints by officers in the department were "minor" complaints.

Several people testified in Fairchild's behalf by statements read into the record of the hearing. They included Wayne County sheriff Don Weible, as-

Allen Youth Fund Drive 'Promising'

Seattle doctors said last week's bone marrow operation on 14-year-old Danny Koester of rural Allen "looks promising."

The youth is heading into his second week of tests for a rare blood disease.

Also looking promising is the town's drive to help raise money to help pay the estimated $25,000 cost of the operation and hospitalization. Wednesday morning tabulations showed $5,174.51 already donated.

Last fall Danny, son of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Koester, discovered he had a blood disease that prohibits the growth of white cells in the blood, resulting in his inability to fight off infection.

After a trip to Omaha and the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., the family was advised to send Danny to Seattle where doctors were experimenting with a bone marrow transplant operation that hopefully will help the youth.

Both Danny's parents, a sister and brother flew to the hospital for the operation.

Motor Running in Garage Hospitalizes Local Councilman

City councilman Vernon Russell was hospitalized in Wayne Sunday after he and his son suffered suspected carbon-monoxide poisoning while working in a garage at their home in the southeast part of the city.

Russell was released from the hospital Tuesday after undergoing tests. His son, Marshall, 15, was checked at the local hospital and released Sunday.

Not suffering any poisoning was Wayne Bates, who was working with Russell and his son in the garage.

Mrs. Russell said the incident happened while the three were pulling a motor back in a car Sunday morning. They were using a truck hoist to lift the motor and had the truck motor running. A partially opened door on the garage apparently did not let enough fresh air into the garage, she said.

Some Tips on Banking

STUDENTS IN Dan Johnson's seventh grade social studies class at Wayne Middle School got a look at modern banking practices during a tour of State National Bank and Trust Co. Monday, highlighting a short period of study on banking in Europe several centuries ago. The students found out how tellers operate, what the bank vaults look like and how employees such as Jeannette Swanson go about their work. Mrs. Swanson is operating a proofreading machine as students crowd around her during the tour.

Terms Ending For 2 Mayors, Four Chairmen

Mayors and chairmen of seven area town boards have until March 15 to decide whether they intend to run for re-election.

Mayors Vernon Hill of Winside and Ed Schnasse of Wakefield will complete their terms in office this year, along with board chairmen in Carroll, Allen, Dixon, Hoskins and Concord.

According to city clerks in the area towns, those holding chairmen positions are E. H. "Bill" Kjer of Allen, John Young of Dixon, Duane Harder of Concord, George Langenberg of Hoskins and Perry Johnson of Carroll. Laurel mayor Merlin Swanson is the only one of eight area town heads not up for re-election.

Besides mayors and chairmen, terms for 13 board members also expire this year. They are:

Walt Rethewisch of Carroll, Don Kluver and Ken Linafelter of Allen, Phil Rouse and Eugene Erb of Wakefield, Merlin Morris and Waldon Brugger of Winside, Richard Hansen, Clarence Pearson and Norman Anderson of Concord, Lloyd Ave of Hoskins, Harold White and John McCorkindale of Laurel and Lowell Saunders of Dixon.

Eleven school board members in four area towns also face the decision whether to run.

Allen, Wakefield and Laurel school board members each have three members—whose terms end. They are Norris Emry, LeRoy Koch and Ray Brownell of Allen; Elmer Carlson, Rev. Donald Meyer and Sid Preston of Wakefield; and Warren Patfield, Richard-Hanson and Keith Erickson of Laurel.

Winside High's school board has two members, Myron Deck and Erwin Morris, who have to make the decision to run for re-election.

'Better Get '74 Tags Soon'

Wanted: About 150 vehicle owners a day to buy their 1974 license tags and pay their motor vehicle taxes.

That's what Wayne County Treasurer Leon Meyer would say if he were to advertise in an effort to keep from getting swamped with car and truck owners wanting to register their vehicles when the March 1 deadline draws close.

Meyer said Wednesday morning that more than 4,000 owners of vehicles will have to pay their taxes and purchase their 1974 license tags before the deadline. Only about 1,900 had done so by the middle of the week, he noted.

"We need about 150 persons registering every day to average out by the deadline," Meyer noted. "We can sure use some business now or else we will get an awful lot of them registering right at the deadline."

Although the number who have purchased their tags is running a little ahead of last year at the same time, the office will once again be swamped late in February if people continue postponing buying the tags.

Last year Meyer's office processed about 330 vehicle owners on the last day of February. Needless to say, Meyer wants to avoid a similar occurrence this time around.

Vehicle owners who wish to pay their motor vehicle taxes and purchase their license tags should take the tax statement they received early in January, their vehicle registration from the steering column and their payment to Meyer's office in the courthouse. Persons may do the same thing by mail if they are sure to include a check along with their tax statements and registrations, Meyer noted. The license tags will be sent to them by mail.

A list showing the registration fees for various vehicles was included with the tax statements sent out by the county assessor's office, Meyer noted.

The blue license tags which are being given out this year go in the lower left-hand corner of the license plate over the 1973 tag, said Meyer. New license plates will be issued next year unless a bill before the current legislature extending the use of the present plate is passed, Meyer noted.

Area Shopper Wins Latest Drawing

A rural Wakefield woman has found out that shopping in Wayne stores sometimes pays off in surprising ways.

She is Mrs. Eldon Heinemann, who won $50 in Birthday Bucks in last week's promotion. She was shopping at Wayne Shoe Co. when the winning date in the weekly drawing was announced, and it turned out that her birthday was closest to the date drawn at random earlier in the day.

Another $300 prize will be up for grabs tonight (Thursday) when the winning date is announced in all participating stores at 8:15. If the prize goes unclaimed, another $50 prize will be awarded.

Scouts Want Old Papers

If you have old newspapers you have been saving for recycling, you may have them picked up Saturday during the monthly collection drive by Boy Scouts from Troop 175 in Wayne.

Scouts will collect papers starting early Saturday morning in Wayne, Winside and Carroll. Residents are asked to have their newspapers tied or bundled and placed near the curb or some other conspicuous place so the Scouts can see them. Collection will begin at 8:30 a.m.

Chairmen for this month's drive are Mr. and Mrs. Victor Knesche of Wayne.

Collection Drive Aims to Reduce Mercury Pollution

Used mercury batteries — the "button size" batteries that power many hearing aids and other small devices — are being collected in Wayne to help reduce mercury pollution.

Harvey Grosse of Wayne, a member of the Telephone Pioneers of America, a service club of long-time telephone employees, has placed boxes for the used batteries at Dale's Jewelry and Mines Jewelry. Grosse urges people in the area who have used batteries around their homes or businesses are urged to toss them in the boxes the next time they are downtown.

Telephone Pioneers will send the batteries to a manufacturing company where the mercury will be removed for re-use.

Grosse emphasizes that people should not put flashlight or transistor radio batteries in the boxes unless the label says they contain mercury. There is no useful way to dispose of non-mercury batteries.

The mercury scare involving seafood a few years ago taught everybody that mercury is a dangerous pollutant, according to Lydia Wrightson of Norfolk, Pioneer Chapter president in this part of the state. "While batteries are not the major source of mercury pollution, they do contribute to the problem," she said. See DRIVE, page 5

Larry Johnson Named Chairman At Grace Lutheran Voters Meet

At the annual voters' meeting Sunday afternoon, members of Grace Lutheran Church elected Larry Johnson to serve a one-year term as chairman of the congregation. He succeeds Charles Maier.

Orville Ertleben stepped up to head elder at the meeting, replacing retiring Roy Lange-meler, and Con Munson of Wakefield was elected new to serve on the committee.

John Vakoc moved up as head trustee, replacing Ed Heithold who retired. Newly elected trustee is Lowell Rethwisch.

Dale Stoltenberg moved up to head financial secretary, the post vacated by retiring Paul Koplin, and newly elected to the financial committee was Harvey Grosse.

Terry Magdanz moved from assistant head usher to head usher, replacing Duane Gremke and Frederick Temme was appointed to serve as new assistant head usher.

Mrs. Herman Geewe moved up as chairman of the welcoming committee, replacing retiring Alan Wittig, and Gene Fredrickson was appointed new on the committee.

William Frederickson moved up to head the memorial committee, replacing Russell Tiedke, who retired, and Ed Frevert was newly appointed to the memorial committee.

Prior to the voters' assembly, members of the parish committee had named Wayne Fischer chairman, to replace retiring Con-Munson.

Howard Schmidt, recording secretary, and Dwayne Rethwisch, treasurer, have two more years to serve on their terms.

The congregation decided to help sponsor the Lutheran Hour which will be broadcast over Radio Station KTCH if enough co-sponsors can be contacted in the circuit.

The purchase of an offset duplicator was approved, and members nominated James Weyland of South Sioux City and Henry Niermann Jr. of Bancroft for circuit counselor. The vote will be taken during the district convention to be held at Seward May 31-June 2.

Plans were made to hold two communion services each month at the local church, rather than one. One communion service will be held during the 10 a.m. worship on the second Sunday of each month, and the second service will be during the 7:30 p.m. worship on the final Sunday of each month.

Also during their meeting, the congregation decided to issue a call to a Minnesota minister, to serve the Grace Lutheran Church as assistant pastor. It was discovered following the meeting, however, that he had already accepted a previous call and was no longer available.

A meeting has been set for Sunday, following morning worship services, to discuss filling the vacancy.

When's the last time you thought about your Rexall pharmacist? The time he reminded you to see your doctor about a prescription soon to expire? Or maybe the time he was there with poison counter-stance information to save your child's life. Yes, your Rexall pharmacist does a lot more than simply filling the prescriptions that help you get well and stay well. Think about him during National Pharmacy Week, January 20-26.

Following their business meetings, World War I Barracks members joined the auxiliary for cards and lunch.

EXTENSION NOTES

By Joycelyn Smith

SAVE YOUR ENERGY
Conservation of energy in the home really shouldn't be anything new, but we all get lax at times. One of the easiest places to carry on your own energy conservation program is in the kitchen.

The range can be one of the first places to save. Use tight fitting lids and pans that fit the surface units so no energy is wasted. Use the minimum amount of water when cooking on the range. If you have an electric skillet, use it instead of the range whenever possible.

Make full use of your oven. Remember you can always freeze part of a double recipe for later use.

If you are using a gas range, check the flame. If it is blue, it means efficient heat consumption, but if it is yellow, it means poor consumption.

Defrost your refrigerator when the ice coating is about 1/4 inch thick and check door seals. Make sure they are so tight you cannot pull a strip of paper through. Clean condenser with vacuum at least twice per year. Unplug refrigerator first.

Store foods in your refrigerator so there is free air circulation. Put foods in small containers and keep racks open.

Do you have an automatic dishwasher? Use the detergent recommended for it, because excess suds from other detergents could interfere with washing action. Run the dishwasher only when it's full. Use a cycle recommended for the type of load being washed. Some dishwashers have a rinse and hold cycle. If you use this, the dishes can air dry. When you wash dishes by hand, use the rack to rinse them all at once. Then you can use either the rinse sprayer or dip the rack of dishes into the container of water.

Be a bit selfish when it comes to saving energy. Don't use any more than you have to, because you benefit most from the savings. Even though your saving may seem small, they can add up to a tremendous saving when a lot of people become involved.

Couples Dine Mexican Style

A group of 21 couples and children, attended the Couples' Club Mexican potluck dinner Sunday evening at Grace Lutheran Church. The menu included Mexican style dishes and more usual fare as well. Mr. and Mrs. Larry Echtenkamp were program chairmen for the evening.

The club, which meets for dinner and a social evening, is open to couples in all age groups.

The next meeting, a sweet heart dinner, will be Sunday, Feb. 10. For this meal husbands will be in charge.

Stelling: WSC's Library Is More Than A Library

To Charles Stelling, Wayne State's U. S. Conn Library is not just a library. It's an instructional resource center.

CHARLES STELLING

That may sound like a long title for what most people consider as a place to sit down to read a book or glance through a magazine. But the college library is more than that.

It's a place, Stelling told Wayne Kiwanians Monday, where students and Wayne area residents can find almost any needed resource material, including back issues of newspapers and magazines.

Stelling, head librarian at the college for the past three years, noted the college has an audio visual center as well as other material to be used. There are about 145,000 pieces of material, including periodicals, U. S. Government documents, microfilm and other resources, he said.

Last year was the first year the college opened the library to non-students, Stelling pointed out, as a part of the college's attempt to become more involved with the town and the surrounding area. "We want to provide people with information that is as up to date as possible," he explained.

Cost for a non-student to use the library facility is $4.50, the cost of making a permit to take books and other materials out of the building. As yet there are no figures showing how the program is working, but early signs point that more and more people are taking advantage of it, he said.

SCALLOP IN ASPIC

- 1/2 pound cooked scallops
- 2 tablespoons unflavored gelatine
- 1/2 cup cold water
- 1 1/2 cups tomato juice
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon onion salt
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 38 1-inch paper baking cups
- 38 round crackers

Cut scallops into 16 pieces. Soften gelatine in cold water for 5 minutes. Boil tomato juice; add gelatine; stir until dissolved. Add seasonings and lemon juice. Place a scallop piece in each baking cup; fill cups 1/2 full with gelatine mixture. Chill until set. Unmold on crackers. Makes 38 appetizers.

Plan Early for Wedding Pictures

Nearly 2,300,000 brides are expected to walk down the aisle this year and many will have spent months preparing to make their wedding day a very special one. The ceremony and reception are over all too soon, but a wise bride can remember the precious moments forever with candid photos taken by Lyman Photography during that day to remember.

It is with good reason that we are specialists in weddings. Our experience and expertise are invaluable to the bride who wishes to enjoy the day as it happens. Knowing she and her new husband will have beautiful photos to share with others and cherish in years to come.

If you plan to be a bride this year, plan early for a total photo coverage of your wedding. About the time you order your gown—a few months before the day of the ceremony—you should book your wedding date with Lyman Photography. When you make the arrangements, consult with us about the type of photographic coverage you will want.

There are the traditional formal portraits most 'bridal couples want—a portrait of the bride alone, with her new husband, and with the entire wedding party. In addition, we can take candid photos of the day from ceremony to reception's end. These so-called candid photos are really professional photos of the wedding events as they happen. The one exception may be the photos of the wedding service. Because many clergy do not wish the ceremony interrupted, we will often plan to recreate this event with the bridal party later.

Wedding photos have many uses. For years the formal portrait of the bride has been used for the newspaper announcement of the wedding. However, more and more newspapers are now using a professional wedding candid photo of the newlyweds. We will know the requirements of the local newspapers. Check with us.

Both sets of parents, and other close relatives, would cherish a large framed photo of the bridal couple—or a duplicate wedding album. Either would be a nice way of saying "thank you" to your parents.

A wedding is a day to remember and Lyman Photography is in the memory business. Rely on us to record the memories you will want to keep and share with others.

Candid photographs taken by Lyman Photography can include traditional views as well as those of unexpected moments that occur during the wedding event. These candid photos make ideal gifts to family and can be used in special thank you cards.

Garden Fertilizer

Barnyard manure gives excellent results on most garden soils when properly used. It's an excellent source of organic matter and plant nutrients.

An annual application of barnyard manure (400 to 600 pounds per 1,000 square feet) is recommended. Use half the amount of chicken or sheep manure. The best time to apply manure is in the fall or winter.

Use of manure will increase the supply of nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium available to plants, and it also supplies other essential elements. It increases water holding capacity and improves the physical condition of the soil.

Livestock Water

A question often asked is if it will pay to heat livestock drinking water above the point necessary to keep it free from ice.

Livestock needs water any time they feel the urge to drink it, and therefore iced-over water will decrease livestock profits. Livestock producers should plan to provide a continual supply of open water to his livestock.

Recent tests show that dairy cows with ice-free water gave 3 1/2 per cent more milk than those with intermittent water. Pigs with ice-free water gained 11 pounds more than litter mates, and feeder cattle with water warmed to keep it from freezing gained more than steers on water not heated.

Water management should be designed to keep the water open at all times and to give livestock quick and easy access to the water. Here are some ways to cut costs of providing winter water:

1. Continuous flow waters to keep tanks open at minimum cost where ample water is available.
 2. Small capacity waters to use less supplemental heat.
 3. Heat to keep water open and available rather than completely ice free (on most winter days livestock produce more body heat than needed so they can warm the water at no cost).
- Inadequate water can result in feed consumption drops, gain drops, body dehydration and, in the case of steers, urinary calculi leading to water belly.

Change on

Tax Forms

Awaits Farmers

Farmers will find a change in their state income tax preparation this year when they start to figure their gas refunds, according to the Nebraska Department of Revenue.

Ken Young, tax technician with the department, explained that farmers will no longer send in a separate special refund voucher for a refund warrant. They will now be able to put it on their income tax form, with the aid of Nebraska Schedule No. 4 entitled "non-highway Use Motor Fuel Credit." Young added that this form is included in the income tax booklet.

This change, which is effective as of Jan. 1, 1973, is a refund of the state gas tax to be deducted from the Nebraska liability. The credit of 7.2 cents per gallon (out of a total of 8.5 cents per gallon)—is only on gas—opposed to the federal program on lubricants and other fuels. For farmers the change will involve keeping gas invoices and other records with their records for tax purposes rather than sending these forms in separately.

For further information, contact the Nebraska Department of Revenue in Lincoln (402-471-2581), or visit the Taxpayer Assistance Room 1202, State Capitol Building, A Department of Revenue representative is also stationed at the IRS office in the Federal Building in Lincoln, and many representatives are in IRS offices throughout the state.

Testing Seed

Now is a good time to have seed oats and other seed tested for germination and purity. Tests can be sent through the extension office for a fee.

Oat Varieties

Here are four oat varieties that have done well in this area.

—Burnett: For a number of years this variety has been at the top in yield tests for this area. Burnett is a medium maturing variety with strong straw strength, average bush weight and medium in height. A good all-around oat variety.

—Kota: Kota yields are comparable, but it is a taller oat than Burnett and straw strength is not as great. A good choice where a taller variety is desired.

—Jaycee: Jaycee is a good early maturing variety that has very strong, short straw. Bushel weight of this oat is heavy, a good choice where lodging is a problem.

—Santee: Santee is another good early maturing variety with strong straw strength, but is medium height.

I believe there would be a good opportunity for some Wayne County farmers to raise certified seed oats for sale. We have an inadequate supply of locally grown certified seed oats.

'Swine Manure Is Good Fertilizer'

With rising costs of fertilizer, swine producers with large units should consider the benefits of plant nutrients found in swine manure. And the spreading of swine manure on fields will at the same time take care of the problems of waste disposal and odor which could provoke "nuisance" lawsuits from objecting neighbors.

This was the thesis developed by E. A. Olson, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, in a presentation at a series of swine housing conferences around the state early in January.

Basing his analysis on the amount of waste produced by one hog during the time it is brought from 40 lbs. to 210 lbs. in a confinement finishing unit, Olson said the value of natural fertilizer from one hog is $1.88, calculated at 15 cents a pound for seven pounds of nitrogen produced during a 120-day period, 24 cents a pound for two pounds of phosphorus and seven cents for five-plus pounds of potassium.

Looking at it another way, Olson said one ton of fresh hog manure yields 10 lbs. of nitrogen, three pounds of phosphorus and eight pounds of potassium during the finishing period to market weight.

He noted that "manure is a by-product of producing ham, bacon and pork chops, although most folks don't think of it that way."

Talking in terms of 500 head of hogs for example purposes, Olson illustrated the large amount of storage space required to accommodate wastes from a sizeable unit.

One hog, during the time it grows from 40 to 210 pounds, will produce 23 cubic feet of waste. This translates into space in a pit or roughly a three foot cube, he continued. But with allowances for water spillage and "freeboard" in the top of the pit, this becomes 28.29 cubic feet of space per hog. For 500 head of hogs, a 14,400 cubic foot tank-or-pit would be required (10 x 20 x 76 feet). This is equivalent to 107,000 gallons of semi-liquid waste material produced by the 500 hogs during the finishing period.

How can producers dispose of this volume of waste material?

The "honey wagon" is one possibility, Olson said, and a plastic pipeline and small pump is another. The combination of a flushing system from a manure pit to an outside holding pond or storage tank and a gated pipe irrigation system, if feasible, is a good way to handle the whole swine waste disposal problem, he suggested.

He urged producers planning on new swine facilities to consider location carefully to avoid trouble with the odor problem. In addition to locating large facilities away from habitations, streams and municipalities, he advised building them north and east of areas of concern because of prevailing southerly winds in the summer. There is little or no odor problem in winter, he pointed out.

Another consideration is allow enough adjacent space to get rid of or spread manure without getting "boxed in."

He urged swinemens to get involved in the formulation of county zoning regulations, to avoid being crippled or inhibited by restrictions. If town dwellers make all the zoning decision, agriculture will lose out by default, he said.

A Job Almost Completed

RECENT WARM WEATHER enabled workmen at the site of the new motel being built east of Wayne to nearly complete putting on the deck of the motel. The facility, going up on the north side of Highway 35 on the edge of the city limits, will contain 32 units. A Small Business Administration loan has been approved for the construction project.

No Injuries in Accidents in, Near Carroll

No injuries were reported in two accidents, one in Carroll and one west of Carroll, over the weekend.

Shortly after 5 p.m. Friday a car driven by Delmar Eddie, 34, and a pickup driven by Dean Owens, 46, collided at an intersection of a Carroll street and Highway 57, reports state patrolman Dave Headley.

Eddie was stopping at a highway stop sign as he was driving west and Owens was traveling south on the highway when the accident occurred. Headley said. Both vehicles driven by the Carroll residents suffered moderate damage.

Sunday about 5 p.m. cars driven by Donald Nelson, 17, of Carroll and David Junk, 18, of Randolph grazed each other on a county road about four and a half miles west of Carroll. The front end of the Junk vehicle struck the rear of the Nelson automobile as they attempted to pass each other, Headley reported. The vehicles received minor damage.

Let's take a look at what others are saying about abandoning railroads, small generating plants, social security

Our liberty depends on the freedom of the press, and that cannot be limited without being lost. — Thomas Jefferson, Letter, 1786.

Dear ICC: Has the railroad tried to serve the people?

Gentlemen: Although I do not live in the territory affected by the proposed abandonment, my interest in this case stems from ties with Northeast Nebraska and what I feel has been substandard performance by the railroad.

The proposal to abandon raises several questions for which I feel the residents of the affected territory are due answers and explanations.

In the years 1971, 1972 and 1973 what efforts has the railroad made to stimulate business?

What advertising in public media has the railroad done locally?

Has the railroad personally solicited business from potential shippers?

What marketing practices has the railroad employed to encourage freight business on the line?

2. Why is the line in such deteriorated condition?

How much money has been spent on materials to keep the line in satisfactory repair the last three years?

How many man hours have been devoted to line maintenance in the last three years?

How often is the track and right-of-way inspected and has this frequency been constant over the last three years?

What is the recommended safe maximum speed on the line?

3. Has the service by the railroad been good or even adequate during the last three years?

Does the business community in Wayne know if must call an agent 10 miles away in Wakefield to place an order?

At what intervals has the railroad operated a train on the line the past three years?

What is the relationship in the last three years of requests for cars to cars made available by the railroad for shipping?

Once a car destined for a station on the line arrives in Sioux City (or South Sioux City) how long does it take before the car is delivered at its final destination?

Of the business accounts that the railroad serviced on the line several years ago, say 15 years ago, how many still utilize the line? Why the difference? Assuming that there has been a drop in business, why have some businessmen quit using the railroad other than because the business may no longer exist?

What role has the railroad assumed in each of the communities on the line since the line was built?

Although the line has existed for several years, what community relations and public relations activities has the railroad employed to develop the trust and good will of the communities it serves?

What policies govern and what practices does the railroad employ in its personal contact with the public and potential business accounts?

In short, has the railroad actively and responsibly operated this line in the public interest and trust?

I think not. The history of the Chicago and North Western Railroad in Nebraska has been one of exploitation, not of service. Businessmen that I know realize that a person must search out and cultivate potential business, maintain buildings and equipment, and be a part of the community. I question whether or not the Chicago and North Western Railroad has done this along the line it proposes to abandon.

Forty miles of track may not be important to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the relationship of the Chicago and North Western with the public in Northeast Nebraska may have deteriorated to the point where abandonment is justified. However, the ramifications of allowing a railroad to possibly deliberately discourage business to eventually justify abandoning some of its line are serious.

Rather than allow the railroad its abandonment application, I would suggest that the ICC order the railroad to repair the line, actively solicit business in each of the communities on the line, and then closely monitor the operation of the line over a five-year period, measuring the railroad's performance in light of the public interest.

These are valid criteria for which I am sure the railroad is negligent and for which the railroad should be held accountable. Is it not the public interest that should be the determining factor in this case?

Letter sent to the Interstate Commerce Commission by a former Northeast Nebraskan

Is this the last chapter for small generating plants?

We may be writing the last chapter in municipal electric generation in Nebraska, and if so the fuel situation is the straw which is breaking the camel's back.

A council which had reservations before this year about starting plans to add another unit on the line in the future will certainly have a negative reaction now when it seems doubtful that fuel will be available.

One may label this development as inevitable — whether or not a fuel crisis is at hand. Maybe it is just a matter of time until the generation of electricity is centered in large generation units rather than small, so-called inefficient units. We may be writing the last chapter in municipal generation.

Large generation and distribution facilities are absolutely necessary in today's society. Our electrical demand has grown so much, the distribution system necessary to facilitate that demand is so sophisticated, that one or more large organizations such as our large public power districts are needed. Only organizations of that size have the staff and expertise needed to plan and put into effect plans that are adequate to meet the needs of tomorrow.

We would be in even bigger troubles today if the two nuclear plants were not in operation or nearly ready to be put in full operation. With all of the troubles which have been encountered since the first ground was broken for those two plants, it is suddenly all worth it when we think of trying to meet the electrical energy needs without them.

But those plants, the other fossil plants as well as the bureau power are just parts of the generation facilities. For years municipal plants have been pounding away producing the needs for the community, supplying other communities and sometimes supplying energy for the grid. Where do they stand now?

As it is, over half of the municipalities have signed long-term contracts with a large power district to operate their distribution systems and to be responsible for obtaining power. Another quarter of our municipalities are served by either power districts or other municipalities. Less than the final quarter of our municipalities have generation and/or distribution systems which generate in varying degrees the needs of the individual communities.

It all comes down to the fact that there are not a great number of independent municipal systems left and it is a question how long they will be operating. Or should they be operating?

I think that some should remain for several reasons.

Our great industrial nation has developed because of and not in spite of intense competition. That is a healthy situation. In spite of the fact that Nebraska is a public power state, it seems to me that an element of competition is healthy. The electric utility is a monopoly industry. If you don't like the service you are receiving, you can't call up another electric supplier and buy from that company. If you are a citizen of the municipality you can register your complaint with the local governing body, however.

We can point to the history of service in the past 30 or 40 years and say that service has never been out for more than a few hours. If we were to get involved in actual conflict, we would be more vulnerable if all of our generation were confined in less than a half dozen locations than if spread out all across the state. Also, we have been very fortunate in that we have had no extreme weather catastrophes to destroy our facilities.

There is no doubt that the large generation facility can generate electricity for less money per kilowatt than the small plant. But there is no magic in the large plant either. When fuel costs go up the generation costs go up. When the energy is generated at the large plant, it must be wheeled to the user. This costs money and I submit that any savings gained by the efficiency of the large plant is often offset by the cost of transmission.

It not only takes a large investment in transmission lines, but it takes a maintenance crew to keep them in operation and it takes a sophisticated control setup as well as operators to make it all work.

As I said before, this type of facility is necessary, but the municipal operation has been and can remain a necessary part of the whole picture as well.

The cost of electricity is going to be higher wherever it is purchased. We still have some good sized plants which are doing a good job and can continue to do so at competitive price.

We need to unite those plants in a grid. So far this has been impossible to do because of wheeling difficulties. Perhaps the urgency of the energy situation will change this, perhaps not. At any rate, those responsible for municipal generation facilities should not panic and make hasty decisions. Rather, take a second look at the value of the local plant.

By David L. Chambers, editor of the monthly Nebraska Municipal Review

Where are those Social Security hikes going to end?

One year ago I wrote a column warning that Social Security taxes were going up, effective with your first paycheck of the new year.

It looks like that is going to become an annual tradition.

Last year both the tax rate and the wage base (amount of money on which the tax is paid) went up.

This year, it's just the wage base that's being raised — from $10,800 perhaps to as much as $13,200. In other words, if you make more than $10,800, you will be paying more Social Security tax in 1974.

The maximum amount of the tax goes up from $631.80 to $772.20 for an employee. His employer has to match that.

The new tax increases are needed to finance a two-stage increase in Social Security benefits voted by Congress. Benefits will go up a total of 11 per cent.

Some 30 million Social Security recipients will get the increase. The bill for it will have to be paid by the 20 million people who earn more than $10,800.

Contrary to what is commonly believed, increases in Social Security benefits are way ahead of inflation. For example, between January, 1970, and July 1, 1974, the Consumer Price Index will have increased by a little over 24 per cent. In the same period, Social Security benefits will have gone up 88.5 per cent.

A column like this will get me letters — some of them heartrending — from Social Security recipients who have led exemplary lives and believe they "deserve" the increase. It's hard to quarrel with that. The problem is, the government cannot "give" anyone anything it has not first taken away from someone else.

So, while there are undoubtedly people who "deserve" the benefit increase, there are also people who do not "deserve" the tax increase necessary to pay for it.

As some philosopher said, most debates about values are not debates between right and wrong but between rights and rights — and this makes their resolution endlessly complicated.

One might also question the morality of Congress raising the Social Security tax for the rest of us, while exempting itself, its employees and the employees of the federal government.

The pat answer is that government employees have their own pension plan, to which they contribute a part of their pay. Well, so what? Many employees in the private sector also pay into private pension plans, and they have to pay Social Security taxes, too. Federal employees are now the largest single group exempted from Social Security taxes.

Beyond the moral questions, moreover, there's a practical reason for worrying about the Social Security increases.

Social Security recipients are now getting back far more than they paid in Social Security taxes during their working lives, even counting interest. The most a worker could have paid in taxes since the program's inception is $5,271. At maximum 1974 benefit levels, in a little over 18 months this worker would get back everything he put in.

Now, here's the real problem. Today's higher benefits are being paid out of higher taxes on today's workers. That system works fairly well as long as there are more people working, and therefore paying Social Security taxes, than there are benefit recipients. But what would happen if there were more recipients than working taxpayers, as has happened in the Railroad Retirement Program?

As you probably know, our birthrate has been dropping sharply. We now appear to be headed for a condition of zero population growth (ZPG) sometime in the future.

ZPG is desirable — necessary — for many reasons. But it has the potential for raising havoc with Social Security, because there will be fewer young workers to support a larger aged population.

What happens then? Will the smaller (relatively speaking) working population be able to carry the burden? Will the recipients stand for a "cut-back" in payments? Will the system collapse?

These are very serious questions. Someday, we will be forced to answer them. Until then, it looks like Congress will go on raising both the benefit levels and the tax, as though there's no tomorrow.

OBSERVATIONS

A few footnotes

Some words of explanation are probably in order concerning the three articles carried on the upper part of this page.

The letter to the Interstate Commerce Commission by a former resident of this part of the state refers, of course, to the proposed abandonment of the railroad between Wayne and Dakota City, the last rail link left to the Wayne area. The writer has gone to considerable thought, asking questions which cut right to the meat of the issue. If the ICC wishes to pass those questions on to railroad officials, the officials may find it difficult to come up with answers which put them in a good light. Although the writer signed his letter when he sent it to the ICC, he asked not to be identified if we used any of the material in the newspaper. The letter was so well written and asked so many pertinent questions we thought it could only be done justice by printing it in full. The lack of a name on the end of it doesn't detract from it in any way as far as we are concerned.

The second article, about the future of small electrical generation plants such as the one at Wayne, is another editorial from the Nebraska Municipal Review which we feel is of interest to many more Nebraskans than just those who read that monthly publication of the Nebraska League of Municipalities. Written by a former teacher at Wayne High School and a graduate of Wayne State, it asks questions which have to be answered when we weigh the advantages and disadvantages of operating our own light plant.

The final article is another contribution by the head of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Like the other two, it asks questions about a subject which all of us should be concerned about. What will happen if Congress continues raising both the Social Security benefit levels and the tax?

These three articles take up considerable space on this page, but we hope those who read them will try to find answers to some of the questions raised. All three subjects concern everybody in the area, either directly or indirectly.

Thoughts for the day

1 PETER 4:1-19

Ten little Christians standing in line; One didn't like the preaching, And then there were nine.

Nine little Christians stayed up very late; One slept Sunday morning; and then there were eight.

Eight little Christians on the road to heaven; One took the lower road; And then there were seven.

Seven little Christians got in an awful fix; One didn't like the music; And then there were six.

Six little Christians seemed very alive; One lost interest; And then there were five.

Five little Christians wishing there were more; But they quarreled with each other; And then there were four.

Four little Christians, as cheerful as could be; One lost his temper; And then there were three.

Three little Christians didn't know what to do; One went to make "whoopee"; And then there were two.

Two little Christians, our rhyme is almost done; Differed with each other; And then there was one.

One lone Christian won his neighbor Sue; Brought her to church; And then there were two.

Two earnest Christians, each won one more; That doubled their number; So then there were four.

Four sincere Christians worked very late; But each won another; So then there were eight.

Eight splendid Christians; But nothing rhymes with sixteen so we simply note that in six more singles there would be 32 Christians, or more than our church will hold. Are you a Christian builder? What is your goal?

New Post Should Give Agriculture Better Representation at NU

LINCOLN — The University of Nebraska has selected the man who is to be the first vice chancellor for agriculture and natural resources at the Lincoln campus.

The NU Board of Regents will be asked in February to approve the appointment of Dr. Duane Acker of Brookings, S. D., for the post created by the 1973 Legislature in answer to criticism by farm organizations that agriculture wasn't getting enough attention at the university.

The 42-year-old Acker currently is dean of the college of agriculture and biological sciences, director of the agricultural experiment station and director of cooperative extension service at South Dakota State University at Brookings.

At Lincoln, where he is to report April 1 with the expected routine confirmation from the regents, Acker will report directly to Chancellor James H. Zumberge.

His responsibilities at UNL will include the college of agriculture, the School of Technical Agriculture at Curtis, the cooperative extension service, the agriculture experiment stations, the Water Resources Institute and the Conservation and Survey Division.

All those will be operated under the new Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Originally, the agricultural organizations had sought to have the college of agriculture separated from UNL and placed under a chancellor of its own. The compromise was worked out by Zumberge, NU President Durward B. Varner and legislators to have a vice chancellor reporting directly to Zumberge.

Busing Resolution Debated

The Nebraska Legislature has indicated it wants the Congress to start the ball rolling on an amendment to the U. S. Constitution outlawing the use of busing as a school integration tool.

A resolution to that effect was launched across the legislative board on a 27-15 vote last week.

The next day, the lawmakers passed a bill which would require Omahans to elect school board members from districts. They now choose the board members at large.

Senator Ernest Chambers of Omaha, the only Negro in the Legislature, said his bill for district representation on the school board wasn't designed primarily as racial legislation. He said it would allow his neighbors to choose their own school board member and give the same privilege to other areas of the city which aren't assured of representation now.

The Chambers bill drew the minimum 25 votes on passage and went to Governor J. James Exon's office where its fate was uncertain late last week. Exon has vetoed similar legislation before, but always citing a technicality. He has said he agrees in principle with the district election concept.

Outstate senators who said they also believe in district elections and therefore gave Chambers a vote on the Omaha bill may have a chance to put their votes where their mouths are.

Four Omaha senators are sponsoring bills which would require district elections for all school districts in the state — except the Class I districts which operate elementary-only schools.

"If it's good enough for Omaha, it's good enough for everybody," Omaha senator John Savage said.

Omaha Building Proposed

Omaha was in the news on another front last week.

Cigarette smokers, whose taxes already are paying for a new University of Nebraska fieldhouse and a state office building in Lincoln, may be puffing on behalf of an Omaha state office building.

Senator John Cavanaugh III of Omaha has introduced legislation to authorize an $8 million expenditure of cigarette tax revenue for a site and construction of a downtown Omaha headquarters for state agencies doing business in the city.

Smoke Bill Held

Speaking of smoke, the Public Health and Welfare Committee listened to testimony, but took no immediate action, last week on a bill to ban smoking in certain public places.

Sponsor Shirley Marsh of Lincoln says she's aiming at snuffing out cigarettes, cigars and pipes in elevators, indoor theaters, libraries, art museums, concert halls and buses.

Wiltse Mortuaries Wayne, Laurel and Winside

Thought for Today By Rowan Wiltse

"Experience is the best of schoolmasters, but the school fees are heavy." Carlyle

It has long been claimed that experience is the best teacher. There is no denying that knowledge gained from real personal effort can be of great value to us, but it is worthless if it doesn't create lasting impressions to guide us in similar circumstances in the future.

All events are not pleasant in retrospect, but even unhappy and unrewarding experiences can serve to point the way to better and more effective handling of related efforts in the future.

You can make pre-arrangement plans now to anticipate future contingencies. Stop in and let us explain the various ways in which you can specify your wishes and provide for financial requirements, too, if you desire to do so.
