Concord VFD To Honor Rieth

The Concord volunteer fire department will hold a recognition dinner for retiring fire chief Keith Rieth March 29 at the Northeast Station.

Rieth will be honored for his 43 years of service on the department, including 16 years as fire chief.

Hoskins Residents, Board Agree on Street Project

It appears the Hoskins village board and residents have agreed on the proposed new street and sewer project.

During a special meeting Tuesday night, town officials, residents and Duane Upton, representative of Consolidated Engineers and Architects of Wayne, whittled the previous figure of $108,000 to the original estimate of $120,000 by detailing parts of the project. To be left out are some paving at the intersections, some storm sewer piping and decorative planters.

The board will now open bids again at the regular monthly meeting March 25.

Upton explained to the gathering the town's present mill levy of .67—second lowest in the county—would increase .9 mills to .645 if bids are in line with his cost figures. Ranking above Hoskins' mill levies are Wayne, 100.41; Carroll, 95.48; Wakefield, 83.80; and Winside, 82.78. Sholes is the lowest at 55.60.

In a breakdown of the costs, the bill for paving, sewer and piping comes to $118,000, with street lighting cost about $2,000, Upton explained.

Not included in the $118,000 are $10,560 for engineering, including $10,560 for engineering.

Also during the March 25 meeting, members will open bids for the new sewer treatment plant to be built on the west edge of town.

Wortman's Hosting Coffee

Wortman Auto Co. will host the first of another series of coffees being hosted by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce.

The coffee, open to other businessmen as well as the public, will be held this morning (Monday) from 9:30 to 11 o'clock.

A different business will host the coffee each month, giving the owners and employees a chance to visit places they might not otherwise visit very often, according to Chamber manager Howard Witt.

Businessmen are invited to stop in at Wortman's anytime during the coffee to talk with owner Roy Hurd and get better acquainted with his firm, Witt said.

'Speak Out' Asks: Should We Revamp Downtown?

How Do You Feel About Changing The Looks of the Shopping Area?

Several local businessmen and the city council are giving quite a bit of thought to a major facelift of the downtown business district in Wayne.

What do you think of that idea? That's our question to our readers in our latest Speak Out, a periodic sampling of public opinion by the newspaper on subjects of interest to a majority of our readers.

Do you think some major change is needed in the downtown area of Wayne in order to make this community a more attractive and appealing place to live? If you think that's necessary, just fill out this form and mail it back to us or drop it off at the newspaper office the next time you are downtown. If you think no change is necessary, please tell us that.

Many communities in the Midwest have tackled downtown improvement projects.

Some of them have been minor projects which included little more than standardizing advertising signs. Others have been more extensive, such as those in which business fronts were completely remodeled, streets were widened, lighting was changed and the like.

If you have an idea about what you think should be done to improve the looks of the downtown area of Wayne, just jot down your thoughts and include them with your opinion. If necessary, use an extra sheet of paper to tell us about your ideas.

An architectural firm has been hired and is currently studying different ways to change the face of the business district. Maybe your idea will be the spark for the plan which could turn this town into one of the most attractive ones in the state.

Surveys should be returned by March 28.

YES, I think changes need to be made in the downtown business district to make it a more attractive, appealing part of our community.

NO, I don't think any changes are needed in our downtown business area. The shopping district looks fine like it is.

Wakefield Approves NPPD Tie

Wakefield's village board has approved a 25 year interconnection agreement with Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD).

The agreement provides that NPPD will make available to Wakefield power needed as the community's electrical consumption increases as well as economy and emergency power.

NPPD will construct a new substation near Wakefield in order to provide the power. Approximately 3.5 miles of transmission line construction will also be needed.

Wakefield's electrical energy requirements are presently supplied by the city's natural gas and diesel fueled generating units.

Wayne's city council recently approved a similar 10 year contract with NPPD.

2 Commissioner Hopefuls To Face Burt in Election

Wayne County commissioner Ely Burt of rural Winside will face two other Republicans in the May 14th primary election.

Filing for his job late last week before Friday afternoon's deadline were Lawrence Backstrom, farmer two miles west and three miles south of Wayne, and Ed Watkins, a pastor at Wayne State College who lives two miles north and one half east of Winside.

Their filings created competition for both the commissioner seats which will have to be filled in the November 11th general election.

Opposing incumbent Joe Wilson of rural Wakefield in the primary will be Merlin Beiermann, a farmer southeast of Wayne. Both are Republicans.

Friday's filing deadline also brought forth one more candidate for the city council in Wayne and two more candidates for the Wayne Carroll school board.

Local businessman Robert Merchant will seek the third ward council post currently held by Keith Mosley. He joins candidates Lee Hansen and Mrs. Carol Mosley, wife of the incumbent. Mosley announced earlier he would not seek a second term in office.

Joining seven other candidates for the school board are incumbent Wibur Giese of rural Wayne and Mrs. JoAnn Stollenberg of rural Carroll.

Already filing for the three seats on the board which will have to be filled in November balloting were Dallas Havener, Dr. Rafael Sosa, Dale Stollenberg, Vicky Skokan, Steve Hall and incumbent Morris Sandahl and Margaret Lundstrom. All are from Wayne except Carroll resident Sandahl.

Since the number of candidates is more than double the number of open positions on the board, school district voters will ballot in the May 14th primary to whittle the number to six. The top six vote-getters will face each other in the November 11th general election.

The final few days last week brought no more filings for the other three positions which will have to be filled on the local district in May voting. The deadline passed without fourth ward incumbent Harvey Brasch filing for another term.

The deadline also passed without additional candidates for the mayor's job. Four persons are seeking the post currently held by Keni Hall, who served weeks ago announced he would not be a candidate for a second term.

Burt's brief biographical sketch of each of the five persons to file before Friday's deadline:

Backstrom, 56, is a native of the Wayne area and has farmed southwest of Wayne for the past 36 years. President of his rural school board, he works at the sale barn in Wayne on sale days. He has been a member of his rural school board for several years. He and his wife Blanche have three children: Verdel, in a sporting goods business at Minneapolis; Duane, teacher at Decatur; and Perry, who helps with farming at home.

Boostin' 'Build or Buy'

THE DRIVE for funds to either build or buy a place for the Senior Citizens Center in Wayne got a $288 boost from the State National Bank last week. That $288 is one dollar more than the combined ages of, seated from left, Mrs. Florence Bastian, 96, Mrs. Leonora Vail, 96, and Mrs. Maude Auker, 95. Mrs. Vail is so close to being 97 (her birthday is in May) that bank officials agreed to match her age as well as the ages of the other two in their donation. The three women are the oldest members of the local center, which kicked off its build or buy fund drive a few weeks ago. Center director Mrs. Joceli Bull, who accepts the bank's check from officer Bob Jordan, said the fund is now over $400.

Allén Area To Get New Supervisor

A new supervisor will be elected for district five in Dixon County this month.

Incumbent E. G. Lundahl of Allen did not file for another term by Friday's deadline, leaving the race open to three other residents of the Allen area.

Seeking that job are Democrat Dale Furness, and Republicans Mer VonMinden and Leslie Johnson.

The other three supervisors who will finish their terms at the end of this year have filed for another term in office, and all three will be opposed come election time.

Jerry Knerr, Ponca Democrat representing the first district, will face Thomas Carey, Ponca Republican, in the November general election.

Newcastle Republican Donald Thomas will face Newcastle Republican Gies Wilbur in the May primary race for the third district seat. Also seeking that job are Newcastle Democrats Raymond Nelson and Raymond Wiedenfeld.

Facing Republican Donald Mackling of Emerson for the seventh district seat in the general election will be Democrat George Emmons, also of Emerson.

The only other opponents for major county offices in Dixon County are incumbent clerk Esther Brennan of Ponca, a Democrat, and Janice Mansker, Republican from Newcastle.

All other incumbents in the county offices have filed but none were opposed in the primary election.

Seeking their offices back are sheriff Dean Chase, Allen Republican; clerk of district court Irma Fouks, Ponca Republican; assessor Virgil Putman, Ponca Republican; treasurer Jack Conrad, Newcastle Republican; and attorney Merle Kingsbury, Ponca Republican.

There were no filings for superintendent of schools, a post now held by Cedar County superintendent Otis Decker, or for surveyor, a job now held by Burton Brush of Hartington.

Both persons ending their terms on the county's noxious weed board, Vern Jones of Allen and David Watchorn of Ponca, have filed for those jobs.

Futures Meeting Set

The third of three futures meetings scheduled by the Wayne County extension service will be held Thursday at 1:30 p.m. at the National Guard Armory in Wayne.

'Halting RR Abandonment An Uphill Battle'

By NORVIN HANSEN
Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be lost if the railroad between Wayne and Dakota City is abandoned.

Several businesses will suffer financial hardships, and a few might even be forced to close their doors if the tracks are torn up.

The eventual loser will be the general public, probably most often the farmer who will have to pay higher prices for supplies such as fertilizer or who will receive lower prices for grain because the only way to ship their produce will be by truck.

But in spite of that, a betting man would be foolish to bet that the Interstate Commerce Commission will order Chi cago and North Western Transportation Co. to keep its branch line between the two communities in operation.

That is, unless he could get darn good odds.

Right now, the state group which sees as a watchdog for the public as far as railroad companies are concerned, is "battling zero" in attempts to keep railroads from tearing up their small branch lines.

That's what the chief counsel for the Nebraska Public Service Commission told a group of about 45 persons in Wayne Thursday night, but there is still a possibility area residents may be able to block abandonment of this stretch of C&N.W. line if shippers can show exactly how much money they will lose if the tracks are torn up.

Although the commission's "battling average is zero" in abandonment cases, said John Finnegan, that doesn't mean railroad customers in this part of the state should not fight plans to tear up the line.

Businessmen, farmers and others from Wayne, Wakefield, Emerson, Wakefield, Dakota City and South Sioux City turned out for the Thursday night meeting in Wayne, called by the state commission in efforts to gather information it will use when the ICC holds its hearing on the abandonment proposal.

The state commission already has protested the proposal, Finnegan said, and will represent the public, when the hearing is held in this area. Date for the hearing has not been set, he noted.

Finnegan admitted that fighting efforts by railroad companies to abandon their short, unprofitable lines is an uphill battle.

The commission opposed — and almost won — plans to close the branch line at Seward, last week. The ICC ruled in favor of the "railroad" company, prompting efforts by businessmen in that area to purchase the line and operate it themselves. Those people are now trying to raise enough money to take over the branch line, he said.

Reason for the difficulty is winning the abandonment case, Finnegan said.

that the ICC members are too familiar with the problems of railroads such as Penn Central in the east part of the nation. That company is bankrupt and has to shut down some of its lines if it hopes to survive, he said, and the ICC can see no other way for the company to become solvent.

C&N.W. officials have said the railroad lost more than $42,000, operating the line between Dakota City and Wayne during 1971 and 1972. Only 642 carsloads were handled on the line in 1971 and just 646 in 1972, the company told the ICC in its request for approval to abandon the line.

Those figures were questioned by several persons attending Thursday night's meeting, but unless they can be proved wrong there is little possibility of being able to keep the branch line in operation, according to Finnegan.

Several persons at the meeting, including local grain elevator operator Fred Gilderleeve, noted that the farmer is going to lose money if the line is torn up. The farmer will lose from "20 to 30 cents" on every bushel of grain he ships out because that is about how much more it will cost to transport it by truck rather than by rail, Gilderleeve said.

He and other railroad customers noted that they are not using the railroad as much as they could — one reason for the few number of cars traveling the branch.

Iris Society To Meet Friday At Norfolk

The Elkhorn Valley Iris Society will meet this Friday evening at the Commercial Savings and Loan meeting room in Norfolk. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m.

This is a change from the originally scheduled meeting time and place. A program will be given on hardy shrubs that compliment irises.

The group will also make preliminary plans for the two-day regional fall meeting to be held in August at Wayne State College. New club members include Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hummel and Jay Hummel and Mrs. Lucille Larson of Wayne.

Focuses on Patriotism

During the second month of a year-long program planned to help them become more aware of their roles in society, students at St. Mary's Catholic School focused on U.S. government and education.

The school was decorated in red, white and blue, and scenes were set up depicting the making of the first flag, typical George Washington slances, and revolution scenes.

The Declaration of Independence was displayed and patriotic posters were made by the students. Pupils followed through with discussions on the birth of the country and the role of education in making a better America.

The study also included a look at America's physical beauty, her political traditions, natural wealth, individual initiative, committed public servants, diversity of opinion and civil liberties.

During February, a parents' night was held with Sister M. Jamesine, principal, speaking on the mission of education: to reach the students, then the home, and finally the community and nation.

Miss Ellbracht, a teacher at St. Mary's spoke to the group on "How Children Learn," demonstrating how definite disabilities are overcome. She explained the use of the sand tray, air writing, and various games which are used in the teaching process.

TV Note-book

By Larry Turner
In the early days of television, American productions were the class of the industry and our shows were seen all over the free world, and especially in England where no language barrier exists. American TV shows occupied more than ten per cent of all time on the tube in England.

Nowadays, the British are capable of producing shows which are the equal of ours in every technical way and much better suited to British tastes than ours.

Only about half as many of our shows air in Britain as in the 1950's and half of these are westerns, of which I suspect the English never tire.

You'll never tire of watching your new color TV set if you buy it from us. We carry the best brands, offer the best prices and service. What we sell with our own service department.

Keepers of the TV Guide

Well, we got through another one. It was tough and go for awhile, and a couple of times I wondered if my lucidity would survive. But the flu season has come and gone and our family still numbers four relatively sane human beings and one slightly battered mother.

Four weeks after the epidemic hit the area, our three daughters were still healthy and I began to pat myself on the back and tell everyone how the raw carrots and celery plan really work to build up resistance.

That was Monday—Tuesday morning, daughter number one was down. When, by the end of the week she had pulled out of it, and no one else had succumbed, I again began to breathe easier. That was apparently a mistake, for she had been back in school no more than three days when the youngest took over as reigning monarch of the davenport and keeper of the TV Guide.

After the first bad day, antibiotics kept the new invalid fairly comfortable, but she just couldn't seem to shake the bug completely, and when a week later middle daughter ran squealing for the bathroom, I began to wonder what trouble I might have gotten into as some former existence to deserve such rewards as these.

Youngest daughter, by this time not really sick, was still not quite well either, and vehemently resented being upstaged by daughter number two, who looked like walking death and probably felt little better. Although the youngest had already graduated to coloring books at the dining room table, seeing her older sister being pampered gave her a few minutes of wondering if getting well was really worth it.

For a couple of days we had two patients bedded down in the living room, and then in desperation I sent the youngest back to school. By this time I wasn't sure I could tell the difference between sick and healthy, so it was just as well that a couple of days later, the remaining "sickie" announced on her own that she was going back to school on Monday.

As near as I can figure, the entire thing took 15 days worth of penicillin, a half bottle of children's aspirin, three sacks of oranges, about six extra changes of bedding, a new batch of coloring books and paper dolls and two missed days of work.

Though it may sound otherwise, I don't actually resent taking care of sick children. It's just that I can only think of one thing that makes me feel more inadequate. Hubby did look a little pale this morning.

Dangerous-Products-Beware
Everyone expects products on the market to be safe, but that is not always the case. Dangerous products are sometimes available on the market, and consumers purchase them for use in their homes.

The Consumer Products Safety Act passed in 1973 promises new procedures to assure safety in design and manufacture of consumer products for home, school and recreational markets. The five-member Consumer Product Safety Commission is empowered to establish and enforce safety standards regulating a product's performance, finish, packaging, design, content, construction and labeling.

The commission also is authorized to conduct product safety research and collect data on product related injuries. Authorities are worried that many products that violate safety regulations are still on the market, and the commission is using volunteer watchdogs to make spot checks in stores across the nation.

Of special concern are items covered by the Flammable Fabrics Act, Poison Prevention

Packaging Act and Refrigerator Door Safety Act. Manufacturers or retailers who persist in selling banned products are subject to criminal penalties. Any consumer who spots safety hazards in a stove, bike, TV, car, lawn mower, toy, etc., should call the commission toll-free, 800-638-2666. The commission promises to follow up on consumer complaints.

Allen, Wakefield School Races Crowded

A battle is brewing among 21 persons seeking six seats on two area school boards. Filing for three seats on the Wakefield board, sending the entire group to the May primary to decide which six will run in the November general election. Incumbents the Rev. Donald Meyer and Sid Preston are seeking to regain their seats. The other incumbents, Elmer Carlson, did not file for another term. Also seeking those positions are Judy Harding, Clarence Bockenhauer, K. Waldon Kraemer, Larry Clay, Robert Oberg, Ray Prochaska, A. D. Brown, Randall Larson, Paul Byers and Ken Bressler. Allen's three incumbents, Norris Emry, Ray Brownell and LeRoy Kach, will be joined by Harland Mattes, Wayne Stewart, Mike DeBorde and Norma Warner in the race for the three seats which will have to be filled this year. After the group is whittled to six in May, the three winners will be named in November. Neither Laurel nor Winside school voters will have a run-off in the primary since there are fewer than six running for the boards. Laurel has five filers. Incumbent Richard Hanson, who also holds a seat on the Concord town board, will be vying for his seat, along with Dave Feiber, Evert Johnson, Sharon Thomas and Robert Dickey. The two other board members ending their terms, Kay Erickson and Clarence Johnston, did not file for reelection. Winside's three incumbents, Dennis Bowers, Myron Deck and Erwin Morris, were the only ones to file for their seats. In area town board races, Carroll leads with seven filers.

Local Tavern Going to Court To Get License

The owner of Dick's Tavern in Wayne has filed suit in Wayne County district court in an attempt to force the liquor commission's decision not to issue the tavern a bottle club license. In an action filed in district court Friday, tavern owner Bill Bolton of Pender says the commission's decision not to issue the license "was unreasonable and arbitrary and without foundation." The tavern applied for the bottle club license last November, receiving approval from the local city council. An agent for the commission filed a protest against the license application in February but gave no reasons for doing so. Clerk of district court Joann Ostrander said Judge "George Dittus of Norfolk may take up the action when he is next in Wayne on April 3. Dick's Tavern, which is managed by Mike Looft, currently has a package liquor license and an on-off sale beer license.

Indian Speaks, Stirs Controversy

Kahn Tineta Horn, a Mohawk Indian who said "I speak only for myself and do not represent any organization," made four talks at Wayne State College Thursday explaining what Indians are and hope to be, intend to do. In the process, she stirred considerable controversy. Her first talk, to a political science class taught by Allen O'Donnell, dwelled largely on the Indians' Confederacy, of which her Mohawk Nation was one part. She described in detail the confederacy history, culture and government. Miss Horn said she advised Indians not to vote, thereby indicating dissatisfaction with the government. This is her recommendation to Indians living on her own reservation in Quebec, Canada, which extends into the United States. But she also said she advises U.S. Indians not to vote, except in a few states where they have enough numbers to influence an election. If an Indian votes, he has endorsed a candidate and become a part of government, she said. Her second talk, to a sociology class taught by James Evans, evoked more controversy as she related her childhood and college experiences. These taught her that "I would have to become hostile, antagonistic, mean and racist in order to regain my identity as an Indian." Miss Horn, in answer to student questions, made it plain she feels it necessary to hate white people. She said white America had destroyed "a beautiful and free way of Indian life." White education is worthless to Indians "because Indians cannot do 90 per cent of the jobs available in a highly competitive, repetitive white society." Miss Horn expressed dislike for the actions of some Indians, especially in the American Indian Movement. Incidents at Wounded Knee and the takeover of the Bureau of Indian Affairs office in Washington, D.C., were not beneficial to Indians, she said. But these "capers," as she

CC Group OK's Parallel Parking Idea

The real committee of the Wayne Chamber of Commerce has given its approval to a parallel parking experiment in the downtown business district. Committee members voted Thursday to approve the experiment, which will be conducted on the north side of First and Third Streets, a block on east side of Main Street if the city council gives its stamp of approval. The council earlier okayed a plan for an experiment with parallel parking on the north sides of First, Second and Third Streets a block on each side of Main, but that idea prompted criticism and complaints from local businessmen who objected to the loss of parking spaces which would result from the experiment. Suggesting the idea of the experiment was the Wayne County Selective Localized Accident Prevention (SLAP) committee, a group recently organized to try to cut down traffic deaths and accidents in the county. The committee suggested the idea after reviewing information compiled by the local police department showing that many of the minor car mishaps taking place in the main shopping area might be avoided by parallel parking. The greatest number of accidents in the main business district take place on First, Second and Third Streets within a block of Main Street, the information revealed.

Abandonment

(Continued from page 1) Others noted that farmers will have to pay higher prices for fertilizer if they are able to get it when the line is abandoned. That is because it is cheaper to ship fertilizer by bulk on railroads than it is to truck it into communities, he said. Duane Gay, state commissioner from this district in the state, said area shippers should make sure they find out exactly how much money they will lose if the line is abandoned and be prepared to testify at the ICC hearing if they hope to keep the line in operation. Customers of the railroad will be notified when the hearing will be held, he said the group Thursday night.
