

NRD Speaker: We Can't Go On Abusing the Land

By NORVIN HANSEN
Landowners in Nebraska can't continue destroying the land like they have during the past 100 years or there won't be any land for coming generations to earn a living from.

"I think it's time to live up to our obligations as Christians... we can't go on abusing the land," the general manager of the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District told a group of nearly 300 during the district's annual awards banquet at Wayne State College Monday night.

Steve Ottmans of Norfolk painted a dark picture for farmers in the state if they don't halt wind and water erosion, keep feedlot runoff from entering our streams and lakes, stop rivers and streams from flooding, and stop wasting underground water resources.

"God didn't put us on earth to let this happen," he said while an elite which show how Nebraskans have wasted their natural resources and while showing slides depicting exactly what happens when we destroy the land.

But he also painted a bright picture by pointing out some of the things which farmers can do to continue to do to make sure the land is as valuable and productive for their grandchildren as it was years ago.

Farmers can stop the destruction of the land by maintaining waterways in their fields, using contour farming, using minimum tillage, planting trees to control erosion, and working with communities to build reservoirs to keep our water in the state and provide recreation facilities for all Nebraskans, he said.

Ottmans emphasized that farmers should be giving more and more consideration to minimum tillage farming.

Farmers can't afford to go over and over their fields now that fuel costs are so high and the energy crisis is making everybody aware of the need for conservation, he said.

The Lower Elkhorn NRD is using as its motto "Till Less, Save More" in an effort to promote the idea of minimum tillage among farmers, he told the group.

Also speaking to the group was Wayne

State College's Val Peterson, former governor of Nebraska and U. S. ambassador to Finland and Denmark.

"It's criminal to do what we've been doing to our land," said Peterson, a distinguished professor of political science and political affairs at WSC.

Americans are way ahead of everybody else in the world as far as farming large tracts of land is concerned, he said, but we are not nearly as good at farming small pieces of land year after year without destroying the land. The Europeans, who have been farming some plots of land for thousands of years, are doing a much better job in using the land over and over and still retaining its productivity, he noted.

He said the Midwest made great strides in the field of conservation of natural resources by harnessing the Missouri River in recent years, but the conservation effort must be continued until conservation is practiced on every acre of land in the state.

That may entail spending some of our own money now that the federal government is withdrawing from this area, he said, but we are going to have to do it if we hope to keep our farm land productive.

Owners and farmers of the land should be willing to spend money to accomplish this goal because this is their home and they and their children are going to have to make a living off the land for many years to come, he pointed out.

Receiving awards during the evening were several farm families and landowners who made outstanding efforts in the field of conservation during 1973. The families and owners received large aerial color photographs of their farms.

Among those honored were Mr. and Mrs. William Fenske of rural Hoskins. Fenske, who now has about eight miles of terraces on his farm near Hoskins, was interested in minimum tillage before it became a popular idea among conservationists. He went so far as making his own minimum tillage equipment before it became available on the market. See SPEAKER, page 7

Haun: I Would Back Plans To Remodel Carroll School

Francis Haun, superintendent of the Wayne-Carroll school system, told a group of Carroll area residents Tuesday night that he would recommend remodeling the Carroll school if he were asked his opinion by the school board.

Haun made the comment during the second of two meetings at Carroll aimed at gathering information for the board about what parents and taxpayers want that part of the district want done with the school.

More than 100 persons attended the two meetings, about 90 of them turning out for Monday night's meeting and about 40 taking in Tuesday night's meeting. Both meetings were held in the Carroll school, which is being used this year for students in grades one through four.

Haun told the group that a year ago he was giving consideration to building a new school, but continued drops in enrollment at Carroll and unprofitable projections of enrollment from that area have changed his mind.

"I'm not for that (a new school) if I were the manager (of the school district), I'd recommend remodeling," he said when an area resident asked his professional opinion about whether the school should be revamped, whether a new one should be built or whether students should be bused to Wayne.

Attending the meeting with Haun were school board members Morris Sandahl and Milton Owens, both of the Carroll area.

Haun explained to the group that there is money available in a sinking fund to pay for remodeling if the school board agrees that should be done.

The fund currently contains about $80,000, according to Haun, has more than twice the amount an architectural firm has estimated a major remodeling project would cost.

The firm earlier this year told the board it would cost approximately $43,000 to remodel the Carroll school and as much as $209,000 to replace it with a new building offering equal space.

Spending that much on remodeling would result in a building which would last a minimum of 10 years and possibly 20 years, the architectural firm told the board.

Board members have been thinking about and discussing what to do with the school at Carroll for several months, and last year the problem was listed by Haun as one of the most important ones facing the board.

The board earlier this month agreed to hold the informal meetings at Carroll to get a better idea of what residents of the area want to do with the school.

One thing many of those residents want is to keep the school in operation, several persons told Haun and the two board members Tuesday night. Similar feelings were reportedly expressed Monday night.

Haun said he is in favor of remodeling the school, but he told the group that continued enrollment drops at Carroll might make it unwise to keep the school in operation.

He handed out a sheet of information showing that enrollment at Carroll dropped from 58 students in kindergarten through fourth grade in 1965-66 to the present 34 students in grades one through four. No kindergarten class is being conducted at Carroll this year.

Information available to school officials shows that enrollment at Carroll will drop to

Grand Prize In 'Bucks' Worth $350

Wayne area shoppers have an opportunity to win $350 in this week's Birthday Bucks drawing in Wayne.

That's the value of the coupons which will be given away tonight (Thursday) if a shopper is present in one of the participating firms with a birthday matching the date drawn at random earlier. The date will be announced in all the firms at 8:15 this evening.

The prize jumps up from last week's $325 to $350 because there was no grand prize winner in last Thursday's drawing.

There was a consolation winner, however. He is Roger Lentz of Wayne, who collected $25 in coupons for being the shopper with the birthday closest to the one drawn at random. He was shopping at Sav-Mor-Drugs when the winning date was announced.

If there is no top winner this evening, the grand prize in the drawing will be worth $375 next week while the consolation prize remains at $25. A recent change in the way the promotion is run has resulted in the grand prize climbing by $25 each week there is no winner. There is no limit on how high the prize may go.

Coupons awarded in the weekly drawings may be spent just like cash in any participating firm.

Busses to Return To Normal Times

Students who ride busses in the Wayne-Carroll school system will be able to get in a few more minutes of sleep each morning starting Monday, reports superintendent Francis Haun.

Haun said the busses will return to their normal schedules after several weeks of running 15 minutes later because of daylight savings time.

Koester Fund Tops $14,000

The Danny Koester fund has passed the $14,000 mark, reports Bill Snyder of Allen's Security State Bank.

More donations are expected when the Allen American Legion tabulates income from Saturday's pancake feed. Part of the proceeds will go toward buying new baseball uniforms and the rest will go to help pay for the 14 year old's estimated $25,000 hospitalization and operation cost for a bone marrow transplant.

On March 30 Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Dietz, former Allen residents, will sponsor a soup supper and bake sale at the First United Methodist Church—in Norfolk from 5 to 7:30 p.m., with proceeds going to the Koester fund.

Also planned is a slave sale to be staged by the Allen High Future Farmers of America chapter Friday at the high school. That will follow the FFA's annual polo benefit basketball game at 7:30 p.m.

Free Vacation Handy For Vagabond Winner

It didn't take long for Mrs. Irma Utchik to get out the road maps in search of a vacation spot after she learned she was the latest Vagabond Vacation winner.

For both Mrs. Utchik and her sister in law, Mrs. Amber Tru by, the free weekend vacation sponsored by 27 Wayne businesses comes in handy as the pair searches for a place to go this summer.

"My sister in law and I are planning a vacation," Mrs. Utchik gamed. "Winning the vacation will really help us now."

Mrs. Utchik isn't sure exactly where they may go, but it may be to Grand Island or some other spot in Nebraska. They aren't limited to the Cornhusker state, however. They can travel anywhere in the United States, Canada or Mexico and receive two nights free lodging in Ramada Inns or Holiday Inns in the cities they decide to visit.

In addition Mrs. Utchik also will receive $67.30 in spending money during her stay.

Last week Mrs. Utchik was one of hundreds who signed up at participating merchants to enter the contest when she stopped in at Melodee Lanes and See VAGABOND, page 7

Incoming Fresh Are Invited to Tuesday Meet

All eighth grade students who will be entering Wayne High School as freshmen next fall are urged to attend Tuesday night's annual eighth grade orientation program.

The program is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at the high school lecture hall.

Ken Carlson, high school guidance counselor, said parents of the eighth graders should attend the meeting so both they and the students have a better idea of what to expect next fall.

School officials will be on hand during the program to explain particular course offerings as well as answer any questions students or parents may have, he noted. Class registration will take place during the program.

Handed out during the evening will be three forms, two of which have to be returned within a week of the program. The forms on class registration and family background may be returned either to the high school or the middle school. The health form must be signed by the family physician and dentist and returned to the high school by the first day of classes next fall.

Rural Zoning Is Subject of Winside Meet

County-wide zoning and land use will be discussed at a public meeting at Winside on April 2, according to Wayne County clerk Norris Weible.

County commissioners Joe Wilson, Floyd Burt and Ken Eddie agreed to hold the meeting during Tuesday's board meeting to get a better idea of what residents in the county think of zoning the rural areas and the other communities in the county. The meeting also will give them and other officials a chance to explain to the public exactly what county-wide zoning is.

Present for the meeting will be Steve Martin, director of the Mid Elkhorn Valley Council of Governments, and possibly Gene Sturm, community and regional planner for the state Office of Planning and Programming.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at a site for the meeting has not been determined.

Commissioners have been considering holding a public meeting on county-wide zoning for several weeks after hearing Martin, Sturm and Paul Gessman, extension economist with the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, explain to them in two separate meetings what rural zoning involves.

The commissioners said they hope there is a good turnout for the April 2nd meeting since they want to get as good an idea See ZONING, page 7

Mayor Hopeful Rides Along For Close Look

Sam Hepburn, candidate for Mayor in Wayne, has announced he has been observing functions of city departments.

Hepburn visited the municipal light plant and the street department Thursday and Friday, and Friday and Saturday evenings he went on patrol with the Wayne police department.

"I feel that this will give me an in-depth view of the various aspects of city government," said Hepburn.

A senior at Wayne High school, Hepburn and three other persons are seeking the mayor's post in Wayne. Also candidates are Rich Hall, a Wayne State College sophomore; Dr. Freeman Decker, professor of education at Wayne State; and Miron Jenness, teacher at the middle school and local businessman.

Voters in the city will go to the polls on May 14th to elect a mayor to replace Kent Hall and four councilmen to fill the seats now held by Vernon Russell, first ward; Pat Gross, second ward; Keith Mosley, third ward, and Bob Merchant, fourth ward.

Seeking those posts are Russell and Larry Meier, first ward; Carolyn Fitter and Cecil Wriedel, second ward; Carol Mosley, Leo Hansen and Bob Merchant, third ward, and John Vakoc and Bob Workman, fourth ward.

The Neihardt Hall I team emerged as champion of Wayne State's College Bowl, one feature of the past week's Spring Festival.

Members of the winning quartet were Jan Meritz, Omaha; Jane Wolf, Arlington; Jean Hordorf, Plattsmouth, and JoAnn Zobel, Ida Grove, Ia.

In the final contest of brains, the Neihardt I coeds defeated Bowen Hall I, answering a variety of questions in a show patterned after the television quiz program.

Nineteen teams of four students each entered the contest, largest ever in several years it has been staged.

Wanted: Talent for Club's Contest

Local and area youths are invited to enter the Wayne Lions Club amateur talent contest April 9 at 7:30 p.m. at the Wayne High School lecture hall.

The talent contest, first one to be held in Wayne for several years, is open to youths through 18 years of age according to project chairman Wayne Fischer.

Winners in the four age brackets will receive special plaques and will advance to the district contest, slated for Wayne later in April. Winners at the district level will advance to the state contest.

There are no restrictions on the types of talents which can be entered in the local contest, Fischer said. The talents may range from singing to playing musical instruments and imitations to specialty acts.

All youths who enter the contest will receive special certificates for their participation, and the runner-up in each age bracket will also receive a plaque.

The four age divisions are elementary, nine years and under; junior, 10-12; intermediate, 13-15; and senior, 16-18.

An application blank for youths to fill out is printed elsewhere in this issue of the newspaper. Applications must be returned to Fischer by April 5.

Helping him with the project are club members L. S. Pflieger, Larry Meier, Hilbert Johns and J. S. Johar.

Hey, Readers, What's Your Opinion on Face-Lift Idea?

Readers of The Wayne Herald are being asked to take part in the newspaper's latest "SPEAK OUT," a survey which asks your feelings about whether efforts should be made to revamp the downtown shopping area in Wayne.

Those who wish to take part in the survey should clip out the form above, fill it out and return it to the newspaper by next Thursday, March 28. Results of the survey will be published in the April 1st issue of the newspaper.

The survey is being run to get a better indication of the public's feelings about whether some type of downtown redevelopment project is necessary. It's a timely survey, since an Omaha architectural firm is currently doing a preliminary study on that very subject. Results of that study could lead the businessmen in the main shopping area spearheading a redevelopment project.

The latest in a series of "Speak Out" surveys is another attempt by the newspaper to let the general public have a little more voice in what is going on around them. Previous surveys queried readers on the value of girls athletics in high school, the popularity of Wayne's new police uniforms and the like.

Volunteer Service Corps Cheers Residents At Wayne Care Center

By SANDRA BREITKREUTZ

Fifteen children from St. Mary's Catholic School in Wayne are learning what Mark Twain knew when he said that the best way to cheer yourself up is to cheer somebody else up.

Fourth, fifth and sixth grade students from the parochial school are members of the youth division of the Volunteer Service Corps which is sponsored by the American Nursing Home Association. The young people work with Jacques Cage, program director at the Wayne Care Center, to provide friendship to residents here. The students spend about two hours a week with the residents of the nursing home.

An adult division of the Volunteer Service Corps also is being reorganized at the center and individuals interested in the program are invited to one of two briefing sessions scheduled today (Thursday) at 2:30 p.m. at the center's dining room.

Other young people who wish to join the corps should contact Mrs. Cage. Corps members visit residents at their regularly scheduled times, worked out to best suit individuals involved. Volunteers work with the same residents on each of their visits.

Although some residents at first responded to the idea of children paying them regular visits with "Oh, I don't want to be bothered," Mrs. Cage notes that it is more common now to hear such things as "When are those kids coming back?"

What does a volunteer Service Corps member do?

Some of the youngsters become substitute grandchildren, she said, and some volunteers read to residents whose failing eyesight may have separated them from favorite books. Others write letters or run errands for their new friends. Some visits are devoted to walks, cards, chess, puzzles, arts and crafts, or playing records.

Thanks to a volunteer, one resident will be able to have poetry, which she has carried around in her head for many years, written down at last. Another volunteer may be sent out to purchase stamps and stop for ice cream cones on the way back. Basically, the volunteer's job is to be a friend.

Training for the corps is brief, consisting of two sessions devoted to principles of communicating with the residents and understanding the problems of aging.

Although satisfaction of helping others is the most evident reward of the program, there are others, Mrs. Cage says. After 20 hours, the volunteer will receive a certificate and pin, and bars are available for each 50 hours after that. Smocks also are available for those who wish to order them.

Anyone over nine can be a corps member, explains Mrs. Cage. There are no special requirements, although Mrs.

Cage hopes that some special needs can be met through the volunteer program. One resident, for instance, speaks little English, and Mrs. Cage hopes a German-speaking volunteer can be found. Still another resident is deaf and dumb and apparently unfamiliar with sign language.

"We could use a few 10-point pitch players, too," she says. For the most part though, the needs are more basic.

"They need a lot of tender loving care," says Mrs. Cage. "Some of the residents have never had visitors."

Mrs. Cage, who received her BA in social welfare from Arizona State University at Tempe last spring, is experimenting with other individual and group activities intended to more completely meet the needs of the center's residents.

Mrs. Cage meets each morning with various discussion groups in an attempt to draw the residents out of themselves. Members of one of the most active groups are concerning themselves with working out their own solutions to existing problems, and have already decided to set up a reading nook in the lounge area of the center.

The center subscribes to some large print and talking book services, but can use donations of books and current magazines of all kinds for the nook.

Some of the other groups listen to music, and their discussions focus on memories brought to mind. Hearing a march record one day got residents involved in reminiscing about circuses.

"We may experiment with smells next," said Mrs. Cage. Center residents enjoy individual visits and also look forward to the visits and parties arranged regularly by various church groups and home extension clubs. They always dress up for an event and will not allow routine matters, such as a bath, to interfere with attendance.

Parties, which are held about once a week, usually consist of entertainment, singalongs, dancing (they like the polka) and, most important, refreshments, all provided by the visiting groups.

The Wayne Senior Citizen's Center "Bobbie" and Bubbettes kitchen band visits regularly, and some of the center residents take advantage of the free transportation provided to the downtown Senior Citizen's Center where activities are scheduled daily.

"We hope to be able to meet the resident's personal needs for companionship and self esteem," said Mrs. Cage of her job and the Volunteer Service Corps program.

According to Don Barry, president of the American Nursing Home Association, community visitors can be instrumental in proving to the individual patient that the community still cares and that the individual has not been forgotten.

There are 89 residents between the ages of 21 and 97 at the Wayne Care Center who need to know that they have not been forgotten.

Way With Windows

There are many ways to treat windows — curtains, draperies, shades, blinds, shutters — but just how to make the most of the window treatment requires careful thought.

Windows provide light, fresh air and a view of the outdoors, and considering these assets will affect the choice of window decoration. Since window treatments show through to the outside, they must harmonize in style and color with the exterior of the house. — They must appear finished on both sides so people looking in do not see raveled seams or uneven hems.

What functional considerations must be met? Is privacy a need? Must some light be cut out for comfort? Is there an ugly view to be screened out?

For the budget-conscious, the decision will include whether the window covering can be made at home more economically than by buying ready-made or made-to-order. In selecting the fabric for curtains or draperies, consider its resistance to sun fading or rotting. Dark colors tend to look worse when faded than light ones, and fading is often less noticeable on printed fabrics than in solid colors.

Blinds add a crisp, clean look to windows. They can be used alone or with draperies or curtains. — They come in many fashionable colors and textures today, and have slats in various widths. They can be selected to contrast sharply with the colors in the room, creating window interest, or they can be subdued by matching the color to the walls.

Shades, like blinds, can be used alone or with another treatment. They come in various colors and textures, hem shapes, and with decorative trimming like fringe or braid. Shades can be backed with printed fabrics, stenciled, painted or silk-screened to get a variety of decorative effects. Heavy vinyl fabric-backed wallcovering can be made into a shade by attaching to a shade roller.

Draperies are the most often used form of window treatment and may be lined or unlined. Loose weave fabrics require a lining to give stability. Other fabrics prone to fading or soiling should be hung alone without a lining.

Hardware such as rods, rings and hooks should be the best the budget will allow as the general appearance of the window treatment can be enhanced by them. They need to harmonize with the treatment chosen.

Thought for Today

By Rowan Wittse

"Integrity of men is to be measured by their conduct, not by their profession." Junius

To be judged a person of integrity by one's peers is an honor of the highest order. It means that those who know one best have observed the passing of one's life and have concluded they know they can depend on this one's honesty and reliability.

There have always been rascals in high places. Position or profession is a poor measure of integrity, but conduct is an infallible guide.

We are qualified to advise you regarding benefits which may be available from Veterans', Social Security or other sources. Ask a Wittse counselor for answers to your questions on any aspect of funeral services.

Job Well Done

WAYNE HIGH wrestling coach Don Koenig was the proud recipient of an award presented by his team Monday night during an honor dinner at the high school commons. Team co-captains Gordon Cook (pictured), Charlie Brockman and Barry Rubick gave the head man the trophy with a clock encased in the award. About 75 people, including wrestlers and their parents, attended the potluck supper.

2 City Tankers Place in Meet

Wayne swimmers had a tough time at the Midwest AAU swimming meet in Omaha last weekend, with the first placing 12th. Lesa Barley and Randy Pinkelman led the group of six swimmers, with Lesa taking 18th in the 50 yard freestyle for 13 and 14 year olds, and Pinkel man placing 18th in the 100 yard breaststroke in the 13 and 17 age group. Right behind him in that event was Kevin Jech for 19th. Also swimming were Tracy Stollenberg, Bud Meyer and Doug Marr.

Coach Gary Egler, in rapping up the winter season, pointed out that the cooperation of parents, Frank Teach of Wayne State College and the city recreation board made possible this winter's program.

Floerchinger Named Cats Most Valuable Swimmer

Bob Floerchinger of Omaha was the most valuable swimmer for Wayne State College in 1974, the second straight year teammates voted him the honor. The Burke High graduate scored the most points of any Wayne swimmer, set a batch of records, won three individual races and swam on three winning relays of the Nebraska NAIA meet, all in record time, and for this he was named outstanding swimmer of the meet. His records were in free style, mostly at longer distances, and butterfly.

Dan Carney of Norfolk won the team's vote as most improved swimmer—Senior Doug Krecklow, Omaha, another Burke product, was voted honorary season captain. The Annual Old Can Award — for spirit and pep — went to Denny Moore of South Sioux City for the second year, and also to Jim Bathen, a two lettered swimmer who was not able to compete this year because of back surgery last summer. An Omaha Creighton Prep grad, he served as assistant coach.

The Wildcat team finished with an 11-2 dual record, first in the Jack Rabbit Relays at Brookings, S. D., third in the Grinnell Relays, and second in the NAIA district meet.

Dyas Slates Stops In Area Next Week

Hess Dyas, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the First Congressional District, will be traveling in the Wayne area early next week as he visits with some 30 community workers.

On Monday, Dyas will travel to Erasmus, Mazza Band, Schuler, Norfolk and Wayne, talking with community leaders and with editors of daily and weekly newspapers. After an overnight stay in Wayne, Dyas will travel to Laurel, Harlington, Ponca and South Sioux on Tuesday before returning to his home in Lincoln. The rest of the week Dyas plans on visiting communities in the southern part of the district.

high school wrestlers know," Barclay said.

SIDELINES: Have you purchased tickets for the annual "Second Guessers" pork feed this Monday night at Wayne State Student Union? Now's the time to get them from club members Rowan Wilfse, Dale Gutschall and Chuck Surber. Costs is $3 for singles, $5 for couples.

For those not familiar with the annual event, each year the Wayne State sports boosters hold an informal banquet for both Wayne High and Wayne State athletes. This year, though, the group is adding a new wrinkle — honoring girl athletes and cheerleaders.

The dress will still be informal, Gutschall said, and the program will be short so everyone can eat and run. Guest speaker is Mark Ahmann, sports director for KOLN-TV in Lincoln.

With the basketball season over, thoughts generally turn to baseball, track, golf and tennis, but both WCC basketball coach Ron Jones and Joe Cipriano of Nebraska are planning their basketball schools.

The University of Nebraska Lincoln campus will hold its camps May 25-31, June 1-7, June 8-14, June 15-21 and June 22-28. The staff will include Cipriano and his assistants, Moe Iba, Lonnie Porter, plus some state high school coaches.

Ron will be holding one week of basketball school, June 16-22. Jones and former Wayne State assistant Darryl Lehman, now head mentor at Ilhaca College in New York, will head the program for boys grades seven through 12. Registration will be limited.

Three city bowling teams are planning to enter the state women's bowling tournament this weekend in North Platte.

Standard Farm Center and Lyman's of Wayne will take off this weekend along with Carroll's entry, Kavanaugh's Feed and Trucking.

On the team's Lyman's — Sally Schroeder, Debbie Farrants; Carol Brum mond, Terry Jeffrey, Nancy Niemann; Standard Farm — Delores Schulz, Ellen Nickells of Beatrice, Joann Proett, G. I. Willoughby, Vicky Skokan; Kavanaugh's Virginia Rehwisch, Pat Morris, Betty Kavanaugh, Carol Lackas, Diane Wurdinger and the team's sixth member Sandy Nelson.

Both Terri Jeffrey and Joann Proett will represent Wayne at the state women's bowling convention this weekend in North Platte.

THE OUT-CITY All Stars will have to wait until spring to even up their two losses to the Brestler Bombers during winter sports activity.

Sunday afternoon at Wayne State's Rice Auditorium the Bombers ripped the All Stars, 37-35, in basketball action for the team's second win. Early last year the Bombers dropped the All Stars in football, 28-14.

"They have two more chances this year to get revenge," said team member Ken Dahl, when the teams meet in softball and golf.

For those of you who might be lost, the teams are formed by local residents "just for fun," but Dahl promises that competition isn't a luke. "We aim to make this an annual event," he pointed out.

Playing on the teams Bombers — Ron Jones, Sid Hillier, Ken Liska, LeRoy Simpson, Ralph Barclay, Charlie Thomas, Bill Regg, Kern Swarts and Larry Schultz; All Stars — Jim Marsh, Ed Elliott, Wayne Wessel, Phil Griess, Bob Regg, Larry Turner, Steve Schumacher, Del Stollenberg, Dick Dilman and Tom Roberts.

New Leaders Take Over In Singles, Doubles

The scramble for first place in the singles division of the St. Mary's bowling tournament continues this week as a new leader takes over.

Rich Satter, Sioux City, rolled a 507 series and collected 107 pins in handicap for a total of 713. 11 pins better than last week's leader, Hank Finkhaus, Finkhaus holds down second in the field of 17 with a 503 series after the third Sunday of the five weekend meet at Melodee Lanes in Wayne.

The other change comes in the doubles category where Elmer Freed and Ken Spittlerger take over with a 1,392. The Oakland Wayne pair replace former No.

1 duo of Clarence Steinhauer and Don Peterson, West Point, now second with a 1,326 in a field of 92.

Both team and all-events leaders remain the same. Erving's Concrete, Wayne, is first with a 3,140 mark and Ron Mulvihill of West Point leads all events with a 1,867 total. So far, 37 teams have entered the time division, and 59 leagues are competing in all events.

Two more weekends remain before the annual tournament ends. Those interested in entering should call Melodee Lanes or Harold Murray in Wayne.

Add a large spool of string, a homemade kite, brisk winds, several eager fifth graders and you have...

Kite-Flying

So far, the month of March has lived up to its reputation — it's a great time to get in some kite flying. About 70 fifth grade students at Wayne's Middle School found that out last week when they tested their homemade kites in brisk, chilly winds.

Don Koenig, physical education instructor, had his students build kites out of pieces of wood and empty plastic bags. Building the kites proved fun, but trying to get the colorful objects in the air was a challenge for many.

And even the girls got into the act. Sandra Mencl, left, and Tammie Thomas, dash out of the classroom with other schoolmates to join the rest of kite-flyers.

30 Attend NEN Association Meeting

About 30 area farmers and members of the Northeast Nebraska Experimental Farm Association attended the group's annual meeting at the Northeast Station Thursday to review results of research, development and extension programs carried out by station personnel.

George Rehm, district agronomist, told the group that in working with irrigated alfalfa to test soil fertility, "We haven't seen a response to trace elements such as iron, copper, manganese or boron, but did see a response to zinc."

In talking about weed control, district agronomist Russell Moomaw explained that reduced tillage systems can control weeds. Moomaw recommended just three passes over the field — to spray, plant and harrow. Concerning swine housing, Robert Fritschen, district swine specialist, pointed out that tests show modified open front hog confinement facilities (types having an open and closed front) surpass the environment controlled confinement types (all-enclosed) for raising hogs.

He noted, however, that the modified open front units require more feed for pigs. In looking at slatted floors in confinement units, Fritschen said floors that are 25 to 50 percent slatted are good enough for growing pigs. The problem facing swine growers now is the type of material to use for the slatted floors. So far tests have shown that none of the four types used — steel, wood, aluminum or concrete — are better than the original soil flooring. The reason, he pointed out, is the abrasiveness of the materials, generally causing severe foot problems.

Currently being studied is the use of plastic slats, which Fritschen hopes will solve the problem.

Turning to beef research, district beef specialist Wall Tolman said that his research indicated that high moisture corn stored and fed as whole kernel corn performs much better than ground corn.

In summary Cal Ward, station superintendent and district extension director, reported that the ties between the experiment station and cooperative extension work in Nebraska is "kind of unique. Nebraska is the only state in the north central region in which district staff members carry on joint research and extension appointment."

Attending the meeting were association representatives from Knox, Madison, Pierce, Stanton, Cedar, Wayne, Dixon, Tipton, Cumming and Dodge Counties. Robert Craft of Foster, association president, presided over the meeting.

CALF SCOURS
Calf scours, one of the most common calf diseases, can have many causes. It is difficult to find any single prevention that will be successful in all cases.

An important precaution is to encourage the calf to nurse within a half hour after birth. If it does not nurse, force-feed colostrum milk to give the disease protection colostrum provides. The best colostrum is the first milk which amounts to about four cups. The four cups make one quart, which is about the right amount for the first feeding.

Supplemental heat and dry pens will reduce stress and lower the incidence of disease. Cold doesn't hurt calves too much as long as there are no drafts; however, calves should not be kept in a warm environment for a few days and then suddenly placed in a cold pen.

Don't let a calf have more than 10 percent of its body weight in milk because overfeeding will cause scours.

When scours occur, stop all milk feeding immediately, and feed an electrolyte solution. Electrolytes can be obtained from a veterinarian, but a substitute can be made at home. Add one heaping teaspoon of salt, one rounding teaspoon of baking soda and about a half a pound of dextrose to one gallon of boiled water. Feed two or three quarts of this solution about four times a day, and after 24 hours gradually reintroduce milk or milk replacer. Feed no more than one quart of milk or milk replacer per offering morning, noon, evening and night.

Don't feed table sugar to young calves as they are unable to digest it. It provides a food source for bacteria present and may increase the scours problem. Here is another formula that can be substituted for a scouring calf. One can of beef consomme from the grocery store, three cans of warm-water and one heaping tablespoon of baking soda. Feed one to four quarts at four hour intervals. Withhold milk for 24 hours, then gradually reintroduce milk, not more than one quart four times a day.

Fermented colostrum will provide disease immunity and also produce an acid condition that will help counteract organisms in the intestinal tract.

Farrow Management Tips

For most Nebraska pork producers, late winter and early spring is the time when baby pigs are born. In addition to being a traditional time for farrowing, it's a time when producers can lend sows and baby pigs. A pork producer can realize large financial rewards by spending enough time in the farrowing house to save more baby pigs. The following areas where time might be well spent are:

1. Be present when the sows farrow. This allows assisting difficult delivery and ensuring new born pigs from after birth.
2. Provide a warm, dry, draft-free nest for the pigs. Pigs need 90 degrees for the first several days.
3. Help small pigs nurse. Pigs which receive colostrum have a good chance to live, but pigs which receive no colostrum have little chance to live.
4. Clip needle teeth to prevent abrasion of the sows udder and faces of pigs.
5. Disinfect navels to prevent infection.
6. Provide supplemental iron by the fourth day to prevent anemia.

The number of pigs saved is one of the most important things in determining a good profit level. Saving pigs is a good investment of time.

Cattle Prices, Wholesale Beef Prices, and Beef Features In Food Store Ads By Weeks.

THIS CHART, prepared by the Beef Industry Council of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, shows the interworkings of cattle prices, wholesale prices and numbers of retail beef features. It also points out how forces over which the industry has no control, such as the truck strike, can have a disastrous effect. Number of beef features, which had dipped during the Christmas season, moved up again in early January, then dropped off as cattle and wholesale prices jumped. This was followed by an increase in beef features and a leveling off of cattle prices which showed signs of stabilizing when the truck strike hit. Uncertainty about availability of supply and rapidly rising wholesale prices caused a sharp drop-off in beef features reaching a low point as the strike ended and cattle again flowed to the market. More beef was featured in the face of a growing supply, but by then the bottom had dropped out of the cattle and wholesale beef market. As mid-March approached, retailers, assured by industry sources of continued supplies, moved heavily into beef featuring. For the week ending March 9 (not shown) beef features continued at a high level, while wholesale prices rose slightly and live cattle prices continued to fall.

'Stretchers' Don't Work, Expert Says

Nebraska farmers are plagued each year by unscrupulous salesmen who sell fertilizer products that are either nearly worthless or far too expensive in relation to their value, says Dr. Don Sander, University of Nebraska extension soil fertility specialist.

This year, because of the fertilizer shortage, such salesmen are working overtime to sell "fertilizer stretchers" which will in fact stretch nothing, he warns. While fertilizers are indeed in short supply, don't be fooled into buying a product from a door-to-door salesman who specializes in taking your money, he notes.

The list of worthless products sold to increase soil fertility includes many, according to Dr. Sander. These products are often advertised to "unlock fixed soil nutrients" or "activate microorganisms" in one way or another. The names of these products often utilize words such as life, bio or natural. Many have an organic base that offers very little or, in some cases, no nutrient value. Other products may offer "minerals" that are far more expensive than such nutrients which can be purchased from local fertilizer dealers. Normally, such "minerals" probably are not needed any way.

These products are usually expensive, he adds. Therefore, they are often mixed with other fertilizers, herbicides or insecticides, or they may be fallow applied. To make a little bit go a long way, application with the wind may be recommended. Some of these products may be even associated with and promoted by some unethical soil test laboratory which offers soil tests that recommend the product.

Remember, says Dr. Sander, buy fertilizer only from a reputable fertilizer dealer. Investigate before you buy, and contact your county agent when you have questions, he concludes.

Wind and Water
Can Be Thieves, Too!

Reduced Tillage
Produces Bigger Profits.

"Till Less — Save More" is a saying that has been tossed about a good deal lately in Northeast Nebraska. The Natural Resources Districts and the Soil Conservation Service have been actively promoting the use of "Reduced Tillage" methods in row-crop farming. After all, both are in the Soil and Water Conservation business and crop residue is one of the most effective methods of protecting land from wind and water.

As a matter of fact, residue such as corn or milo stubble can cut soil losses nearly in half.

— HERE ARE SOME EXAMPLES —

With a silty clay loam that has a 6 per cent slope and is terraced, you can expect to lose 7 1/2 tons from every acre every year. Simply by leaving some of last year's crop residue on the surface, the average soil loss is less than 4 tons per acre.

If the slope is increased to 8 per cent and terraced, soil losses still add up to 10.5 tons per acre, but by leaving a mulch, losses drop by 5.5 tons per acre.

Let's take this situation, 8 per cent slope farmed up and down the hill with no terraces, 33 tons, or 6 truckloads of your prime top soil go off down the creek to your neighbors! You could keep 23 tons or 4 truckloads at home to make you money by leaving a mulch on the soil and farming on the contour. That's a 70 per cent savings on sediment that clogs rivers, road ditches and dams.

So "Reduced Tillage" saves soil, that's fine for NRD and SCS people, and for those people down stream from you.

But what's in it for you? Plenty. As you make plans for the 1974 crop year, you can take a round of this that fuel will cost twice as much as it did last year. If you plan to make money at farming, cutting the amount of fuel you need can really make a difference. "Reduced Tillage" methods can cut your fuel costs by hundreds of dollars as compared to conventional tillage.

What about time? One operator gave "Reduced Tillage" another look after his experience last spring. "After I had been working in the field for two weeks getting ready for cornplanting, my neighbor came out with his planter and planted his corn and went home."

Conventional tillage can tie up your valuable management time to the tune of an additional half hour per acre. On three hundred acres, that adds up to about three weeks of time spent on a tractor that is unnecessary. Another advantage that is often overlooked is the timeliness of operations that is possible with "Reduced Tillage." How many times have you prepared your seedbed, diligently, shredding, disking, plowing, disking again, harrowing only to have it rain? Then you start over again with disking and harrowing before you can plant when with a "Reduced Tillage" system, as soon as the ground is fit to work, you can plant or disk and plant and be finished. No more waiting with the planting operation until preliminary preparations are out of the way. Timeliness alone could more than make the difference between a good dry crop and one wet and spotted due to late planting.

"Reduced Tillage" does require management, somewhat different management than conventional tillage. Herbicide may become more important, more so under a disk and plant system than till plant. Minor modifications to your cultivator to handle trash may be needed, but a large capital outlay is not necessary.

Take a long look at your plow, the fuel used to plow alone is enough to disk, plant corn, side-dress nitrogen and cultivate once. Maybe it should just stay out in the trees.

Liquefied natural gas.

Another way to store gas so it's there when you need it.

When cold weather blows across the northern states we serve, the demand for natural gas zooms. And we want enough on hand to meet the demand. That means we store it in the summer, so you can use it in the winter. One way is to store it underground, but that technique requires a special porous rock which can absorb the natural gas. And that kind of rock isn't everywhere we'd like it to be. So now we've got another way. We liquefy it. That's right. We turn natural gas into a liquid by lowering the temperature down to 260° below zero. Then we can store it in tanks. When the temperature drops and demand goes up, we reconvert the liquid gas to its natural form and pipe it to your home. Of course you have to have special facilities to liquefy the gas, store it, and then vaporize it again. So we're building a liquefied natural gas storage facility near Duluth, Minnesota, on the northern end of our transmission system. It will store two billion cubic feet of natural gas. We expect it to be in service before the 1975-76 heating season. It's just another thing Northern Natural Gas Company is doing to keep that quiet, efficient blue flame burning at your house. So you can continue to have the advantages of natural gas for home heating and water heating, home cooling, clothes drying and cooking.
