

Mock Disaster Goes Off Without Major Mistakes

By NORVIN HANSEN

Rescuers in Friday night's mock tornado disaster in Wayne were hampered by the pitch blackness at the disaster site, but they got the 16 victims to medical treatment in less than an hour in what observers said was a well run operation.

"Everything seemed to be going pretty good," said Norfolk fire chief Larry Reeves, brought in to act as a critical observer of the simulated disaster, possibly the first one ever held in the community.

"On the whole, the exercise was run very good, but it could be improved on," he noted in a critique following the all out practice.

Some 100 people took part in the exercise, including local firemen and firemen rescue unit personnel from Wakefield and Laurel, police and sheriff officers, citizen band radio operators, hospital staff members, Boy Scouts, first aid volunteers and the local youths.

Wayne State College students and teachers who served as victims.

There were only two "deaths" in the disaster, one dead at the scene in the basement of Wayne State's Rice Auditorium and one dead at the makeshift hospital at the National Guard Armory.

The rescuers, mostly local and area firemen and rescue unit members, found a completely blacked out basement awaiting them after the simulated tornado struck Rice Auditorium. They were forced to use flashlights to get the first victims out, then relied on a floodlight powered by an auxiliary generator to treat and move other victims.

The basement served as an excellent site for the practice disaster, said rescuers, because of the numerous rooms and passages that were nearly impassable early in the rescue attempt and still confusing by the time all victims were removed.

The victims, complete with make-up which made their injuries seem almost real, were carried out on stretchers, put in ambulances and station wagons, taken to the temporary hospital and treated by Dr. Robert Benthack, hospital employees and first aid volunteers.

All the time, the victims were moaning, yelling and acting as if they had real injuries requiring immediate attention.

A couple victims suffered minor injuries during the operation. Like the bruise Wayne State wrestling coach Marion Haaver jokingly pointed to during the critique following the practice.

And a couple other victims said they probably would have died because they didn't get adequate treatment. "I'm afraid I wouldn't have made it," said WS basketball coach Ron Jones. "I was taking a gag, and after a while it became real. I had a homophiliac sign on my chest, and it took them a long time to notice this," he said.

There were some other criticisms made following the simulated disaster, one of the most important being the lack

GOP, Democrats Tab New County Bosses

Both political parties in Wayne County named new chairmen at Thursday's county conventions, replacing men who had served in that capacity for several years.

Named to head the Democratic party was Allen O'Donnell, political science teacher at Wayne State College. He takes over the job held by Wayne lawyer Ken Olds since about 1949.

Heading up the Republican party will be co-chairmen Val Peterson, a political science and public affairs teacher at Wayne State, and Mrs. Jack March, Wayne housewife. They take over the post held for about the past eight years by local lawyer Charles McDermott.

Other officers named by the county meetings during their county meetings were Mrs. Leo Maeler of Wayne as vice chairman, Mrs. Ray Finn of Carroll as secretary and Pat Gross of Wayne as treasurer.

Republicans named Mrs. M. L. Owens of Carroll to the secretary's job. She and the co-chairmen will select the party's treasurer.

Democratic delegates to the state convention selected during the county convention were O'Donnell and Dorothy Ley, also of Wayne. Alternates are Sylvia Eynon and Robert Jordan, both of Wayne. The Democratic state convention is scheduled for Norfolk June 29-30.

Passed by the Democrats at the county gathering was a resolution criticizing Republican Congressman Charles Thone's voting record, especially in the area of agriculture, and sup-

Local Teacher Selected for Review Panel

Miron Jenness, English teacher at Wayne Middle School, is one of the prospective members of the Nebraska Professional Practices Commission professional review panel taking part in a training conference at Omaha. The conference began Friday and runs through today (Monday).

The panel consists of teachers who will review and assess the professional performance of individual teachers when formal proceedings alleging professional incompetency have been initiated.

Twenty-five outstanding teachers were selected by the commission to attend the conference, according to the state education department. Successful completion of the training conference will qualify them as members of the review panel.

As a result of completing the training program, each participant should be acquainted with the Professional Practices Commission's work, with standards of competent professional performance and with reviewing the professional services of a fellow teacher whose competency is in question.

From this panel, the commission will select three teachers to observe, independently of each other, the teacher against whom incompetency proceedings have been brought. They will be from the same field as the teacher being observed.

Just Two Elected To Carroll Board

Terry Davis has not been elected to serve on the governing board at Carroll as has been reported in previous issues of The Wayne Herald.

Only two members were named to serve on that board in the May 14 election, said Wayne County Clerk Norris Weible. They are Ken Eddie and Dennis Rohde.

The newspaper incorrectly reported that three persons were named to the board, an error caused by an error on the sample ballots printed by the county. The sample ballots said three persons would be named to the board.

Committee Recommends $6,850 Base at Allen

The Allen school board recommended Friday night that its salary negotiating committee accept the findings of a three man committee called in after the board and teachers deadlocked in their salary negotiations earlier this year.

The three man fact finding committee had recommended Wednesday that the teachers receive a salary base of $6,850 and four per cent salary hikes for each year of experience and each step on the schedule for educational preparation.

The teachers will now have to meet to either accept or reject the committee's recommendation. If they accept the recommendation, the teachers and board will then have to formally approve the total salary package, according to superintendent Gail Miller.

On that fact finding committee were Noel Roberts of the Nebraska State Education Association, the teachers' representative; Lincoln lawyer Edwin Perry, the board's representative, and Lincoln lawyer Con Keating, named by the other two members. The committee is the last step before going to the court of industrial relations to iron out salary negotiations.

The board had offered Allen teachers a $6,800 base salary, See Committee, page 5

OBSERVATIONS

With indexing, it really can happen here!

The pay and pension benefits of about 50 million Americans are now pegged to the Consumer Price Index (CPI). In other words, when prices go up there is automatically a corresponding increase in income for these people.

Quite understandably, many other Americans who do not now benefit from this inflation shield would like to avail themselves of it. And many will succeed. Especially those close-knit groups with a great deal of coercive power over the market, such as labor unions.

So far this all sounds innocent enough, but it is really social dynamite.

Suppose inflation continues at something like the present rate. And suppose that more and more categories of income recipients are "protected" through paychecks tied to the CPI.

Those who believe themselves protected would have less incentive to demand government action to halt inflation. Inflation would probably increase, striking still harder at the people who remained unprotected. In that event, we would soon reach a situation where large groups of unprotected Americans were being reduced from prosperity to poverty and from poverty to starvation or welfare.

It is a vision of rapid and arbitrary income redistribution. Not the "have nots" taking from the "haves," but rather some groups gaining and others losing at all points on the income scale.

Long before things reached such an extreme, however, pressure from the losers would force the government to do something. But what? The winners—the people with some measure of protection—probably wouldn't sit still for drastic measures to halt inflation.

The easy way out for a politician in such a fix would be to extend automatic inflation compensation to all wages and salaries.

Of course, businesses would have to raise prices enough to cover the higher payroll costs. And the higher prices would trigger another round of raises. And the raises higher prices.

Obviously, avoiding this vicious circle would require rigid wage-price controls. We tried that, didn't we? And they didn't work, either.

The hard truth is that economists know only one sure cure for inflation: Move toward a balanced federal budget by restraining all possible federal spending and continue to restrict the growth of the money supply—measures which may risk an economic slowdown. But right now, we are a nation of people casting about for some reason to avoid going to the doctor.

The Germans tried a crude form of "indexation" to cope with their ruinous inflation of the early 1920s. Things came to the point there where workers were being paid several times a day so their wages, waiting at the factory gates, could take the money and make purchases with it before it became worthless.

In 1920, the German price index was 14 times higher than it had been in 1914. In late 1922, it was 1,500 times higher. And in late 1923—just before the Tinal collapse—German prices were more than one trillion times the 1914 average.

Once, not so long ago, I would have said it can't happen here. Now—if we don't stop trying to find ways to "live with" inflation—I'm not so sure. —By Arch Booth, president of National Chamber of Commerce.

IF THINGS had worked out as planned, we would have had a picture in Thursday's issue of the newspaper of Allen High graduate Karen Schultz taking part in the Mrs. Teen Ager Pageant at North Platte the previous Saturday.

But Eddy, a buddy on the Telegraph at North Platte, tried to get a picture of Miss Schultz, the only area contestant in the event, but "she moved just as I shot" and the picture turned out "lousy."

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Schultz of rural Ponca, Karen completed with girls from across the state for the Mrs. Teen Ager of Nebraska title. A girl out North Platte way won the annual event.

COPIES of the latest "community profile" of Wayne area now available to industrial prospects, reports Chamber of Commerce manager Howard Will.

The four-page report contains scads of statistical facts—everything from average hourly wage for a local welder ($1.01) to total employment in the county (19,911), from number of hospital beds (26) to number of motel rooms (34), from total houses, built in the last two years (18) to total manufacturing employees in the city (60).

The report was compiled and printed by the state's economic development department. Will helped prepare the profile.

THE REMOTE, wild areas of this country are "just as important as a study in natural history," says Arthur Carhart, one of the first advocates of the wilderness preservation movement which finally became embodied in the national Wilderness Act of 1964.

Carhart thinks it makes as much sense to "go tearing down the great cathedrals of the world as it does to ruin the wild lands," which haven't yet been damaged by man.

Carhart doesn't hold with the idea of those who say the wild lands aren't of much use if people can't drive their cars through them or take their families there for weekend outings. Those "materialists" don't know what they're talking about," he says.

Those feelings are the same as the ones Carhart had when he began putting down in writing some of the first ideas for preserving the great wilderness areas of this nation back in the years right after World War I.

Carhart, who is a cousin of the grandfather of Wayne residents Charles and Bob Carhart, finally gained recognition for the work he did in preserving the wild lands in their original condition with the publication of a book titled "The Quiet Revolution" by Donald Baldwin.

Baldwin dedicated the book to Carhart, who now lives in a retirement home in Lemon Grove, California, and former Secretary of Agriculture writes in the book's introduction that Carhart emerges as "a new and authentic hero" for the "millions of Americans who enjoy forest recreation and for those who journey into a Wilderness."

Carhart was the "prime mover" within the U.S. Forest Service during the years after WWI when the wilderness concept was first translated into a plan and started rearing results, writes Baldwin, who notes that Carhart might well deserve the title of "Father of the Wilderness Concept."

Carhart, who grew up in Mapleton, Iowa, first started pushing for preserving the great wild lands of this country when he was a recreation engineer for the Forest Service in the Rocky Mountain Region. That's when he was sent up to Trappers Lake in Colorado to plot several hundred summer home sites on the lake shore and to plan a road around the lake.

He was so impressed with the untouched beauty of the lake that he recommended to his superior that applications to build the summer homes not be honored. That, according to Baldwin, was the first real start of the wilderness idea in this country.

Carhart doesn't take much credit for himself, noting that others were thinking the same thoughts and did much to make the wilderness idea a reality.

He is quick to point out that the peculiar attraction of the remote areas of the world was evident clear back in Biblical times when people sought out rough, unpopulated areas to find solace and strength.

He says he was simply lucky enough to be on the "cutting edge" when the idea began to form in this country.

If you ever have an opportunity to read Baldwin's book, take advantage of it. It's a good story about Carhart and the other people who owe a great deal to helping preserve the wilderness areas of this country.

I had the additional opportunity of talking with Carhart while he was visiting in Chuck's home last week. Although 82 years old, he can remember names, dates and places better than most people half his age.

THE GRASSROOTS OPINION

York, Nebr., News-Times
A prime mover to cut down inflation must be the federal government. And the only way the federal government can cut down or even slow inflation is to keep spending within the limits of income. And until the federal government does that, you can't talk yourself blue in the face about getting more or less than what you paid in and all you're doing is putting wallpaper over the cracks. There now seems to be a small current of congressmen who are determined to get the budget sliced so that it results in a surplus instead of a deficit. Our best bet to curb the inflationary practices of the federal government is to hope this ripple becomes a tidal wave.

YOU AND YOUR CAR

By the Automotive Information Council

CATALYTIC CONVERTER
To meet the 1975 federal exhaust emission standards, the car manufacturers, individually, decided that the most practical way was to use the much talked about catalytic converter. About 75 to 80 per cent of the new models are expected to be equipped with the device.

Resembling a car's muffler in appearance, this new piece of hardware is connected to the exhaust system to further reduce the amount of hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide in the car's exhaust.

Inside the converter is a catalyst—a substance that speeds up a chemical reaction without itself being affected. The catalyst used in this case is a combination of platinum and palladium metals which are coated on small beads or a honeycomb structure. When the exhaust gas passes over the beads or through the honeycomb, a chemical reaction occurs that causes hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide to combine with air or oxygen and form water and carbon dioxide.

The catalyst is coated on beads or honeycomb to increase the surface area that is exposed to the exhaust gases. The surface area of pellets contained in a six and one-half inch square box is equal to more than 59 football fields.

Government regulations require that the catalyst be designed to function for 50,000 miles or five years before it "wears out." When it does need replacing, the catalyst material can be removed from the converter and new material inserted. It will not be necessary, under normal conditions, to replace the entire catalytic converter. The catalyst material can be replaced without removing the converter.

Wayne Girls Take Three From Laurel

Wayne girls won a trio of games from Laurel Wednesday in the opening round of the Ralph Bishop softball league.

Judy Janke threw a five-hitter contest while blanking Laurel's 15-and-under group, 6-0 at Wayne.

Steph Dorcay scored Wayne's first run after singling, stealing second and coming home on Julie Overin's single in the first inning.

The girls continued scoring in the third when Dorcay and Laura Haase opened with a pair of singles. Julie Kovensky took first on an error and Overin pounded a double. In the fourth, Janke scored on an error.

Nancy Schaefer took the loss on the mound for Laurel, giving up six runs and five hits.

Wayne's 18-and-under team turned back Laurel's come-from-behind bid in the fourth and fifth innings, 4-4.

Wayne had a 4-0 lead after three innings on scores by Laura Haas and Lisa Nuss in the second and Susan Dorcay and Julie Overin in the third. Laurel's Deanna Burns put her club on the scoreboard with a solo run in the fourth. Wayne countered with two more runs in the bottom of the fourth by Nuss and Proeff before the visitors unleashed three runs by Joan Erwin, Deanna Erwin and Carla Leapley.

Bobette Caffey posted her first win of the season while Joan Erwin took the defeat.

In the reserve game for 15 and under, Wayne blasted Laurel, 15-3.

The locals had 12 hits, including a three-run homer by Peggy Pinkelman and a triple by pitcher Lesa Barclay, leading Wayne hitters with three hits in three at bats. Pinkelman also connected for a double and a single while Barclay had two singles. Lisa Nuss had two singles in three trips to the plate.

The only other scheduled game in the league, Wakefield at Winside, was postponed due to Bible school. The teams are slated to meet July 1 at Wakefield.

New Bass Size Limits Catches

Nebraska anglers need to remember several fishing regulations that went into effect this year, according to Carl Gettmann, chief of the Game and Parks Commission's law enforcement division.

A 12-inch legal size limit on bass went into effect Jan. 1, and according to Gettmann, there are still many fishermen not familiar with the new law.

The limit was placed on bass to give them an opportunity to reach trophy size. Anglers returning smaller fish unharmed to the water are improving everyone's chances at larger fish in the future, said Gettmann.

Gettmann also receives daily inquiries about the jug fishing regulation that also went into effect this year. "No float fishing is permitted on ponds, lakes and reservoirs, and floats used on rivers or streams must be attended. The jug must not be glass, and the owner's name and address must be attached before jug fishing is legal," Gettmann warns.

If anglers have any questions about the fishing regulations, they can check with the local conservation officer in Norfolk.

Because Winside's field is not ready yet, the Wayne-Winside game will be played at Wayne Wednesday. The other league game finds Pender at Laurel. Wakefield draws a bye.

Wayne, Pender Midgets Play Tonight to Break Tie for 1st

Wayne and Pender Midgets will decide the leadership in the Ralph Bishop League tonight (Monday) when they square off at Pender.

Friday night Wayne and Pender posted their second wins of the season to tie for first place at 2-0, the locals dropping Walthill Lyons, 7-5, and Pender nipping Wisner, 3-1.

Wayne and Walthill started out with five runs in the first inning before the locals broke the tie with two runs in the third.

Both pitchers walked in their first scores. Wayne's Dave Nuss walked four and hit one Walthill player before coach Hank Overin, called on Dave Hix to take over. Hix struck out the next two batters before Walthill's catcher ripped a single and scored two more runs. A fielder's choice accounted for the fifth run.

Wayne countered with five, again with the help of walks and Walthill errors. Ritch Workman, Nuss and Paul Mallette loaded the bases on passed balls before Hix and Bob Keating walked to bring in two runners. An error on Walthill's shortstop allowed Mike Manes to take first, scoring Wayne's third run. Larry Creighton's fielder's choice and an error allowed Wayne to even the contest.

Wayne rapped up its third win overall in four starts when Aaron Nissen and Keating scored in the third. Nissen walked, stole second and third before Keating slapped a double for a 6-5 ball game. Keating came home on Mike Manes' double.

In other league action Friday, Bancroft handed Laurel its second loss in as many starts, 10-4.

Bancroft jumped out to a 10-1 lead going into the bottom of the fifth, scoring three runs in the second and two in the first, fourth and fifth frames, and one in the third.

Errors were Laurel's problem, pointed out coach Bert Johnson. The club had eight.

Laurel scored one run on a

Bancroft error in the first. Left fielder Cleve Stolpe and third baseman Brad Erwin went to first and second on errors before catcher Doug Thompson walked to fill the bases. Stolpe scored on an error by Bancroft's short stop.

Laurel tallied its final three runs in the fifth after Jon Erwin and Dave Lindgren singled and Dan Hansen walked. Brad Erwin took first on an error which scored the second run. Steve Thompson's walk and a fielder's choice by Doug Thompson let in two more runs.

Steve Thompson, 0-1, went three innings before Brad Erwin went to the mound.

The Wakefield-Winside games were postponed because of wet fields. No date has been set yet for a rematch.

Legion Blasts Walthill

Wayne's Legion team posted its first win of the early season by blanketing Walthill-Lyons 34-0 Friday night for a 1-1 record.

The locals put the game away in the first frame scoring nine runs off five hits, four walks and a hit batter. Wayne added one run in the third, then three, in the fourth to end the melee.

Wayne coach Hank Overin started Charlie Roland on the mound before turning the reins over to Randy Nelson and Earle Overin.

Bill Schwartz was the leading hitter for Wayne, connecting for three singles in four at bats, the last one good for two runs. Nelson had two singles in three at bats, also knocking in two runs.

Also Friday, Wisner defeated Pender 7-4, in the only other league game. The Wakefield-Winside game was postponed due to a wet field.

Tonight (Monday) Wayne travels to Pender while Winside is at Walthill and Laurel goes to Wisner. Wakefield goes out of the league to play Coleridge.

Haag Resigns Allen Post

Allen High School football coach-business teacher Charles Haag has resigned and plans to enter farming with his father, superintendent Gail Miller said last week.

Haag taught at Allen the past three years, his first job in the teaching field after graduating from the University of Northern Colorado at Greeley.

Miller said the death of Haag's uncle last month prompted him into deciding to join his father in his father's farming business near Willistonville in the southwest part of the state.

Miller said he is not sure how many other vacancies there will be in the school system for next year. Teachers are still returning contracts for the coming school year, he noted.

Carroll Evens Softball Mark

Lynn Gunnarson's two home runs and Larry Alderson's two triples powered Carroll's softball team to an 11-10 win over Randolph Friday night at Carroll.

Delmar Eddie hurled the winning Carroll's record in the Pioneer Carroll's Softball League at 1-1. Monday night the area club lost to Plainview, 27-7.

Tonight (Monday) Carroll travels to Wausa before hosting Osmond Thursday.

Allen Blasts Dakota City

Allen girls blasted Dakota City, 24-14, in the district action Monday night to remain undefeated in two starts.

Kathy Moore powered the area club to victory with a grand slam home run. Kim Jackson scored five runs.

Diane Witte and Lisa Carpenter were the winning battery as Witte posted her first pitching area of the season.

Board member Eugene Lundin, chief negotiator for the board, said the recommendation favored the board. "We felt that the total salary package is what is important and not just the salary base," he noted. "Apparently, this is how the fact-finding committee felt too."

Noted Lundin, "Our lawyer dissented on this opinion and recommended we go to the court of industrial relations as we had a good case to hold the base at $6,800."

Also on the board's negotiating committee are Martin Blohm and Miller.

Retirement Plan Is On Council Agenda

Wayne city councilmen will discuss a proposed ordinance providing retirement benefits for about a dozen older city employees during Tuesday night's regular meeting.

The proposal will be read for the second of possibly three times before the council can vote on accepting or rejecting it.

The plan would cost the city approximately $12,150 a year if all eligible employees took advantage of it at the same time, according to a city official.

Also during Tuesday night's meeting, scheduled for 7:30 at the city auditorium, is discussion of the request by Les Luff to expand his bottle club at Les' Steak House. The council's decision on the request will be forwarded to the state liquor

Richardson Ranch officials contend in the suit that Soden signed an agreement in May of

One hundred steers were delivered to Soden, who said the animals to Producers and Wood Brothers in April and May the following year, according to the suit, initially filed in district court in June of 1972.

to hear the siren will be solved in the near future when four additional sirens on order have been spotted around the community, former city councilman Harvey Brasch said.

And there were a few mistakes made: Wayne County sheriff Don Weible was ordered to 11th and Main instead of 14th and Main to direct traffic, and Dr. Benthaek and county civil defense director T. P. Roberts were not notified that a tornado had destroyed Rice Auditorium.

Dr. Benthaek "wandered down" to the makeshift hospital and Roberts, co-chairman with Butts of the overall operation, "came walking down to the police station and asked if there was anything he could do to help."

Those mistakes can be avoided if a real disaster ever does strike by better planning, according to observers. But some of the other mistakes will creep into even the best-planned disaster rescue operations, they added.

"The community would be better prepared to deal with a real disaster if more private citizens would take first aid courses, observers noted,

TV Note book

By Larry Turner

Have you ever wondered how those marvelous animal shows are taken for wildlife shows? Well, each type of wildlife requires its own special techniques, but basically it's a matter of finding an expert who has spent many years, living with and studying the specie to be photographed.

A completely unprecedented show about beavers, for example, was filmed by a man-and-wife team of wildlife experts who had studied wild beavers for 30 years. They were able to record the private lives of wild beavers from a glass-walled box which was built in an underwater beaver lodge.

Nobody comes around to photograph us, and we work like beavers to keep TV fans happy. We sell the best and service the rest. All makes and models.

Wanted: Green Thumb

Never having been much for flowers and gardening, it was with some surprise that I found myself, some years after we first moved to our own home, studying seed catalogues and reading backs of flower seed packets in the variety store.

Even more surprising was the discovery, now that I was actually entertaining the notion of planting something, that I hadn't the vaguest idea of how to go about it.

Perhaps it shouldn't have been such a surprise. My mother had for years taken home my house plants for periodic rest-cures, nursing them back to health or replacing those which had gone on to glory.

At any rate, the last house plant Mom gave me (one of those things with red and green leaves) had lasted well over the usual four months, and I decided there could really not be much to putting out a few flowers to brighten up the lawn.

It being my first attempt, I concluded that already-started plants would be a safer investment than packaged seeds, and I came home from the greenhouse with not less than seven varieties of what I supposed would turn into a gay profusion of bordering plants.

Several weeks later, with nearly everything dead, I realized green thumbiness was not my line. Even the marigolds did not long withstand the chubby fingers of inquisitive youngsters who had never before seen anything but plastic flowers.

For the next several years I set out only marigolds, having recognized my limitations. (All the peonies I transplanted grew to 14 inches and refused to budge on; the apple tree developed blight and cedar apple rust; I even killed off the lemon tree which I was told had grown for years in the yard before we moved here.)

Then last year, with new courage — after successfully keeping a tender fern alive and thriving for over a year — I was ready to try again. I bought dozens of packages of minute seeds, begged starter plants from all my relatives and brought home wild varieties of things from the country, one of which appears to be noxious and threatens to take over our back yard.

The dwarf zinnias actually grew and bloomed and bloomed and bloomed. I was elated! Can you imagine the delight of finally seeing to maturity a flower that I had actually raised from a baby seed?

Not completely hooked, I find myself just as devoted as my mother was before she died to the annual flower bed rituals. True, my rows of day lilies, set out with such care last fall, are not exactly evenly, nor even artily spaced; the fox glove to me by a neighbor almost got weeded out this spring because I didn't recognize it, and the bachelor buttons were just a wee bit thick.

But success is in sight: The peonies brought forth a dozen robust buds this summer and several actually opened.

Never mind about the strawberries that "anyone can grow," the tomatoes that "take care of themselves," or the dill that "will never die out."

Say, do you suppose I could turn that corner by the garbage cans into a little Japanese garden setting? Or maybe an espallier arrangement would be nice against the garage.

'Brides Should Change Names With SS'

More than two million women will be married this year, about 280,000 of them in June, and one thing they should all remember is to change their names with social security, according to Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk.

"A bride should give us her new married name to keep her social security card and her earnings record accurate and up-to-date. Then earnings she had both before and after her marriage can be correctly credited to the same record."

A woman's earnings in jobs covered by social security will determine her cash benefits. During her working years, she also builds retirement, disability, survivors and Medicare protection for herself and her family.

A new bride may call, write or visit any social security office to get her name changed on her record, or she can use a form available at any post office and many employer personnel offices, Branch said.

'Flying By the Seat of His Pants' Is Fitting Description

By NORVIN HANSEN
 "You can still see the throttle marks on my hand," quipped Dick Grosvenor after he took his first real ride in his gyrocopter at the municipal airport in Wayne last week.

He was the guy flying around in that funny looking and plenty loud — thing in the air Thursday morning.

The gyrocopter, which he bought for $1,500 last fall from Francis Voss of Emerson, is a unique flying machine because it is lifted into the air by a long blade which spins on the top as the machine moves through the air. There is no motor to power that spinning blade as there is on a helicopter.

What gets the one-seat aircraft into the air is a small engine behind the pilot which turns a prop forcing the aircraft forward. The faster the machine moves forward, the faster the blade overhead turns until it finally lifts the machine into the air.

Although the engine pushes the aircraft forward, the gyrocopter can be landed if that engine quits while airborne. The air will continue spinning the overhead blade as the machine falls to the earth, permitting the pilot to glide to a landing about the same as if the engine were running, according to Grosvenor.

Grosvenor, 26, flew the gyrocopter around the community for about half an hour, the first time he has ventured away from the airport since he began learning to fly the machine.

He gained an altitude of about 200 feet and an air speed of about 50 miles an hour, he said. Flying in the gyrocopter isn't too much different than flying in a small airplane, he said, but he admits there is a unique sensation to it. That's because there is little more to the aircraft than a bucket seat, a curved windshield and a partially enclosed cockpit.

Wind whistles past the open sides and the noise of the motor just behind the pilot's head makes it "just as noisy as riding in a helicopter," he said.

The sensation would be even more unnerving if Voss hadn't built that windshield and the sides of the cockpit which rap around to the partly enclosed pilot in the aircraft Gyrocopters, which are built from kits, are designed so there is little more to the cockpit than the seat, small instrument panel and foot pedals — leaving an almost unrestricted view for the pilot forward, to the sides and straight down.

The gyrocopter weighs about 300 pounds and isn't quite as long as a Volkswagen when the 21 foot, 50 pound overhead blade is taken off.

The engine that gives it forward motion is about the same size as one in a Volkswagen — a two cycle, four cylinder M Cullough engine rated at about 90 horsepower.

The only instruments on the small panel an arm's reach from the pilot are the turn and bank indicator, and altimeter, an airspeed gauge and a compass. The pilot flies the aircraft by using a single stick between his legs to control the speed of the engine and tilt the long rotor to make a turn. He uses his feet to operate the rudders for turns.

Grosvenor, who learned how to fly while in the Air Force, said he bought the experimental aircraft because he can't afford a private plane. He had hoped he would be able to fly it from his farm nine miles west of Ponca, but he has found out that a longer, smoother runway would be required than he can build.

"Now that I know it flies, I'm going to try to sell it," he said after landing the aircraft Thursday morning.

When he landed, he got some kidding from kibitzers who were standing around. Asked one of them "Is it true that the seat gets an inch narrower for every 1,000 feet?"

Grosvenor smiled, then admitted he had been holding onto the stick pretty good while he was up in the air.

WH Graduate Is Awarded Scholarship
 Kay Pankratz, a spring graduate of Wayne High School, is the recipient of a scholarship award at Friends University at Wichita, Kan. She was awarded an honor scholarship by the Student Aid Committee.

A Certificate of Honor is awarded to all applicants who have at least a 37 cumulative high school grade point average or are in the top five per cent of their class. Financial aid applicants will receive up to 50 per cent of tuition. Renewal requires a 3.5 cumulative grade point average for the first college year and each term following.

Friends University is a private liberal arts university with an enrollment of 900.

Four-H Lambs To Be Sheared, Weighed Soon

Four H market lambs to be entered in the Wayne County Fair will be sheared and weighed Wednesday from 9:30 to 3 p.m. at the fairgrounds.

All sheep will be sheared so they will look uniform at the fair and so they will gain better during the hot weather, said county agent Don Spitzke.

Only two lambs for each 4-H'er will be eligible for the rate of gain contest. The first time in several years there has been a gain contest for 4-H lambs in Wayne County.

Wool sheared during Wednesday will be kept and sold to raise money to purchase sheep equipment which will be available to all 4-H members, according to Spitzke.

There also will be a wool fleeces contest during the fair, with each 4-H'er eligible to enter a fleece from an aged ewe.
