

Council Okays Paying For Access Road to City's New Hospital

Wayne's city council Tuesday night agreed to pay for an access road to the new hospital under construction, erasing a problem that has been facing the city and the future hospital owners in recent weeks.

Exact cost of the road from 10th Street north to the hospital driveway isn't known yet, but city administrator Fred Brink told the council Tuesday night that it could total "in the neighborhood of $30,000."

Also Tuesday night, the council agreed on a 7-1 vote to give the Chamber of Commerce $900 to help pay for three Chamber projects, recommended to the city by a 2-2 vote that Frank Woehler not receive a package liquor license and accepted on an 8-0 vote a package plan putting almost all city employees on a salary schedule.

The vote to pay for the access road came several weeks after city attorney Budd Bornhoff advised the council that it would be difficult to legally justify a council decision in which all taxpayers of the city would help share the cost of the road.

He had told the council the road would benefit the hospital and possibly the property owners along the west side of it. Therefore, he said, those who benefit should share their burden of the cost.

The council skirted that legal issue Tuesday night by agreeing to donate the money to the non-profit corporation providing the hospital, the Missionary Benedictine Sisters of Norfolk. That, according to Bornhoff, is permitted under state law.

Approval to pay for the approximate south half of the proposed road between 10th and 14th Streets came after local hospital administrator Charles Thomas told the council the Sisters had agreed to move a road in order to make the road continuous between 10th and 14th.

That will cost "almost triple" the $5,000 at one time requested from the Sisters by mayor Freeman Decker to help pay for the access road, according to Thomas.

The Sisters have agreed to move one of the service roads a few yards east to connect with the access road on the east side of the hospital, Thomas said. The council's approval didn't come without objections by councilman John Vakoc, who said he could not understand how the council could justify another cash donation on top of the large donations already given by the city and private citizens.

He said his figures show that the Sisters, who will own the hospital, have contributed $750,000 toward the total estimated bill of $2,289,000 which the hospital is expected to cost by the time it is completed next spring. That, he pointed out, is about 32 per cent of the total cost.

Vakoc said it was an instance of "throwing taxpayers' money around" to pay for that road after it was never mentioned when work on raising money for the hospital first began.

He said the necessity for the second access road was not known until several months ago "when some beaureaucrat pointed it out."

The second access road is being demanded by the federal government before it will permit the hospital to open, according to those involved in raising money for the hospital.

Vakoc also voted against giving money to the Chamber. To See SPENDING, page 6

Busy Bird Cause Of Monday Fire?

The Wayne County Fair just about got off to a blazing start a few days early.

Wayne volunteer firemen rushed to the fairgrounds shortly after noon Monday to investigate a fire, but all they found was a smoking bird's nest.

What caused the nest to start burning is unknown, says fire chief Cliff Pinkelmann, but some people theorized a bird picked up a smoldering cigarette and carried it to her nest. Others think some youngsters might have started the fire. Others aren't saying.

'Think It'll Rain?' 'Watch the Blue Jay'

By BOB BARTLETT

When Walt and Ruth Lage farmed north of Carroll about 12 years ago, the couple watched the swallows and blue jays to tell them when it would rain.

"When the barn swallows flew close to the ground or in a circular motion, that was a sign of a change in the weather," Mrs. Lage said. "And when you saw and heard the blue jay holler, rain was on the way."

"That is just one of the many ways some farmers and ranchers use to go about trying to predict rain. For many, though, the moon is one of the best forecasters.

When the earth's shadow on the moon made it appear as if the moon were tipping, farmers would say it was going to rain, according to George Monk, also of Carroll.

Actually, the moon really doesn't affect the weather, Monk believes. But the 56 year old former farmer added: "If we don't get rain when the moon changes (its phases), then it will be about two to three weeks before our next rain."

Monk, who learned many of his ways of predicting rain from his father, says he's been correct about 70 per cent.

However, neither Monk nor Lage give full credit to their fathers for being able to forecast rain. For the "signs" they learned originated with the Indians who once lived in the Midlands.

One particular saying that Monk remembers concerns the color of the caterpillar in fall. "If the caterpillar's skin turns dark in the fall, we'll be in store for a bad winter," he said.

The best predictor of rain both believe in is a sign of a spring opening when the creek beds are dry. Other signs the Lages look for are the rooster crowing at night or water pipes sweating.

Music Camp At College Busy Place

Summer Music Camp was going at a busy pace by mid week with a gain of about 15 per cent in enrollment and perhaps the liveliest program of activities in years.

Something like 150 high school musicians were rehearsing in Wayne State's Fine Arts Center and Student Center to prepare for the concert and a variety show remaining on the week's schedule.

So much was going on that Dr. Cornell Runesland, director, and his staff had not found time by Wednesday to count the exact number of students.

The public is invited to attend any of the performances, all free except the final concert at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in Ramsey Theatre of the Fine Arts Center. Admission for that event: $1 for adults, 50 cents for students over 12.

Meanwhile, the evening schedule includes these events: Thursday, Camp Capers, a variety show with performers chosen by audition. Friday, honors concert of select ensembles, the string orchestra, the concert choir and the wind ensemble. All of these are set for 8:15 p.m. in Ramsey Theatre.

Guest conductor Dr. Allan Lehl of the Drake University music faculty will be here the rest of the week to rehearse the See MUSIC, page 6

That's the prize which will be awarded the person whose birthday matches the date drawn at random and announced in all participating stores at 8:15 p.m. this evening. The Birthday Bucks are coupons which may be spent just like cash in any participating firm.

The prize climbs to that level $500 above what it was before it began inching up by $25 a week several months ago — as a result of another week going by See PRIZE, page 6

4-Day Wayne County Fair A Big 'Dish' for All Tastes

Something for almost everyone is scheduled during the four-day Wayne County Fair which opens today (Thursday) in Wayne.

Activities range all the way from the usual livestock judging events to a cake bake open only to men and boys wishing to test their culinary abilities.

Also scheduled are performances by the Wayne High School marching band, tractor pull, horseshoe pitching, demolition derby and other activities.

Daily admission during the four day fair is $1.50 for persons 16 years of age and older, 75 cents for youngsters 12 to 15 years old. Youths under 12 years are admitted free.

Passes for the full four days are available for $4 for adults and $2 for youths.

Marlyn Koch of Wayne, secretary-manager of fair activities, said "enthusiasm has been very good" during the final days of preparing for the fair.

He noted that area residents should find some interesting exhibits on display this year, among them the ecology exhibit set up by students at Wayne High and the exhibit showing the dangers of smoking.

He said all youngsters in the area are encouraged to enter their pets in Saturday's pet show.

All men in the county — both city and rural — are invited to enter the cake baking contest to raise money for the March of Dimes, noted Koch. Cakes may be baked at the fairgrounds today, Friday or Saturday, with the results being sold during Saturday night's tractor pull.

Mrs. Leo Hansen, chairman of the open class division at the fair, encourages all women to enter such things as baked goods, canned food, fruits, vegetables, arts and craft items.

and flowers in the fair. She also urges persons with hobbies to display the results of their efforts at the fair. Exhibits should be entered today between 8:45 and noon, she said.

One of the highlights of today's activities is the junior rodeo slated for 7:30 p.m.

Youngsters from around the area will compete to see who is tops in such areas as calf riding and goat tying.

Also slated for 7:30 tonight are two activities which might appeal to youths but which are probably dreaded by their mothers — greased pig catch and greased pole climbing.

Fair activities start today with open class horse judging at 1 p.m., with the 4-H and open class sheep judging slated to begin at 1:30. Open class home economics judging begins today at 3 p.m.

The Wayne High marching band will perform at 6:30 this evening, with the judging of 4-H dairy cattle slated for 7:30 tonight because of a last-minute conflict with the judges.

Friday should bring plenty of fair goers for two reasons — rides on the midway will cost just half the regular price from 1 to 5 p.m. because it is kids' day and the free barbecue is slated for that evening.

The free feed, which annually attracts several thousand persons, will feature beef sandwiches, beans, potato chips, ice cream and drinks. Serving begins at 6 p.m.

Also slated for Friday are 4-H hog judging at 8 a.m., 4-H beef judging later in the morning, the performance by the "Haz-Ben Band" at 6:30, 4-H livestock parade at 7:30 and the Williams Family performance at 8:15.

Saturday's activities include the market hog show at 8 a.m., open class beef judging at 9, horseshoe pitching and 4-H horse show at 1 p.m., kiddie pet show at 1:30 and tractor pull at 7 that evening.

The tractor pull, state-sanctioned this year, features a total purse of $1,500, $300 larger than last year. Winners in the contest will gain points which will qualify them to compete in the state fair in Lincoln next month.

Sunday's activities don't start until the afternoon, offering area residents an opportunity to attend church in the morning. The pony pull, slated for the new steel show ring, will begin at 1:30 Sunday afternoon, followed that evening by the demolition derby at 7:30.

Exhibits will be released at 7 p.m. on Sunday.

Total Precipitation in July: .47

It's Still Dry, Folks

That smattering of rain which fell on Wayne late Tuesday night and early Wednesday morning failed to keep July this year from becoming the third driest July on record in this community.

A total of 15 of an inch of rain had fallen by 9 a.m. Wednesday, bringing the total precipitation for July to 47 of an inch.

That trails only 1936 when 06 of an inch fell in July, and 1930 when 20 of an inch fell in that month.

Total precipitation in Wayne from April through Wednesday morning was 8.23 inches, making that growing period the driest one in the past 10 years and sixth driest on record.

Drier April July periods were recorded in 1925 (5.97 inches), 1936 (6.31), 1926 (7.64), 1931 (7.66) and 1933 (7.71).

Records kept at the State National Bank go back to 1914, but records for the final six months of 1941 and the years 1942 through 1948 are missing.

Work to Equalize Property Taxes Underway

Within the next few weeks, employees of the Wayne County assessor's office will begin inspecting all land and buildings in the county in an attempt to equalize property taxes.

Their efforts tie in with a state-wide attempt to place a fair dollar value on all real estate in the state regardless of which county it is located in.

Doris Shipp, county assessor, said the two lists who will be doing the majority of the inspecting in Wayne County will begin work in late August or early September so as much rural property can be inspected as possible before bad weather sets in this winter.

The main goal of the updating of the 1966 appraisal is to equalize property values so everyone is paying their fair share in taxes," said Mrs. Shipp.

She noted that her office will be using two manuals adopted by the state in updating the 1966 appraisal of all real estate in the county.

The manuals, which also will be used by other county assessors across the state as they conduct their reappraisals, describe how land values can be determined and how building values can be established.

It marks the first time in the state's history that all assessors in the state have been using uniform guidelines in establishing property values, according to Mrs. Shipp.

"Previously, different standards were used by each of the 93 counties, and the value of an acre of irrigated land or of identical buildings varied tremendously from one county to another," said Mrs. Shipp.

However, research has indicated that at the most there is only a three per cent variance in building costs across the state and a 15 per cent variance in the market value of an acre of number one irrigated land within the state, proving the need for uniform manuals to be used by assessors, she said.

The land manual is based on agricultural data, including average crop yields, average prices of commodities, market data and soil classification. The construction cost manual is based on information compiled from detailed surveys.

Wayne Man Is Selected Legion Area Commander

Chris Bargholz of Wayne was named Area A vice commander Sunday at the close of the 56th annual convention of the Nebraska Department of the American Legion in North Platte.

Bargholz, believed to be the first Wayne man ever named to that post, will represent the 10-county Northeast Nebraska area of Cedar, Dixon, Wayne, Dakota, Thurston, Cuming, Burl, Washington, Douglas and Sarpy Counties.

He was one of four vice commanders selected during the three-day convention, which attracted more than 500 Legionnaires from across the state.

Named Area B vice commander was Carl Scheel of Battle Creek, a former resident of Wayne and Wakefield. Both were installed in their one-year posts Sunday.

Bargholz, who serves as Wayne County veterans service officer, replaces Joe Cupich of Omaha. Scheel replaces Jack Gilmont of Archer.

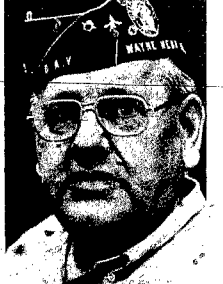

Bargholz, 62, will work directly under the new state commander, Charles Singleton of Dix. Much of his work will be in the area of membership, Bargholz said.

Among the resolutions adopted by the American Legion during the convention was one affirming the organization's opposition to general amnesty for draft dodgers. The Legionnaires also adopted resolutions supporting increased pension benefits for veterans and retention of the selective service system.

Koch: Don't Forget To Help Clean Up

Although the four-day Wayne County Fair is just beginning, Marlyn Koch is asking everybody to keep in mind that cleaning up the fairgrounds will be done late Tuesday afternoon.

Koch, secretary-manager of fair activities, said volunteers should bring their own tools to help clean up the grounds and the livestock barns so the job can be completed in a few hours.

Youth Injured in Mishap

Keith Sueli, 16, of rural Winside suffered a head cut when the car he was driving struck the rear end of another car about two and a half miles east of Hoskins on a county road about 12:30 a.m. Sunday.

State patrolman Bill Watson of Wayne, who investigated the accident, said Sueli was eastbound when he struck a car driven by Vaughn Glassmeyer, 19, of rural Wayne. Glassmeyer, also eastbound, was stopped at the time of the mishap, Watson reported.

Both cars ended up in the south ditch, with the Glassmeyer automobile on top of the Sueli vehicle, he said. None of the five passengers in the Sueli car was injured, he noted.

Both vehicles suffered extensive damage, he reported, and Sueli was taken by his parents to a Norfolk hospital for treatment of the head cut.

Later in the day patrolman Watson investigated a one-vehicle accident, two miles east and four and a half miles south of Belden on a county road.

About 1:30 p.m. a northbound truck driven by George Blakeman, 35, of Wayne went out of control, went into the west ditch and ended up on its side. The truck sustained heavy damage to the front end, according to Watson, but Blakeman was not injured.

On Wednesday of last week, Watson investigated a car-tractor accident on a county road one mile west and about three-quarter mile north of Winside.

That accident happened about 5 p.m. when a northbound car driven by Clarence Chapman, 18, of Carroll struck the front end of a tractor driven by Mitchell Pfeiffer, 13, of rural Winside.

Pfeiffer was driving onto the county road to go south when the mishap happened, Watson reported. Extensive damage was done to the front end of the car and a wheel was torn off the front of the tractor, he said. Neither driver suffered injuries, according to Watson.

We need more than 45 different nutrients for good nutrition and health. Different people need different amounts of each nutrient depending on age, size, sex and physical activities. We get these nutrients by eating a variety of foods each day. Breakfast is an important first source of these nutrients each day.

Although many foods can be eaten in the morning, a quick-to-fix breakfast that helps provide many of the 45 or more nutrients is citrus juice or fruit, cereal with milk, toast with butter or margarine and milk to drink.

NEN Title on Line Tonight

Wayne and Homer will decide tonight (Thursday) the season king in the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League when both clubs, currently tied for first place, square off at Homer.

Sunday night Homer evened the records at 16-2 with a 6-2 victory over Wayne to force the teams into an extra game before the four-team post-season play-off tournament starts Sunday.

Wayne had led the league throughout the season.

In the playoffs, the first place team will play Dakota City while the second-place club hosts Newcastle. The two winners of the best of three games will collide for the playoff tournament title.

Wayne lost its chances of taking the season crown outright when it gave up five runs in the first two innings of Sunday night's final regularly scheduled game at Homer.

Randy Benish, on the mound for Wayne, gave up seven singles and a double in the first two innings. The locals looked respectable the remainder of the game, giving up one run in the eighth on a single.

Wayne scored in the fifth when left fielder Mike Creighton scored after taking first on a fielder's choice. Second baseman Randy Helgren tallied the last run, singling in the seventh frame and advancing on a walk and fielder's choice before scoring on an error.

The game was billed as a duel between Wayne's pitching and Homer's hitting. The league's

Allen '9' Advances to Meet Finals

Paul Snyder struck out nine Martinsburg batters to boost Allen Midgets to their 11th win in 13 games Sunday and advance the team to the playoff finals of the Northeast Nebraska Little League.

Shortstop Charlie Peters, who went three for four at the plate, drove in the first two runs before Snyder ripped a single for a 3-0 lead in the second inning. Allen then put together a pair of two-run innings in the second and sixth.

In another NEN playoff game Sunday, Ponca ripped Emerson, 10-9, to set up the championship game between Allen and Ponca, slated for last night at Ponca.

Allen Martinsburg closed its season on a winning note Saturday by beating Pender, 6-4.

Wakefield Legion Wins Tourney

Neil Blohm threw a two-hitter and knocked in three runs as Wakefield hammered Norfolk 8-1 Tuesday night to win the Class A area tournament at Columbus.

Blohm drove in a pair of runs in the three-run third inning on a single as Wakefield marched to its fourth straight tournament victory. Blohm smacked in the team's fifth run in the eighth frame when Wakefield scored five runs to take a 8-1 command.

"The turning point in the game came in the seventh inning after Norfolk scored its only run," said coach Paul Eaton.

Norfolk's Doug Calhoun was safe on first on one of two Wakefield errors for the night before scoring on pitcher Ted Hall's double off the wall. "Hall tried to stretch the double into a triple but a fine throw by center fielder Doug Fischer to Dale Bell (third base) put him out," Eaton said.

Eaton credited Wakefield's defense with doing a fine job. In the bottom of the ninth Wakefield came up with a double play to end the contest. Blohm grabbed a grounder and fired to second baseman Mike Soderberg before he threw to first baseman Sam Utecht for the final out.

In the third inning Fischer and Bell singled and Soderberg doubled to score Fischer before he and Bell came home on Blohm's single.

In the eighth inning Mike Soderberg walked. Bell singled and Doug Soderberg was hit by a pitch to load the sacks. Scott Miller sacrificed in one run. Blohm singled in another run and Keith Siebrandt singled to load the bases again. Roger Lueth's fielder's choice scored another run. Utecht walked and Fischer was safe on error which scored two runs.

Overall, Wakefield stands at 33 11 overall into Saturday's state Class A Legion tournament at Hastings. As of Wednesday morning Eaton did not know who Wakefield would play first

Sportsbeat

By Bob Bartlett

IT LOOKS like Wayne's first Sports Festival is going to get off the ground this year with at least four events on tap. The four-day festival starts Aug. 15, with the Wayne County Jaycees' third annual tennis tournament at the Wayne State tennis courts. Several new additions this year should make the tourney one of the best in the area. There will be girls division with several age brackets; women's doubles, mixed doubles and men's doubles over age 30. Finals are scheduled for the 17th, with the 18th as a rain date.

Aug. 17th activities also will include a 6:30 p.m. horseshoe pitching contest at the fairgrounds with Walt Hamm of Winside in charge. Also that night there will be a 7 p.m. swim meet for all area youngsters up to and including 14 years old. There will be four different age groups competing in two events, freestyle and backstroke, said local pool manager Doug Krecklow. Medals will be awarded to winners in eight and under, 9-10, 11-12 and 13-14 age divisions.

The Wayne Country Club will hold its annual tournament for club members only on the 18th with tee-off time set for 9 a.m. Festival director Sid Hillier, said three other events are in the planning stages — a 10-speed bicycle race, softball tournament and trap shoot. Hillier hopes to have more information on those by next week.

A POLL being taken by Northeast Nebraska Baseball secretary Merlin "Lefty" Olson of Wakefield shows that so far the vote is split 50-50 to include Norfolk in next year's team roster.

According to Olson, if the present 10-team League should drop to nine, the gate would be open for Norfolk to join. Or, if there should be room for 12 teams, Norfolk again would be the top choice if all league members approve.

FOR SEVERAL years the Ralph Bishop League has been run primarily by one person, Wayne's Hank Overin, because no one else wanted the job. I think it's about time for a change. How about electing a president, vice president and secretary to distribute the load? The best time to elect personnel would be right now before the school year begins. That way everyone will know who's in charge when the new season starts. Then when the season starts next summer, everyone can't say, "I don't have time let Hank do it."

There are some problems to be solved in the league, for example, the high scores in Little League games. One reason for that is the closeness of the bases. Usually for that age group the bases are 60 feet apart. Why not increase that distance to 70 feet to slow down on steals and number of runs? That might help cut down scores to prevent such whitewashes as Wayne's 31-0 clobbering of Winside. ANOTHER THING I would like to see is baffling statistics on the top 10 or 15 Midget and Legion players, similar to what's done in the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League.

I'd be willing to handle that chore, providing the coaches would send the info to me. It would be interesting to know who is the top slugger in the league or to know the caliber of player in the North-South Midget all-star lineup, for instance.

The Legion would be one particular area I would especially want to cover, because there is a strong possibility the Legion also will have an all-star game next July.

ONLY ONE high school has reported its date for physicals for those going out for football. Winside will give physicals Aug. 15 at the high school. As yet no official word from any of the four other area football coaches. The only information to release (which most know by now) is that practice can start Aug. 19.

Wayne Girls Win Title

Wayne's 15-and-under girls softball team joined the 15-and-under reserve team as one of the top teams in the Ralph Bishop League Tuesday.

The local girls won their division by dropping Wakefield, 6-2, in one of their tightest ball games.

Wakefield (6-2) had a 1-0 lead on a home run by Robin Mills in the first inning before Wayne tied the game in the second on Julie Overin's sacrifice to score Tammie Schultz from third. Earlier, Schultz hit a triple. Wayne mustered another run in the second when Judy Janke walked and later scored on Susie Schwartz's single. Then the team broke the game open with four runs in the fourth.

The win gives the squad an 8-0 record for the season. In the reserve game, Wayne nipped Wakefield, 4-1. Lisa Nuss, Peg Pinkelman and Sue Proett each hit home runs for Wayne as the team finished the season at 8-0. Wakefield is 2-6.

In the 18-and-under contest, Wakefield stopped Wayne, 18-8, with the aid of homers by Mary Kober, Kitty Fischer, and Donna Lueders. Julie Kovensky led Wayne hitters with a home run. The loss drops Wayne's record to 5-3 and third place. Wakefield wins the division with a 7-1 mark.

Teams 5, 2 Tie

Teams 5 and 2 remained tied for the lead in the Wayne Country Club women's golf league playoff tournament after both totaled 19 points during Tuesday's four-team playoffs.

Team 15 (Terri Turner, Joan Potts) was third while Team 19 (Donna Best, Irene Block) was fourth. As yet no date has been set when the Team 5 (Gay Thorbeck, Minnie Rice) and Team 2 (Carolyn Bigelow, Mylet McGath) will play for the league title, according to league secretary Adeline Kienast.

Low scores include Bigelow and Terri Turner, both shooting 50; Thorbeck, 51; Marlon Evans and Joy Hein, 53, and McGath, 54.

Starting at 7 a.m. Tuesday the women will hold their annual club tournament. So far 35 women have signed up for the handicap meet, which includes the regular 18 holes plus a nine-hole championship flight.

Wheeler, operator of the Gem Cafe, saw his request for a public liquor license fall on a 2-2 vote.

Vernon Russell and Vakoc voted in favor of recommending to the state that he be given the license, which he has requested several times in recent years.

Voting to recommend the license be denied were Leo Hansen, Darrell Fuelberth, Jim Thomas, Ted Bae, Ivan Beeks and Carolyn Filter.

Several councilmen noted that it seems unfair for the council to regulate the number of liquor licenses, but they said it may be necessary to do so to prevent saturation of the city with liquor licenses.

Thomas told Wheeler that if the council votes in favor of granting his request, the council may end up allowing grocery stores, other cafes and the like to have similar licenses.

Wheeler made several comments during the discussion, noting that the license could mean the difference between keeping his business open or closing it. He said it is impossible to earn a profit on just his food and beer sales. He also said he has one of the cleanest records known as far as liquor violations are concerned.

Mrs. Filter apparently summed up feelings of the majority of the council when she commented: "I personally feel we

Some New Features

AMERICAN LEGION and Midget baseball fans will notice several improvements the next time they visit the Wayne ball park. City recreation crews already have installed screens in front of the dugouts in preparation for the Area A Midget and Legion tournament which starts Friday.

According to recreation director Hank Overlin, other improvements include repainting of the grandstand, putting up a snow fence to mark off the foul territory along first and third base lines and work on the field. Checking the new protection screen are, from left, Earle Overlin, Mike Manes and Dave Hlx.

Bargains for the Asking

SWARMS of area residents jammed sidewalks in Wayne Saturday morning in search of bargains during the annual Dog Days. Clothes, toys, trinkets and a variety of other merchandise were marked down in price for the one-day affair. Among those searching for a bargain were Glenn Sumner of Wayne, photo. Bruce Nordby of Coleridge, bottom left, gets assistance from his mother in trying on a pair of tennis shoes. On the right, Flora Bergt stocks some of the bargains on sale at Wayne Book Store.

Equalizing Taxes —

on structures typical to the state. To determine land values, the state was divided into seven valuation areas, according to Mrs. Stipp. Wayne County was placed in a district including Knox, Cedar, Dixon, Antelope, Pierce, Boone, Madison, Stanton, Nance, Platt, Colfax and Merrick Counties. Within this district, land values for different valuation groups are the same, she notes. For example, throughout the district, number one irrigated cropland is valued at $225 an acre, number one dryland cropland at $300, number one pasture at $285 and number one range-land and meadow at $225. All wasteland will be valued at $10 per acre. Although the land valuations have been established across the state, county assessors are permitted to deviate from those valuations by as much as 20 per cent if the assessor can justify it by sales price data, production figures, location or the like, Mrs. Stipp noted. Previously, she said, assessors would vary valuations as much as 40 per cent at their own discretion without any sort of state-wide guidelines. Mrs. Stipp said she hopes to complete the reappraisal of all land and buildings in the county by the Jan. 1, 1977 deadline set by the state.

Any changes in taxes which may come about because of the reappraisal will not be evident until property owners begin paying their taxes in 1978, she said.

Already completed by the assessor's office is classifying each half-acre of land in the county according to the type of soil it contains, Mrs. Stipp noted. Used in the classification were new soil maps recently completed by the Soil Conservation Service, she said.

Yet to be done is for the listers to visit the interiors of real estate in the county — urban as well as rural — to determine what kinds of buildings are located on it, she noted.

The listers will have to be permitted to see the interiors of the buildings and homes to get an accurate listing, she said. If an interior inspection is refused by the property owner, the lister will have to estimate the interior, she said, and most instances that will not benefit the taxpayer.

Both listers, who will be named later, have had schooling to qualify them for their job and will be assisted by personnel from the state tax commissioner's office, Mrs. Stipp noted. They will carry identification cards so they can readily identify themselves, she added.

Once the reappraisal is completed, the real value of the taxable property in the county can be kept up to date rather than being permitted to get out of line with comparable property within the county or in another county, according to Mrs. Stipp.

This will benefit all taxpayers, she said, because everybody will be paying their fair share in taxes based on the value of their property.

Mrs. Stipp notes that there is one danger in reevaluating taxable property. That hazard is that tax-supported bodies such as school districts or municipalities may try to keep the same levies even though the tax base becomes larger, she said. To avoid this problem, the state revenue department has advised county boards to demand dollar budgets instead of tax levies from school districts, municipal boards and the like.

That way, she said, the tax levy should drop as the property valuation in a county increases.

Yard Quiz

Can you feed rhubarb leaves to livestock? No, they are poisonous.

What causes the leaves on my rose bushes to turn yellow and fall off? Black spot will cause the leaves to turn yellow and fall off. A number of materials may be used for control. Benlate is a good material which will control several of the diseases of roses. Maneb or captan will also do a good job.

What causes hollyhocks to get holes in the leaves, turn yellow and fall off (leaves have tiny raised brown spots when they fall off)? The little holes could be due to flea beetles and the spots might be rust. Flea beetles can be controlled with Sevin or diazinon or malathion. For the rust, go with Zineb. It can be combined with the Sevin or diazinon.

HEALTH TIP
FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

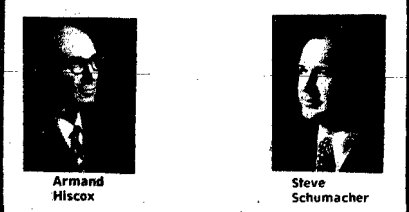

Careful planning is important to immunization programs so vaccines are given at the proper times and in proper sequence.

The Nebraska Medical Association urges parents to keep an adequate record of immunizations for every family member including date and type of vaccine given.

Most Americans are immunized in childhood for five diseases: smallpox, diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus and polio. Measles vaccine is now available, and influenza and typhoid fever vaccines are available and recommended when traveling to some parts of the world.

Booster shots are recommended to prevent several diseases. For instance, diphtheria toxoid boosters should be given at least every three years until high school age. Whooping cough boosters are given until a child is five or six. Tetanus or lockjaw is always a threat unless a person is adequately immunized. Many physicians recommend every five years for adults.

The association urges families to check with their family physician on recommended and needed immunizations for their family members to prevent disease and help maintain good community health.

GARY PICK of Wayne and the trailer which came loose while he was driving a tractor west through Wayne Monday afternoon are visible through the shattered rear window of the car which the trailer struck on East Seventh Street. Driving the car, which was stopped to make a left turn onto Walnut Street, was Linda Baddorf, 20, of Wayne. She suffered a bump on the head when the trailer struck the left rear side of her car. She was treated and released from the medical clinic. Pick, unaware the trailer had come loose, had to be flagged down by a motorist after he drove several blocks beyond the accident.

VA Increases Interest Rates On Home Loans

The Veterans Administration, along with similar action by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, on FHA loans, has increased the interest rate on GI home loans from 8.75 to 9 per cent.

VA officials said the increase stemmed from conditions that have contributed to rising interest rates across the country. However, the interest rate on VA mobile home loans, which generally run for shorter terms and are for smaller amounts, was not increased, they said. The latest increase was the fourth change in the interest rate on VA-FHA home loans this year. The rate was lowered from 8.5 to 8.25 per cent on Jan. 22, increased to 8.5 per cent on April 15 and increased to 8.75 on May 13 before edging up to the current 9 per cent early in July.

CAPITOL NEWS

LINCOLN — It isn't any news flash to report that this has been a dry summer. The short-term effects of the drought conditions — the loss of much of the dryland corn crop — are apparent to farmers and small town businessmen already.

A legislative committee was considering the other day some of the long-term effects: the drain the drought is putting on Nebraska's underground water supplies.

When a few irrigation pumps began belching air in recent days, the senators began asking questions about how much longer unrestricted drilling can be permitted.

The answer from University of Nebraska experts: Not much longer.

There are controls already, of course, on surface water uses. The time isn't far off when laws with teeth will be needed for underground water, the legislators were told.

Some proposals may be ready for the 1975 session. The Public Works Committee, under the chairmanship of Senator Maurice Kremer of Aurora, is going to Texas to see how groundwater resources are regulated there, and an irrigation industry coalition is to help draft some controls here.

Driver Checks Argued

Attorneys argued before the State Supreme Court recently a case involving the legality of law officers stopping cars just to check on driver's licenses and vehicle registrations.

The state's attorneys say such checks are a "nuts and bolts" police procedure and there's nothing wrong with it.

But an Ogallala attorney, John Sennett, said in a case involving his Colorado client that there was a great deal wrong with the procedure. Sennett said it violates the federal constitutional protection against unreasonable searches and seizures.

The case was brought to the state's high court by prosecutors after district judge Keith Windrum suppressed evidence gathered when a state trooper stopped Gary M. Holmberg of Boulder, Colo., last fall.

Windrum held some reasonable basis is needed for an officer to stop a motorist and, just because the trooper found what he said was evidence of marijuana in Holmberg's car, didn't excuse the officer for stopping the vehicle in the first place.

PSC Wants in on Probe

The Nebraska Public Service Commission has asked to join the Interstate Commerce Commission in an investigation of the shortage of boxcars for the shipment of grain by rail.

The federal agency has ordered a nationwide investigation and the Nebraska commission is requesting permission to act as an intervenor.

The state and federal agencies are interested in how railroad companies distribute boxcars for shipment of grain to large companies.

Bellevue Adds Tax

Bellevue has joined Omaha and Lincoln in the city sales tax business.

The state's two largest cities exercised the option of levying a tax on sales as soon as the 1969 Legislature made the opportunity available.

But they were alone until Bellevue's city council recently decided to institute a one per cent sales tax, saving four mills from the property tax levy.

The Bellevue sales tax goes into effect Jan. 1.

Process Under Review

The Legislative Council's Executive

Board will take another look Aug. 5 at the procedures senators have been using to make Nebraska's laws.

The hearing is an attempt to gather suggestions for streamlining the legislative process, a goal stated by Senator E. Thome Johnson of Fremont when he asked for the interim study.

Lobbyists and others familiar with the day-to-day operations of the Legislature will be asked to appear.

Among the ideas sure to be proposed is one for all-day floor meetings part of a week and all-day committee hearings on other days early in the sessions. The present practice is to have floor meetings in the morning, with committee work on the afternoon agenda. The result often is that there isn't time to do either job as well as some think proper.

Another idea to be offered to the senators is the creation of a committee made up of the chairmen of the standing committees. This ruling council would be presided over by the speaker and it would be in a position to have a direct effect on the speed of the legislative session. There isn't any such committee now.

The Lady Automoblist — 1906

Included in a recent donation to the State Archives, Nebraska State Historical Society, was a 1906 copy of The Automobile, a publication designed to keep its readers abreast of the rapidly changing world of the included the numerous advertisements in this magazine point out the diverse makes of autos available to the prospective buyer in 1906. Since this was prior to the advent of Henry Ford's mass produced "Tin Lizzie," the prices reflected the considerable time and labor which went into the construction of the motorcar of this era.

The average touring car in the 30-40 h.p. range sold for about $2,500. Even then, options were available which could make the price still higher. These sometimes included rubber or fabric tops, searchlights, "speedistimeters" or "anti-gift" devices. Many of the cars were liquid cooled, but a substantial number employed air cooled engines. The Knox Waterless, for example, had a 40 h.p. air cooled power plant, while the Logan touted a 2 cylinder, opposed, air cooled design. One could purchase a Deere for $2,000. It was apparently manufactured by the well known farm machinery firm in Moline, Illinois. Most autos had either chain drive or shaft drive, but the Lambert boasted a "gearless function drive."

For those who did not desire a full scale touring car, smaller versions, resembling the so-called horseless carriage were available. These included the Paragon car, the Holman, and the Dayton, all in the $300 to $500 price range. At the other end of the spectrum were such ostentatious vehicles as the $3,500 Cleveland and the 50 h.p. Thomas Flyer, which had been tested to the incredible speed of 60 m.p.h.

Even at this relatively early date, the ladies were beginning to take an interest in the possibilities offered by the motor car. Catering to this new interest, The Automobile carried an article, "Instructing a Woman to Drive." It noted somewhat chauvinistically that in the early days of "automobilism," the successful operation of a motor car required "mechanical aptitude amounting almost to genius and the muscular development of an athlete. The idea of a woman presiding over the levers of even a small car seemed absurd and rightly so."

By 1906, however, the automobile had reached a state of refinement where even a woman could learn to operate one. In terms of reliability, the modern (?) 1906 car "is not surpassed even by the proverbial family horse."

The article went on to relate that the women's greatest fear was the problem of "what to do if something went wrong. In a somewhat cryptic comment, the writer noted that the instructor had a duty "to explain in his most convincing manner that if anything goes wrong, there must be a reason for it." Proper maintenance was also stressed, especially lubrication. "No surfaces that move in frictional contact should be allowed to run dry, for the moment the separating film of oil disappears, the surfaces commence a savage attack on each other, to the detriment of both."

Despite this rather obtuse discussion of operating techniques, the lady of 1906 doubtless became proficient in the operation of this new convenience, though like many of her modern counterparts, she perhaps remained somewhat confused by the internal mysteries of the automobile.

Guest Commentary:

In taxpayers' best interest

Property owners in Nebraska would do well to understand and support the recently announced effort by the State to achieve greater equalization of property valuations between counties.

The State Revenue Department's property tax division has developed and sent to county officials a comprehensive land valuation manual, plus a notebook related to uniform methods of assessing buildings. Over a period of three years, Nebraska county assessors are expected to reappraise their jurisdictions in line with the new guideline manuals.

The system, prepared by a recognized authority in property reappraisal, includes a method of annual updating the valuations. The manuals reportedly will be used for the first time in a scientific reappraisal in 13 counties. Objective is that all 93 counties will for the first time be on the same system of property valuation and record reappraisals as a necessary step to the difficult task of equalizing valuations between the counties.

Attempts to equalize property valuations between counties and to require them to maintain their valuations somewhat in line with realistic market values (the Constitution requires that property be assessed at 35 per cent of its actual value) have always been a touchy political subject at both the state and county levels. Reappraisal firms hired by counties to conduct reappraisals have often used different standards. Also, keeping the valuations updated has been a problem.

Since the State was taken out of the property tax field by constitutional amendment in the mid-1960's there has been less incentive for the State to act as arbiter for equalization of valuations between the counties. There is good reason to believe in this time of rapidly rising land and home prices, that valuations for tax purposes between counties are as far out of line as they have ever been.

It is well known that inequities in valuations develop quickly. County assessors and county boards of equalization have often contributed to rapid break down in their valuation systems by arbitrary decisions in response to taxpayer complaints. One of the most flagrant cases revealed is that of a county assessor who updates a piece of property each time it is sold according to the selling price. Thus the value of a house for tax purposes in comparison with neighboring homes is determined by how many times it has changed owners.

There is no logical reason why one piece of irrigated land should be valued at $650 an acre in one county while comparable land just over the fence in another county may be valued at $450 per acre. It is not fair, sensible or good business.

Property taxes as the chief source of revenue for schools and local government agencies are going to be with Nebraskans for a long time even though they are not based on the taxpayer's income and ability to pay. The system of determining the amount of those taxes should be as equitable as possible for all concerned.

And in this whole thing, taxpayers should keep in mind that county assessors determine only the valuations of their property. The amount of the taxes is determined by the school boards, county boards, city councils and other local taxing agencies when they develop their dollars and cents budgets and tell the appropriate county officials how much money they are going to spend. — Source: Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation.

Motor Oil's Other Function

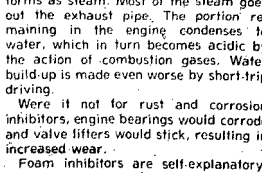

You can't see the difference, but motor oil has changed significantly during the past 20 years. Extended oil change intervals, smaller crankcase capacities and higher operating temperatures of late model engines have placed increased demands on oil.

Today's oil is somewhat like a doctor's prescription, containing special ingredients called additives — that perform specific functions. An anti wear agent, for example, provides emergency protection to engine components in case the oil film that prevents metal-to-metal contact should momentarily break. Detergent-dispersants prevent dirt particles in the oil from clumping together to form sludge and block passages. They work by surrounding the almost invisible dirt particles with a shell of molecules, causing particles to repel one another.

While oil still lubricates when it's hot, the higher the temperature, the faster the oil will tend to oxidize, or become permanently thicker. Today's oils contain special oxidation inhibitors to prevent this. Rust and corrosion inhibitors are other oil ingredients. For every gallon of gasoline burned, about a gallon of water forms as steam. Most of the steam goes out the exhaust pipe. The portion remaining in the engine condenses to water, which in turn becomes acidic by the action of combustion gases. Water build-up is made even worse by short-trip driving.

Were it not for rust and corrosion inhibitors, engine bearings would corrode and valve lifters would stick, resulting in increased wear.

Foam inhibitors are self-explanatory.

Forget-me-nots are said to cure the bites of snakes and mad dogs!

Foam is the result of air being whipped into the oil by moving engine parts, leading to oil loss, hydraulic valve lifter noise and improper cooling and lubrication of bearing surfaces. Foam inhibitors weaken air bubbles and cause them to break more readily.

Additives, in the process of doing their job, lose their effectiveness after a period of time, and to protect the engine, the oil should be changed. Your owner's manual provides the best information on the oil change interval for your particular car.

So they said...

"There is a paradox in the fact that those who look to government to remedy every economic grievance in our society also want government to get out of their personal lives and stop telling them how to run their affairs. They cannot have it both ways. They cannot ask more and more government intervention in what ought to be a free market and still insist on more and more freedom for themselves as individuals. No people have ever preserved political liberty for very long in an environment of economic dictatorship. We often learn too late that freedom is indivisible."

NU Experts Offer Way To Value Corn as Silage

Farmers who have suffered severe drought are seeking ways to salvage as much value out of damaged corn as possible, and a University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension economist has been wondering what it would be worth as silage.

Dr. Phil Henderson quoted another UNL specialist, Paul Guyer, in saying that drought corn which had its growth arrested before it reached tasseling stage has a fairly high protein content and its feed value on a dry matter basis should be about the same as the dry matter in alfalfa. Essentially the same statement could be made about drought-damaged grain sorghum.

The procedure recommended by Henderson to determine the value of corn standing in the field is as follows:

—Value per ton of usable silage is calculated on the basis of a relevant alfalfa hay price and the dry matter content of the green chop.

—Fixed costs of storage are subtracted, assuming a $12 investment per ton of capacity and fixed costs amounting to 10 per cent of the investment each year.

—The answer obtained in step two is divided by 1.1765 to compensate for approximately a 15 per cent loss of weight during the storage period and to get at the weight of the green chop delivered to and packed in the silo.

A charge for chopping, hauling and packing is subtracted. The figure used, $4 a ton, should be sufficient to cover out of pocket or variable costs including labor in most instances. (Variable costs on a per ton basis have an inverse relationship to yields per acre.)

Added Henderson, "Many livestock owners, anxious to get a supply for forage for the coming winter, would be willing to negotiate on this basis. Others might feel that they should be entitled to deduct total costs of chopping, hauling and packing—in which case, costs could run as high as $5 to $7 a ton on low yielding, drought-damaged corn."

"Since the moisture in drought-damaged crop can and does vary widely, it is important that the price be related to the dry matter content. This means, of course, that samples of the harvested crop should be analyzed for moisture at the time of harvest."

Henderson also recommended that at least one or two loads be weighed as a basis for estimating the tonnage.

In lieu of weighing, silage could be measured after it has settled two or three weeks and the tonnage estimated on the basis of standard silo capacity tables, said Henderson.

'During Drought, Ensiling Best Harvest Method'

The preferred way to harvest a drought-damaged crop — if there's enough of it — is as silage, according to Paul Guyer, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension livestock specialist.

Guyer said harvesting as silage allows maximum growth of the plants and lowers the amount of nitrates in the forage.

One problem with ensiling is that the crop needs to be dry enough to store, Guyer said. He recommended the moisture content be 65 per cent to 70 per cent, but drought-damaged plants could be slow to drop to that level, he added, and they may lose their leaves before the stalk becomes dry enough to harvest. He said adding dry forage as the crop is ensiled should lower the moisture content to a safe level.

Green chopping is an alternative to ensiling, but Guyer said it had disadvantages too.

First, during dry weather a farmer often starts chopping before the crop has reached its maximum growth, or if he waits, many leaves may drop before chopping.

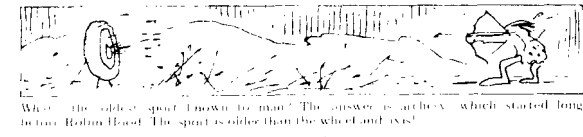

Secondly, assuring a safe nitrate concentration is hard because analysis of the forage is done two to four days before it is chopped and fed, and during a drought, the nitrate level may rise as long as the leaf is losing moisture.

A third option is harvesting the damaged crop as hay. Should the farmer choose this over ensiling, Guyer recommended harvesting and then not worrying about the nitrate level until it is fed. If the content is high, he suggested chopping the hay so the cattle can't selectively feed on the plant stalks.

Should the harvest be too tight to do mechanically, Guyer said the crops could be grazed. If the plants are immature, he said they are likely to have a high nitrate concentration. In that case, grazing should be controlled so cattle are not forced to eat down the lower part of the stalks, he warned. In more mature plants, said Guyer, this is usually not a problem.

WIDE CRACKS snaking their way down corn rows and curled leaves on earless corn plants are a sight all too familiar to area farmers this year as the area suffers from one of the driest growing seasons on record. Just 32 of an inch of rain was recorded in Wayne during July, making it the third driest July on record. Less rain fell in Wayne in 1936 and in 1930 when .06 and 2.0 of an inch of rain was recorded, respectively. The extremely dry conditions in July made the April-July period this year the driest one in the past decade, with just 8.08 inches of rain falling during those four months. Second driest growing period during the past 10 years was 1966 when 8.85 inches fell in those four months. Driest growing periods were recorded in five other years — 1925 (5.97 inches), 1926 (7.64), 1931 (7.66), 1933 (7.71) and 1936 (6.31).

Cattle Inventory Up
Nebraska cattlemen had a record 7,750,000 cattle and calves on July 1, according to Douglas Murlfield, director of the State Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics.

All cows totaled 2,486,000, up 7 per cent from a year ago. Replacement heifers weighing 500 pounds and over totaled 442,000, up 14 per cent from a year ago. Other heifers and steers weighing 300 pounds and over totaled 2,534,000, 1 per cent more than a year earlier. Calves weighing under 500 pounds totaled 2,715,000, up 10 per cent from last year.

The 1974 Nebraska call crop is expected to reach a record 2,360,000, 5 per cent more than in 1973.

Feed Grain Stocks Drop
Nebraska feed grain stocks (corn, oats, barley, grain sorghum) in all positions on July 1 totaled 5.1 million tons, according to Doug Murlfield, division director of the State Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics. This is 41 per cent less than a year earlier.

Feed grains stored on farms were 39 per cent below July 1, 1973 and accounted for 69 per cent of total feed grain tonnage compared with 67 per cent a year ago. Corn accounted for 79 per cent of the total feed grain stocks compared with 87 per cent last year.

Total stocks of corn were 14.7 million bushels on July 1, 47 per cent less than last year. Farm stocks were down 45 per cent and off farm stocks declined 51 per cent from a year ago. Total grain sorghum stocks of 34.7 million bushels were up 2 per cent from last year. Oats stocks totaled 7.0 million bushels, 14 per cent below July 1, 1973. Barley stocks declined 33 per cent to 17.0 million bushels.

Stocks of soybeans totaled 10.9 million bushels compared with 25 million a year earlier.

'Delay Harvest Until Growth Is Impossible'

Emergency harvesting because of drought should be delayed until no more plant growth is possible if it would rain, reports Edwin J. Penas, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension district soils specialist.

If the crop is harvested too soon, and rain does come, the farmer will lose any potential increase in either grain or forage yield, he noted.

Of corn, grain sorghum and soybeans, Penas said corn is the least drought resistant. Although corn still will tassel after prolonged lack of water, silking could be delayed or may not even occur. If that happens, there is incomplete pollination or none at all, so no grain will be produced. Even so, Penas said rain might cause more plant growth and the crop's value as forage could be increased.

If forage is needed, he urged farmers to wait until the corn has started to die before harvesting it.

According to Penas, sorghum tends to be resistant to drought. He said that in sorghum, lack of water causes the plant's leaves to roll up and they essentially become dormant until rain falls or the plant dries up from hot winds.

After it rains, growth resumes and new stems might form, he said. Although water will stimulate more plant growth, grain production could be delayed so that it hasn't matured by frost, he noted.

If severe drought stress occurs while sorghum is flowering, grain yields might be reduced. Generally, Penas said sorghum can survive drought conditions for several weeks.

Although soybeans have been considered a poor dry weather crop, Penas said they can withstand drought much longer than corn. Like sorghum, soybeans stop growing during a drought, but if adequate rain follows the dry spell, they still can have good seed yield, he said.

The most critical TV viewers are choosing Channel Master's new Quantum Antenna for its brighter, sharper color and black and white pictures—and super strength that stands up to hurricane force gustings from wind and snow!

They applaud the turnable UHF section that peaks channels in their area, and the optional trap that blocks out FM interference that's been bugging them.

If your TV reception is shabby and off color, get critical and choose the new Quantum Antenna from Channel Master!

Yard Quiz

How do you get rid of white clover in the yard?

If you want to get rid of it at this time of the year, use some of the granular formulations that are available. Later on in the season (late September or October), chickweed and clover killer may be used.

If peach trees come up from buried peach cleanings, are they worth keeping and will they bear fruit?

Yes, they will bear fruit. It is probably best to save the one with the biggest leaves as there seems to be a correlation between the size of the leaves in the young tree and the size of the fruit. Peach trees bear on one year old wood, so they could have fruit on them next year.

By Larry Turner

In 1922, Charles F. Jenkins transmitted a recognizable picture of President Harding by radio, from Washington to Philadelphia. Jenkins used a spinning disc with holes in a spiral pattern near its outer edge. This was according to a principle developed by Paul Nipkow, a German, in 1884.

In July, 1928, Jenkins started broadcasting on a regular schedule and, by 1939, a few thousand amateurs, having built their own receivers, were watching "radio-television," a tiny one-inch screen, barely recognizable on a pink screen. A typical "program" might be a girl bouncing a ball.

If your TV set is giving you a "barely recognizable" picture, it's time to call our service department! Usually our expert technicians can fix your set right in your home.

Thought for Today
By Rowan Wittse
"The great secret of happiness is to be on good terms with yourself."
Marcus Aurelius
Most of us have said at some time or other that "I wish I were rich." I wish I were rich in life's happiness, not how many of us have tried to analyze just what constitutes happiness where we ourselves are concerned?
Our definite step in the direction of happiness is to be grateful for life itself and all it has to offer. Doing the best we can with what we have; refusing to dwell on the disappointments we encounter, and finding contentment with our mode of living, dismissing from our minds resentment or envy toward others, all lead in the direction of the kind of happiness we all feel we are seeking.
Our mortuary is locally owned and operated. We can conduct services in any church or our own lovely chapel, according to your preference.
