Although the crime rate increased 20 per cent across the state in 1974, crimes decreased by about one per cent in Dixon County, according to Sheriff Dean Chase of Allen.

Chase credited the public and the county's surveillance system with reducing the crime rate in the county last year.

He said residents of the county are reporting unusual circumstances more often than in the past, enabling his office to check them out to see if crimes are involved.

The county's surveillance system has now been in effect four years and has been a great factor in deterring crimes in Dixon County, Chase said.

Allen Awarded Federal Grant

A $4,844 federal grant will make possible the continuation of Jim Kingston as director of Allen's senior citizens center plus Kingston's new part-time job as park custodian for the summer, the Allen town board learned Monday night.

The grant will pay Kingston's wages, social security and workman's compensation until Jan. 31, 1976, said board member Ken Linafelter.

Beginning Tuesday, the town dump will be open daily from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. until May 15, the board agreed. The dump is open on Wednesdays and Saturdays only.

On next month's agenda will be setting of water rates. Allen residents will be paying for use of city water. In addition, the board will discuss cost estimates for street work and purchasing a used street maintainer.

Driver Hospitalized

A 21-year-old Wayne man was being held for observation at the Wayne Hospital Saturday after the car he was driving early Friday morning went off an embankment near the Junction of Highways 35 and 98, about eight miles west of Wayne.

The driver, Doug Dowling, was lying west on Highway 35 when his car went over an embankment, according to investigating Trooper Don Matejka of Norfolk. Dowling was being held for a possible head injury, said a hospital official.

Winner Sees, Quickly Reports Birthday Error

A new winner has been named for the April 3rd Birthday Bucks drawing in Wayne, reports the Chamber of Commerce office.

She is Mabel Sundell of Wayne, whose birthday of June 20, 1901 was closest to the winning date of July 15, 1901, which as drawn at random and announced in all participating businesses April 3. She won $25 in Birthday Bucks as her consolation prize.

The Chamber has earlier announced that Mrs. Gladys Phillips, also of Wayne, was the winner of that consolation prize.

That was an error caused by the business firm which jotted down her birthday after the April 3rd drawing, according to the Chamber.

Mrs. Phillips, who had already received her $25 prize, called the Chamber to report that her birthday was actually May 24, 1901 and not June 24, 1901 as reported by the business. She said she would feel wrong in keeping the prize if there had been somebody else in another store with a birthday closer to the winning date.

She became aware of the error when she read the story about her-winning the consolation prize in Thursday's issue of The Wayne Herald.

The weekly drawings are held in all business which help sponsor the promotion. Birthday Bucks given away by the sponsoring firms may be spent just like cash in any participating business.

President Seymour: Measure Education by Its Results

Wayne State College president Lyle Seymour, in his inaugural address Friday, charted a quest for "quality of education measured by the college's impact on its students and by the kind of contribution they make to society."

Such a measure, he said, goes beyond numerical ratings of the standard factors — the quantity of buildings, books, and other accessories of education, and the number of degrees held by faculty.

Dr. Seymour was invested in the office of president by Ward Reesman, Falls City, president of the State College Board of Trustees, who presented an original medallion, designed and cast by Ray Replogle of the WSC art faculty.

Responding, Dr. Seymour said, "I recognize this medallion as a yoke of responsibility and I pledge my best to carry that responsibility to the best of my ability."

Reminiscing, he noted that he had, in one way or another, been associated with Wayne State College for a long time — "I'm proud of its accomplishments, and it is my earnest desire to serve it and its constituents."

The long time he mentioned dates to 1929 when his parents — Mr. and Mrs. Ed Seymour, who were in the audience of about 400 — brought their family from Mlaaca, Minn., to Wayne, "a college town so their family could have an advanced education."

That's the way it developed, Dr. Seymour's brother attended Wayne State two years, his sister graduated from WSC, and he himself attended two years before earning two degrees from Iowa State University and a doctorate from the University of South Dakota. Since 1953, except for doctoral study leave, he has been on the WSC faculty.

Recalling bits of history from earliest years of the college, including its private school predecessor, the Nebraska Normal College (1891-1910), Dr. Seymour sketched some problems that beset presidents, faculties and students.

"In retrospect, some of those problems appear almost ridiculous, and yet in their time they were as real as any that confront us today. If there is any single complexity which is facing all of higher education and therefore also Wayne State today, I would characterize it as the problem expressed in the word 'management,'" Dr. Seymour said.

He quoted one researcher thus: "Higher education is being accused of poor planning, of being insensitive to the needs of society; of ignoring recent technological developments that could make teaching more effective; of being unable to provide valid information on its operations; of ineffectual use of resources."

Dr. Seymour asked, "Do critical remarks such as these suggest lack of hope for improving institutions of higher education? I certainly hope not."

He said America has prided itself on individuality of its nearly 2,500 colleges and universities — the autonomy of each to choose its own goals and the programs to attain those goals.

"It is a system, he said, 'which encourages, as our board has, each college to develop its strengths and unique characteristics.'

The inaugural audience included official representatives of 40 colleges, universities, academic associations and learned societies.

In addition to the presidential talk, there were brief greetings from representatives of the student body, Tom Carney; the alumni, Val Peterson; the faculty and administration, Sayre Andersen and Dr. Ed Elliott; the city, Mayor Freeman Decker; the state, Norman Otto, administrative assistant to Gov. J. J. Exon; board members Reesman, former president J. Alan Cramer and current member Henry Lev.

Dr. Cornell Runestad, chairman of the WSC Board of Trustees, served as master of ceremonies and also directed the college choir in several numbers. Mrs. Runestad served as chairman of the inaugural planning committee.

Diabetics, families of diabetics and health care personnel in Northeast Nebraska are being offered an opportunity to attend a workshop on diabetes at Wayne State College on Wednesday, April 23.

The workshop, which will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Val Peterson Fine Arts Center, will include information on what is diabetes, insulin administration, oral medication and meal planning. There will be group discussions during the day.

On hand to conduct the workshop will be four registered dietitians and registered nurse Louise Jenness of Wayne. The dietitians are Tama Krause and Janice Thayer, both of Wayne, and Anna Srraha and Gerry Stamm, both of Lincoln.

Cosponsoring the workshop are the Nebraska Regional Medical Program and the Community Health Education Association of Northeast Nebraska. Mrs. Thayer is chairman for the workshop.

Registration fee for the workshop, which includes a noon lunch, is $5.

Students Reminded Of Fresh Orientation

Students who will be attending Wayne High School as freshmen next fall are reminded of the freshmen orientation program scheduled for the high school lecture hall on Tuesday from 7 to 9:30 p.m.

Conducting the meeting will be high school principal Don Zeiss and high school counselor Ken Carlson. They will explain school programs, course offerings and policies as well as answer questions.

The meeting is open to parents as well as students.

Driver Ed Plans Set at WHS

Students may register at Wayne High or Wayne Middle School today (Monday) through Friday, May 23.

Local or rural youths who have conflicts because of job, family vacations or other reasons may complete their driving the week of June 2-8 from 8 a.m. to noon or 1 to 6 p.m., according to Mallette.

Rural students may prefer to drive from 8 to 9 a.m. or 11 a.m. to noon and attend the classes from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., permitting them to have afternoons free, he noted.

Youths with questions about the program should get in touch with either Mallette or Ron Carnes, who will be assisting him with the course this summer.

Officers Re-Elected For Concord VFD

The Concord volunteer fire department re-elected officers for the 1975-76 term Tuesday night.

Re-elected president was Norman Anderson, and Quintin Erwin continues as vice president. Also re-elected were secretary-treasurer Jack Erwin, chief Roy Stohler and assistant chief Duane Harder.

During the meeting, members voted to purchase a 1,200-gallon water tank to replace the 800-gallon tank mounted on the fire truck. The tank will be purchased from the Hebron firm for about $600, according to Anderson.

Story Errs

Mrs. Marilyn Pierson of Wayne was hired Monday night by the Wayne-Carroll school board to teach elementary music half-time.

It was incorrectly reported in a story in Thursday's issue of The Wayne Herald that she will replace Mrs. Leota Moller, high school English teacher who will not return to the school system next fall. Mrs. Pierson was hired to take over duties currently held by Laurie Helgren, who also has resigned effective the end of this school year.

Old-Fashioned, But Fun

STUDENTS in Mrs. Reba Mann's fourth grade social studies class at Winside have found out what it was like to churn butter before modern technology took over the process. Each student got a chance Wednesday to crank the water as other students gathered around to hold the container. Taking his turn is Terry Gilliland. According to Mark Myers, student teacher from Wayne State helping with the project, the process doesn't take very long and the product tastes as good as what's now on the market.

'That Music's Kinda Loud'

NINE-YEAR-OLD Rodney Porter plugs his ears while the Wayne High School band performs under the direction of Ron Dalton during Thursday night's staged supper sponsored by the Wayne chapter of the American Field Service. About 500 people attended the dinner, which netted about $620. Purpose of the dinner was to raise funds to bring an exchange student to Wayne High during the 1975-76 school year.

Motorcyclists are offered safety education on NETV

Wayne area motorcycle riders are being offered an opportunity to participate in a unique pilot program aimed at providing safety education to beginning motorcycle riders. The program, which gets underway Monday, April 21, will mark the first time anywhere that the television medium has been combined with home study and supervised on-the-bike instruction to teach motorcycle safety, according to Duane Schmidt, administrator of safety education for the state department of education. Students will watch 10 half-hour programs on Nebraska Educational Television, read and complete exercises in a student workbook being provided free of charge and attend weekend range sessions at 14 sites across the state. One of the sites for the range sessions is Wayne State College. Those who successfully complete the two to three-week course will receive a certificate that will be honored by the state motor vehicles department for a motorcycle endorsement to their driving licenses. The certificate also will entitle students to 10 to 20 per cent discounts on motorcycle insurance issued by several companies, according to Schmidt. "The whole idea is to provide quality motorcycle safety education at low cost to large numbers of people who could not otherwise afford it," said Schmidt. In the pilot program, which is being supported by Kawasaki Motors Corp. and Masiek Auto Supply of Gering, about 800 students are expected to complete the full course, including range activities. Those wishing to take the full course will sign up in advance, using registration materials contained in the workbooks — 10,000 of which will be available from high school, police departments and Kawasaki dealers across the state. Students will watch the television programs airing April 21-25 and April 27-May 2. A different half-hour program will be televised each day, once in the morning and once in the evening. Range activities will be conducted on weekends. In addition to the 800 students who enroll in the program, other Nebraskans are expected to benefit, according to Schmidt. "We also hope that many automobile drivers will tune into the television programs so that they will become more aware of motorcycles," he said. "That's important because statistics compiled by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation indicate that about two thirds of all car-motorcycle accidents are the legal fault of the automobile driver — usually because the car driver didn't see the motorcyclist." To enroll in the program, motorcyclists should pick up workbook and registration materials from any high school, police department or Kawasaki dealer. Registration forms, along with a check for $7 to cover insurance and costs for range activities, should be mailed to the Nebraska Department of Education. After being notified of enrollment and assignment to a range, students then watch the television programs, do workbook assignments and attend range sessions. Dates and air times for the 10 programs: Program 1, April 21, 8 a.m. and 10 p.m.; Program 2, April 22, 8 a.m. and 10 p.m.; Program 3, April 23, 8 a.m. and 10 p.m.; Program 4, April 24, 8 a.m. and 10 p.m.; Program 5, April 25, 8 a.m. and 10 p.m.; Program 6, April 27, 10:30 a.m. and April 28, 8 a.m.; Program 7, April 28, 10 p.m. and April 29, 8 a.m.; Program 8, April 29, 10 p.m. and April 30, 8 a.m.; Program 9, April 30, 6 p.m. and May 1, 8 a.m.; Program 10, May 2, 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. Range activities will be held at Wayne State on April 26-27, May 3-4 and May 10, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., each day.

OBSERVATIONS

Honesty is refreshing

It's refreshing to know that there are some honest people around. I feel good when I learned that Mrs. Gladys Phillips of Wayne, a recent winner in Wayne's Birthday Bucks promotion, telephoned the Chamber of Commerce shortly after she learned that she mistakenly had been awarded the $25 consolation prize. She said she wasn't able to sleep and kept thinking that the prize should rightfully have gone to another person. She could have easily kept quiet about the whole incident and few, if any, people would have known that her birthday had been jotted down incorrectly. A lot of people in her position would have leaned back, smirked and thought they had pulled something over somebody. I certainly commend Mrs. Phillips for something which should be much more common than it is, simple honesty. When it seems that everybody is so wrapped up in getting ahead financially, regardless of the cost to their character, it is refreshing to run into a person like her now and then. — Norvin Hansen.

Step in the right direction

Wayne County residents will be given an opportunity during the county fair this summer to show our 4-H'ers that we really back them in their efforts to become good livestock producers. The opportunity will be offered at the livestock auction, which will be held this year for the first time during the fair. Although there may be some disadvantages to holding the auction during the fair rather than several weeks later, it certainly sounds like a good idea to me. Almost everybody's attention will be focused on the fair, and it will be a good time for the youths to display their animals so people can see how well they accomplished the tasks they set for themselves. In addition to being held during the fair, this year's auction is being enlarged to include swine and sheep as well as beef. That will result in about twice as many 4-H'ers being given time to put their animals on display as in past auctions. It also will result in the people being given a chance to bid on smaller animals so they can show their appreciation to the youngsters without being forced to spend large amounts of money. In past years there has been some difficulty in getting the general public interested in the annual 4-H livestock auction. Many of the bidders came from Wayne, and most of those bidders were business owners and managers. Making these changes in the auction should be a step in the right direction toward turning the auction into a county-wide event which will attract bidders from all walks of life. Everybody in the county, regardless of type of job or business, is directly or indirectly affected by the agricultural industry. The livestock auction is a good chance for everybody to show young 4-H'ers that they can have a good future in agriculture. — Norvin Hansen.

Students need WWI souvenirs

Dear Editor: Our third period World History class at Wayne High School is studying a chapter on World War I. As one of our projects, we are to do a report on military equipment and souvenirs from World War I. We'd like to ask the public's help in finding some weapons or souvenirs for display when we give the report. The articles will be treated properly and returned in good condition. The help would be greatly appreciated. — Sandra McLain and Laura Haase.

A closer look...

By Norvin Hansen

THE ONLY people who I have heard say anything but great things about last week's baby contest are the guys who didn't get their baby pictures in the newspaper. Everybody else thinks the contest was the greatest thing to come along since safety pins. You've got to admit that those baby pictures are cute, regardless of what their owners look like now. How many of you figured out who the baby on the front page is? I've heard a lot of guesses, but nobody was right. That's Jim Marsh, who has to be one of the chubbier babies ever born in this part of the state. Of course, he began losing weight from about then on, and he graduated from high school as one of the thinnest kids in his class. History repeats itself, they say, and he's now in the process of going the other way.

AS LONG as we're talking about the past, how many of you can identify the two young gents in this picture?

I'll give you a few hints. Both fellows now call Wayne their home. The one on the right has his office not too far from where the picture was taken, the old Gamble-Senter building at Second and Main. The one on the left has been around, but he's now settled down and telling others some of the things he learned in his roomings. JOCIELL BULL, director of the Senior Citizens Center in Wayne, was featured in a story in the March issue of The Older Nebraskan's Voice, monthly publication of the Nebraska Commission on Aging. The publication is running a series of articles on directors of centers around the state. Mrs. Bull, who has lived on a farm near Wayne since 1948, has headed up the local center since it opened in July of 1969. She was instrumental in establishing the center, which has proven to be a popular gathering place for older residents in the area.

and about 13 per cent had electric brooders. Guess what the average bill was for those customers. In both May and June of that year it was $4.70. I would like to see the farm that could get by for that nowadays.

GRASSROOTS OPINION

Mora, Minn., Kanabec County Times "Americans who have been fearing the imposition of a Land Use Planning Act, which would put the encroaching hand of Washington upon land use, can rest easy for awhile anyway. The House, in a rare display of good sense... (has for the time being) refused to consider the Land Use Planning Act which would have provided some $800 million to create and finance another huge federal and state bureaucracy to tell citizens what they could and could not do with their own property. There are now enough local, state and federal agencies dealing with the subject to make many transactions and developments difficult enough."

Out of Old

Crazy Horse A stone pyramid at Fort Robinson, near Crawford, honors the memory of Crazy Horse, noted Ogala war chief and probably the greatest military genius of the Sioux confederacy. Crazy Horse has always been a man of mystery. He remains an enigma, although his authoritative and beautifully-written biography by Nebraska's Mari Sandoz (Crazy Horse: The Strange Man of the Ogilala; Alfred A. Knopf, New York, 1942) does much to clear away the clouds of uncertainty surrounding his career. The great chief called Crazy the toughest of his boyhood, is said to have been born on Rapid Creek in the Black Hills in the early 1840s. As a very young boy, he became aware of the irrepressible conflict between red man and white for control of the West. He saw Conqueror Bear shoot by soldiers sent out from Fort Laramie under the name of Gration to avenge the loss of a Mormon cow. He took part in battles with other tribes, and was given the name Crazy Horse for his heroism and achievement. Young Crazy Horse took an active part in the campaigns of the famous Ogala chief Red Cloud against the forts erected to protect travelers on the Bozeman Road from Fort Laramie to Montana. These campaigns were so successful that in 1868 the United States agreed to close the road and remove the troops from the forts. Crazy Horse refused to follow Red Cloud and others who reserved, and became a leader among the Sioux and Cheyenne who would not trade their old way of life for reservation status. They retreated into the hills, whence they conducted forays against the Crow and isolated parties of whites. The final years of Crazy Horse's life was spent in leading the bitter last stand of the Indians against the whites. Gen. George Crook and a detachment of troops tried to bring him into the reservation early in 1876, but though they caught him unawares, the best they could do was to capture the Indians' ponies — most of which were later recaptured. Again in June, Crook made another unsuccessful attempt to capture the young chief and his band. Almost immediately after repulsing Crook's Crazy Horse and his band took part in the Battle of the Little Big Horn (Montana), in which Gen. George A. Custer's command of 212 men was annihilated. Though the Indians had repulsed the whites at almost every turn, the odds were against them. On May 6, 1877, for the sake of his women and children, Crazy Horse came to the Red Cloud Agency near Camp Robinson and surrendered. All was quiet for a time, but the military authorities, fearful that Crazy Horse was plotting another outbreak, had him arrested. Faced with the guard house at Fort Robinson, Crazy Horse made a desperate effort to fight his way free. In the ensuing fracas he was mortally wounded and died the same night — September 5, 1877. The monument at Fort Robinson stands near the spot where the gallant young chieftain met his death. Fort Robinson is now in its 100th year, and a full schedule of centennial events has been planned. September 5 has been set aside as Crazy Horse Commemorative Day.

Probation Officer Explains Program

Who in the world do you think you are?
According to Merlin Wright, chief district deputy probation officer, you'll never be anymore than what you think.

Wright, of Wayne, spoke to about 20 persons Monday night at the Northeast Station near Concord during a special program sponsored by the Northeast Nebraska Family and Community Affairs Council.

Wright's talk centered on the structure of Nebraska's probation system and the socialization of offenders, young and old, who are under a probation officer's supervision.

Wright, who feels each offender is a human being with individualities and troubles, said anyone is capable of committing an offense, "because we are all human."

In defining his job, Wright said his primary responsibility is to get the offender back into some activity that society will accept.

According to Wright, we all have a physiological and psychological self-image of ourselves. "We want to be wanted, like to be liked and love to be loved," he said. "We don't like other people knowing who we really are."

Wright said an individual going through court suffers many emotional setbacks.

MERLIN WRIGHT, chief district deputy probation officer, speaks during a special program Monday night at the Northeast Station near Concord, Nebraska Family and Community Affairs Council.

"They're disillusioned, and their self image is blurred."
"We're psychologically polluted," Wright said. "We play games in our lives and we like it."
Success isn't equated now days to what I am as one human to another, but by what I own.
Food, sex and love are the common denominators of all human beings, according to Wright.

"We can talk about weather, politics and divorce, but we can't say I love you... We can act out love, but we can't say it."
In concluding, Wright said the social system, including the church, home and school, must change and assume its responsibilities if things are to get better.
"Most probationers have been failures through most of the social system," said Wright. "If you're born in a family of rattlesnakes, you're going to rattle."

Tuesday Is Deadline For Some Taxpayers

Many Nebraska citizens who do not have enough taxes withheld are required to pay their first installment of 1975 federal income taxes no later than Tuesday, April 15.

The total estimated tax due may be paid in four equal installments: April 15, June 16, Sept. 15 and Jan. 15.

"Many taxpayers realize that they meet the requirements for filing a tax declaration at this time of year," said Everett Lours, IRS district director for Nebraska. "Generally, when the taxpayer will owe IRS more than $100 not covered by withholding, he should file a declaration of estimated tax. A Form 1040-ES voucher must accompany the first installment."

Taxpayers who filed a declaration of estimated tax last year should have received an estimated tax package in the mail, which includes four declaration vouchers and pre-addressed envelopes for making the 1975 declaration and payments. Also included in the package are a worksheet and instructions.

IRS Publication 505, "Tax Withholding and Declaration of Estimated Tax," is available free from the Nebraska IRS offices to provide more details on the payment of estimated tax.

SEXAUER CERTIFIED SRF SOYBEANS

Our 60# bags will plant 1 1/2 to 2 acres.

You'll profit all the way, when you plant SRF Soybeans this year. SRF beans require lighter planting rates, 30 to 40 pounds per acre, and with our full 60# bags of seed that means you'll plant 1 1/2 to 2 acres of beans per bag.

The narrow leaf characteristics of the SRF Soybean varieties assist in directing sunlight to lower plant areas and to the seed pods. This produces healthier, stronger plants resulting in increased bean yields.

Plant Sexauer Certified SRF Soybeans and increase bean yields, while reducing your costs. And remember, if they aren't certified, they aren't true SRF Soybeans.

Thinking About Planting A Tree? This May Help

Green Ash

Silver Maple

Little-Leaf Linden

Redmond Linden

By DON STITZE
Wayne County
Agricultural Agent

American elm was one of the most popular shade trees in Wayne County until Dutch elm disease came along and began killing the trees off, leaving groves ruined, shelterbelts thinned and lawns naked.

Now we must replace all these dead or dying elms with trees that can live in our type of climate.

The shade trees that are pictured and described in this feature are well adapted to this area of the state and will provide comforting shade if planted and cared for properly. The drawings of the trees, descriptions and other information used here appears in the University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension bulletin titled "Broadleaf Trees for Nebraska." The bulletin, which is available from county agents in the area, contains much valuable information about trees, including information about many more trees than are described here.

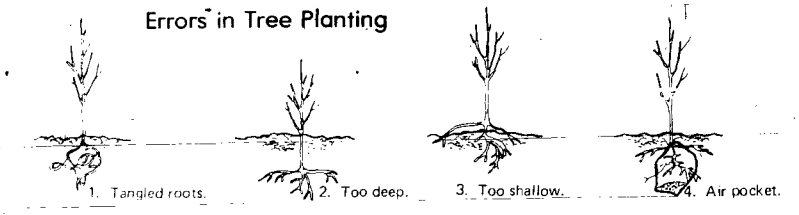

There are several points which you should consider in selecting shade trees to plant. They include:

—Mature height and width: Trees that are ideal for the first few years after planting may grow into large trees that block driveways, hide the house, grow into utility lines and be too close to other established trees and shrubs. Available at my office is a free leaflet titled "Basic Landscaping" which provides ideas on where to plant trees for the most pleasing appearance.

—Growth rate and life expectancy: Some people have a need for quick shade so they want a quick maturing tree. Other people are willing to plant a tree that grows slower and takes longer to mature. Life expectancy is also an important thing to keep in mind. Life expectancy in trees is referred to as short (less than 30 years of life), medium (30 to 80 years), and long (more than 80 years).

—Personal taste: Everyone has different tastes as far as shape, color of fall foliage, desirability of having flowers or fruits, and even the shape of the leaves.

What Tree to Plant? Here's Some Tips

Steps in Tree Planting

- Bare Root Trees
1. Unpack tree immediately. Do not allow roots to dry out. Immerse roots in water or thin mud for several hours before planting.
  2. Have hole deep and wide enough to accommodate roots in a natural position.
  3. Plant tree one to two inches deeper than it stood in nursery. Untangle and spread roots before covering. Fill hole two thirds full with loose soil and water.
  4. Fill remaining hole with soil and water two or three times and let settle.
  5. Mulch with one or two inches of dry hole. Leave basin to aid in watering.
  6. Prune top to compensate for loss of roots in digging (see illustration). Shorten all branches (B) and then thin and shorten branches (B).
  7. Stake the tree if over five feet tall. Support is needed for first year until roots are established.

- Balled, Burlaped Trees
1. Dig hole two feet wider and six inches deeper than the root ball. Always lift the tree by the ball, never by the stem.
  2. Fill hole until top of root ball is one to two inches below soil surface.
  3. Fill hole half full with loose soil. Water and let settle.
  4. Be sure the rope, twine or wire around the trunk or stem is cut. Leave burlap on ball!
  5. Fill hole with soil and water two or three times and let settle.
  6. Mulch with one or two inches of dry soil.
- Container-Grown Trees
- Remove container before planting. Other steps in planting container grown trees are the same as for balled and burlaped trees.

How to Prune Trees

Wayne Herald Feature Article

Green Ash

Description—Favorite habitat is moist bottomlands, but does well in drier situations. Medium sized, has round to irregular dense crown, medium rate of growth and medium life span.

Good Points: Adapts to almost all soil and moisture conditions in Nebraska. Has attractive, dense, summer foliage and provides early burst of yellow in fall.

Bad Points: Subject to attack by sev-

Redmond Linden

Description—Medium to fast growth rate, medium life expectancy and dense pyramidal shape. Leaves roughly heart shaped and turn yellow brown in fall. Flowers produced in July are small, yellow, fragrant.

Good Points: Not subject to wind, snow or ice damage, no serious insect or disease problems.

Bad Points: Leaf scorch and leaf feeding insects can give unsightly summer appearance.

Little Leaf Linden

Description—Slow to medium growth rate and medium life expectancy. Leaves roughly heart shaped and turn yellow brown in fall. Small, yellowish, fragrant flowers produced in July.

Good Points: Withstands city conditions, easily transplanted and not subject to wind, snow or ice damage. No serious insect or disease problems.

Bad Points: Bark on young trees is thin and subject to sunscald. Should be wrapped for several years. Leaf scorch and leaf feeding insects can give unsightly summer appearance.

Silver Maple

Description—Large, fast growing medium to long lived tree having broad, round to irregular crown. Leaves pale shiny green above, silvery beneath, and turn yellow in the autumn.

Good Points: Widely planted because of rapid growth rate. Easily transplanted and does well under most soil and moisture conditions, performance suffers when planted on alkaline soil.

Bad Points: Wood is brittle, and large, weak side branches make it susceptible to wind, snow, ice damage. Proper pruning early will help reduce damage. Bark on young trees should be wrapped to prevent sunscald. Shallow roots tend to erupt above the ground with age, making it difficult to maintain good lawn. Cottony scale insect, green striped maple worms and maple bladder gall mites are problems.

American Linden

Description—Deep, moist soil preferred, but performs well on most sites. Medium to fast rate of growth, medium to long life expectancy and oval shape. Leaves roughly heart-shaped and turn yellow-brown in fall. Small, yellowish, fragrant flowers produced in July.

Good Points: No serious insect or disease problems; requires little care once established.

Bad Points: Leaves larger and coarser than the other lindens. Not easily transplanted and hard to establish. Leaf scorch and leaf feeding insects can give unsightly appearance in summer.

Eastern Redbud

Description—Small, prolific flowering tree. Leaves heart shaped and turn yellow in fall. Round to vase shape, medium rate of growth, medium length of life. Blossoms emerge early in spring but last eral insects and diseases, but none serious enough to limit use. Possible problems to expect: ash borers, sawflies, oystershell scale, ash rust, leaf scorch and canker.

Thornless Honeylocust

Description—Does not produce thorns, and non fruiting selections are available. Very hardy, and tolerates wide range of soil and moisture conditions. Medium to long length of life, medium to fast rate of growth and round form. Many selections offer variety of shapes and leaf colors.

Good Points:—Foliage fine-textured, casts light shade and turns yellow in fall. Withstands city conditions and does well in most situations. Easily transplanted and relatively disease free.

Bad Points:—Mimosa webworm often defoliates tree, and webs give unsightly appearance in late summer. Borers, leafhoppers, plant bugs, and pod gall midges cause minor damage. Insect problems should not discourage use.

Flowering Crabs

Description—Fruits are less than two inches in diameter, height less than 20 feet, growth rate medium and fall color yellow brown.

Good Points:—Flower color ranges from pure white to purplish-red. Size ranges from dwarf trees to trees 40 feet tall. Shape varies from columnar to weeping to round.

Bad Points:—Susceptible to various troubles of common apple. Problems to expect: fire blight, apple scab, cedar-apple rust, scale insects, borers, and web worms.

Hackberry

Description—Light green, tapering leaves turn yellow in fall. Bark is light colored, ridges and often described as warty. Slow starter, but with extra watering medium rate of growth can be expected. Vase shape and medium to long life expectancy.

Good Points:—Drought-resistant, tolerates adverse weather and grows well on alkaline soils. Will succeed where others fail.

Bad Points:—Dense clusters of deformed twigs sometimes form in crown. Leaves often have small nipple galls on lower surfaces. Susceptible to defoliation by cankerworms.

European Mountain Ash

Description—When young, has erect form, but oval, spreading crown develops. Has medium rate of growth and medium to short length of life. Leaves turn bronze to red in fall. Will do best when planted on cool, moist sites, but sunlight is required for satisfactory growth.

Good Points:—Decorative tree displaying both spring flowers and colorful fall fruit. Many small, white flowers form on branch ends, and in September red or orange clusters of berries appear where flowers bloomed. Fruit, although abundant, is not overly messy and is a favorite of birds.

Bad Points:—Fire blight, cankers, sun scald and borers can cause damage, but should not discourage use where splash of color and accent desired. Young trees should be wrapped for several years to give protection.

WH Grad's Set To Be Used in NU Production

A set designed by a Wayne High School graduate which recently won first place in a national undergraduate scene design competition will be used in the final production of the 1974-75 drama season at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.
