Open classes this year will run the gamut from the normal cake and cookie entries to special contests for the largest pumpkin and the best arrangement of home-grown edible flowers, ac-ording to chairman Mrs. Leo Hansen. Fair secretary Marilyn Koch said special features this year include a pottery making exhibit. Bicentennial booths and daily programs on nuclear medicine given by the staff of Our-Lady of Lourdes Hospital in Norfolk.

A special treat for diners at the 6 p.m. barbecue Friday will be a show by the Playhouse Puppeteers, beginning at 5:30 and continuing through the meal.

One important activity coming up at the Wayne County Fair grounds is not listed on the schedule of fair activities. The annual fairgrounds cleanup will be Monday afternoon, fair secretary Marilyn Koch said. Koch said the cleanup will begin at 4 p.m. Monday. Workers should bring their own rakes, brooms and other tools. The cleanup will be finished Monday night.

In addition, state central committeemen and members of the Republican state executive committee will conduct meetings during the workshops, according to Peterson.

The program will begin with workshops at 10 a.m. until noon. It will resume at 1:30 and run until 4:15 p.m., he added. Final arrangements are pending a location for the meeting. The meeting will be open to the public.

Drop in Winside Budget Will Be Nearly $30,000

Winside town board Monday night approved nearly $29,900 for the 1975-76 fiscal budget.

The budget which is almost $30,000 less than the 1974-75 figure of $87,437.56, will mean a drop in the mill levy of about .5 mill from last year's levy of 24.1 mills, said board chairman Dallas Puls.

Not figured in this year's budget are the costs for a rescue unit the board purchased last year for the volunteer fire department, and the town's cost of work on the baseball park, also last year.

Based on a tentative property valuation of $607,805, the new levy of 23.6 mills will raise $13,974.81 in property taxes.

In other action Monday, members approved establishing a street improvement district which calls for paving twelve and one half blocks of streets. The next step for the board is to seek construction bids.

Members also agreed to hold a special meeting tonight (Thursday) to open bids for a new street sweeper. The meeting will be held at the village clerk's office at 7:30.

Another special meeting will be held Monday night at the same time to update ordinances. The board also okayed moving the September meeting date from the first to the eighth.

Search Fails To Locate Dog

A long two-week series of daily rabies shots began Tuesday for Jill Mosley after Monday night's last-often search failed to locate a brown and black dog which bit her last week.

She was bitten Wednesday morning while playing in Bressler Park.

Over 50 volunteers, Wayne firemen, police, Boy Scouts, CB's and friends, combed Wayne Monday evening for the missing dog. According to reports, the dog was wearing a red collar and pulling a long chain when the incident happened.

Numerous sightings of dogs fitting the description has been reported at the police department, said chief Vern Fairchild. The department will continue its search, he pointed out, adding that anyone who might have seen the dog is asked to contact city police.

A reward is still being offered by Jill's parents. If the dog isn't found within the next week, chances are the reward will be dropped, said Mrs. Mosley.

Airport Board Will Discuss Navigation Aid

The newly created Wayne airport authority Tuesday night gave airport operator Al Robinson the go ahead to arrange for painting of the city owned house located at the airport.

Election of officers for the authority was completed at the meeting. Frank Prather is chairman, Stan Morris is vice chairman and David Ley is secretary. City clerk Bruce Nordhorst will serve as treasurer for the group.

Prather reported on a survey of other Nebraska airport authorities concerning structure, bylaws and regulations. The Wayne group plans to adopt bylaws at their next meeting, Aug. 18.

Also on the agenda will be discussion of the feasibility of installing radio navigation equipment at the airport. The device would allow cross-country pilots to navigate to Wayne by monitoring a cockpit instrument, according to airport authority member Merlin Wright.

Wayne County Budget Proposal Still Pending

Wayne County commissioners met Tuesday to set a proposed budget for the 1975-76 fiscal year but were unable to reach an agreement on the amount to be allocated for the roads department.

The board will reconvene Friday at 9 a.m. to complete the budget proposal. A public budget hearing will be held Aug. 19 at 2 p.m.

Items set for the proposed budget include $378,141 for the general fund (3.78 mills) compared with $341,732 spent during the fiscal year just ended.

Other amounts proposed, the mill levy required, and the amount spent last year include: county relief — $52,165; 39 mills, $35,504; soldiers and sailors fund — $3,634; no levy needed (balance on hand meets requirement); $1,000; county fair — $22,840; .49 mills, $24,332; noxious weed control — $22,575; .21 mills, $19,526.

In addition, a .25 mill levy has been proposed to raise $10,700 for the county improvement sinking fund.

Excluding the sinking fund, budget items set so far for the coming year total $479,355, compared to $421,094 actually expended for those same items in the 1974-75 fiscal year.

Mill levies are based on a tentative valuation of $42,801,410. Last year's valuation was $43,371,265. A mill raises one dollar for every $1,000 valuation, meaning that a mill this year will raise about $42,801.

QUEEN AND KING of the WSC summer music camp are Kerri Erwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Erwin of Concord and Kevin Johnson of North Bend.

Concord Girl Selected As Music Camp Queen

Students attending the 1975 Wayne State College summer music camp selected Kerri Erwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Erwin of Concord as camp queen.

Kevin Johnson of North Bend was named as king. Miss Erwin played flute in the wind ensemble, chosen as the camp's top band. She was also chosen for the student recital and performed in the Camp Capets program, in a trio act with sister Lori and Kelly Kardell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Kardell of Laurel.

Scholarships to the camp are offered to students earning superior ratings in district music contests and to outstanding students at the previous year's camp. Many local organizations also offer camp scholarships.

School Board Rejects Initial Plan For Track

Wayne Carrol board of education members sent Lincoln architect Lynn L. Jones back to the drawing board after deciding that a proposal for a new track facility was too expensive.

Total estimated cost for the proposal submitted at Monday night's school board meeting was about $280,000, considerably higher than $100,000 or so the board figures is available.

About $53,000 of the plan submitted by Jones, representing the Lincoln firm of Davis, Fenton, Strange and Darling, would have been incurred by extensive earth moving made necessary by the proposed location of the track.

The plan would have moved the new track and football field north of the present football practice field. That would entail extensive grading. The board decided the grading costs would be too high and directed Jones to submit another plan with the facility located approximately where the present practice field now is.

The track surface will cost between $35,000 and $50,000, regardless of location. Money for the project will come from a sinking fund with an annual three mill levy. Optional items to be considered in addition to the track include fencing, seating, additional bus parking, a combination storage and rest room building, a sprinkler system and lighting. The board See SCHOOL BOARD, page 12

Planner Says Decisions Left To Local Commission

The Wayne County Joint Planning Commission voted Tuesday night to table the matter of how the county's funds will be handled, pending an opinion from the county attorney.

At issue was whether the group will have a separate account for their funds or if individual expenditures will be approved by the county commissioners.

Total budget for the planning commission is $16,000 but only $1,000 of that amount is earmarked for operating expenses. The remaining $15,000 will pay for services contracted with the State Office of Planning Programming (SOPP).

Jeff Poley, SOPP planner who will work with the local commission, explained Tuesday what services the tentative contract will provide, if adopted, and what his role in the county planning process will be. The ultimate aim of the commission will be to develop a comprehensive plan that will outline goals for Wayne County for the next 20 years and to provide guidelines for achieving those goals.

The contract runs through July 31, 1976. Poley said. By then, the comprehensive plan should be published. He will continue to work with the joint planning commission for the next six months, discussing, amending and correcting the plan.

Poley emphasized that decisions concerning development of the plan are up to the local planning commission. "I am paid by the state to provide professional services to local organizations. I follow the directions of the local commission. See PLANNING, page 12

Reminder: Kids Need Vaccination Before Entering School This Fall

State Health Department officials are reminding parents Nebraska law requires that children up to the age of 12 be immunized against specific diseases before they enter school. Diseases stipulated are measles, rubella, diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis and polio.

Wayne-Carroll school superintendent said the local system generally follows state guide lines and immunization records are checked when children first enter school. Children should usually receive a series of three diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis shots and a booster at school entrance, according to Health Department guidelines. A series of three immunizations plus a booster is also the normal procedure for oral polio protection.

One injection for measles and rubella is usually required or a combination vaccination for both diseases may be given. State immunization coordinator William Pack emphasized that these are only suggested guidelines and that a physician should always be consulted.

Thought for Today
By Brian McBride

"It is well to be up before daybreak, for such habits contribute to health, wealth and wisdom..." Aristotle

Two thousand years after Aristotle, Ben Franklin confirmed it in his Almanac: "Early to bed, early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise."

Of course, no one guarantees these benefits to all who get up and go out at sunrise, but we do know that most early risers thrill to the dawn of each crisp new day, fresh and clean and brimming with promise.

Common Causes of Poor Quality Pickles

This being such a dry year many homemakers are having problems making pickles. Dry weather can be the cause of many irreversible problems. Cucumbers may be bitter. Once a cucumber tastes bitter its taste can not be improved by pickling it. Be sure to pick bitter cucumbers. If weather conditions become favorable the new crop will not be bitter.

Dry weather does not account for all poor quality pickles. Perhaps you've wondered why pickles become shriveled, soft or slippery, dark or dull colored, are hollow, have white sediment, or do not seal.

Allowing too much time to lapse between gathering and pickling can cause pickles to shrivel. Shriveling may also result from using too strong a vinegar, sugar, or salt solution at the start of the pickling process. If very sweet or very sour pickles are desired, it is best to begin with a dilute solution and gradually increase to the desired strength. Overcooking or overprocessing may also cause shriveling.

Soft or slippery pickles usually result from microbial action which causes spoilage. Microbial action may be caused by too little salt or acid, insufficient heat treatment, moldy garlic or spices or perhaps a jar not being sealed airtight. It may also be caused by not completely covering the cucumbers with brine during fermentation or having scum scattered throughout the brine during fermentation. Always remove cucumber blossoms completely before fermentation, otherwise they may contain fungi or yeasts responsible for enzymatic softening of pickles. Using hard water can also cause pickles to become soft or slippery.

Darkness in pickles may be caused by using iodized salt, using ground spices, too many spices, or overcooking. Minerals in water, especially iron or the use of iron utensils can also cause dark pickles.

Dull or faded pickles indicate the cucumber was over ripe when picked, was sunburned, or was a poor quality cucumber from the start.

Hollow pickles are usually a result of poorly developed pickles, holding cucumbers too long before pickling, too rapid a fermentation, or the brine being too strong or too weak.

White sediment in the bottom of the jar is not harmful. It is the result of not using pickling or canning salt, the temperature not being controlled, or results from bacteria which caused fermentation.

Be sure to use pure canning or pickling salt for all canning and pickling. Check your vinegar bottle label for the acidity level. It should be 4-6 per cent. Also check the bottle to see if you purchased the kind you are to dilute or use as is.

Processing using the boiling water bath method is recommended for all pickle products. Start counting the processing time of fermented cucumbers and fresh pack dills as soon as filled jars are placed in actively boiling water. This will prevent development of cooked flavor and loss of liquid. For other pickles start counting the time as soon as water returns to boiling. Other factors which may prevent jars from sealing are using off standard jars, using a pickling solution which is not hot or not sealing each jar as it is filled.

If you would like information on making pickles and relishes request bulletin EC74 959 and HG 92 from Jocelyn Smith, area extension agent at the northeast station, or from your county extension office.

A World of Pretend

Garden Tips

Each year numerous reports are received describing yellow leaves on cherries which are prematurely cast. In most instances, this is due to a disease known as Cherry Leaf Spot.

This disease appears first on the upper side of the leaf as small, circular, purple spots. These later turn brown and form a definite boundary. As the infection progresses, the leaves turn yellow and fall.

Fortunately, cherry leaf spot is easy to control. The initial step in controlling this disease is the removal of the plant debris in the fall as this practice eliminates the overwintering site of the organism.

AH Budget Up $40,000

The 1975-76 budget for Allen Consolidated Schools is expected to increase about $40,000 over last year's budget of $465,604.91, said superintendent Virgil Ferguson.

The main reason for the increase is the loss of about 15 free high tuition students. Tuition costs for each student is about $1,900 each, Ferguson pointed out. The increase is expected to hike the mill levy about four mills, Ferguson noted. Presently, property owners living in Allen pay 43.24 mills while those in the surrounding area pay 39.64 mills, according to the Dixon County assessor's office. The exact mill levy will not be known until the Dixon County board of supervisors sets the levy sometime in September or October.

Tonight (Thursday) the board will hold its budget hearing at 8 o'clock at Allen High School.

Legion Heads for State Class B Tournament

It takes nine players to make a baseball team. But Tuesday night it seemed Wayne had more than nine on the field at one time when the Legion team won the Area A championship at West Point.

Third baseman Dave Nuss stood out for Wayne with his sharp defensive play, timely Friday night at 6:30 the Legion is slated to face York in the first round of the four-team state Class B double-elimination tournament at Sidney. Previously a Class A club, York drops to B for the first time in recent years.

Hitting and scoring to guide the locals to a 4-2 victory over Wahoo and help send Wayne to its second straight state Class B legion tournament.

"We've been to many state tournaments before, but this is the first time we've been to state two years in a row," said a smiling coach Hank Overin as his club chalked up its 22nd win against only two losses and a tie.

Nuss' playing was a big factor in Tuesday's win. Overin pointed out. Nuss scored two of Wayne's runs and drove in another.

Nuss shined in the sixth inning when the locals scored two runs to break a 2-2 tie. With one out and second baseman Earle Overin on second, Nuss drilled a line shot past Wahoo third baseman Ken Hajek to score Overin. After advancing to third on an error, Nuss raced home when Hajek muffed a grounder by Bob Keating.

After relief pitcher Paul Mallette walked and scored on catcher Mike Meyer's base hit in the opening frame, Nuss put his club ahead 2-0 in the second inning with his first run of the night. Nuss walked to first and advanced to second on Keating's sacrifice bunt. However, a throwing error to third base allowed Nuss to round third and come home safely.

Defensively Nuss made two headsup plays in the fourth to assist in putting out two Wahoo batters for a 9-3 victory. Center fielder Gordie Cook led Wayne hitters with a run-scoring triple and two singles that also scored runs. Mallette and Meyer finished with two hits each.

Mallette scored runs on his single and double; Meyer twice singled, scoring one run.

All three hit in the four-run third inning. Froehlich led off the frame when he was safe on Mallette hurled Wayne to its second area win Sunday night while striking out 13 Springfield batters for a 9-3 victory.

Center fielder Gordie Cook led Wayne hitters with a run-scoring triple and two singles that also scored runs. Mallette and Meyer finished with two hits each.

Mallette scored runs on his single and double; Meyer twice singled, scoring one run.

For Springfield, it scored all its runs in the second off a two-run double and a run-scoring single.

Wayne opened the game with Mallette scoring in the first inning. The locals scored two runs each in the fourth and sixth frames.

CUT AIR CONDITIONING COSTS

AND STILL STAY COOL... RAPCO-FOAM INSULATION CAN CUT YOUR COOLING BILLS.

You don't have to sacrifice comfort this summer to save on your air conditioning costs. If you insulate with Rapco-Foam your house will stay cool and comfortable, and you'll use from 30 to 50 percent less energy to keep it that way.

Rapco-Foam is injected into your walls as a foam that looks a lot like shaving cream. It gets into every nook and cranny inside your walls, completely filling uninsulated spaces. Before long it gets firm, setting up a permanent barrier to heat and cold, and unlike some insulation it won't burn or give off poisonous fumes in a fire. It cuts down on drafts and outside noise, and even makes it impossible for insects or rodents to inhabit your walls. So instead of cutting back on your family's comfort this summer, why not foam your home and save from 30 to 50 percent on the fuel you use for your air conditioning?

For a free estimate call the Homefoamers, your local Rapco-Foam insulation contractor.

Battle Among NEN Hitters Is Building

Northeast Nebraska Baseball League hitters Greg White, Tom Brazzell and Joel Hemmingson will carry loads of pressure on their shoulders tonight (Thursday) as they compete for the league's batting title.

Merlin Berkenpas of Homer is the leader with a .484 mark, but the regular season is over for the Hawks. White of Newcastle, .455; Brazzell of Dakota City, .435; and Hemmingson of Decatur, .415, can catch Berkenpas with an outstanding night at the plate.

Berkenpas has the most hits, 31, one more than White. Dave Gehring of Homer has scored 22 times, edging ahead of the previous leader Bart Kneiff of Newcastle, by one.

Gerald Jacobsen of Homer came back from two weeks' Army reserve duty to smash his fifth home run, thus taking a share of the lead away from teammate Gehring.

John Zuygart of Pender has the most triples, two. Brazzell holds the lead in doubles, nine, two more than White and John Kingsbury of Ponca.

Dale Martinson of Homer appears to have pitching honors sewed. He concluded the season with a 7-1 record and 90 strikeouts.

THE MOST EVIL MAN IN THE U.S.A.

A few notes on the evil he created in 1969.

He found a quarter of a million "unemployables" who never could hold steady jobs.

He trained them and put them into work that pays money they never dreamed of earning before.

He's a businessman.

For poor kids who couldn't otherwise go to college, he took three hundred and fifty millions and saw to it that those who earned them got scholarships.

He gave eight hundred million to non-profit organizations for medical research, to help stamp out cancer and heart disease and a hundred other dread diseases of the world.

To build new housing for the poor and middle-incomes in U. S. cities, he put up one billion and a quarter dollars, so more people can live in decency.

Sure, he's been a polluter — as has everyone from the U. S. government to ordinary citizens. But last year he scraped up two and one half billions to fight pollution of air and water and nature. This year he plans to get up four billion more, to keep up the battle.

After that, he put up fifteen billion dollars in Social Security taxes to help provide support and medical care for senior citizens. And he added forty-one billion dollars in income taxes to help pay the bills of the U. S. A.

And all the while, he was contributing millions of hours of personal and business time to virtually every humanitarian cause you've ever heard of.

He's a businessman. The most evil man in the U. S. A.

Isn't it time somebody had a good word for this evil man who happens to do so much good for so many people?

We think so.

School Board

indicated they would work with in a budget dictated by the funds available through the sinking fund, about $100,000.

The board directed school superintendent Francis Haun to check the legal ramifications concerning changes in legal guardianship to qualify students to attend school without paying tuition.

The action was prompted when Haun reported to the board that Ed Niemann Jr. had said in a telephone conversation that he is planning to have his mother named as legal guardian for his son so the student would be able to attend his senior year at Wayne without paying tuition. Niemann is moving to a rural home in the Winside school district, Haun explained.

Board member Wilbur Giese said he believes the board should take legal steps to prevent such action.

Terminating the guardianship action as a "subterfuge," Giese said it isn't fair to ask some parents to pay tuition and let someone else attend free when their school tax dollars go to Winside.

Giese said he doesn't object in cases where there is a "bona fide" need for a change in legal guardianship.

Board member Milton Owens agreed with Giese saying the board should pursue the case through an attorney. He said that, although students whose parents or guardians live in the Wayne Carroll school district are entitled by law to attend without paying tuition, he believes the law would be open to interpretation in cases where it appears guardianship has been changed solely for that purpose.

The board voted a nickel increase in school lunch prices. Cost when school starts Sept. 7 will be 55 cents for students and 70 cents for adults. The weekly rate for students will be $2.50.

Haun told the board members during discussion that the cost to the school for serving a lunch was approximately 88 cents last year.

Haun was given the board's approval to apply to the state Education Department for an $8,000 grant to finance a study of early childhood education for mentally handicapped children and children with learning disabilities.

Funds for the project would be provided by federal sources, Haun said. No local matching money would be needed if the request is approved.

Fair

include the market hog show at 8 a.m., open class beef judging at 9 a.m. and 4 H horse judging at 1 p.m.

A new livestock show will be the only judging event Sunday. Wayne County 4-H'ers will be able to enter a pen of three market hives. The 4 H live stock sale will be held at 4 p.m. Sunday, a departure from recent years when the sale followed the fair by a couple of weeks.

A state sanctioned tractor pull contest will begin at 7 Sunday night. Entries can start weighing in at 5 p.m. at the Westside Feed and Grain elevator in Wayne.

Planning

It is a plan is being developed to effect it work for them.

The plan will basically be a statement of public policy. It will have no police powers. Poley said but can be implemented in various ways including the adopting of zoning ordinances by municipalities, zoning resolutions by the county commissioners and adoption of capital improvement programs by governmental subdivisions.

In developing the plan, a survey will be made of conditions of several factors in Wayne County including the economy, population, public facilities, housing, transportation and roads.

The next step is to analyze the assets and liabilities of the county and find out where problems exist. Then priorities must be set so goals for the next 20 years can be established and a plan developed to reach those goals.

In a nutshell, we will find out what kind of community we want in 20 years, and what we need to do to get there, Poley said.

Goals available to reach those goals include capital improvement expenditure of public funds, policies regarding public utilities and zoning regulations.

Information from the public will be of primary importance in developing the plan, Poley said.

We will need to know the attitudes of the people who live here and what they want in order to develop a realistic plan.

Balanced approach wanted in rural areas

Pointing to the need for a planned and balanced approach to rural development, Dr. Walter A. Guntharp, administrator of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Rural Development Service said "we have a great responsibility to be husbandmen of the land as well as proponents of development."

Dr. Guntharp was speaking at the National Conference of Economic Development Representatives in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. In tracing events affecting rural America since World War II, he noted that the United States is the main source of world food exports. Agricultural products provide the single most significant item in our balance of trade position.

"To preserve this ability, we must preserve our land," he said. "Yet, every year, the amount of plowed land that gives way to development is 1.4 million acres, more than the total area of the state of Delaware."

"Our job is not to oppose, but to encourage and assist development," the official pointed out in noting that development can be a blessing or a curse. "We need more jobs, higher incomes, better housing, improved facilities, and better services to improve the general quality of life in the 98 per cent of our land we call rural America," he said.

"But we must remember that more people and more construction take more space. If we think in terms of 15, 20, 25 million people in rural America over the next three decades, that's a lot of space. And if the space used is taken from our production agricultural base, we can do major and irreparable damage to our land and our international interests."

The world's population is expected to increase by upwards of 3 billion people in the next three decades. World agricultural production will have to double if they are to be fed.

For 30 years after the start of World War II, he said, rural America was in the doldrums of economic progress. From 1940 to 1970, 28 million people left the farms and small communities of our country to stack up in the cities. Hand labor was replaced by machines. It was in this era of rural exodus that many federal agencies were created to cope with the resulting problems. And the private sector was quietly taking things into its own hands. Citing recent trends, he said that between 1970 and 1973:

—Over 380,000 people per year were leaving cities and settling in rural America. Non-metro population increased 4.2 per cent, while metro growth was only 2.9 per cent during the period.

—The rate of new manufacturing jobs in rural America was twice as high as the metro rate.

—The rate of new construction in rural communities was 3 1/2 times higher than the metro rate. "These are but illustrative examples of a trend which may indicate the start of a revolutionary era of rural development. We may be riding a tiger. During the recent recession, it has been a relatively quiet tiger, but the recession is passing and we need to be ready," Dr. Guntharp said, — from the Oakland Independent and Republican.

"Hooray! We've had our proctos, and we're fine, thank you!"

Co-author of the CIA and the Cult of Intelligence

As the question of the CIA's covert activities finally came to public attention, the CIA's supporters have formulated arguments in favor of covert action and I'd like to run through a few of these.

The primary one that you hear is that the Soviet Union has the KGB, and therefore the United States must have the CIA. And in fact, President Ford when he was trying to defend our tragic intervention into Chile, stated, "Communist nations spend vastly more money than we do with the same kind of purpose."

But, should we as a nation choose to model ourselves after the Soviet Union? Is that going to be the example for our children? Senator Frank Church of Idaho noted, "That equates us with the Russians and I always thought there was a difference. It seems to me that what the President said is that the only law that we respect is the law of the jungle."

In fact, we need a small counter-espionage service to fend against the activities of the KGB in this country. And that counter-espionage function should be provided by the FBI which after all is empowered by the Congress to do just that thing. It should not be up to the CIA. And in fact covert action abroad or at home does not usually counteract the KGB. It's usually directed against the countries of the Third World, and it simply lowers the United States into the netherworld of surreptitious political subversion.

Another argument you heard from the supporters of the CIA is — only the CIA's failures are trumpeted. Its successes go unheard. Well, frequently supporters of the CIA suggest that there are some hidden and secret successes that justify covert action, but which cannot be revealed to the public. This oft used homily need no longer be taken seriously. First, the failures and illegalities already revealed more than account for any secret successes in assessing the CIA. In other words, the failures have been so detrimental to our country that even if there were a few secret successes it really wouldn't make too much difference. And secondly, as Morton Halperin, formerly a member of Kissinger's staff on the National Security Council recently stated, "If there were a successful operation that we did not know about that proved the case of covert action, the temptation to make that public would have long ago overcome any inhibitions against leaking the information."

So this notion that there is something that none of us know about that's so important and so great that justifies all the fiascos and failures and crimes. I take with a grain of salt. And I can say from my own personal experiences as Assistant to the Director of the State Department's Intelligence Bureau that there aren't any of these unheard-of successes that you hear about.

Exon, union discuss wheat shipments

CAPITOL NEWS

LINCOLN — Gov. J. J. Exon appointed himself ambassador from the farm belt to the court of the high princes of labor. The governor went to Chicago last week expressing concern about declarations by longshoremen that they wouldn't load grain sold to the Russians unless their terms were met.

Exon said the grain sale was important to wheat producers and he arranged the conference with AFL-CIO chief George Meany and Longshoremen President Thomas Gleason to make sure they knew of the farmers' concern.

What led to the Exon expedition was a resolution adopted July 21 at the longshoremen's convention in Miami. It concluded:

This convention hereby declares it is to be the policy of the ILA (International Longshoremen's Association) to refuse to load grain destined for the Soviet Union unless and until the president of the ILA is satisfied that the interests of the American public are adequately protected, and all ILA locals and members are directed to honor that policy.

The resolution expressed concern that the "huge grain companies" were reaping "undeserved advantages at the expense of the American farmer, the American consumer and the American taxpayer."

The American people, the resolution said, "have only recently recovered from the disastrous grain deals of 1972 in which the Soviet Union obtained American grain at bargain prices, subsidized by American credits and resulting in sharply increased prices in the American market."

The Ford administration "does not inspire confidence in its ability to protect the vital interests of this nation and its working people in commercial grain sales to the Soviet Union," the resolution said.

Exon, on his return to Lincoln, said ILA leader Gleason and officials of the Maritime Union who met with him in Chicago had expressed concern that all the grain was to be transported on Soviet ships at a time when American seamen are out of work.

The governor said the union leaders said they don't trust the Russians and are sure that the deal does them more good than it does the bulk of the American people. Furthermore, the union officials said they were concerned about profits which would go to the grain cartels.

Despite the refusal of the grain chiefs to back away from their stand on any of these points, Exon said he went away from the Chicago meeting optimistic that something would be worked out.

The shipments are to be made in late September or early October and the labor officials said they would be negotiating in the meantime with government officials and grain companies to achieve what the resolution calls protection for the "interests of the American public."

Exon said he was confident those negotiations would bear fruit.

Exon said he didn't go to Chicago on behalf of any farm organizations or as a spokesman for regional governors. He said he set the conference up on his own, citing Nebraska grain producers' stake in demand for wheat and feed grains.

Grain Alcohol Pushed

The governor traveled to Chicago from Santa Fe, N.M., where he had been attending a meeting of the Western Governors' Regional Energy Policy Organization.

That organization, with the unwieldy title of WGREPO, also adopted a resolution of interest to Nebraska's grain producers.

Introduced by Exon, the resolution concludes: We direct the staff of the WGREPO to pursue actively the proposition of the use of the products of agriculture to meet this nation's present and future energy requirements, and to explore the possibilities of the establishment of a plant for the commercial production of grain alcohol as a viable energy source, such plant to be located in a member state of this organization.

The organization includes 10 states — Nebraska, the Dakotas, Wyoming, Montana, Colorado, Utah, Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico.

Exon said he and the other governors were "near unanimous" in opposition to the proposed coal slurry pipeline because it would diminish regional water sources. He said the pipeline designed to ship coal from Wyoming to points in the south would be more attractive if a parallel line were constructed to return the water used to wash the coal to its destination.

Exon was asked what dues Nebraska pays to the WGREPO, which has hired former North Dakota Gov. William Guy as its director. Exon said the states currently are using federal funds to operate the organization, but dues would be established next year so the states pay half the cost. He said he doesn't know what that figure will be, but he didn't think it would be large.

OBSERVATIONS

Eliminate inspection date

Anyone who reads the county court news will notice from time to time entries for "no valid inspection sticker."

Some of those people probably know they are breaking the law. They are pretty sure their vehicle won't pass but they let the inspection deadline sneak up on them and for one reason or another, have decided to see if they can "get by" until they can get to a garage.

Others are the victims of their own poor memory. It's funny how easy it is to get accustomed to things. A person sees that little sticker in the window every time he or she drives the car until soon, it isn't noticed.

The problem becomes more acute in the family which owns, perhaps, two cars which are driven regularly and third- or fourth-hand pickup which isn't, but is finally driven after a couple of months of sitting idle and the driver finds himself being issued a summons for an expired inspection sticker.

The fine isn't exorbitant, usually five bucks. But when added to the mandatory eight dollars court costs, it adds up to a pretty healthy chunk out of most people's wallets.

The inspection law itself isn't in question here, but it seems a shame to take money from a citizen and time from a police officer and a judge, because of a poor memory when the problem could be eliminated.

Nebraska is going to switch to a staggered month system for issuing license plates. Instead of everyone getting their plates at the same time, due dates will be spread throughout the year with an approximately equal number of owners getting new tags each month.

The average driver is more likely to remember when to get new license plates than he is when to get a new inspection sticker. So why not make proof of inspection mandatory when a driver goes in for new license plates?

This would give vehicle owners just one date to remember and would eliminate having to paste a sticker on the windshield. (Unauthorized stickers, we are told, hamper vision.) Perhaps in this way we could also eliminate a situation where people pay for having a poor memory. — Jim Strayer guest speaker Lyle Marotz discussed some highlights of the national Kiwanis convention held in Atlanta, Ga., in June.

Over 22,000 registered for the convention, Marotz told members. Among some of the 14 amendments the group acted upon, allowing women to join and clubs holding lotteries drew a lot of attention. By a narrow vote, delegates rejected both, he said.

Tips for Patio Garden

Prospective gardeners with green thumbs sitting idle in an apartment or home with no garden space can take heart. You can have a garden right on your own patio. And it's not too late to have a modest fall garden.

Vegetables and flowering plants can be grown in containers of various sizes and forms. Plant breeders and seed companies have developed dwarf plants of both vegetables and flowers and bush types of vine crops specifically for patio gardening.

Enough food of the salad and green vegetable crops (tomato, pepper, lettuce, cucumber, radish, endive, chard and kale) can be grown in small containers to feed a family of three or four.

Containers can be purchased at nurseries and garden centers, or you can use milk cartons, buckets, baskets, boxes, plastic waste paper containers and even plastic bags. Punch holes in the sides near the bottom for drainage.

Soil, sand and compost in equal volumes is good for growing. A mixture of peat moss and vermiculite, with fertilizer add (one fourth cup 5 10 5 or 10 10 10 per bushel) has much less weight, holds more water per volume and has less disease and weed problems.

Regardless of the soil, fertilizer should be added every 10 to 14 days. A balanced fertilizer (10 10 10 or 20 20 20) should be applied three tablespoons per gallon of water.

Members of the city planning commission are scheduled to begin this week a survey of sidewalks in the northeast part of Wayne.

The survey, which will eventually cover all sidewalks in the city, will be conducted by most of the nine-member board, said city clerk Bruce Mordhorst. Each member will walk about a two to six-block area while examining the walks. Mordhorst added.

Members will compile their reports for the northeast section only and present them at the Sept. 8th commission meeting before continuing the rest of the survey.

In other action Monday night, the group agreed to recommend to the city council that all persons should obtain building permits before building new sidewalks.

'Getting Steamed' Is Fun for Johnsons

Carl Johnson and his father Russell helped to bring back memories of "how we used to do it" to older members of the audience at their annual threshing show Saturday afternoon and showed youngsters there what farming was like in the early part of this century.

This was the third annual threshing show presented by the Johnsons, who live just north of Wayne.

A love for steam operated machinery is part of the Johnson heritage, Carl said. His grandfather had a regular threshing run in the area, operating his own steam engine and threshing machine, and later ran the steam powered mill at Hartington.

"I've always liked steam engines, locomotives and things like that," Carl explains.

He and his father acquired their first steam engine, a Minneapolis 16-52, in 1927 at Maimo. The figures denote the machine's horsepower rating, Carl explained. "16 on the draw bar and 52 at the belt."

That horsepower is developed through steam pressure in a single cylinder with an 8 1/2-inch stroke and a 10-inch bore, operating at about 200 r.p.m.'s. Top speed for the self-propelled engine is two miles per hour.

The engine, No. 8120, was in good shape mechanically when the Johnsons bought it and they had it running three days after they brought it home. It wasn't until August of 1972 however, the refurbishing and painting was completed.

According to the younger Johnson, the engine operates at between 75 and 125 lbs. pressure, carries about 450 gallons of water and will run most of the day on half a pickup load of wood.

The threshing machine used is a Bell City model, with a relatively small 24-inch wide cylinder, Carl said.

Site for the threshing was a field about one-half mile west of the Dude Ranch drive in movie theater north of Wayne. Oak shocks from eight acres were fed into the threshing machine between 2 and 4 Saturday afternoon.

The elder Johnson said a full crew, using seven or eight binding racks and a larger threshing machine could handle grain from 35 to 40 acres in a day.

"We loaded the bundle rack Thursday night," Russell Johnson said. "We wouldn't have been able to thresh if the bundles had gotten wet."

He pitched bundles into the threshing machine while Carl and Don Pederson operated the steam engine.

The Johnsons acquired a second steam engine last November. It has a two-wheel water wagon with steering synchronized to the front wheels.

"We're in the process of overhauling it now," Carl said. "We hope to have it ready for next year's show. Then we will probably alternate between the two engines each year."

Irrigators Told To Register

Nebraska irrigators still have the right to drill an irrigation well or other well on their land without obtaining a permit. However, they must register all irrigation wells and respect the spacing distance as specified by state law.

This word comes from Dean Axthelm, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension water resources specialist, in response to questions by irrigators who apparently are confused about the provision of Groundwater Management Act (LB 577), which becomes effective August 23.

The new legislation does define two types of illegal wells: Those wells without a permit but in a control area and those outside a control area, and not properly registered.

For the time being, Axthelm said, irrigators need not worry about the first example of an illegal well, because there are no control areas designated in Nebraska. The act does outline procedures for establishing control areas, which would be administered by Natural Resources Districts. The law would require a permit for drilling an irrigation well of any other type well yielding over 100 gallons per minute within a designated control area.

However, LB 577 puts more teeth in the enforcement of the law passed in 1957 which requires registration of wells and provides for penalties against violators, Axthelm stressed.

In essence, any well not registered is an illegal well, and prior to the passage of LB 577 was already subject to 1957 legislation which called for fines of not less than $100 or more than $500 for any person found to be in violation.

The new law, specifically allows Natural Resources Districts to issue cease and desist orders to restrain the withdrawal or use of water from illegal wells; whether unregistered — or in the future — a well without a permit in the control area. The law authorizes directors of Natural Resources Districts to establish rules and regulations for enforcement.

Axthelm said existing irrigation wells which are unregistered should be registered immediately, although to date no penalty has been assessed for delinquent registrations.

The owner of land on which the well is located must complete registration forms within 30 days after the well is completed. The former deadline was 30 days.

The owner registration forms are forwarded by the driller, along with the certificate of drilling, to the State Department of Water Resources. Registration forms can be obtained from the Department or the well driller.

Irrigators unsure as to whether their wells are registered can check with the Department of Water Resources or the local Soil Conservation Service office, and most N.R.D. offices, Axthelm advised.

To sum it up, the landowner who wishes to drill an irrigation well today can simply hire a driller, get the well drilled, comply with the long-standing spacing requirements and then properly register the well," Axthelm concluded.

This and That...

WAYNE COUNTY EXTENSION AGENT

The Summer That Was
This summer has been an unusual one for several different reasons. I'd like to report to you on some of the more interesting problems.

The Worm That Couldn't Read

Several weeks ago I was called out to the Dick Munter farm south of Wayne. Dick was having problems with a worm that was inside the corn stalk and was eating the tassel before it emerged. The worm looked like a fall armyworm but every one knows an army worm eats grass and leaves on the outside of the plant and doesn't bore into stalks.

The area entomologist confirmed my identification. Evidently we have developed a generation of illiterate worms that haven't read the entomology text book as to what they are supposed to be doing. Johnny isn't the only one that hasn't learned to read.

A Greenbug That Isn't a Greenbug

I've had numerous calls from farmers that their tassels were covered with greenbugs. In most cases these were not greenbugs, but were corn leaf aphids instead. Corn leaf aphids are not harmful.

Corn leaf aphids are a blue green, darker than greenbugs and lack the green stripe down the back. Greenbugs are light green to yellow green. Greenbugs are usually found on the underside of leaves and the corn leaf aphids in the whorls and on the tassels.

The Case of the Crinkly Topped Soybeans

There has been reports of soybeans with the top leaves being crinkled and distorted. In most, if not all cases, this is herbicide damage, usually Banvel. I've discussed this with our weed specialist and he believes the plant will absorb the spray in its tissues and not until several weeks later when the weather conditions are right will it exhibit the outward symptoms such as distorted leaves.

The Worm Returns

Early this year we had a real epidemic of variegated cutworms damaging the second cutting of alfalfa. There are reports that counties to the south of us are having to spray again. I've found a few variegated cutworms in Wayne County alfalfa this past week, but so far there isn't enough to worry about.

The Care of Alfalfa

John Kay asked me to look at his newly seeded alfalfa whose leaves were a mixture of red, yellow and white. John and I examined the field and we couldn't find a leaf that was a true color of green. I suspected disease and sent a sample into the pathology laboratory.

The answer was that it wasn't a disease, but was insect damage. The potato leaf hopper is a very small, quick moving insect somewhat similar to a grasshopper. When they chew on the leaf of the alfalfa they inject a toxin which causes color changes. Hence the white, red and yellow leafed alfalfa.

A happy note — I recently re-inspected this alfalfa field and a new growth looked a normal green.

Insect Specialist Says Ban Not Necessary

The Environmental Protection Agency's announcement of intent to suspend production and all but two specific uses of the insecticides chlordane and heptachlor "is based more on emotionally hot issues, rather than cold facts," in the opinion of a University of Nebraska Extension entomologist.

Robert E. Roselle commented on the EPA action, to which individual manufacturers and formulators have five days to file an appeal. It may take many months for a final decision to be made, Roselle explained. After appeals are filed, manufacture and sales can continue until a final decision is made.

Appeals will be submitted to an administrative law judge who will make recommendations to EPA administrator Russell Train. Uses exempt from the proposed ban would be surface application for termite control and certain root-dippings for nursery stock.

He said impact on agriculture in Nebraska, if a ban were to become effective, would be on individual farmers who have serious cutworm problems on corn. "There is little of either material used in the state, so the total effect would not be too serious on total crop production, but it could contribute to the breaking of individual small family farms. EPA has not demonstrated concern for the family farm operation, only for total production and the consumer," Roselle stated.

The NU insect specialist said that by listing chlordane and heptachlor as imminent hazards, all uses should be stopped immediately without appeal.

Roselle said he "does not see an imminent hazard as they (heptachlor and chlordane) have been in use for 25 years or longer." The EPA decision, Roselle said, was based on tumors found in laboratory strains of mice, and presence of small amounts of chemical residues in some persons.

"Many things will cause tumors in laboratory animals."

You probably don't have to worry about having sophophobia. It means fear of learning, and few people who had it would read this to learn the meaning of the word.

Workers in production plants who have the highest exposure do not demonstrate incidence of tumors greater than population little exposed to the chemicals. In fact, when DDT was banned, plant workers were reported to have lower incidence of cancer than non workers.

Roselle said entomologists' chief concern is that EPA may be planning systematic banning of chemicals that are essential to sustain the level of food production necessary in today's economy.

"Most alternatives suggested by EPA are not feasible due to less efficiency and higher costs, up to $25 and $30 an acre, which is not economically acceptable for corn due to its relative value as a commodity," Roselle concluded.

"Your Future is Our Concern Today"

In a joint announcement, the State University of Nebraska (SUN) the University of Nebraska at Omaha (UN-O) and the four State Colleges in Chadron, Kearney, Peru and Wayne said they will cooperate to offer statewide this fall a course which focuses on learning disabilities in children.

The course, entitled "The Characteristics of Learning Disabilities," will include television segments broadcast on the Nebraska-Educational Television Network, newspaper segments to be made available to newspapers across the state and other instructional materials mailed to the homes of people who enroll.

Enrollment options will permit people to register either for graduate or undergraduate credit, or as noncredit or "audit" students through one of the cooperating schools or through SUN.

Nicotine is named for Jean Nicot a French ambassador to Portugal who planted some tobacco seeds in France.

The joint announcement stressed that the plan is an experimental one, in response to the Nebraska Legislature's expressed desire for more cooperative activities in postsecondary education.

University of Nebraska-Omaha faculty services for counseling and grading purposes for people who register either through UN-O or through SUN. Each of the state colleges also will assign a faculty member to the course to provide similar assistance to the participants who register through their campuses.

To qualify for graduate credit, students will be required to attend seminars to be scheduled in all parts of the state. Those taking the course for undergraduate credit or for no credit will be encouraged to attend the seminars, but their attendance will not be required.

SUN in the fall offering of the learning disabilities course.

"This course is being offered at a most important time for many residents of our state," said Hassel, "because of the increasing attention being given to programming for children with educational handicaps."

"Since many teachers, as well as parents, want and expect to know more about the educational disabilities that children experience, we believe this course is very important for many adults across the state."

Hassel also noted that the academic content for the course was developed under the guidance of Dr. Gerald Wallace of the University of Virginia, a nationally known and highly respected expert in the field.

Fiscal SS Benefits Are Up $18 Million

Social security can make about $101 million available for vocational rehabilitation services for people getting monthly disability benefits in fiscal 1976, according to Dale Branch, 1976 social security district manager in Norfolk. Fiscal 1976 started on July 1, 1975.

"That's about $18 million more than was available in fiscal 1975," Branch said. "It means more disabled people can get rehabilitation training to help them return to jobs."

Social security pays monthly benefits to eligible workers and their families when the worker is severely disabled and not expected to work for a year or more. In selected cases, social security helps pay for vocational rehabilitation services provided by state and local agencies.

In fiscal 1974, over 60,000 disabled people in the U.S. got vocational rehabilitation services that social security helped pay for. Over 13,000 were successfully rehabilitated.

The amount available for rehabilitation services each is 1 1/2 percent of the total amount of social security disability benefits paid during the previous year.

Drought Has Reduced Soviet Grain Prospects

Continued and intensified dry weather in much of the Soviet Union's spring grain areas has brought a further reduction in crop prospects for that country. The U.S. Department of Agriculture today estimated the USSR's production of all grains in 1975 at around 185 million metric tons — 10 million tons below the USDA estimate issued in early July.

In major spring-grain producing areas east of the Volga, July weather is particularly critical to the outcome in these regions. Weather in the next few weeks will continue to affect the output of the Soviet spring grain crop. The winter crop, now mostly harvested, is estimated at very near last year's 62 million tons.

The new estimate of 185 million tons released today includes 85 million tons of wheat, 85 million tons of coarse grains and 15 million tons of miscellaneous grains and pulses. USSR gross grain imports needed in 1975-76 are now estimated at around 20 million tons.

based on a Soviet crop of 185 million tons and no major change in Soviet utilization policy. As of July 24, the Soviets had purchased approximately 14 million tons of grain including about 10 million from the United States, 3 million from Canada and 750,000 tons from Australia.

4-H'ers to Give Demonstrations

Eight Wayne County 4-H'ers who have qualified for the State Fair demonstration contest will present their demonstrations on Friday at 2 p.m. at the agriculture building at the county fairgrounds. A new feature to the Wayne County Fair this year, the demonstrations will give the public an opportunity to see the demonstrators and will give the demonstrators more practice before they head to the State Fair, said Linda Sander, area home extension agent from the Northeast Station near Concord.

The eight who qualified last month for State Fair are: Anita Sandahl, "Sour Dough Flapjacks"; Susan Rethwisch and Leslie Grunke, "To Make Cheese Cake"; Kris Anderson, "The Ice Cream Shoppe"; Shirley Klensang and Marilyn Strate, "Hints of Spills"; Lori Mikkelsen, "Fishing No. Gardening Yes"; Cindy Bull, "Get Ring a Call Ready for Show."
