State College Board Approves Salary Hike, Merit Increases

A program geared to hiking the salaries of the lower paid professional staff members the most and providing for merit increases to "reward exemplary performance" was adopted Friday by the board of trustees of Nebraska State Colleges at a meeting in Lincoln.

The action was taken as the board approved the budget for the four state colleges located at Chadron, Kearney, Peru and Wayne. The new budget request, which must be in the hands of the governor by Sept. 15, totals approximately $23 million and is up 9.8 per cent from this year's figure.

The pay plan would increase the salaries of professional staff members an average of 6.6 per cent, not including the merit program. The basic plan calls for an increase of $667 per person plus two per cent of the present salary.

This phase of the salary plan would cost about $575,000 for the four schools and provide increases ranging from 4.1 to 9.4 per cent, depending on present salary levels.

In addition, a half per cent of the four colleges' total payroll, or approximately $42,000, would be set aside for salary adjustments to take care of promotions and new degrees that may have been earned.

The merit plan would cost about $150,000, if adopted. Ideally, it would provide a $500 bonus for half of the state colleges' professional personnel. The board established a minimum figure of $400, for certain individuals who have been evaluated as performing meritorious service.

Board president William Colwell of Chadron said the merit plan was adopted to upgrade the quality of the faculty and to reward exemplary performance on the part of outstanding staff members. He said the plan is for one year only, and that the bonus would not be used to figure any percentage of increase in salaries that might be forthcoming and the following year.

"Our base pay is low and the state colleges need a procedure to reward the excellent work performed by our professors," Dr. Colwell added.

Dr. Colwell said the thought behind the basic plan is to restore the buying power for the essentials of the state college employees that has been lost because of inflation. He said the $667 figure was arrived at by using the $540 amount that the Department of Labor says in the level of qualification for federal assistance, and applying a cost of living factor as of March 31, 1975.

Last year, all state employees received a pay increase of five per cent plus $467.

In addition to salaries, the board approved a 10.3 per cent increase amounting to about $275,000, for non-personal services, excluding utilities and the cost of renting automobiles from the state's new Transportation Services Bureau.

A breakdown of this phase of the budget shows a request of 9.2 increase for operating expenses, 13.5 for supplies and materials and 3.3 for travel.

The board will seek a 19.9 per cent hike in funds to pay its utility bills. Wayne State said its utility bill was that much higher next year.

New and expanded programs amounting to $360,000 were approved by the trustees. They include $94,000 for the nursing program and $37,500 for criminal justice at Kearney, $50,000 for equipment, $22,500 for continuing education for the health professions and $15,000 for campus security at Chadron, $75,000 for equipment at Wayne and $50,000 for equipment and $19,000 for a black and minority counselor at Wayne.

The capital construction phase of the new budget is pegged at $943,000. It includes $475,000 for remodeling and renovating the Administration Building at Chadron, $60,000 for an all-weather track, $40,000 for a greenhouse and $35,000 to renovate the education and humanities building at Wayne, $250,000 for the second phase of the health and physical education building at Peru and $60,000 for recreational facilities, and $70,000 for facilities planned at Kearney.

In addition, the four colleges will seek, through the board office's budget, $900,000 for miscellaneous renovation and repairs and ask that the state pay the utility bills for those buildings such as dormitories that were built with revenue bonds. No price tag is available for the latter request.

A 30-HORSEPOWER Russian tractor hit the track at the University of Nebraska Lincoln Tractor Testing lab this week and is drawing some attention. The new tractor from the Soviet Union is the Belarus T-250 and costs about $3,400 without cab, about 30 per cent less than American tractors of the same size.

Soviet Tractor 'Quite a Competitor'

A new tractor from the Soviet Union now being tested at the University of Nebraska Lincoln testing lab could be "quite a competitor to our domestic tractors," according to the laboratory director Dr. Louis Leviticus.

The cost of the Belarus T-250 is about $3,400 without cab, about 30 per cent less than American tractors of the same size. It is in the 30-horsepower range; exact horsepower rating will be known after tests are completed.

Leviticus said the tractor has a two-cylinder, air-cooled diesel engine. Its main use would be for light hauling and mowing around farmsteads, and for work in large-scale vegetable gardens. The maximum size farm the tractor would work on "would be about 20 to 25 acres," he said.

Four features on the Belarus were described by Leviticus. They are a reversal of steering direction; a hydraulically operated pickup hitch, a hydraulic pump that can be disconnected when not in use; and two forward gears that enable the tractor to move at a very low speed for vegetable garden work.

Jersey, the knitted fabric was first produced on the Isle of Jersey in the English channel.

Cutworms, Spider Mites Appearing in Corn Fields

Three kinds of cutworms can be found in Nebraska field corn right now — the corn earworm, the variegated cutworm and the western bean cutworm.

Dr. David Keith, University of Nebraska Lincoln Extension entomologist, said corn earworms are highly variable in color, ranging from light brown to reddish to yellow to green, but all have black stripes running the length of the body. Variegated cutworms are grey and have a row of yellow dots down the back. Western bean cutworms are a mottled brown and tan color. Keith said that in the Platte Valley, central and southwest Nebraska, are generally brownish in overall color. A rather broad brown streak bordered by darker brown streaks runs the length of the body in the middle of the back.

All of these insects are cutworms and all feed on the silk, cob tip and the developing grain. Keith warned, the western bean cutworm is by far the most serious of the three, and is the only controllable species from an economic standpoint. But time is running out. If the bean cutworms have entered the silk channel or have penetrated the husk to feed on the grain, it is too late to control. For worms that are exposed on the ear tips and small worms still out on the leaves and in the leaf axils, however, it may still pay to control. Control is justified if

Controlling Bees, Wasps and Hornets
The best way to control bees, wasps and hornets is to apply one or two tablespoons of 50 per cent malathion to a gallon of water and saturate the nesting area. These insects will leave you alone if you leave them alone, so if they are feeding on flowers or otherwise not bothering you, don't kill them since they are beneficial insects. If they are in a dangerous area, apply the malathion so that you won't arouse them.

Storing Vegetables
Not all vegetables require the same conditions for successful storage. They can be divided into three groups: warm dry for squash and pumpkin, cool dry for onions, and cool moist for root crops, potatoes, cabbage and apples.

Furnace rooms or upstairs storage rooms usually are warm and dry with humidity ranging from 15 to 30 per cent and temperatures between 50 and 60 degrees. Before placing pumpkins and squash in storage, be sure that they are fully matured and cured. Keep them in a heated well ventilated room at 75 to 85 degrees for about two weeks after harvest to harden the shell.

Unheated storage rooms such as attics and closets are suitable for storing onions if the temperature doesn't go below freezing. Onions should be thoroughly mature. Remove the tops, put onions in a shallow box or tray with ventilated bottoms and cure outdoors or dry in an airy shed or room for three to four weeks. Place in storage at 32 to 36 degrees Fahrenheit and 70 to 75 per cent humidity. You can store onions in mesh bags hanging from the ceiling of the vegetable storage room.

Carrots, Beets and Potato Storage
Carrots and beets store very well in any container that will prevent excessive shriveling. Low storage temperatures between 32 and 50 degrees are the key to successful carrot and

Fire Damages Plant Industry Building at UN-L East Campus

The late night fire at the Plant Industry Building at the University of Nebraska's East Campus caused $500,000 to $700,000 damage to the building itself with estimates running at $400,000 to $500,000 damage to the scientific equipment, according to Harley Schrader, director of the UN-L physical plant.

Schrader estimates that it will be 30 to 45 days before even minor occupancy will be possible. The fire, which took the attic and roof of the building and gutted the third floor, started in the attic in experimental growth chambers for plant pathology researchers. Physical plant officials noted that the cost of repair could vary anywhere from $500,000 to $1.5 million, depending on the damage to the electrical system and other factors. The building is structurally sound, said Schrader. At the minimum, he said, that the building will need a new roof and extensive clean up.

Dr. T. E. Hartung, dean of the UN-L College of Agriculture commented on the fire. "Based on the estimates of the condition of the facility, the results of the fire are a serious setback to research. The teaching facilities will be accommodated through other building space but the staff and research housing is a serious problem. This fire represents a major disaster for the UN-L Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources." Hartung made the statement in the absence of acting Vice-Chancellor Dr. Howard W. Ottosen.

He added that the department will have to find new facilities for at least 60 days while the new roof and clean up will take place. Records and reference material will remain in the building.

Of the three departments housed in the building, plant pathology, entomology, and horticulture, plant pathology is the most heavily damaged, said Hartung. The department's teaching and research facilities were on the third floor and attic. Dr. Myron Brakke, noted UN-L researcher, explained that all the research in the attic is gone.

Disaster Funds Available

A few farmers in Wayne County may be eligible for low yield crop disaster payments, according to Ray Butts, county ASCS director.

Farmers with feed grain crops which have suffered a substantial reduction in yield because of natural disaster could be eligible. Butts said natural disasters include drought, hail, insects and disease.

Butts cautioned farmers that they should make application to the ASCS office before making any use of the crop so his office can explain eligibility requirements.

Farm Questionnaires Now Being Mailed

The State Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics is now mailing questionnaires to a number of Nebraska farmers and asking for their cooperation in completing and returning them as soon as possible.

The data collected will be the basis for the September crop report, cattle on feed report, and the hog and pig report, as well as the annual 1975 small grain acreage and production report.

Doug Murfield, division director, says these reports will help remove the uncertainties about the potential supply of feed grains for 1975, especially corn. The livestock reports will provide livestock information concerning the current situation and future marketings.

Butz: No Set-Aside Quota On '76 Feed Grain Wheat

Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz announced recently there will be no set-aside requirement for the 1976 feed grain wheat and upland cotton programs.

It will be the third consecutive years for the feed grain and wheat programs and the fourth for the upland cotton program in which no set-aside was required. Feed grain and wheat producers are not being encouraged to take cropland out of production next year, department officials explain, because even though this year's corn and wheat crops are expected to be at record levels, export demand is strong. For upland cotton, reduced 1975 plantings will result in a crop approximately two million bales smaller than in 1974; also, the department forecasts an increase in domestic usage and movement into export.

As announced in 1973, there will be no conserving base requirement for the duration of the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973 through

Bicentennial Sparking Interest in Flags

It's enough to make Betsy Ross drop a stitch—the astonishing rate Americans are putting out more flags.

Or, anyway, buying them to be ready for the big celebrations planned everywhere for the nation's 200th birthday next year.

Delighted flag makers, vied by orders, are sewing up acres and acres of official red, white, and blue, and not just today's version of Old Glory, the National Geographic Society says.

They're running all kinds of Stars and Stripes up the flagpole, two especially: The "Betsy Ross" flag of 13 stripes—7 red and 6 white—and a circle of 13 stars, and the "Bennington" flag of 7 white and 6 red stripes and "78" on the field of blue under an arch of 13 stars.

Real vexillologists, or serious students of flags, also know all about the ancestors of the Stars and Stripes. The "Don't Tread on Me," rattlesnake flag, the "Appeal to Heaven" pine tree flag, the blue "Liberty" or Fort Mifflin flag, and the Continental Colors, sometimes called the Grand Union flag.

These flags led George Washington's men into battle, not the Stars and Stripes. Despite the famous painting, Washington crossed the Delaware under the Grand Union flag.

This banner not only had 13 red and white stripes, but, instead of stars, it furnished the familiar British Union Jack in the upper left corner—a sort of salute to the rebelling colonists' upbringing as Englishmen.

The American Revolution had been going on two years before somebody—no one knows who—suggested the patriots ought to have their own national flag.

Then, on June 14, 1777, the Second Continental Congress decreed "The Flag of the United States be 13 stripes alternate red and white, and the Union be 13 stars in a blue field representing a new constellation."

The navy took to the flag quickly, but not the army. Washington didn't get one until 1783.

Who thought up the design? Nobody knows, although many believe it may have been a onetime member of Congress named Francis Hopkinson. In 1780 he billed the lawmakers for official "labours of fancy" including, he said, designing the flag.

He asked for, but was never paid, a quarter cask of wine. Congress explained others were involved, but never said who.

Betsy Ross, the Philadelphia upholsterer, was not one of the others. Legend has it that Washington visited her, sketched out an idea for a flag, and she sewed it. But historians say there is no evidence anything like that ever happened, except in the worshipful writings of her grandson nearly 100 years later.

The flag was redesigned in 1794 with two more stars and stripes for Vermont and Kentucky, but not without one congressman's comment that taking time to authorize this was "a consummate piece of frivolity."

This 15-striper was the Star Spangled Banner that inspired Francis Scott Key as he watched the British fleet loft "bombs bursting in air" over Baltimore's Fort Mifflin in 1812.

Later that year, former Navy Captain Samuel Chester Reid, on Congress' request, produced a new design, going back to 13 stripes and calling for the addition of only a star for each state added after the original 13.

Nevertheless, confusion lingered: In 1817 a 9-stripe flag flew in the Washington Navy Yard and one with 18 stripes over the Capitol.

Through the rest of the century there was endless unofficial redesigning of the flag and nobody seemed to mind. American flags advertised fishing tackle, stove oil, corned beef, and Abraham Lincoln as a candidate for President.

Stars and stripes decorated everything from aprons to umbrellas, and nobody distinguished between using them as lapel pins or as sport shirts.

For the Centennial Celebration 99 years ago, one forward-looking designer apparently saw only the sky as the limit for the nation's future. He produced a flag with 81 stars, spelling out 1776-1876.

Historians say it was the Civil War that brought on a great patriotic surge over the flag. As Rear Admiral George Henry Preble remembered:

"When the Stars and Stripes went down at Sumter, they went up in every town and country in the loyal states. The demand for flags was so great that the manufacturers could not furnish them fast enough. In New York the demand for flags raised the price of bunting from four dollars seventy-five cents apiece to twenty-eight dollars.

The patchwork of red, white, and blue, which had flouted in their faces for generations without exciting much emotion, in a single day stirred the pulses of the people into battle, and became the inspiration of national effort," Admiral Preble wrote.

"All at once the dear old flag meant the Declaration of Independence; it meant Lexington; it meant Bunker Hill and Saratoga (although only in the last-named battle had it been used); it meant freedom."

Most American today say the Stars and Stripes means all that, and more.

Harlan: N-Abels Test Is Designed to Help Students

A new test designed to help children in fifth grade develop basic learning skills will be administered for the first time this year in schools throughout Nebraska.

Titled the "N-Abels" test (Nebraska-Assessment Battery of Essential Learning Skills), the program will help a child improve his skills in reading, writing, mathematics and inquiry skills, according to its founder, Hugh Harlan of the Nebraska Department of Education.

Speaking to Wayne Kiwanians Monday, Harlan said the program is designed to find the student's level of skills and use that information to provide instruction planning.

"Most fifth grade students will not pass the test the first time,"

Harlan said, adding that even some high school students have difficulty in passing the test. However, failing the test isn't something to be ashamed of, he pointed out. The idea is to find the learning level and set a goal to be achieved in order that a student will be able to succeed in school, he said.

Harlan started working on the N-Abels project about 10 years ago. After a one-year pilot program, the test was okayed by the Department of Education for use in state schools.

Not all schools will have to use the N-Abels' course, he said. Other similar test programs to use the N-Abels course, he said. Other test programs similar to the N-Abels test still are being used.

Number of Adult Education Classes Growing at WSC

Continuing education, a new idea on the Wayne State College just three years ago, was responsible for 118 courses during the 1974-75 academic year, involving 2,759 students and awarding 3,981 credit hours.

That compares with four courses offered the first year, 74 students and 185 credit hours.

Continuing education is aimed primarily at adults, offering a variety of courses in time frames when working individuals can take advantage of them, during evenings and weekends.

In addition to the college credit courses, many non-credit courses are offered by Wayne State in conjunction with the Northeast Technical Community College at Norfolk.

Classes are held on campus, off campus, and sometimes way off campus, as in the case of the primitive art course held in the Minnesota backwoods and the Mexican Culture course which took its students to Old Mexico. Most of the courses, however, are offered in Nebraska and Iowa.

About 50 courses are now scheduled for the 1975-76 academic year, but more will be added constantly as the year progresses, explains Dr. Don Keek, director of continuing education.

"If enough people are interested in a course to make it go," explained Dr. Keek, "we will offer it." Suggestions have come from division chairman, instructors and other individuals, he added.

"If it weren't for the support and encouragement of the administration, faculty members and division chairmen, we wouldn't have the progress we have shown in continuing education," emphasized Dr. Keek.

Illustrating just one of the many possibilities with continuing education, Dr. Keek explained how the specialty learning disability courses have grown into a full program of endorsement.

Among the new course offerings this year in continuing education are "Introduction to Computer Programming," "Teaching and Evaluating for Business Education," "The Presentation of Culture in the Spanish Classroom," "Creative Approaches to Learning Through Communication," "Psychology of Death and Dying," "Career Awareness for the Elementary School," and "Theory and Construction of Elementary and Secondary School Science Teaching Modules."

Many courses from previous years will also be offered this year.

Enrollment fees for continuing education courses is $17 per credit hour for Nebraska residents and $29 per credit hour for non-residents. A one-time matriculation fee is required of students who have never before taken a course through Wayne State College.

Participants and their family members may stay on campus during on-campus workshops at a fee of $4 per night for adults. There is no charge for children. Linens are included in the fee.

My father-in-law is a perfectionist. He doesn't want to be underinsured, yet he hates the idea of having to figure out the replacement cost of his house every year during this inflation. He thinks it would be a good idea if insurance companies would figure out a way to do this automatically for people like him. Is this feasible?

A. Absolutely. In fact, in many states you can now obtain an inflation guard which periodically increases your coverage under the homeowners insurance policy as protection against the effect of inflation.

This endorsement provides for an automatic increase every three months in the amount of protection afforded by the policy, at the rate of 1 percent of the original amount of the coverage. This means that a $20,000 homeowners policy with an inflation guard endorsement would offer protection totaling $20,800 at the end of one year, or $22,400 after three years.
