Time Change Is Sunday

Clocks should be set ahead one hour on Sunday as Wayne County and most of the rest of the country, begins a six-month observance of Daylight Saving Time.

The April changeover is a victory for those mainly rural members of Congress who successfully fought a bill to begin DST two months earlier.

The 1966 Uniform Time Act dictates DST from the last Sunday in April through the last Sunday in October. Provisions of the law were suspended in January 1974 at the height of the oil embargo when government officials were looking for every possible way to save energy.

Based on preliminary studies, Congress concluded then that some energy could be saved through year-round DST, and it was begun in January of that year.

Farmers and other parents protested, however, and standard time was returned in October, 1974, and remained in effect through February, 1975.

That left the nation with six months of DST in 1973, 10 months in 1974 and eight months in 1975. A Senate bill decreasing eight months of DST each year ran into trouble in February of this year when it reached the floor so the Senate compromised on seven months.

The bill went nowhere in the House, however, where there was never any real push for more than six months of DST.

With Congress unable to agree on a new bill, the 1966 law, dictating six months DST is controlling.

Voter Deadline Nearing

Wayne County voters who have changed addresses, changed their names, or wish to change their party should register to vote before April 30. County clerk Norris Weible said Tuesday.

That is the last day voters will be allowed to register for the May 11 primary election.

For the convenience of the public, registration applications are being made available in Hoskins at the Commercial State Bank, in Winside at the village clerk's office, and in Carroll at the Farmer's State Bank, as well as Weible's office in the courthouse in Wayne.

Disabled voters may apply for ballots by mail, Weible said. Applications appear in an advertisement on page 3, section 2 in this issue of the Herald.

Persons who will be absent from Wayne County on election day may vote now in Weible's office. The absentee voting poll will be open during courthouse office hours from now until May 10 at 4 p.m.

Donors are asked to tie papers in bundles 12 to 15 inches high and to place them near the street where they can be easily seen.

Elliott asked that anyone wishing to contribute to the paper recycling effort contact him no later than Friday evening.

Rail Line To Remain Open

Northeast Nebraskans concerned over the fate of the 40 mile rail line between Dakota City and Wayne can breathe a sigh of relief, at least temporarily.

Public Service Commissioner Duane Gay of Columbus Tuesday confirmed a UPI report that the Interstate Commerce Commission has imposed at least a temporary moratorium on branch line closings.

Gay headed up the opposition against the Chicago and North Western Transportation Company's request to close the branch line during an ICC public hearing in Wayne last November.

Congress has allocated some $360 million in matching funds to help subsidize branch line operations which have been losing money, Gay said.

That money will be made available through a provision of the Railroad Revitalization and Regulation Reform Act of 1976, according to PSC attorney Jack Finnigan.

Finnigan was legal counsel for the opposition during the November abandonment hearing and has been assigned to study the railroad reform act which was signed into law by President Ford Feb. 5.

Main thrust of the law is to establish a public corporation which will help provide management for several bankrupt eastern railroads.

The law also amends the Interstate Commerce Act, providing that the ICC must defer granting final approval in abandonment cases for as long as a responsible entity is willing to provide a subsidy so branch line operating expenses will be met and railroads receive a reasonable return on the value of their property.

The act also provides $360 million to help finance such subsidies for five years. The subsidy for the first year, beginning in July, will be 100 per cent federal money, dropping to 90 per cent the second year, 80 per cent the third year, and 70 per cent the fourth and fifth years. Lincoln Firm Awarded Work On AH Facility

Construction of new recreation facilities for Allen schools is scheduled to begin sometime next month, school board officials learned during a special meeting Monday night.

N. D. Judd Construction Co. of Lincoln, which will do the work, was the only firm to the meeting to submit a bid. Its projected cost of $23,167.85 would cover grading, building a press box, rest rooms, concession stands, backstop, sewer lines, and a tennis court, as well as improving the public address system.

Not included in the total cost is the amount for fencing to surround the field and tennis court. According to superintendent Virgil Ferguson, the board figures it can have the fencing project done by another company for less than $3,000.

Awarded the contract for installing playground equipment, portable bleachers and tennis court equipment was Miracle Equipment Co. of Omaha. The firm's bid was $5,244.

Two Will Face Assault Charges In County Court

Two Thurston county men are scheduled to appear before Wayne County judge Joseph Hunker Friday on charges of assault and battery resulting from an incident which occurred last week at Wayne High school.

Jim Terhune, 19, of Pender faces one count of assault and battery and James C. Fahrholz, two counts for allegedly attacking two Wayne High students during an altercation in the school parking lot, and then high school principal Don Zeiss when he intervened in the incident.

Charges were filed April 15 in Wayne County court and bond was set at $5,000. Bond was posted for Fahrholz Friday after being reduced to $2,000. Assault and battery is a misdemeanor.

Too Much Wind

WINDMILLS ARE designed to harness the power of the wind but this model, located on a farm three miles north of Alliance, got more than it could handle Friday as winds gusted up to 78 miles per hour and averaged from between 40 and 60 miles per hour throughout the day. The storm caused considerable damage, tearing shingles from countless roofs and destroying at least five major farm buildings and a number of smaller farm structures.

State School Board Candidates Want More Emphasis on 'Basics'

Voters in State Board of Education District 3 this year will be electing a representative to sit on the board for a four year term.

The eight-member board is responsible for setting standards and establishing requirements for Nebraska elementary and secondary schools.

Three candidates have filed for the position. The two candidates gaining the most votes in the May 11 primary election will face each other in the November general election.

Walter Thompson of Oakland is one of the candidates seeking the state school board position. The other two candidates — Walter Moller and Frederick Mann — both live in Wayne County. The Wayne Herald interviewed the two local candidates.

Walt Moller

Walt Moller is the incumbent in the State Board of Education post, having first been elected in 1972.

Moller, a realtor for 26 years, said he became interested in running for the state school board after serving on the Wakefield school board for six years and serving as District 3 representative with the State School Boards Association.

Control of schools by local school boards is important to education, Moller said, and that control will be maintained so long as qualified and dedicated school board members are elected.

If that doesn't happen, schools will lose more and more control.

One area which Moller suspects school board members will have to watch closely is extra curricular activities and school curriculum. "I think the trend has gone a little too far toward self-determination for students," Moller said, explaining that he thinks basic education will have to be emphasized more and basic education standards provided.

The State Department of Education is now offering a testing program which will allow schools to determine if elementary students are reaching an adequate achievement level in fundamental skills, Moller said.

Test scores show that achievement levels in fundamental skills have been slipping both nation-wide and in Nebraska, Moller said, and he thinks part of the reason may be that students aren't taking advantage of the opportunities available in their schools.

"There must be some compulsion in compulsory education," Moller said. "Students must be made accountable for proper use of educational facilities."

"I think we still have the best education system in the world but the fact that it's there doesn't do much good if students don't take advantage of it."

The State Board of Education will be dealing with its Rule 14 in the near future, Moller said. The state school board rule sets minimum standards for elementary and secondary instructional programs, staff requirements, material and equipment, facilities, and guidance services at the secondary level.

"The purpose of Rule 14 is not to close any schools," Moller said. "The State Board of Education does not have that authority. The rule will set minimum standards for all schools to meet. If schools choose not to meet those standards they will operate as unapproved schools."

Moller said two public hearings have been conducted thus far in regard to the regulation and some revisions have come out of those meetings. Further hearings are planned, but Moller said he expects the rule to be approved soon.

Another problem which will continue to confront school systems in Nebraska is reorganization, or consolidation, of school districts.

"I think all areas in the state should be in a kindergarten through 12 district," Moller said.

That doesn't mean all students in the district should have to go to one attendance center, he continued, but he believes everyone should have a voice in the control and administration of education.

Persons who live in kindergarten through eighth grade districts don't have any voice in the education of their children at the secondary level, Moller said. Those districts pay tuition for their students to attend high school in another district. Persons in the K-8 districts don't have a vote in electing the school board in the K-12 district where their children attend high school.

"That is taxation without representation," Moller said. "I think that if people want to keep local control of education, they should be in a position to elect school board members."

It is the duty and obligation of everyone to maintain a high priority interest in education, Moller said. Parents generally are expecting too much of school today. They want schools to furnish discipline and other character-building training which should begin in the home, Moller said.

Fred Mann

Fred Mann has served on the boards of education of rural school districts for about 12 years total and is currently a member of the District 51 board in Wayne County.

He has been a member of the Wayne County school reorganization for about 15 years and is currently a member of the county joint planning commission.

Mann said that although state aid to schools is ultimately decided by the Unicameral, the State Board of Education has gone on record as supporting the current system, which he opposes.

State aid is distributed through two means—foundation funds, based on the number of students in a district, and equalization fund, based on need determined by an established formula.

That formula results in districts with large valuations in rural property receiving less than they pay in, Mann said.

"I can't say that I am opposed to state aid to schools," he said. "It is a fact of life. But the distribution leaves a lot to be desired."

For example, Mann points out, the Wayne-Carroll school district's share of equalization aid has been dropping steadily for the past three years, while the total amount disbursed in state aid has remained the same, $50 million.

In fact, Mann said, the only school in the district he would represent if elected which gains anything through the present distribution system is South Sioux City.

Of the $50 million disbursed in state aid to schools in each of the past three years, he said, was supposed to be distributed as foundation money on a per pupil basis, the other half as equalization aid according to need.

Actually, all of the foundation money wasn't needed to meet the per pupil cost established, because of declining enrollment, Mann said, and part of that money has been distributed through the equalization system, contributing further to what he believes is inequality in distribution of funds. He would prefer to see all state aid to education funds distributed to schools on a per pupil basis.

Mann said serving on the Wayne County school reorganization committee for 15 years has given him some insight into the school consolidation.

"The only good school consolidation is that which people in the district initiate on their own," Mann said, adding that he doesn't favor consolidation that is "decided by a committee" and forced upon school districts.

Basic education should receive more concentration, particularly during the formative years in elementary schools, Mann said.

"I think we've probably gotten away from the basics too much," Mann said. "Test scores show that achievement is dropping in those skills and one of the biggest complaints from industry and college people is that persons coming out of our schools are not prepared for the job market. See SCHOOL BOARD, page 10

Courses Revive Heritage Art Women Take to Needle, Thread

By LAVON BECKMAN

While many persons seem to have forgotten the art of needlework, just as many seem anxious to revive the craft, once the only means for homemakers to clothe their families or decorate the often times drab households with ornate designs on doilies, pillows, towels, bedspreads and other furnishings.

Recently nearly 20 homemakers in the Northeast Nebraska area volunteered to teach needlework arts to other homemakers in short courses offered in February, March and April. The idea for the short courses came about as a result of a home extension club lesson, "Heritage Needle Arts," which clubs studied last fall.

After realizing that a great many homemakers were anxious to learn needlework skills, area home extension agents at the Northeast Station near Concord set about in January to organize several classes throughout the area with the instructors, women already skilled in various needle arts.

Organizing the classes were extension agents Linda Sander, Gladys Stout and Anna Marie Kreifels.

Nearly 140 women signed up for the courses, which included two to six sessions, usually in the instructors' homes. A $1 per session registration fee was used by the instructor for lesson supplies and refreshments.

Miss Kreifels said that by having area women teach the skills in their own homes, more courses could be offered in more localities than would have been possible if home extension agents were to teach all the courses.

"Leadership development is one of the major objectives of Extension Service activities," said Miss Kreifels, "and these courses afforded an opportunity for those who sought to practice their leadership skills."

Miss Kreifels said that by volunteering to share their needlework skills, the women were given the opportunity to meet others who have common interests in needlework arts. "Many women expressed great satisfaction received from this teaching experience," she added.

Area teachers and courses were: Wayne — Mrs. Robert Porter, crewel embroidery; Mrs. Arnold Emry, crocheting; Mrs. Dorothy Pracht, broomstick lace; and Mrs. Richard Korn, tatting and Danish cross stitch. Norfolk — Mrs. Ezra Jochens, needlepoint; Wakefield — Mrs. Rudy Longe, needlepoint; Hoskins — Mrs. Harold Wither, knitting; and Mrs. Don Johnson, hooked rugs; Pender — Mrs. Eugene Kruse, crewel embroidery; Laurel — Mrs. Steven Ebmeyer, macrame.

Miss Kreifels said the success of the needlework courses will be determined at an evaluation meeting to be held May 4 at the Northeast Station, Concord. Instructors and persons enrolled in the courses will be invited to bring items they have made.

She added that if enough enthusiasm is expressed at the meeting, extension agents will probably organize home-makers to offer the course again in the fall.

Apple Cobbler Rates A's

"A is for apple" is one of the basics of nursery school learning. . . . And one of the basics of home baking is fruit cobbler — apple in particular. Here's one of the easiest, tastiest apple cobbler recipes ever.

Apple cobbler starts with canned apple pie filling. Raisins contribute natural sweetness, while grated lemon peel heightens the overall flavor. The topping couldn't be simpler. A mixture of complete pancake mix and sugar is sprinkled over the fruit, then melted butter is drizzled over the top.

Serve the warm cobbler topped with vanilla ice cream and you'll rate A's for approval!

- APPLE RAISIN COBBLER
Makes 8 servings
- | | |
|---------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| One 1 lb. 5-oz. can apple pie filling | 2/3 cup complete pancake mix |
| 1/2 cup dark seedless raisins | 1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar |
| 1-1/2 teaspoons grated lemon peel | 1/4 cup butter or margarine, melted |
- Heat oven to moderate (375 F). Combine pie filling, raisins and lemon peel in 8-inch square pan; blend well. Place complete pancake mix and sugar in small bowl; blend well. Sprinkle evenly over apple base. Drizzle with melted butter. Bake in preheated oven 1275 F. 35 to 40 minutes. Serve warm with vanilla ice cream.

In ancient times, a physician made his own medications out of herbs and secret powders. He relied on faith and the patient's will "to pull through." This faith and psychology still play an important part in recovery from illness, your doctor depends on the professional services of a pharmacist to dispense prescribed medicines. Doctors and pharmacists have a great deal in common; their first concern is your good health.

Applications Being Taken for '76 Deer, Antelope Permits

Wayne Girls Capture Jr High Triangular

The Nebraska Game and Parks Commission is now accepting applications for this fall's deer and antelope seasons. The initial application period runs from May 10 and is only for Nebraskans who did not have a firearm deer permit last year or did not have a firearm antelope permit the last two years.

A second application period for Nebraskans will be held from June 1 through June 28 for those not able to apply during the initial application period. A second drawing will then be held on July 13 for those units that are unfilled.

Limited landowner permits will again be available this year for bona fide farmers and ranchers who apply but fail to receive a regular permit. Only one such permit will be issued for each farm or ranch and is good for hunting only on land owned and/or operated. A bona fide farmer or rancher is an individual who derives at least two-thirds of his gross income from the business of farming or ranching.

This year's firearm deer season opens on Nov. 13 and continues through Nov. 21. The archery deer season is from Sept. 18-Nov. 12 and from Nov. 22-Dec. 31.

Rifle antelope season is from Sept. 25-Oct. 3. Archery antelope season is from Aug. 20-Sept. 24 and from Oct. 4-31. Both archery deer and antelope permits are unlimited and can be applied for at any time.

This year's regulations include a special late deer season on the DeSoto National Wildlife Refuge that will be open only for hunters using muzzleloaders. The Commission authorized 100 DeSoto permits good for deer of either sex. Dates for the DeSoto season have not been set, but the hunt will be for five days in December.

Other new wrinkles in the deer season include a change in boundaries between the Loup East and Elkhorn Units, and the establishment of zones within some units for stricter control of antlerless deer harvest. The Loup East Unit was expanded on the east to include the area south of Nebraska Highway 91 and east of U.S. Highway 81 to its junction with U.S. Highway 30.

Antelope regulations for 1976 are roughly the same as last year, with the exception of the three-year waiting period beginning in 1977, and the consolidation of the Wildhorse Unit into the Brown Unit.

Wayne's junior high girls track team Monday continued to show its strength in both the field and track events by outdistancing its opponents in a triangular at Randolph.

Led by 10 first-place finishers, the locals garnered 93 points to antelope hunters with 52 and Pierce with 34.

Lori Prenger and Lynn Surber helped to pace Wayne with a pair of record-setting firsts. Prenger tossed the discus 77.4 to better the record she set last week of 75 feet. Surber also improved her time in the 800 with a clocking of 2:39.4, about three seconds faster than her old mark. Finishing second in the 800 with a time of 2:42 was Ann Edmunds of Wayne. "Those two girls have to be the top seventh grade 800 runners in the state," said coach Paul Eaton.

The top winners for Wayne were Barb Kovensky and Jane Edmunds who won three firsts each. Kovensky went 13.8 in the long jump and was clocked at :36.8 in the 50 and 12.7 in the 100. Edmunds claimed first in the high jump with a leap of 4.2, ran a :13.4 in the low hurdles and was timed at :29.5 in the 220.

Wayne girls take a break until Friday, April 30, when they head to Columbus Lakeview for the West Husker Conference junior high and high school girls track meet.

Also placing for Wayne:

- Field Discus — 3, Megan Owens, 58.5, Sandy Mencil, 55.2
- Long Jump — 3, Shelly Davis, 12.10
- High Jump — 3, Jane Koll, 3.8

WH Golfers Shine in Triangular

Despite chilling winds and temperatures Tuesday, Wayne High golfers came through with their first season victory by defeating West Point and Madison in the triangular meet at Wayne Country Club.

Senior Tom Johansen fired a 39 on the back nine to lead Wayne to a four-man total of 180, five strokes better than West Point and 17 better than Madison. Johansen birdied the par four, 519-yard No. 13 pin en route to winning (medals) honors.

"We've turned around now," said coach Harold Maciejewski. "We're shooting a lot better, especially freshman Mark Gansbom whose shooting has helped to bring the scores down," he added.

Gansbom and junior Si Prather both fired 46s. The fourth player, Ritch Workman, had a 49. Also shooting was Norman Brown with 53.

Maciejewski was equally pleased with his reserve team which also finished first. Wayne had 193 while West Point had 192 and Madison 244.

Jay Stollenberg finished the front nine with a 45, followed by Jon Leywith 48, Bob Bornhoff with 49 and John Keating with 51. Not used was Doug Pierson's score of 52.

FRESHMAN Mark Gansbom, left, lines up his shot before attempting to putt on the No. 12 hole for Wayne during a triangular meet at the Wayne Country Club. Although Gansbom bogied the par four hole, he finished with a nine-hole score of 46 to tie teammate Si Prather for second low honors on Wayne's foursome. Meanwhile, Prather, above chips his shot onto the green at the 18th hole.

Brandt ran a :23.7 220 and :10.4 100. The 800 team, which also included Ken Daniels, Brad Emry and Terry Lessmann, finished the course in 1:39, about two seconds out of first place.

Wayne's mile relay team of Daniels, Kelly Hansen, Jeff Backstrom and Pat Dorsey, took fifth with a time of 3:49.6.

Scoring Laurel's points was Mike Dalton, who was third in the mile with a time of 4:54.8. Crofton emerged on top with a team total of 40 points. In the results for boys' junior high division, Randy Dunklau led with a third-place showing in the 800. Finishing fifth was the 880 relay team of Paul Guern, Mark McCorkindale, Scott Norvell and Dunklau.

Tree Planting Time

Now is the time for Nebraskans to be planting trees and shrubs according to Clayton Stalling, district wildlife manager for Northeast Nebraska. "Trees and shrubs not only produce food and cover for wildlife, but also can be planted for wind protection, and beautification," said Stalling. In addition, trees and shrubs screen off the unpleasant view and noise of street and highway traffic.

"Trees and shrubs represent an excellent investment in Nebraska's future," said Stalling. "Many trees, we plant are not for ourselves but for those who come after us. What better way to celebrate the Bicentennial year than to plant some trees for future generations."

Sportsbeat

By Bob Bartlett

DEFINITION of cooperation: An act or instance of working or acting together for a common purpose; more or less active assistance from a person, organization, etc.; willingness to cooperate.

Now that I have defined the word with the aid of a dictionary, let me explain to whom it applies. Namely, coaches in the five school area of coverage who haven't been cooperating with the sports desk in supplying results of spring sports events and information about possible athlete of the week honors.

Readers may have noticed last week and again this week, there hasn't been an Athlete of the Week award presented to the top male and female athletes, simply because coaches have failed to point out whom they think deserve the honor. If the lack of cooperation continues, the next alternative will be drop the awards program altogether. Enough said.

About coaches who don't call in information about sports events involving their teams; Get on the stick. I'm tired of parents calling me in the middle of the night complaining about the lack of coverage of their schools in sports. My only reply is to call their coaches and register the same complaints. Maybe then we can give the schools the adequate coverage deserved.

It doesn't take much for a coach to let us know. Just call us collect—regardless if your team won or lost—and we'll take it from there. For some coaches, calling in information about a match or game in which their teams have lost, may be pretty difficult since losing most contests are tough to take. But through losing some teams (and coaches) may learn where improvement is needed—at least, that's what I was told by one of my high school coaches.

THE LIST of teams wanting to get into this year's Chuck Ellis Memorial Baseball Tournament at Wakefield has grown to seven according to tournament director Paul Eaton.

The eight-team tourney already includes teams from Norfolk, Sioux City, Heelan, Wayne, Fremont, Laurel and possibly Wakefield. Wanting to get in are Iowa clubs from Mapleton, Onawa, Sioux Falls, Remsen St. Mary's and Grandville Spalding. Nebraska teams include Columbus and O'Neill.

Because of the increased interest by other teams to get into the tourney, Eaton speculates that the meet may expand to possibly 10 or 12 clubs this year.

Presently, the annual tournament is scheduled between May 27 to June 1 for eight teams. The reason for the increased interest by other clubs to play is the high caliber of teams, Eaton pointed out. He on the list of teams Wakefield hopes to have in the meet is Grandville Spalding, the Iowa state champion two straight years. Eaton hopes to pass on more information later.

THAT FUND to help send Wayne State grappler Mike Riedmann overseas on the USA NAIA Wrestling Team is somewhere between $250 and $350, said WS mentor Marion Haayer. Total amount needed is about $1,000.

Earlier this month, Riedmann was selected to wrestle on the team after he finished second in the NAIA national tournament in the 190-pound division. If enough cash can be raised by the May 15th deadline, the WS graduate will be wrestling in Japan and possibly Korea.

As Haayer pointed out, the chance for Mike to wrestle in a meet of this caliber is a golden opportunity for any wrestler.

If you would like to help, contributions may be sent to: Mike Riedmann Wrestling Fund, State National Bank in Wayne.

Herald Owner, Editors Attend NPA Convention

Newspaper publishers and editors from throughout Nebraska are meeting in Omaha today (Thursday) through Saturday to take part in the 1976 Nebraska Press Association (NPA) Annual Convention and Trade Show. An impressive line-up of nationally known newspaper professionals will highlight the three-day program which will be held at the Hilton Hotel.

Wayne Herald representatives attending the convention include publisher Alan Cramer, a former NPA president; managing editor Jim Marsh and news editor Jim Strayer.

According to NPA convention chairman Henry Trysla, the featured speaker for this year's meeting will be Reg Murphy, publisher and editor of the San Francisco Examiner. Other convention speakers, said Trysla, include Gerald Warren, editor of the San Diego Union; Helen Thomas, United Press International White House bureau chief; Harold Andersen, president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association; William E. Branan, president of the National Newspaper Association; George High, Lt. Gov. of Oklahoma; Darwin Sharp, U.S. Postal Service official; Professor Edmund Arnold, newspaper consultant; William Mullen, general counsel for the National Newspaper Association; and Robert M. Shapiro, general manager of the Minnesota Newspaper Publishers Association.

Trysla said Murphy, who was a 1974 kidnap victim while serving as editor of the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, will address Saturday's Ak Sar Ben Banquet. Of special interest to journalists is Murphy's knowledge and comments on press relations with the nation's judicial system.

Jerry Warren, a native Nebraskan, who served as Press Secretary to former President Nixon and President Ford, will speak at Saturday's Awards Luncheon.

UPI White House bureau chief Thomas will be the featured speaker at a special breakfast session Saturday.

Omaha World-Herald president Andersen and Wisconsin newspaper publisher Branan will open Friday's panel sessions by discussing a variety of subjects that are of concern to the respective national associations they head.

Postal problems and the press will be the subject of another panel consisting of Washington based lawyer Mullen, USPS director of mail classifications Sharp and association executive Shaw.

For the first time in its 103 year history, the press association convention will include a trade show with approximately 50 exhibit spaces featuring newspaper suppliers.

Additional convention highlights include a special ladies program featuring the Creighton University Dance Company, business sessions, social and entertainment functions and newspaper contest awards.

Nebraska Press Association officers are president Fred Rose, publisher of the Ainsworth Star Journal; vice president Jack Pollock, publisher of the Kearney County News at Ogallala; and treasurer George Miller, publisher of the Papillion Times.

Trojan Golfers Post Dual Win

Wakefield's golf team Tuesday downed visiting Stanton, 189 to 195, to post its second dual win of the young season.

Senior Kerry Bressler fired a 49 for nine holes to lead coach Lyle Trullinger's foursome at Logan Valley Golf Course near Wakefield.

Todd Swigart was right behind with a 45, followed by Steve Pospisil and Don Berry, both with 51's. The fifth player was Lyle Borg with a 56.

Swigart sank the only birdie for the afternoon when he three-stroked the par four, 290-yard No. two hole.

Bressler and Swigart again were the leaders last week when Wakefield opened its season with a 187 to 207 win over visiting Pender.

Firing a birdie on the second hole, Bressler finished the nine-hole course with a 40. Swigart, who birdied the par four, 107-yard No. four pin, came in with a 47. Also playing were Pospisil with 53 and Vikan with 57. Bennett Salmon shot a 60.

New Farm Safety Standards in Effect

A new standard governing the placement of safety guards on power-operated farm equipment was recorded in the March 9 Federal Register, according to the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA).

Effective 90 days after publication in the register, the standard requires that all farm field and farmstead equipment, regardless of date of manufacture, be provided with guarding of power take-off drives and shafts.

Seminar Topic Is Family Living

A special convocation dealing with the problems of daily living will begin Saturday morning at 9:30 at Northeast Technical Community College at Norfolk.

Dr. Neal Phelps, Wayne State College professor of counseling psychology and lecturer on the effect of death in the family, will be a guest speaker.

The convocation is being sponsored by the Region IV chapter of the Nebraska Association of Mental Health organization. Alton O'Donnell of Wayne is president of the Region IV group.

The seminar is open to anyone and is expected to end at about 3:30. A banquet lunch will be served at the college.

The standard also calls for nip-point guarding of power transmission components on all farm machinery manufactured after June 77. Nip-point guards protect the belt and pulley contact point, as well as the point where one gear meshes with another.

Covering equipment operated by about 4.3 million farmers and workers, the standard also requires that:

—Employee operators be instructed in the safe operation and servicing of machinery.

—Functional components be shielded to the fullest extent which will not substantially interfere with the normal functioning of the component.

—Machine components contain a warning of rotation, in addition to a warning sign, where there is continuous rotation after power is shut off.

—Means be provided to prevent inadvertent application of electrical power to farmstead equipment.

Supplemental Income Beneficiaries Should Report Changes in Status

People should promptly report changes in circumstances that could affect their supplemental security income payments and should not wait to hear from social security, according to Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk.

The supplemental security income program makes monthly payments to people with little or no income and limited resources who are 65 or over or blind or disabled. Eligibility and monthly payments amounts can be affected by changes in income, living arrangements, marital status and other circumstances.

"To get the right supplemental security income checks to the right people on time," Branch said, "the Social Security Administration periodically contracts people getting payments to review their eligibility and monthly payment amounts."

"But we may not be in touch with people as often as their circumstances change," he said. "So they should report changes to us as promptly as possible."

People have 30 days to report changes that affect their supplemental security income payments. Failure to report — or delay in reporting — can mean penalty reductions in payments. People can get information about reporting changes by calling or writing any social security office.

The supplemental security income program is administered by the Social Security Administration, an agency of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The Norfolk social security office is at 1310 Norfolk Avenue. The phone number is 371-1595.

Barbara Winter of the Norfolk office will be in Wayne Tuesday at the Senior Citizens Center from 9 a.m. until noon.

PARENTS CAN BE HELPFUL

Parental behaviors and attitudes have been identified in several research studies as being important in the development of child's self-concept. One's feelings of self-worth influence feelings about themselves and those they have contact with.

Adolescents need to feel worthwhile and worthy in order to feel they are good persons. People cannot like others and give love deeply unless they "like" themselves first.

Feelings are facts — not necessarily acts. Parents can help their teenagers by trying to understand what a teen feels and try to mirror those feelings with words. But understanding those feelings and accepting them as facts, we can deal with them more closely. Disregarding your adolescent's true feelings might cause them to disregard you and your feelings.

Telling a person not to feel, what he does, does not take those feelings away. We must remember that both hostility and love are bound to exist in every close relationship, so we must be able to cope with it. Keep in mind that the tongue that accepts is better than the tongue that suggests.

Perform a death-defying act.

Railroad

(Continued from page 1) with the state governments paying the remainder. The branch line subsidy funds will be administered by the Department of Transportation and will apportion to the states based on the number of miles of branch line railroad tracks. One requirement for a state to receive the funds will be the compilation of a comprehensive long-term transportation plan. Nebraska does not now have such a plan but Gov. Tuesday said he does not view that as a major obstacle. During the November hearing the Chicago and North Western railroad claimed that the 40 miles of line between Dakota City and Wayne has lost money steadily for the past four years and said the cost of making necessary track repairs would be far beyond any return which could be reasonably expected. Finnigan said the railroad reform act provides that the branch line subsidy can be used to upgrade track. PSC economist Wayne Budt disputed the railroad's figures during the November hearing, claiming that if 46 miles of track from Sioux City to Wayne are considered as a whole, the line isn't losing money. The railroad's claim of loss pertained only to the 40 miles of track between Dakota City and Wayne, the portion it wants to abandon. "I still don't believe the line shows a loss," Gay said Tuesday. "But the amount the state will have to pay to receive the subsidy funds to continue operating the line should not be significant." Things have been looking up for the C and N.W. during the first quarter of 1976. The railroad's net income during the period was $633,000, compared with a net loss of $8,541,000 during the first quarter of 1975. Total operating revenues in the 1976 first quarter were $124,352,000, compared with $109,164,000 in the 1975 period.

Students Named To State College Trustee Board

Nebraska Governor J. J. Egan Monday announced the appointment of four students to serve as non-voting members of the Nebraska State College Board of Trustees. Wayne State's representative is Jim Ludvik of Wahoo, president of the WSC Student Senate. The governor made the appointments in response to a trustee suggestion to encourage more student input into board decision making. The students will have no vote because the constitution specifies the number of board members. To make the students voting members the state would have to amend the constitution, a move that was made several years ago to install student representatives on the University Board of Regents.

of high schools can't spill or compromise a sentence. It is up to the State Board of Education to provide some guidelines in those areas, Mann said, and he is in favor of requiring tests for students to determine if they are mastering fundamental language and arithmetic skills. "This would not only show where the students stand but also how good a job the teaching staff is doing," Mann said. Part of the reason for declining achievement levels in basic education is increasing emphasis on the administration of schools, he said. "We have far too many administrators, placing less responsibility on classroom teachers," Mann said. "You don't get an education from administrators. Classroom teachers must get the job done."

Federal regulations have contributed to the emphasis on administration, Mann said, and the current system can often lure some of the best classroom teachers into the administrative field as a means of advancement. The State Board of Education can place more emphasis on the classroom teacher through the rules and regulations it formulates regarding teacher accreditation. State and federal funding of educational programs is undoubtedly contributing somewhat to loss of local control of schools, Mann said. "All grant, particularly federal grants, have some strings attached."

The result has been that schools are now spending money on experimental or pilot programs designed to take care of things which have never really been problems for local schools, Mann said. Those programs continue, supported entirely by local money, after federal and state grants run out.

Retardation panel question not resolved

CAPITOL NEWS
LINCOLN — If the courts can throw out something done by a state legislature, does that mean they can turn around and force a legislature to do something?
 Finding out the answer to that question seems to be the way the once-reached but now nullified, or so a couple of attorneys say, out-of-court settlement in the Beatrice State Home lawsuit is headed.
 The suit was filed in an attempt to reduce the number of patients at the mental institution, placing them in community-based programs.
 Everything was going along smoothly after the State Justice Department and the governor signed an agreement to meet with the U.S. Justice Department and an attorney for a group of parents with children at the home.
 But then along came the Nebraska Unicameral.
 The senators refused to provide money for what Lewis Thrasher in particular said was an essential part of the settlement — a special panel given the job of providing guidelines on how to reduce patient numbers.
 The Unicameral was not made a part of the lawsuit and the agreement itself acknowledged it was not in being a party to the settlement, Gov. J. J. Exon agreed only to recommend funding of the panel he appointed.

 Thrasher, a U.S. Justice Department attorney in Washington D.C., said "I consider it a serious matter" that funding was not provided by the lawmakers.
 He and Bruce Mason, an Omaha attorney representing the parents, indicated they were working independently on a means of freeing some cash for the panel.

Alternative 'Not Discussed'

Exon, though not formally to the U.S. District Court, has carried the intent of the agreement can be suggested out without the panel.
 "I'm willing to listen as long as the alternative; if there is one, does not compromise the constitutional rights of the retarded," Thrasher said, adding if Exon has an alternative it hasn't been discussed with him.
 Mason said the same thing.
 He also said he was researching the issue of forced funding even though Attorney General Paul Douglas has held that without legislative approval there is no money source.
 The Omaha attorney said he hoped to file at least a request with judge Albert Schatz for a new look at the situation. He said if he could find a legal approach to solving the problem he would file it before the end of the month.

 However, the American Bar Association's special committee on rights of retarded persons, has looked into the situation in view of similar cases in such states as Minnesota and Alabama.
 The special committee reached no conclusion on whether forced funding could be accomplished and other attorneys note part of the reason is that no case on rights of the retarded has ever been appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court for any kind of answer on that and other issues.
 Thrasher and Lewis maintain, however, something must be done. As Thrasher put it: "I don't think even the state entered into this agreement to do anything but get results on the need to protect the rights of the handicapped."

Prison Kitchen 'Not the Best'

For years state corrections officials have taken state senators through the penal complex and for years attention has been given to kitchen facilities.
 And it seems, for years the State Health Department has been inspecting those kitchens. They found flooded floors, moldy coolers, a bad dishwasher, peeling paint, mouse droppings and dead insects, damaged utensils and sloppy kitchen workers.

 The penitentiary kitchen serves 600 inmates while the men's reformatory kitchen serves 300.
 But there has been no money appropriated to make repairs and as a result the health department has not pressed the issue, contending that was the job of the State Justice Department.
 "If they were under the license or permit system" as are restaurants, "they would definitely be out of business by now," said Fred Jolly of the health department.
 Jolly also said the health department was seeking voluntary compliance because the kitchens just couldn't be closed.
 "Those fellows can't go out to eat," he said, referring to the inmates.
 Warden Robert Parratt said there has been no sickness because of the conditions. But he and State Corrections Director Joseph Vitke said they are concerned and noted a number of improvements are on order, including a general cleanup campaign.
 Vitke also said little has been done in the past primarily because the Unicameral, instead of providing kitchen repair money, has been moving toward new institutions.

The Nebraska Civil Liberties Union, in the meantime, has taken an interest in the situation and thinks a lawsuit on behalf of the inmates might help speed up changes.
 Barb Gaither of the NCLU said the question of the lack of legislative financing was addressed in an Alabama decision and it was placed in the "no excuse" column.

The Sun Will Shine

The dust of the battle has settled and the "Sunshine Law" has emerged as a part of Nebraska's lawbooks.
 Last year a group known as the Coalition for Open Government claimed Nebraska's laws on campaign financing and lobbyist monitoring needed some changes. The organization called them "reforms."
 The coalition decided to get those changes by drafting a proposed law and placing it on the November general election ballot for a voter decision on whether it should be enacted. The same move has been tried in other states with enactment success.
 But, State Senators Roland Luedike of Lincoln and Frank Lewis of Bellevue, decided to try the alternative — legislative enactment of changes — to the initiative effort and introduced a bill in this year's session of the Unicameral. They said it was equal.

 The coalition had said Unicameral enactment of law substantially equal to the one it was proposing would halt the petition drive to place the issue on the ballot.
 In its closing days, the Luedike-Lewis measure was given final approval. It did, however, contain a number of amendments attached to the legislation on the floor.
 The coalition after studying the amended proposal, finally declared its intent as far as the petition drive was concerned. It opted to take the Unicameral law.
 It doesn't become operative until next year. It does, however, set up a special commission that will begin setting up some ground rules before the measure is fully operative.
 Then the wait began to see what the governor would do. Exon finally announced he would sign the measure into law.
 He was the first to sign petitions the coalition was sending around in order to set the stage for a November voter decision in signing the measure he said he has long supported more monitoring and controls on campaign spending.

OBSERVATIONS

Court news policy

Recent inquiries and requests regarding county court news items indicate it is time to reiterate the Herald's policies on such matters.
 Wayne County court news is gathered at the court house twice weekly. Court records are open to the public (with the exception of juvenile cases) and the Herald's policy is to publish all offenses in which the accused is found guilty or signs a waiver to that effect.
 This generally includes name, age, hometown, offense, and disposition of the case including fine, court costs and restitution, when applicable.
 Age is not included in some cases such as parking violations because the officer issuing the citation does not confront the individual personally. The birth date therefore is not included as part of the court record.

 We are always ready to discuss items which appear in the Herald, but anyone who wants to see if he or she can "keep their name out of the paper" after having been found guilty of an offense in court is wasting his time.
 It is the Herald's policy to publish all cases and no exceptions are made. To do otherwise would be discriminatory. Such a policy would be unacceptable to us, and to the majority of our readers.
 Incidentally, asking the judge or associate judge to withhold the information won't work either. As mentioned above, county court proceedings are public record and court officials cannot legally withhold the information even if they wanted to. — Jim Strayer.

How much safety?

The U.S. Consumer Produce Safety Commission (CPSC) has proposed mandatory safety standards for the ordinary paper matchbook.
 Included in the proposal are requirements for child resistant matchbook covers which would require two or more simultaneous or sequential motions or minimum force to open the matchbook.
 Also, the match would have to self-extinguish within a half-inch from the top and within a 15-second period.
 The CPSC makes a good case for the safety standards, citing statistics on the number of injuries caused by boy matches. But the proposed standards raise the question of how much safety can we afford?
 The burning-time limitation might be solved fairly simply by a simple chemical treatment, but we can't help but wonder what will be required to come up with a child-proof matchbook.

 That sounds like a relatively expensive proposition when compared with the simple matchbook cover in use today and while the economic future of the country won't rise or fall depending on the cost of matchbooks, the proposal is indicative of the trend where federal regulations make consumer products more and more expensive.
 As an optional item for parents with small children, safety matchbooks might be a marketable product. But until some bureaucratic genius comes up with a way to make good old common sense mandatory for everyone, it is doubtful that we will have the kind of sterile environment which seems to be the government's goal. — Jim Strayer.

Grandpa's Boy

By Brad Anderson

OF WASHABLE MATERIAL

Does 'big business' run America?

Is big business running America? Some people say so. A lot more probably think so.
 Well, ask yourself this: If you were running America, would you — Allow consumerists to call you nasty names?
 — Allow environmentalists to hold up your construction projects?
 — Allow politicians to run for office against you?
 — Submit meekly to endless investigations by the FTC, the SEC, the IRS, etc?
 — Put up with educators actively hostile to capitalism?
 — Allow wild charges against you to be spread across front pages and TV screens?
 — Capitulate time after time to the demands of labor unions?
 Just doesn't make much sense, does it? And yet I am constantly amazed at the number of self-appointed social critics who repeated berate "big business" for its allegedly threatening power without anyone pointing out that their very freedom to set up the straw man contradicts their major premise.

A very specialized and restricted kind. A business can influence the use of resources within its own sphere of operation. Outside that sphere, it is relatively powerless. No matter how powerful a bulldozer is as an earthmover, that power won't help it to fly.
 The problem — for business and for all of us — is that we don't have a very coherent concept of what we want from business as a social institution. Besides high quality products, high wages, and low prices, of course. So we make contradictory demands.
 Consider the plight of the multinational corporations (multinational is just a fancy term for a big company that operates in more than one country).
 If a U.S. multinational builds a factory overseas and provides jobs for the people in the host country, that's good. But when it does so, it is accused of "exporting" jobs from the U.S. — and that's bad. (It's also untrue. Overseas operations tend to expand employment here, too.)
 If a multinational pays workers in the host country the prevailing local wage (low), it is accused of "exploiting" the foreign workers. But if it pays the foreign workers more than prevailing local wages, it is accused of competing unfairly with the other local employers.

 If a multinational obeys local laws and customs when operating in a foreign country, it may engage in some practices there that are not permitted in the U.S. On the other hand, if it tries to impose U.S. values on the host country, it is accused of arrogance and "cultural imperialism."
 I could go on, but I think you get the idea. Business — like everything else, benefits from constructive, informed criticism. But it does not benefit from the kind of criticism that is rooted in ignorance, ignorance of operating conditions and of the nature of the problems.
 Try a little test. Next time you hear someone say big business is running America, ask him to be specific. Which big business is running America. How is it running America. And how did it get all the other big businesses to sit still for that?
 I'll bet you get some pretty weak answers. — Richard Leshner, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Senior citizens appreciate drive

Dear Editor:
 We of the Wayne Senior Citizens Center wish to extend a word of thanks to all of those in the Wayne area that sacrificed to contribute to the Wayne Community Chest, so that we are able to purchase the "necessary office furniture" that we have gotten along without, for the past seven years now, coming July 1.
 The board of directors of the Wayne Community Chest are to be commended for the very fine work performed by them, during this year's drive, and also those that spent hours going door to door soliciting funds.
 Thanks ever so much again for the gift of $644.00, with which to purchase office furniture. — Wayne Senior Citizens Center.

'That's Some Kinda Egg'

IT DIDN'T take long for Kipp Lesh and his father, Richard, to spot Friday that in their carton of eggs was a rare find. According to Lesh, the Vanikamps have never ran across a situation like this. "They've seen an egg shell within an egg shell, but never anything like this."

Supplies of Fed Beef Surging

Last fall's sharp increase in placements of cattle on feed has produced the largest fed beef supply since the spring of 1974, and continued increases seem certain for the next several months, according to Dr. Al Wellman, UN-L extension economist.

Noted beef production, however, has begun to subside from the record fall levels and further declines appear to be in prospect. Consequently, consumers were finding larger supplies and lower prices for Choice grade beef cuts at retail meat counters this spring, but the days of relatively low priced hamburger may be numbered, Wellman said.

After favorable returns during most of 1975, cattle feeders fell back into a loss position early this year. Fed cattle prices declined under pressure from record slaughter and production early this year, as a surge in fed marketings overlapped a continued high level of cow slaughter.

Meanwhile, cow and feeder cattle prices continued to gain strength through the first quarter, generally reaching their highest levels since the spring of 1974.

Plum Creek and Brenna Polling Places Moved

The Wayne County board of commissioners Tuesday approved a resolution moving two polling places in the county.

Voters in Brenna precinct will now vote in the new District 57 school house and Plum Creek precinct voters will cast their ballots in the Altona store.

The commissioners also agree to leave the occupation tax for rural liquor licenses at $15.

1974. Demand for replacement cattle for feeding has been strong despite a weakening fed cattle market.

Placements of cattle on feed during January and February were down seasonally from last fall, but continued well above depressed year-earlier levels. Coupled with the reduced supply of available feeder cattle, this helped raise feeder steer prices to $38-$42 per 100 pounds of most western markets in early April. After being discounted for the past year and a half, lighter weight feeders were generally drawing premium prices, perhaps reflecting longer term optimism by cattle feeders for a recovery in the fed cattle market.

Fed cattle prices may have reached their low point for the year in mid-March. Prices have shot up to the mid-$40's level recently and further strength is expected. Although fed cattle marketings may run a fourth or more above depressed year-earlier levels for the next several months, many signs indicate some optimism by feeders is justified. Fed beef supplies are still below 1972 record levels. Also, reductions in placements from last fall to winter may lead to seasonal declines in fed marketings from spring to summer if feeders remain current on marketings.

Weather, range and pasture conditions, and prospects for the 1976 grain harvest will play key roles in cattle markets around midyear. If conditions are favorable, cow and nonfed steer and heifer slaughter could drop back to year-earlier levels this spring followed by moderate declines in the second half of the year.

In this event, the reduced cow herd and strengthening cow and feeder cattle prices could ease the pressure to continue heavy culling of cow herds. If nonfed slaughter declines as much as now seems likely, seasonal reductions in total beef output could boost fed cattle prices back up to the upper $40's by late spring and early summer before trending lower again during the fall.

Feed prices and fed cattle prices in the months ahead will be the primary factors influencing feeder cattle markets. The feeder cattle inventory, although smaller than a year ago, is still too large to push feeder animal prices high enough to cover all production costs of most cow-calf operators given the current cost of feed.

Any significant declines in the first systematic effort to control insects in this country began in about 1865 when Paris green was used to destroy the Colorado potato beetle.

George Washington developed colored Negro scientists, carved more than 118 products from the sweet potato and over 300 from the peanut. He also produced paving blocks, cordage, paper, rope fiber, and numerous other articles from cotton.

All the farm ingredients that go into a pound loaf of bread including wheat, lard, shorten ing, sugar, and dried milk—account for only one fifth of its cost.

cattle feeding later this year or in 1977 because of high feeding costs would likely translate into short-term declines in feeder cattle prices. On the other hand, with adequate grain supplies, expected improvement in the fed cattle market, and prospects for no gains or a decline in this year's calf crop, feeder cattle prices will likely continue to gain strength through most of the next two years.

Prospects for a sustained turn around in pork production beginning about mid-year were confirmed by the March 1 survey of hog producers in 14 major states. The 15 per cent increase in December February farrowings, plus the 10 per cent increase now planned for March May, are larger than were indicated last December, and they point to a 10 to 15 per cent increase in hog slaughter during the second half of this year.

Although returns to hog producers have been unusually favorable for more than a year, producers are still apparently reluctant to aggressively increase output. This may be partly due to the high capital costs required to enter the hog business and the volatility of hog markets over the past two years. The 12 per cent increase in farrowings now planned for December-May still only regains about half of the decline of the same period a year earlier.

Commercial hog slaughter for the year might be up around three to five per cent from 1975's low level as gains in second half slaughter more than offset first half declines. First quarter hog slaughter ran somewhat larger than earlier expectations but still fell about seven per cent short of a year earlier. Judging from the number of hogs on farms in the heavy weight groups on March 1, April-June slaughter may be down only around four to six per cent from a year earlier and total some what under the first quarter level. Average carcass weights are, however, running above year-earlier levels.

Hog prices held relatively stable through January and February at near $47-$49 per 100 pounds. Weekly increases in hog slaughter in early March lowered pig prices, but later in the month prices at Omaha rose $46. However, weekly slaughter rates under Federal inspection through April-June may average about 1,750,000 head per week, down from the March level. Although this could lead to a rally in hog prices later in the spring, prices still seem likely to remain near $50 at the seasonal peak, before trending lower through late summer and fall.

New Marketing Strategies Advocated

Farmers no longer can rely on the marketing strategies of the 1950's and 60's to sell their crop near the season high price, according to Michael Turner, extension economist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The depletion of U.S. government-owned grain reserves has resulted in great variations in grain prices during the entire marketing season. During the last two decades variations in grain prices during the season often were no more than 20 cents per bushel. Today, prices change by that amount on a single day, Turner said.

Many factors determine daily price levels — weather, economic conditions and political decisions around the world. All have a direct bearing on the price the farmer receives. This was not true during the past two decades, he said.

The farmer, therefore, must become a sophisticated analyst of world conditions. Timeliness of his analysis will be extremely important. He should recognize the magnitude of the price risk which he is assuming.

"The season high price is an attractive objective, but to bargain for that objective the independent seller is also exposed to the risk of the season's lowest price," Turner said.

According to Turner, three alternatives are open to producers systematically spread cash sales over time following harvest, cash contract with a local elevator prior to and/or following harvest, hedge in the futures market for sale at and following harvest, participate in a grain pool, or combine these alternatives.

Spreading cash sales over time also spreads the price risk, Turner said. By eliminating the possibility of receiving the high price of the season for the entire crop, farmers also avoid the market low. Due to storage limitations a producer may sell a portion of the crop at harvest time, when prices are low. By selling the crop balance at staggered intervals following the first of the year, it is possible to transfer a portion of income to the next tax year, Turner further advised.

Cash contracts with local elevators enable a producer to set a price for a portion of his crop prior to harvest. Avoid contracts that will not cover production costs. Farmers should not over commit themselves on contracts. Production prices are relatively high in Nebraska. Even with attractive prices, the wise farmer would not commit over 10 to 20 per cent of his expected crop early in the growing season, Turner said.

"Hedging in the futures market is another way of doing the same thing. You can only establish a price range when selling futures contracts. It is feasible to deliver in fulfillment of futures contracts. Instead pro

GARDEN PEAS

It's still not too late to plant some garden peas. Ten to twenty feet of row will usually provide enough fresh peas for the seasonal needs of one person. At least 4 to 50 feet of row should be planted for each person in your family if you plan to eat fresh peas and can or freeze them for later.

One pound of seed will usually plant 100 feet of row. Plant pea seeds two inches deep, one to two inches apart in the row. Space peas rows two to four feet apart, depending on the variety you select and the room needed for cultivation equipment. Peas are easier to harvest if you provide a fence for them to climb up.

The extension office has a circular on peas listing cultural requirements and characteristics of many garden pea varieties.

GARDEN FERTILIZER

Fertilizer that can be used in improving your garden soil can range from barnyard manure to commercial fertilizers. Barnyard manure gives excellent results and improves soil tilth. Annual applications of barnyard manure at the rate of 400-600 pounds or 30 bushels for 1,000 square feet would be sufficient. Use half of this amount if you use chicken or sheep manure.

The use of manure will supply essential nutrients and increase the water holding capacity and improve the physical condition of the soil itself.

Approximately the same results may be obtained by applying compost to your soil. Anyone can build a compost and develop this excellent soil additive which may be used in the garden. Whenever you increase the organic content in the soil you will improve the tilth of the soil. Commercial fertilizers will also improve the productivity of your garden.

SHALLOW CULTIVATION

Loosening the soil with a hoe or cultivator accomplishes several things in your garden. Shallow cultivation loosens the soil for better air penetration, promotes better water retention in the subsoil, and kills weeds competing for water and nutrients.

Most vegetables have roots very near the soil surface so be very careful when cultivating near the base of plants. Deep-tilling should be done only in areas between plant rows.

Use cultivation now in your garden to control weeds while they are still small. There will be less disturbance of garden plants by killing weeds now.

While you spend time in your garden cultivating, check for insects and disease problems. Take a little extra time near each plant. Check for insects on the underneath side of leaves which are distorted by yellowing.

The wisdom of their decision will determine the price received by pool members," Turner said.

'Billboard' Traps May Help Combat Rootworms

A dirty trick may replace insecticides in controlling corn rootworms, according to Dr. Harold Ball, University of Nebraska-Lincoln entomologist.

Ball has been keeping a close eye on the possible development of resistance to present insecticides by having western corn rootworm beetles collected from around the state and then testing them in his laboratory.

While a small amount of resistance is showing up, the present insecticides should continue to be effective for several years, he said.

His monitoring program was set up 1962 after serious problems developed from a build up of resistance to chlorinated hydrocarbon insecticides, he said.

The best answer, however, may be a pheromone, which is a sex attractant given off by the female beetle to lure the male to her, Ball said.

The pheromone has been isolated, he said.

The next step should be to analyze the chemical composition of the pheromone so it eventually can be synthesized in quantity at an economical cost, he said.

Then, he visualizes billboard size traps made up of a sticky substance and impregnated with the pheromone. Farmers could set these up in their fields and catch the males.

With the scarcity of males there would be a scarcity of fertilized eggs and hopefully a drastic reduction in the population of rootworms, he said.

Such natural control not only would answer the potential problem of insecticide resistance but also would eliminate any chance of chemical pollution of the environment, Ball said.

Forester Gives Fire Safety Tips

A fire caused by a flaming piece of paper from a trash barrel burned over 18,000 acres of land last year.

That's an example of why debris burning is the second largest cause of wildland fires in Nebraska — and March and April are high fire months because of spring cleanup efforts.

Donald E. Westover, fire management coordinator in the State Forester's office, offers these guides to safe burning of debris.

—Use a burning barrel. A standard 50 gallon metal drum can be picked up at little relative cost. Then cover barrel with a heavy metal grate or large gauge wire mesh with openings of one quarter to one-half inch.

—Clear a strip of ground at least a foot from the perimeter of the barrel.

—Locate the barrel well away from buildings and grassy fields.

—Never burn when it is windy, early morning and late evening often have calm winds.

—Don't try to crowd too much into the barrel — make certain that the top screen is securely in place.

Buck Prize Still Up for Grabs

It's been a little over a year since a shopper has won the top prize in the weekly Birthday Bucks drawing. That doesn't mean, however, that Wayne merchants are giving up on finding someone to claim the $750 prize.

Tonight (Thursday) the $750 grand prize in Birthday Bucks will be up for grabs if a lucky shopper can match his or her birthday with the winning date drawn at random by a merchant of a participating Wayne business.

The date will be announced at 8:15.

Last Thursday night a Wayne man, Dennis Lipp, won the $25 consolation award when it was discovered that his birthday was the closest to the winning date of July 4, 1974, drawn by Mrs. Ben Ahlbers of Ben's Paint and Hobby Store. Lipp's birthday is July 27, 1949.

Birthday Bucks can be spent just like cash in any participating Wayne business. No purchases or registration are necessary to be a winner. However, a person must be present in a participating business when the date is called.

Bob Sherry of Sherry Bros. True-Value Hardware Store is offering his apologies to Thaine Woodward of Concord.

Woodward would have been the consolation winner of the March 8th Birthday Bucks prize in Wayne, Sherry said, except that his name was not turned in by the Sherry Bros. store.

Woodward will still be a winner, however, Sherry said, he can stop in at True Value and pick up a $25 check from Sherry Bros.

The winning date pulled March 8 was March 22, 1976. Woodward's birthday is March 25, 1926.

DENNIS LIPP

Winner of the consolation prize reported to the Chamber of Commerce was Mrs. Marjorie Nelson. Her birthday is April 13, 1926.

MORE CORN, FEWER SOYBEANS

Nebraska farmers as of April 1 intend to plant more acres of corn, sorghum, oats and barley but fewer acres of soybeans, dry beans and sugar beets this year, according to Jack Aschwege, state statistician of the state federal division of agricultural statistics.

Actual plantings are subject to departures from prospective plantings as farmers evaluate this report and other factors at planting time.

Corn producers expect to plant 6,900,000 acres of corn in 1976, up six per cent from last year. This would be the largest acreage since 1954.

Soybean growers plan to plant 2,200,000 acres seven per cent above 1975 and one per cent more than 1974.

Sorghum plantings, if materialized, would total 1,000,000 acres in Nebraska, 20 per cent below the previous year and the lowest since 1972.

Oat seeding intentions, of 700,000 acres, are up one per cent from 1975 and would be the largest acreage since 1970.

Barley planted acre intentions of 42,000 acres are 11 per cent above the previous year.

Dry bean plantings are expected to total 115,000 acres, down seven per cent from last year and the same as 1974.

Sugar beet acreage is expected to total 93,000 acres, five per cent less than 1975. A survey firm there was considered in making uncertainty due to contract negotiations with beet processors.

Potato producers intend to plant 7,200 acres, down 11 per cent from 1975.

The combined acreage of these eight crops, at 11,557,000 acres, is three per cent above 1975.

All hay acreage expected to be harvested is estimated at 4,000,000 compared to 4,050,000 last year.

Nebraska cattle feeders were fattening 1,210,000 cattle for slaughter market on April 1, up 26 per cent from last year but down 12 per cent from two years ago, according to Aschwege.

During the January-March quarter, Nebraska feeders marketed 885,000 fat cattle, up 17 per cent from the corresponding period last year but down 10 per cent from two years ago. Placements during this same period amounted to 721,000, a 24 per cent increase from last year but 10 per cent below two years earlier.

Steers and heifers on feed April 1 weighing 900 pounds or more totaled 441,000 — up 10 per cent from last year. Those in the 700-899 pound group numbered 438,000 — up 44 per cent. Those in the 500-699 pound weight group totaled 288,000 — up 33 per cent. Those weighing under 500 pound numbered 33,000 — up six per cent.

Cattle and calves on feed for slaughter market on April 1 in the 23 major feeding states surveyed totaled 10,872,000 head. This is 28 per cent more than the low number a year ago, but 12 per cent less than April 1. Placements of cattle and calves in the 23 states during the January-March 1976 quarter totaled 5,439,000 head, up 14 per cent from 1975. Marketings of fed cattle for slaughter during the quarter totaled 6,330,000 head, up 15 per cent from the same quarter in 1975 and six per cent more than 1974.

Rudyard Kipling

The quest for more money is almost universal. All of us . . . with few exceptions . . . think we would be much happier if we just had a larger income.

The key to financial happiness, Kipling tells us, is to manage what we have . . . to live within our income. If we spend everything as fast as it is received, or as fast as we are never content, it may not be easy, but "making do" with what we have is the only way to manage money.

We can provide beautiful, comforting memorial services within the financial capabilities of any family.

Wayne Student Elected Model UN Latin Leader

Erin O'Donnell of Wayne was elected chairperson of the Latin Block April 13 in the National Model United Nations Conference held in New York City last week.

O'Donnell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen O'Donnell, is a freshman majoring in pre-law at Wayne State College.

She, and 17 other Wayne students attended the NMUN which included approximately 1125 students from over 125 colleges and universities nationwide.

Through representation of UN member countries, and participating in the process modeled after the actual UN operation, students were given the opportunity to learn of actual international interaction.

As chairperson, Miss O'Donnell met with officers of the other three blocks to draw up resolutions.

Miss O'Donnell was required to be knowledgeable of positions of each of the delegates in the Latin Block.

Of the Wayne State delegation, only three other students were appointed or elected to positions. They were: Jon Ahlers of Belgrade, appointed high commissioner for refugees; Debbie Kralkov of Thurston, elected rapporteur for the economic and social council plenary; and Robert Peters of David City, appointed chairperson of Committee II of the Arab League Conference.

Marlin Schmitt of Wayne was the principal sponsor of a resolution which passed his committee NMUN.

Schmitt, a junior at Wayne State College majoring in political science and history, served as a delegate for the nation of Qatar in the Social Problems, Human Rights, and Humanitarian Activities Committee.

The resolution, which Schmitt wrote himself in Wayne, remained the same with only minor changes added by other countries.

It recommended that Israel end its policies against Palestinian people and that the Security General secure a temporary home for Palestine.

Schmitt, representing Qatar, also co-sponsored two other resolutions concerning torture. One specifically condemned torture practices in Israel and the other resolution was general, simply reaffirming the UN's Declaration of Human Rights. This called for elimination of colonialism.

Schulling: Results of Joint Planning Study Won't Alter County's Agri-Business

The results of the Wayne County Joint Planning Commission's studies are not likely to change the present agricultural based typography of the county, said Rodney Schulling, community planner of the State Office of Planning and Programming (SOPP).

The study will show how Wayne County residents can make better use of land, public facilities and transportation to improve the county, Schulling pointed out during Monday's Wayne Kiwanis Club meeting.

The main purpose of the comprehensive planning program is to set forth the general policies regarding the physical development of Wayne County over the next 20 years.

Although most of rural Wayne County likely would remain the same, Schulling said that SOPP might make some recommendations to the county planning committee for zoning changes in Carroll, Hoskins, Sholes, Wayne and Winside.

He noted that the point of conflict for most towns setting up zoning will be the fringes between the rural and urban areas. Decisions will have to be made between the rural and town boards as to what types of zones will be used in those areas.

"The final decision to zone in those communities rests with the Joint Planning Commission and the individual town boards," Schulling said.

"Who will enforce the comprehensive study plan? Probably the county will have to hire a person to administer and regulate it," Schulling said, adding that the job would be too big for the county superintendent to handle by himself.

Funding of the county-wide improvement plan comes from federal, county and local monies. The federal government pays two-thirds of the cost and county and local governments split the remainder.

The Joint Planning Commission meets the first Tuesday of every month at the Wayne County courthouse. On the nine-member board are: from Carroll, chairman Phil Clauson and Stanley Hansen; from Wayne, vice chairman Merv Mordhorst and Frederick Mann; from Winside, Lloyd Behmer and C.O. Will; and secretary Bill McQuis-tan of Pender. Art Behmer of Hoskins and Neil Sandahl of Wakefield.

Schulling said SOPP is scheduled to have the complete plans ready by the end of June in time for the July 6 meeting.

GUEST SPEAKER at Monday's Wayne Kiwanis Club meeting was Rodney Schulling of the State Office of Planning and Programming. Schulling outlined part of the plans for land development in Wayne County.
