Vacation Costs Going Up

will probably be taking vacation trips by car this summer, visiting sections of the country where Bicentennial events will be the attraction. Expectations at these historic areas are for a huge influx of people from all over the country. Elaborate plans are being made to receive them.

On thing local travelers will discover this year, according to proliminary surveys, is that they will need fatter pocketbooks than before.

Based on reports from the American Automobile Association, a Wayne County couple, traveling modestly, will be spending approximately $59 at day, or about $12 more than was required two years ago.

That amount will lake care of their necessities but not such extras as amusements, souvenirs and other purchase.

Thus, a two week trip will cost a focal couple a minimum of $506. It assumes that they will get 13 miles to the gallon and will cover an average of 300 miles a day.

The $59 daily budget includes $25 for lodgings, $25 for meals, $15 for gas and fill and $5 for miscellaneous needs. In connection with its report on vacation costs, the AAA has also issued new figures on the annual expenses involved in owning and operating a car, which of their takes more out of a family budget than anything except housing, and fold.

cents a mile when driven 10,000 miles. That is an increase of about three cents a mile since 1973.
This takes into account the fixed costs.— for deprectation, insurance, license fees and such — of $1,186. The largest single item is deprectation, listed at $173.
The running costs, covering gas, oil, fires and maintenance, come to $445 for 10,000 mile operation, or 6.45

On this average basis, it is estimated, Wayne County residehls are spending some $8,990.000 a year to own and

Transportation costs are key in sugar dispute

The sugar beet industry in Nebraska appears about to be sacrificed this year to the impersonal infransigence of a conglomerate operation and the state's agricultural economy will be the poorer for it.

agricultural economy will be the poorer for it.

To understand what is happening in the sugar beet area of Nebraska requires a knowledge of the history of the crop in the state and the role it played. The sugar beet was the first great major crop which came to the North Platte Valley to make Bureau of Reclamation projects highly successful ventures.

Great Western Sugar Company's first plants in the state at Scottsbluff, Gering, Mitchell and Bayard were built and placed in operation shortly after the turn of the century. Lafter plants at Minatare and Lyman followed but as beet acreage leveled off and decl-ned after World War II, those plants have been abandoned.

The sugar beet has always been an

II, those plants have been abandoned. The sugar beet has always been an expensive crop to raise, involving great inputs of hand labor in the early day, when reliance was on manpower and horsepower. Even today, considerable handwork is still involved in the crop. Movement of the huge tonnage to the factories has always been an expensive proposition. In the early years, a separate railway company was organized and a network of beet spur lines was built on both sides of the river to hauf the beets from dumps conveniently located so that growers would have relatively short haults to make their deliveries.

These lines over the years have determined and been abandoned. Small beet dumps were closed and growers found themselves hauling farther and farther to deliver their crop. Today, all deliveries from dumps to factories are by truck. Transportation is a major problem for isolated beet growing areas. Beets from the Alliance area for example are processed at the Bayard plant. Those in the Big Springs area and some of the newer beet areas go to Colorado plants. The sugar company is trying to recover more of the transportation costs from the dispute with the beet growers association over a contract.

The other major argument and probably the most serious to over a major change the company, seeks to make in paying growers of their beets. Historically, when growers delivered their beets, samples of their deliveries were tested to determine the sugar content of their

Now the company is seeking a new determination, with payment on the basis of the sugar actualty extracted. The sugar beef is a-fliving organism and from the moment it comes out of the ground, its sugar content begins to decline. The longer the beets are in the piles before processing, the greater the sugar loss, affected by such factors as freezing and thawing and unusually warm fall weather. And of course, there is the matter of efficiency in the refining process. Growers understandably see these factors as putting the burden and risk on their already expensive production costs.

Contract disputes between the growers

arready expensive production costs.

Contract disputes between the growers and the company have been common over the years. In some years past, the company has resorted to offering individual contracts to the growers, as it is doing now, with an overall contract compromise coming later. Early planting is essential to a big crop and beets not planted by April 15 are not likely to produce the 20 tons per acre and top sugar content that are today necessary to profitable operations in Nebraska's sugar beet areas.

There is another factor. Up until about 10 years ago, Great Western Sugar Company was an independent corporation devoted to production of sugar from sugar beets. It was headed by hard-nosed professional sugar people like the late Frank Kemp who knew both the necessity for salistying slockholders and also the real problems and economics of the growers.

the real problems and economics of the growers.

Today things are different. As a subsidiary to a huge conglomerate, the sugar company is now controlled by investors who have channeled their interest into-other investments including reported contracts for importation of Philippine sugar. The intrasigence of the company in the current dispute probably reflects the conglomerate pattern.

Growers say they can and will turn to other crops, and the beets remained unplanted past normal dates. This may be the year that they have been pushed too far and if it is, then the sugar beet industry may never be the same — M. M. VanKirk, Nebraska Farm Bureau.

Public pays cost of paperwork numerous requests. Who pays these paper costs? In the end, the consuming public. Pulling out weeds, as Rep. Horton suggests, will not be enough. Apparently, it is going to take eternal vigilance as well, such as the Chamber's, to make sure new paperwork isn't created as last site old is eliminated. The basic underlying causes of the problem must be explored, and ways found to correct them. — U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

The Commission on Federal Paperwork of off to a reasonably promising start not too long ago. Its important task is to seek ways of cutting down on the huge, multibilition dollar burden that needless government forms and red tape unload on the American public.

For years many people in government agreed it was a waste of time and money to require employers to tile a tax form—four times a year—listing the name, gay and status of every employe. In fact, elimination off the form was recommended some years ago but nothing happened. Thanks to Congressional support mustered by the new Commission, congress has agreed to phase out IRS Form 941 A. at a saving of approximately 500 million to the government and $250 million to the government is. It needs examining in terms of the overall objective starts and the saving of the overall objective starts.

tive Rep. Frank Horton (R.N.Y.), chairman of the commission, points out that "simply getting rid of forms is like pulling out weeds without getting the roots. The forms — like the roots — grow right back again."

He spoke with good reason, While Form 941 A may be on its way out, for example, the Senate Interior Committee is seriously considering creating a whole new agency just to collect more information from business, the National Energy Information Administration.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which has enilisted its nationwide membership in efforts to stamp out non-essential paperwork, was quick to point out the new agency and its paperwork are not needed. Many government agencies already are collecting—such information and they already have a "superabundance" of such data. "To the extent Federal coordination is needed." the chamber said in its newsletter, "Congressional Action," "an interagency committee is capable of providing it. Another data agency is not needed."

Americans must and will change their energy use habits, according to Ms. Janet Wilson. extension consumer education specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoin.

"Saving energy and materials must become an Ingrained habit in the American people." Ms. Wilson said.

Substantial conservation is possible without unemployment, social unreast or a return to the horse-and-bugsy days, according to the specialist. "This is clearly seen when one realizes that the United States is wasting fully 50 per cent of all the energy it uses," she added.

Households in the United States use 30 per cent of the nation's energy, according to Ms.—Wilson. Savings of both nativratics of the control of the con four hours. Ms. Wilson said.

According to Ms. Wilson; energy consumption has doubled in the last 15 years. In the past 30 years, more energy has been consumed than in all previous human history.
"Resources are not available on this earth to continue such use," Ms. Wilson said:
"The United States has only six per cent of the world's pepulation, but uses 40 per cent of the world's energy or raw materials.
"In relation to the population and its demands for non-renewable resources, the United States has already become a resource-poor country. We import many materials upon which, our standard of living depends.
"Its time for everyone to be conscious not only of supplies of natural resources, but also of ways to conserve."
Individuals should, analyze their lite styles, according to Ms. Wilson. Values and standards must be charged to those that have energy conservation as the pivol, she said.

Boys Town of Omaha will carry a 1.5 record into Wednesday's doubleheader with Wayne when the two clubs meet at the city ball park, beginning at 2:30.

BT coach Larry Fox said in a telephone interview Thursday, that his team's only win came in a doubleheader with Hooper-Logan View, 12:10. The Cowboys have lost to Omaha Pasil, IV, Ulica Centennial, Brainard-East Butler and Omaha Cathedral. "All I know about Wayne is that if has one heliuva a pitcher in Paul Mallette," Fox pointed out, adding that he expects a good game because Wayne has such a strong tradition of producing good baseball clubs. A glance at Boys-Town:

Pitchers—Leonard Alkins, freshman righthander, who posted the learn's win: Frank Valdivia, senior righthander, who has been hobbled all season with an ankle injury. Doubtluit Valdivia will go more than three innings. Last year Valdivia was 6:0 in Metro Conference play.

Construction Begins on Maskenthine

The early break in the spring weather has allow early start on dam construction on the Maskenthine

The early break in the spring weather has allowed an early start on dam construction on the Maskenthine Flood Control and Recreation area one mile north of Stanton.

Theisen Brothers, general contractor has laid the concrete coated pipe with work progressing on the excavation and fill on the structure itself.

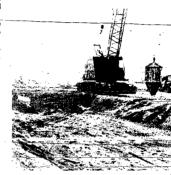

R. & K. Construction of Stanton has completed the clearing of trees from the reservoir area including the setting of trees in the reservoir for fishing habitat.

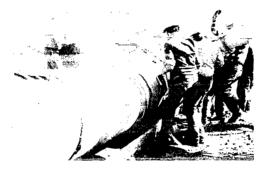

Four erosion control dams are under construction by Logan Valley Construction of Laurel. Two of the structures are to be used as fish rearing ponds to raise fingerlings for stocking of the reservoir as it fills.

The mile long windbreak and wildlife habitat area has been planted. The 8,500 tree and shrub plan will provide protection from prevailing westerly winds.

With assistance from the Stanton FFA Chapter, the 400-tree arboretum has also been planted with 6-8 foot nursery stock.

NRD crews are also preparing several areas to be seeded to a cover crop in preparation for native grass seedings in 1977.
