

New Siren Sounds: What They Mean

Most Wayne County residents need only recall events of a year ago to realize it is the season when the possibility of a tornado striking is a real and present danger.

On May 1 last year, a twister ripped across the western portion of the county, leaving a considerable amount of destruction in its wake.

Advance notice can mean the difference between life and death if a tornado strikes a community. To ensure that residents will be able to hear warning signals, the City of Wayne has installed two new civil defense sirens. One was located along the tower behind the fire house, replacing an older siren. Installation of the second unit was completed Thursday, near the El Toro lounge.

Most residents are probably already somewhat familiar with the new siren, because it was sounded at noon for a couple of weeks after installation. However, it is vital for residents to know which signal means a fire, which means a tornado and which means the emergency is over.

City Administrator Fred Brink said the two new sirens will be tested Wednesday at noon, weather permitting.

The first signal will be a wailing tone, with the sound alternating behind a high and low pitch. That signal will denote a call for volunteer firemen.

The second signal sounds an undulating double tone signal, with the blast interrupted for 10 seconds at intervals. The intermittent signal will mean a tornado has been sighted and is moving into the area.

The third signal will be a sustained double tone, denoting an end to the emergency.

The Nebraska Civil Defense Agency said that when a tornado warning is sounded, it means a twister is on the way and people should immediately seek cover for protection against death or injury.

Persons outdoors should seek shelter inside if possible. If in the open, they should move away from the tornado's path at a right angle. If there is not time to escape, they should lie flat in the nearest depression, such as a ditch or ravine, and should not expose themselves to directly observe the tornado.

Many people have been killed or injured while attempting to satisfy their curiosity. Most tornadoes are accompanied by severe thunderstorms which cause additional danger from lightning and large hail.

In multi-story buildings, the safest places are in the basements or interior hallways on lower floors. Upper floors should be considered unsafe. If there is not time to descend to a lower floor, a closet or small room with stout walls and an inside hallway will give some protection against flying debris. Otherwise, take shelter under heavy furniture, and astay away from windows.

In homes with basements, refuge should be sought in the most sheltered and deepest below-ground part of the basement.

Additional protection is afforded by taking cover under heavy furniture or a work bench. Other basement possibilities are the smallest room with stout walls, or under a stairway.

A below-ground storm cellar provides the best protection, but where neither cellar or basement is available, a deep ditch or culvert again provides good protection. If not available owners of homes without basements should take shelter in a tipped-over upholstered couch in the center of the house. Bathrooms that do not have a wall on the exterior are considered better shelter than other interior rooms.

Mobile homes are particularly vulnerable. Persons who are

OBSERVATIONS

Taming the 'desert'

This week's Out of Old Nebraska features deals with one portion of "Conquering the Great American Desert—Nebraska" written by professor Dick Everett and published by the Nebraska State Historical Society. Everett's book is a detailed look at what life was really like for settlers, and why the "American Desert" title was stuck on the territory which became Nebraska.

The table has always been a cause for wonder to one who was raised in the state and is accustomed to looking out over fertile fields. But as Everett points out, pioneering efforts in North America up until then had been mainly in wooded areas, and while timber often had to be cleared before farming could begin, Woodlands also provided necessary building material and fuel.

The first white men to view Nebraska's relatively treeless and waterless plains decreed that any but a nomadic existence would be impossible.

That of course, was later proven a false assumption as farmers pushed west from the Missouri River, steadily increasing the amount of land under the plow.

Nebraska offered a special challenge to settlers who were forced to use building materials at hand—such as sod—and fuel—such as prairie hay fed into specially designed stoves.

Everett's book makes fascinating reading, particularly during this period of interest in local, state, and national history. The Wayne Herald has donated its copy of the book to the Wayne public library. It's well worth reading—Jim Strayer

Rick and Julie Noyes, responsible for painting the Wayne County historical sign on display at the courthouse, were guests of the Lions Club Tuesday night. They received a well-deserved Bicentennial Minute Man award, and a Wayne County Bicentennial plate.

If you sometimes cringe when you pay the tab after being up at your local gas station, be thankful that in the U.S. aren't as high as in a number of other nations.

$17.90 a Gallon

In Italy, for example, gasoline costs about $17.00 a gallon, according to a chart published by the Journal of Petroleum Technology. The cost is over a dollar a gallon in 10 other countries on the chart and is near the buck figure for two more. In fact, according to the society of Petroleum Engineers, U.S. prices compare favorably with all but OPEC countries.

Area farmers might be interested in a petition being circulated by the Wayne County Home Extension clubs.

The petition, which will be sent to Senator Russell Long (D-La.) urges passage of a law which would raise the state tax exemption on family farms from the current $60,000, set in 1942, to $200,000, and increase the marital deduction to $100,000.

160,000 Received

Mrs. Lloyd Royal of Springfield is collecting the petitions. So far, 160,000 have been received from 49 states, including 12,000 from Nebraska.

Anyone interested in receiving a copy of the petitions can contact Mrs. Long by telephoning 287-2822.

According to an article in the May 15 issue of Farmhand News, Sen. Long, chairman of the key Senate Finance Committee, is 'dragging his feet on the matter.'

Long indicated the odds are against Senate action on estate tax reform this year.

Hearings Held

The House Ways and Means Committee held hearings on proposed changes earlier this spring after pressure had been turned up across the country. Chairman Al Ullman (D-Ore.) said his timetable called for further committee considerations and approval in May, then a vote by the full House before the start of the Democratic National Convention in July.

The Farmhand News story said there is apparently little question that President Ford would sign an estate tax measure approved by Congress.

Accident gap widens again

The gap between the number of accidents so far in 1976 and the same period in 1975 widened to four this week, although Wayne police officers investigated only two accidents.

One occurred when a man-hole cover popped up and struck the vehicle as it passed over it.

The other mishap? What else? A driver was backing out of a parking place into traffic, and he hit.

Police chief Vern Fairchild said he still thinks he was right when he suggested taking reverse gear out of cars, and while the driver was backing out of the car, he drove some vehicles used by Nebraska employees, but they do have a policy directing that vehicles be parked so they can be driven away without backing up—even if it means parking on the other side of the block.

Sound convenient? Maybe so, but the Nebraska division just celebrated its second year without a traffic accident. Everyone, of course, probably can't follow a similar point, but it certainly demonstrates that extreme caution is needed when backing into traffic.

By the Automotive Information Council

Public transportation is an important part of our total system of surface mobility but the Automotive Information Council believes a lot of people in high places have been pulling the wrong switches. Consider:

The opening of the first four and a half miles of the Washington Metro system last month, five years behind schedule and nearly double the initial cost estimate of $2.5 billion. To finish the nearly 100 miles of above and below ground track most certainly will exceed $5 billion.

The nearly four years of experience with the Bay Area Rapid Transit (BART) system in San Francisco-Oakland, BART, hailed as a transit blueprint for the world in 1972, was to become the transportation marvel of this century. The California Legislature ordained that BART should pay its own way out of the fare box. Earlier this year, BART officials asked the Legislature for $40 million and threatened a shutdown this fall unless money was forthcoming.

Morgantown, West Virginia, the home of West Virginia University, built a personalized rapid from one campus to another—all with funds provided by the Urban Mass Transit Administration (UMTA), part of the Department of Transportation. The cost soared from an original $13 million to more than $100 million.

While the planners in San Francisco spent over $1.4 billion for BART, the people in Los Angeles took a less expensive route. Just last month inside lanes of the Santa Monica-Fresno were reserved for bus traffic and cars with three or more persons. After 11 days of operation, a total of 61 minor accidents were reported. The normal rate is five per day. Also, the rush hour traffic backed up more than 12 miles.

The only California people to profit were students who sold themselves for a dollar a ride to motorist's needing a couple of passengers, to drive the high speed lanes.

The experiment, called "Diamond Lane," prompted rate letters from motorists who labeled it "bureaucratic extortion," "predictable carnage" and more.

People apparently prefer the mobility that only automobile ownership or leasing can provide.

Sessions Slated to End June 8

A 12-week series of parent sessions, sponsored by Project Predict and Prevent, will end June 8, according to Project director Beverly Scovill. Project Predict and Prevent was started in October of last year with services available to anyone who has preschool children with special needs. Offices are located in Carhart Science Hall on the Wayne State College campus. Topics at the weekly parent meetings have included toys as learning tools, creativity, sensory motor development and the development of positive self-concept on the part of the child.

Of the three sessions remaining, two will deal with behavior modification and one with language. Instructors for the series are director Scovill and Gwen Dickey, home adviser and physical therapist from Educational Service Unit 1. Demonstrations have included the use of slides, film strips and other standard workshop materials. The use of toys, books and games has been explained and each week parents have been given games to take home to help stimulate language development in their youngsters. Home advisers now working in the project are Mrs. Scovill, Miss Dickey, Mrs. Don Keck, Mrs. Don Schultz, Mrs. Richard Armstrong and Mrs. Don Cattie. In addition to spending one to two hours weekly with the children in their homes, the advisers are required to plan their visits and to attend a staff meeting once each week. Parents and teachers may check out educational toys, games and curriculum materials from the project's library. The library has been set up by staff members Mrs. J.S. Johar and Mrs. Kack, and is under their management.

Hepburn: Declaration Created for Governed, Not for Government

The Declaration of Independence was the subject of a talk presented at the Wednesday evening meeting of the Wayne County Right to Life chapter in Wayne. Dr. Charles Hepburn, currently the chairman of the social science department at Wayne State College, discussed the spiritual and political meaning of the Declaration in relationship to men of all nations and all times. In describing the American patriots who drafted the document, Dr. Hepburn said they were men "whose use of right reason and religious faith led them to believe in the unalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness as gifts of a creator, not a government." As stated in the first sentence of the Declaration, governments are created with the consent of the governed for the purpose of defending their unalienable rights, said Dr. Hepburn. Dr. Hepburn distributed study materials on the Declaration as a preserver of liberty and a leader of the group in discussing the value of this philosophy of freedom in the modern world. Following Hepburn's presentation, Right to Life chapter members conducted a business meeting and formed a committee to plan a Bicentennial parade display following the theme, "Rights of God—Given and Unalienable." "Nineteen hundred and seventy six is a good year to get back to the birth certificate of our nation, determining our values and priorities," said Wayne County Right to Life vice president Gil Fournier.

Inside Glance at Class B Championship Playoffs

Mallette: On Any Given Day Any Team Can Beat Another

Coach Mike Mallette believes in the theory that any team can beat another on any given day. Therefore he related Wayne has an equal chance of winning the state Class B crown when his club faces Omaha Ryan High today (Monday) in Lincoln.

Mallette takes that stand because he knows his team has the hitting strength and the pitching to knock off the highly-touted Omaha team.

"We have to go down there in the right frame of mind — that we have the club which can put anyone down," the 11-year head man noted.

Wayne has faced Omaha clubs in the state meet for the past five years and every one has been tough. That's the caliber of ball they play down there, the coach noted.

The coach doesn't accept the idea that his club is the underdog. Wayne carries a 13-2 record into the meet, which this year will have a winner's bracket only, instead of a four team meet line-up. Coaches voted in favor of having only two teams in order to conserve the strength of the pitching corps.

Wayne will rely on seniors Paul Mallette and Dave Hix for pitching strength. Hix, who pulled Wayne out in the district finals at Wayne, will likely be the starter, the coach noted.

"Dave did a yeoman's job on the mound for us," Mallette pointed out, adding that for that reason he'll get the starting nod.

Hix enters the game at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln field with a 7-1 mark while Mallette is 6-1. Both are good fastball pitchers.

During the season, Hix has thrown 45 innings, given up 27 hits, walked 30, given up 14 runs and struck out 66. Mallette has thrown in 44 innings, given up 27 hits, given up 16 runs, walked 18 and struck out 75.

With the exception of the district finals, Wayne's hitting and pitching has been consistent, especially during the fall end of the season, the coach said.

"One thing we're going to have to do is shore up our defense and be consistent there," Mallette hinted at the possible weak point on his club.

As a team, Wayne is hitting at .315

Mallette is the top slugger at .488. The berty right hander has two home runs to his credit, plus leads the team in runs batted in with 25.

Doug Carroll is next in line at .459 followed by Hix at .429, Aaron Nissen at .390 and Tom Ginn at .333. Two hitters who have shown improvement are Monte Löwé, who had three hits in four at-bats against Wakefield in the district finals, and Vic Sharpe.

Overall, Wayne's 20 players roster is dominated by eight seniors. But Mallette quickly pointed out that four and possibly five underclassmen will be starting against Ryan.

Mallette said a possible turning point in the game could be a large showing of Wayne fans. "It's really satisfying to see the stands full... it just gives a different reflection on the ball game."

In summing up Wayne's chances of bringing home the first state baseball trophy since 1970, the coach said, "We're due."

Darrell: Wayne Hasn't Faced the Kind of Pitching We Have

If anyone has kept tabs on high school baseball in Omaha, he'll know that the state's largest city has produced some of the top clubs in Nebraska.

One such example is Omaha Ryan High School which will face Wayne today (Monday) in the Class B championship game at 12:30 p.m. at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln field.

The Knights of coach Lyn Darrell enter the contest with a 11-4, an impressive record for a B team which has faced Class A competition. Even more impressive is the fact that Ryan is 8-4 in the Omaha Metro Conference.

What makes Ryan a strong contender for the state title is the simple fact that the Knights are strong — all over.

The Omaha club carries a 290 team batting average with the help of such hitters as juniors Pat Kubicek, 496; Bob Lackovic, .357, and Dan Gomez, .333. When the head man needs other recruits, he digs further in his 18-player roster to find underclassmen Jerry Sluimock and John May, 280 each, Mark Vavra, .275, and designated hitter Paul Redlinger, .260.

Couple those statistics with the fact that most of Ryan's lineup has been to bat at least 20 times (none have been to bat more than 20 times, the coach noted).

To add a little "punch" to the lineup for the eight-team district last week, the coach brought up two Jayvee players, Pat O'Donnell and John Lindley. Both juniors responded by hitting the ball at a .750 and .333 clip, respectively.

"It's nice to have that kind of stuff sitting on the bench when you need it," the first-year coach commented.

Even better than the team hitting has been the pitching. The Knight has three hurlers who have an earned run average of less than one run a game.

Besides carrying a hefty bat, Gomez is the top thrower with a .875 era. Sophomore Mike Wyskowski is .964 and reliever Ron Pietzmeier, a senior, is .478. In case those right handers don't meet the challenge, the coach has other in reserve.

For now, Gomez is top hurler with a 5-1 record while Wyskowski is 5-1 and Pietzmeier is 1-0.

Although the Knights are a relatively young club, the Omaha team has played summer Legion ball together. As a result, the coach feels he has a strong club.

"We've been hitting the heck out of the ball lately," he noted. During Legion ball his club was striking at .225.

Darrell admits his club does have a lot of good points. But there are some weak points, too.

"If we have a downfall it will be our fielding. We've made a lot of errors and mental mistakes this season. However, we are starting to snap out of that," the coach noted.

The outfield is one area the coach isn't worried about. The all senior outfield will be made up from Vavra, Sluimock, May or Redlinger.

What does Darrell expect from Wayne?

"A good team which can hit the ball well," he pointed out.

The one area he believes his club can hurt Wayne is one the mound. Talking with the coach at Omaha Paul IV, Darrell said he has learned that Wayne teams generally have lacked the experience of facing the caliber of pitchers Omaha teams have to offer.

Again referring to Gomez, the coach pointed out that he has the help of two other brothers, including former major leaguer Jerry Gomez who recently was released after three years of playing.

IRRIGATION SCHEDULING HOTLINE UNDER STUDY

The Lower Elkhorn NRD is working with the Cooperative Extension Service, University of Nebraska to aid irrigators in determining crop water needs through the irrigation season.

By balancing the crop moisture using with the evaporation and rainfall, irrigators will be able to schedule water applications to avoid reduced yields from under or over irrigation.

LENRD, Assistant Manager, Glenn Spreeman said that several other advantages of the scheduling program are probable reduction in ground-water use, less leaching of agricultural nutrients and chemicals and increased profit to the farmers from reduced energy requirements for pumping.

Spreeman noted that the Madison and Pierce County Extension Services plus Extension Irrigation Specialist Paul Fishbach are developing representative areas to use to develop the scheduling program.

high speed cultivator

Exclusive Danish vibrating shanks with "bulldog" clamp work at speeds of 50-100% faster than stiff shank cultivators (6 to 8 MPH at 3 to 6 inch working depth suits fine to moist soils). Each S-shaped spring-steer shank does its way down the field - side-to-side, forward and back.

Shovels shatter soil, remove weeds, shake loose trash, adjuster rocks and leave a fine mulch on top. Positive gauge wheel adjustment and S-shank gangs easily adjust to fit most row spacings 20-40". Stop in and talk with your dealer about other benefits.

Truck Damaged

A tractor-trailer truck received front end damage in an accident about 10:35 Friday morning when it collided with the rear end of a disc being towed behind a tractor driven by Samuel Ulecht of rural Wakefield.

According to the Wayne County sheriff's department, Thomas Varvas of Sioux City, driver of the truck, was southbound about a half-mile south of Wakefield when he attempted to pass the tractor-disc combination. Varvas attempted to pull back into the right hand lane because of an oncoming car in the passing lane. The front end of the truck hit the rear of the disc, which was not damaged. Neither driver was injured.

Rate Study

all electric home owners were implemented years ago to encourage increased use of electricity. Present production was relatively cheap then. Fuel shortages have changed that in recent years, and according to Armstrong's recommendations at least, power rates are no longer practical. Current rates, in effect, subsidize some customers and the rate study is designed to correct that.

A customer now on the R-1 rate, using 907 kilowatt hours (KWH) of electricity during the eight winter months (for electric billing purposes) now pays $31.84. Armstrong recommends the bill should be $31.52 if the true cost of service is reflected — a one cent decrease.

The largest number of R-1 bills last year went to customers using about 572 KWH. Their bill would go up $21.31, a five cent, and 30 per cent, increase.

R-1 customers toward the top of the usage chart would experience increases of about six per cent.

Percentage increases for R-1 users toward the bottom of the scale would be greater — some as high as 144.5 per cent, but the jump isn't great in terms of dollars. Armstrong is recommending a minimum charge of $3.26 for customer-related service. Recommended bill for a customer using 11 KWH would be $3.68, up from $2.07.

The biggest recommended dollar increase at current usage levels on the R-1 chart would be $14.39, representing an 11.5 per cent increase for the greatest R-1 consumption recorded in fiscal '76-77 — 4,545 KWH in one month.

The largest winter bill during the period went to an all electric customer during the reporting period was for 9,069 KWH, at a cost of $159.17. Armstrong's report recommends a total bill of $265.15 — a $108.98 or 68.5 per cent increase.

Recommended increases for other all electric homeowners range from 2.6 to 95.1 per cent. All electric consumers toward the bottom end of the usage scale would experience a decrease in the winter months.

In summer months, recommended charges for all electric customers would range from $6.40 for 72 KWH, to $381.03 for 11,481 KWH.

In dollars, the rate change would range from an increase of $180.63 for the largest consumer to a $10.21 increase for the smallest summer rate, all electric consumer.

The council discussed one other agenda item during Thursday afternoon's special meeting. Special attorney Dwayne Schroeder told the council that settlement of a law suit filed by the city against the county has been delayed pending a ruling

Ice Cream Social Set

Plans were made for the Memorial Day ice cream social when the United Presbyterian Women met Wednesday at the church in following hall. The social, sponsored by the Bethany Cemetery Association, will begin at 6 p.m.

The members and three guests, Mrs. Sena Jones of Norfolk, Mrs. Roy Jenkins and Mrs. Richard Jenkins, attended Wednesday's meeting. Mrs. Leonard Pritchard presided and Mrs. Len Jones reported on the last meeting and accompanied for the singing of hymns. The Rev. Gail Axen had the lesson on prayer.

The council asked Schroeder if it would be advisable if the county would agree to a sufficiently large settlement. The council directed Schroeder to attempt to negotiate a settlement with the county's attorney.

The council also agreed to place on the agenda for Tuesday night's regular meeting re-consideration of an application for a Class C liquor license.

At the late regular meeting, the council voted to recommend against issuing a Class C license to Doug Finn. The license would allow on-sale liquor retailing at Finn's Bottle Shop at 421 Main St.

The council split over the licensing issue, with the mayor breaking the deadlock. Reasons for opposing the license given at the meeting included objections to location of a bar in a commercial zone which borders on a residential area. The city only makes a recommendation on liquor license applications. The Planning Commission makes the actual, final decision.

Tornadoes

vulnerable to overturning, and to wind-blown missiles and damaging wind. Mobile homes should be abandoned in favor of preselected shelter where possible.

Buildings with wide, free span roofs are also quite vulnerable, and again, should be abandoned for alternate shelter.

A number of points to remember are:

— Parked motor vehicles are unsafe as shelters during a tornado or severe windstorm.

— Battery powered radios provide essential emergency information for shelter occupants.

— Flashlights, emergency food and water are also important for shelters.

— Use the telephone only for emergency purposes. During disaster telephone overloads make coordination difficult for emergency operations forces.

— At least one member per family should have some first aid or comparable home medical training.

— During many severe storms, substantial damage is caused by wind blown debris. Early in the storm threat period, preferably prior to publication of a WARNING, homeowners or other persons responsible for buildings should pick up or otherwise secure loose objects in yards, grounds, etc.

— Studies of tornado fatalities have indicated that head injuries are a major factor. When in shelter during a tornado warning keep this in mind—wear any available, protective head gear—stay under heavy furniture, etc.

— Help your neighbor.
