Ladies Water Fight Part Of Wakefield Celebration

Wakefield will mark its 95th anniversary and the nation's 200th birthday with a three-day celebration beginning Sunday night, June 20.

Opening night of the celebration will feature the performance of "I Love America" by the 110-voice Wakefield Community Choir. The presentation was first made in May and choir director Mrs. Marvin Mortenson has since received requests for an encore performance.

A kids parade will begin at 4 p.m., Monday, June 21, followed by judging of whisks and Bicentennial costumes.

Youngsters can decorate their bikes, build miniature floats, bring their pets, or wear Bicentennial garb for the parade, which will be under the direction of the past presidents of the American Legion Auxiliary in Wakefield. Judges will select prize winners in several categories.

Five categories will be judged in the Bicentennial costume contest: best dressed family, most authentic costume, best decorated (girls and boys divisions for children under two years old), best dressed boy and girl, ages three through seven, and best dressed boy and girl, eight through 12.

Parades will pass in review on both Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at 6 p.m., featuring floats from Wakefield and surrounding communities, marching bands, antique vehicles, the Shrine Cycle Corps, and the Crimston Castles from Norfolk.

Bernice Gustafson is parade chairman and will accept entries until Saturday, June 12.

A ladies water fight sponsored by the Wakefield Volunteer Firemen will follow Tuesday's parade. A teen dance is also scheduled for Tuesday night.

A number of saddle clubs from the surrounding area will ride in the Lundgren playday riding exhibition on the final

Wayne Police Record Week Without Mishap

Wayne last week recorded its first seven-day period since the beginning of 1976 without a traffic accident, according to police chief Vern Fairchild.

The traffic accident total for 1976 through the accident-free week which ended at 7 a.m. Friday, June 4, was 88, just one ahead of the total for the same period in 1975.

Fairchild said it has been about a year since his department had a complete week without a single traffic accident investigation. He added that some accident-free weeks are usually recorded during the summer months, because of two major factors: the population of the city declines in the summer because many Wayne State College students are not in residence, and many other people are also on vacation.

In addition, most drivers keep their windows down during the warm summer months and are able to hear as well as see approaching traffic.

Voters Decide Today on Laurel School Bonds

Voters in Laurel-Concord School District 54 in Dixon and Cedar Counties will be voting today (Thursday) to decide if $850,000 in bonds will be issued to finance the construction of a new elementary school and gymnasium.

The proposed new gym would seat about 1,500, compared with 300 for the present facility, which would be retained for use as a multi-purpose room.

The new elementary school would have 15 regular classrooms, a library, an arts and science room, and a special education room.

Population Decline Is Greatest in Wayne County

Wayne County experienced the greatest decrease in population from 1970 to 1975 of any county in Nebraska according to estimates prepared by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Bureau of Business Research.

The U.N.L. bureau and the U.S. Bureau of the Census have released their mid-decade population figures, giving provisional estimates effective July 1, 1975.

Wayne County, located in Planning Region 11, had a population of 10,400 following the 1970 census. The revised census on July 1, 1974, was 9,002, and the 1975 provisional estimate is 8,789.

That represents a 15.5 per cent decline in population for the

The daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Rod Varilek of rural Wayne were like many of the youngsters last week who took advantage of the warm weather to "cool off" in the pool. Earlier in the week, youngsters had to wait three days after the pool opened on Memorial Day to take a refreshing dip. A problem developed in the filtering system, forcing pool officials to shut down the pool until it could be fixed.

Tougher Stance Wanted Against Crime

Nebraskans in the First Congressional District want a tougher stance against crime, according to the poll by Congressman Charles Thone.

According to Thone's office, 97 per cent of the nearly 30,000 people who replied to the mail questionnaire said they favor mandatory prison sentences for persons committing felonies while carrying firearms. Thone is a sponsor of a bill to require such sentences for federal crimes.

The First District Congressman mailed a questionnaire to each household in his district, asking if residents wanted spending increased, decreased, or held at present levels for 19 categories of federal expenditures.

Crime prevention, including drug control, received the highest number — 71 per cent — of votes favoring increased expenditures.

Foreign aid and welfare were the categories where most respondents want expenditures cut, 85 per cent and 83 per cent, respectively.

Control of the Panama Canal has become a campaign issue during the presidential primary races and 94 per cent of the First District voters answering Thone's poll said they oppose the United States giving up control of the canal.

Apparently, residents of the district aren't happy with the present postal system. Two years ago, 30 per cent of the respondents were in favor of reducing the postal service's independence. In the recent poll, 83 per cent said they are in favor of making the independent agency again accountable to Congress.

It also looks as if deficit spending is also a major concern. Of the respondents, 84 per cent said they favor federal tax cuts, only if Congress agrees to limit spending.

On the foreign aid question, 60 per cent favored decreasing it; 24 per cent, ending it; 14 per cent, leaving it as is, and two per cent, increasing it.

A majority of those answering the questionnaire said they favor abortion as a matter between an individual and her physician, while 37 per cent favor a "right to life" amendment prohibiting all but therapeutic abortions, and six per cent want an amendment to permit states to set their own abortion laws.

Regulation of business by the federal government was regarded as too tough by 62 per cent, while 23 per cent regarded current regulations as adequate and Taxes paid after that date become delinquent and begin drawing a nine per cent interest penalty, Meyer said.

Statements for the personal property tax were mailed in October.

City Moves a Step Closer Toward Sidewalk Project

A proposed project to improve Wayne's downtown business district came a step closer to becoming reality Tuesday night when city council members decided to go ahead with creating a sidewalk district.

The council directed city attorney Budd Bornhoff to prepare a resolution declaring the necessity for the sidewalk improvement district, and at the same time, draw up the subsequent ordinance creating the district.

The resolution will be introduced at the next council meeting, June 29. An affirmative vote by three-fourths of the council is necessary for the resolution to pass — and if that happens, presumably, the ordinance creating the district will also be discussed and acted upon.

Vernon Russell objected to having an ordinance written before the resolution was passed, saying he supports the proposed business district renovation but thinks the council should move a step at a time so the public will know what is happening with the project and won't think the council is trying to rush matters.

City administrator Fred Brink reported his survey of the project had yielded a cost estimate of about $180,000. That amount includes sidewalks, curb and gutter, and widening of side streets — but excludes lighting, cost of relocating fire hydrants and storm sewer, and any street construction on Main St.

That estimated cost averages out to $30.43 a linear foot for properly owners in the district, or $2.86 a square foot. At least two council members, Ted Bahr and Jimmie Thomas, indicated Tuesday that they favor exempting residential property owners in the commercial zone from bearing costs of the sidewalk project if it is approved.

A number of questions, particularly in regard to Main St., must be resolved before the project can be started. Because Developmental Disabilities Center for the training of one child.

Rates for the training went up considerably during the later part of the current fiscal year. Basing his estimate on those rates, Haun predicted the school district would pay $9,000 next year for two hours of training a day.

Giese said that he is not opposed to providing the training, but questions the amount charged. "I'm willing to go along with whatever is fair and right, but that seems unreasonable," Giese said, adding that he wants to know what the district's money is being spent for.

The other board members concurred and directed Haun to contact the state board of education, which approves the rates.

"If you are really helping someone, fine," Giese concluded. "But I think you should only spend the amount that will really benefit the child."

In other action, the board: — Accepted a bid by the Nebraska State Education Association for disability insurance. The Blue Cross-Blue Shield policy, underwritten by Standard of America Life Insurance Co., was substantially lower than three other bids submitted.

— Reviewed a proposed policy on staff reduction. Recognizing a trend toward smaller enrollment, the proposal rejects the concept that the school district should retain employees beyond the street — Highway 15 — is a state highway, any construction must come under the auspices of the State Department of Roads. Brink said he was informed that the Roads Department does not have improvement of the highway segment through Wayne scheduled for several years, although it might be possible to change that.

In addition, if federal highway funds are used in the project, it must also meet federal regulations. Because of federal rules mandating the number and width of traffic lanes, the Main St. project could be accomplished only if parking along it were eliminated.

He added, however, that the downtown improvement council is working on an idea that might compensate for the lost parking by providing for median parking on widened side streets.

Board Looks at Budget

Wayne-Carroll school board members Monday night took a first look at the proposed 1976-77 school budget, which calls for an increase of some $65,000 over the amount budgeted from local tax money last year.

The proposed budget through August 1977 is $1,285,867, compared with $1,270,064 for the current fiscal year.

Those totals are amounts supported through the local school district property tax mill levy. When funds received from the state and for various title programs under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act are added in, the total amount budgeted for the current fiscal year is $1,387,198. The proposed total, when transfer funds are included, is $1,398,567.

Teacher salaries account for a major portion of the increase. Total amount for elementary salaries in the proposed budget is $392,800, compared with $387,198 for fiscal 1975-76. Salaries for secondary teachers total $296,652 in the proposed new budget, compared with $269,601 for the current fiscal year.

Together, salary increases account for about $32,000 of the increase on the proposed budget.

A change in state law will mean increasing the school district's share of the employees' retirement fund from $5,700 to $12,000.

Other proposed increases include clerical salaries, textbooks, heating fuel and electricity, and repairmen salaries.

Board member Wilbur Giese suggested that the school district look into one budget item. The district pays the Region IV

Thought for Today
By Brian McBride

"The bad you hear about a man may not be true, but when people say something good about him, you can bet on it."
Robert Quillen

We can't say why it is, but gossip-mongers seem to specialize in bad news. Gossip that discredits anyone may be pure fiction. Even when there is some truth involved, the story is too often expanded.

It is not only charitable but wise to question the truth of any bad we hear about anyone. Such gossip should never be repeated. The good we hear, that goodness, can always be believed.

For us, there are no minor details. Anything we do for a family is important to them and the more important though, the more honest professional attention.

Wayne Faces Allen in 'Do Or Die' Tilt

Wayne town team will be aiming to even its 1-2 record tonight (Thursday) when the locals face a 2-1 Allen-Martinsburg club at the city ball park.

A win for Wayne is a must if the town team expects to be a challenge in the NNBL. For manager Keith Hill's team, Allen has to come back after its 3-2 loss to Ponca, Sunday. Chances are Jim Auch will go on the mound for Allen while Wayne manager Don Goeden likely will call on Randy Bingham to throw. Both have 10 records. Game time is 8 p.m.

Sunday night Dakota City ripped Wayne hurlers Roger Saul and Jim Bliven for 11 hits to drop the locals, 11-8. The league's top hitter, Kim Saiters, smacked three singles and a double during his five trips to the plate to lead Dakota City. Wayne took a brief 4-3 lead in the top of the fourth when third baseman Larry Raabe and right fielder Mike Creighton scored on a base hit and error.

The home team came back in its half of the fourth with three big runs off four singles, then added two runs in the fifth and three runs in the sixth inning. Top slugger for Wayne was Raabe with three singles in four times at the plate.

Blazes Back Nine With a 32 Smooth-Swinging Sock Captures Wayne Open

Young Larry Sock of Norfolk carded out another top honor in tournament golf Sunday by capturing first place in the fifth annual Wayne Country Club Memorial Day Open.

The smooth-swinging Sock foured the front nine with a 35, then came back with a blizzing 32 on the back nine for a 67 — the only score in the 60's among the 201 entries.

The senior at Oklahoma State University continued the rugged pace with a 35 on the final nine for a 27-hole total of 102, four strokes better than his nearest opponent, Dick Dykes of Omaha who shot a 106.

A total of 23 out of 39 golfers who signed up for the championship flight made the cutoff, which included rounds of 78 or below.

Sock's 35 on the final nine wasn't the top score turned in. Brother Randy Sock along with Ken Feend and Chris Greene each fired 34's.

Four Wayne men and a golfer from Allen were among the 13 golfers who won their flights. They are Al Cramer, Ron Dalton, Don Zeiss and Forrest Magnuson of Wayne and Craig Williams of Allen.

Cramer won the 11th flight with an 81. Dalton won the ninth flight with a 77. Zeiss won the 10th flight with an 84. Williams finished first in the 11th flight with an 83, and Magnuson won the 12th flight with an 85.

Other flight winners were: 1st flight — Jerald Chesnut, 71; 2nd flight — Mark Harrison of Blair, 78; 3rd flight — Pat Hupp of Norfolk, 77; 4th flight — Roger Anderson, 77; 6th flight — Wayne Kehrl, of Schuyler, 81; 7th flight — Bob Brand of Omaha, 76; 8th flight — Mel Rager of South Sioux City, 82; 13th flight — Gary Lubberstedt, 83.

Next tournament at the Wayne Country Club will be an amateur meet July 10-11.

CONGRATULATIONS TO Winside's Jill Stovall for her being named one of the top three athletes last weekend during the Norfolk Bicentennial Track meet.

The Winside High grad won the shot put with her best ever mark of 49.5 (if she were still in high school that mark would be another state record) and won the discus, 129.2. For her efforts, she along with Donna Fox of Bassett and Rosie Clayton of Osmond, were named outstanding performers during the one day meet.

The following day at Hastings, Jill continued her winning efforts by taking first in the shot at the Midwest AAU meet. Her heave was 42.8. She also won the discus with a toss of 121.0. It looks like Jill is going to continue throwing the shot next fall when she enters Kearney State College. She made her decision several weeks ago after turning down offers from colleges in Iowa and Nebraska.

JILL WASN'T the only area competitor at Norfolk and Hastings. To recap, Lori Langensberg of Hosking was third in the 100 at 13, fourth in the 220 at 30.4 and fifth in the high jump at 4.0 for the 12-13 age group at Norfolk. Also competing were Stacy Jacobmeier of Wayne who was fourth in the 400 and third in the 200. Brad Emry of Wayne was fourth in the long jump and fifth in the 100. Ann Mann of Winside was third in the 80 yard hurdles. Also Robyn Winch won the 440 in the 12-13 class with a time of 1:08.5.

Three Wakefield youths also placed at Norfolk. Scot Keagle was third in the high jump at 6.2, Scott Mills won the triple jump at 42.9, and Robin Mills was second in the 100 and third in the 220.

FOR SEVERAL days last week the name of Tom Purizer was on the lips of a lot of local golfers after the Arizona rookie led the pack during the $200,000 Bicentennial Golf Classic at Philadelphia.

Purizer, who finished the gruelling tourney in 17th position, is known somewhat in these parts because he has relatives in Carroll and Wisner. They are Mr. and Mrs. Morris Sandahl of Carroll and Mrs. Homer Beermann of Wisner.

The 24 year old Purizer grabbed the headlines in the sports section of the Omaha World Herald with his hole-in-one and his below par shooting which kept him in the leader's seat for three days.

After the first round Purizer shot a 65. He then had rounds of 71, 72 and 73 to finish with a 283, good enough for $3,325.

Wakefield Nips Walthill, 5-2

Wakefield Midgets scored three runs off two base hits and a passed ball in the bottom of the third en route to a 5-2 win over visiting Walthill.

The victory pushed the area club's record to 2-0 in the Ralph Bishop League and kept it in a tie for first place with Wayne.

Trailing 2-1, Wakefield opened in its half of the third with left fielder Jeff Simpson singling followed by a walk by shortstop Doug Starz. A sacrifice fly by catcher Dean Sharp scored Simpson and a base hit by winning pitcher Rick Guy scored Simpson to put the home team in front, 3-2. Guy later stole second and scooted home on a throw to home.

Ponca Scores Three in 9th To Nip Allen.

Ponca scored three runs in the bottom of the ninth Sunday night to stage a 3-2 come-from-behind victory over visiting Allen-Martinsburg and hand Allen its first loss in three starts.

Tonight (Thursday) Allen will try to regain its bid for the top spot in the eight-team Northeast Nebraska Baseball League when it travels to Wayne.

A two-run bases-loaded double by left fielder Murray White put Ponca on top after the winners scored their initial run on hurler Neil Blohm's fourth walk.

Allen took a 1-0 lead in the top of the fifth when left fielder Roger Anderson, who walked, stole second and came home on a Ponca error.

The area team increased that margin to 2-0 in the ninth when Tim Hill doubled, went to third on Darwin Rubeck's sacrifice and scored on Anderson's single. Going into the final frame, Ponca had given up only one hit. But first baseman Brad Nelson ended Blohm's hopes for a one-hitter when he led off the inning with a single. Nelson advanced to third when Blohm walked the next two Ponca batters before he was put out at home on a fielder's choice.

Ponca's Joe Hendricks posted the win on the mound, the team's second against a solo loss. Hendricks gave up five hits, including a pair of singles by Allen first baseman Steve Dieckler.

Ready to Make the Play

FUNDAMENTALS, fundamentals, more fundamentals — that's what 40 boys got in large quantities at Wayne State's Cats Cage Camp this week. Example: coach Jim Seward, left, and WSC basketball player Dale Meyer demonstrate one-on-one defense, with Seward getting the jump and Meyer reacting. "It's a good camp," the coach said, "a lot of enthusiasm." Another session of the annual camp is scheduled to open Sunday for a week — and registration remains open for boys who will be in fifth through 12th grades next fall.

Only 100 years ago, scientists thought that heat was caused by a substance called "caloric," that entered and left a substance. But heat is really the movement of tiny particles, called molecules, which make up a substance.

reported that a court action appears to be the most feasible way to determine if the city can sell land in the industrial park on east Highway 35 to manufacturers.

A recent Nebraska Supreme Court decision declared unconstitutional certain property transactions by municipal governments.

That created problems for Wayne in the sale of a tract of land to Fiberglass Corporation which announced in early May it would locate a plant in Wayne.

The state Supreme Court decision has caused the company's attorneys to question the city's ability to give a clear title to the property.

Bornhoff said he had consulted with the National Fiberglass attorneys, and is recommending that the city file suit to force performance on the purchase contract.

Bornhoff said the company will oppose the suit, while he will attempt to convince the court that the sale is proper under state statutes.

Purpose of the action is for the court to provide a clear decision regarding the land sale, so National Fiberglass can be assured a clear title, if the court decides the sale is proper.

Bornhoff said that he and company attorneys will be working to bring the matter before the court as soon as possible, and he hopes it can be decided in July.

federal tax reform, according to those answered the poll, is an increase in the minimum tax on large incomes, with 69 per cent favoring it.

Those noted that since the questionnaire was prepared in April, a bill increasing the minimum tax passed the House with his affirmative vote.

A total of 79 per cent of the replies were either in favor of eliminating limits on earnings by retired people working for Security benefits, or raising the present ceilings.

He said Wednesday that he had not previously made a personal announcement of his withdrawal but that he had written to Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan asking if necessary to terminate his candidacy, and assumed that Whelan's office had made the announcement.

Twelve members and two guests, Eleanor Edwards of Wayne and Mrs. Richard Jenkins of Carroll, attended the June 2 meeting of United Presbyterian Women, held at the church fellowship hall.

Hostess was Mrs. Owen Jenkins. Mrs. Lem Jones reported on the last meeting and accompanied for group singing of "Jesus Calls Us."

Local Shopper Wins $25 Prize

Mrs. Tom Mau is the latest winner in the weekly Birthday Bucks promotion sponsored by participating Wayne businesses.

Mrs. Mau, who lives at 515 W. Fourth, won the $25 consolation award last Thursday night when her birthday came the closest to the date drawn at random by Mrs. LeRoy Middleton of Peoples Natural Gas and announced at 8:15.

The date drawn was Sept. 20, 1945. Mrs. Mau's birthday is Nov. 21, 1945.

Had her birthday matched the date drawn, Mrs. Mau would have won the $750 grand prize in Birthday Bucks. As a result of the top prize going unclaimed, another lucky shopper tonight (Thursday) will have a chance to win the top prize.

No registration or purchases are necessary to be a winner. However, a shopper must be present in a participating Wayne business when the number is announced.

Special session may be needed to correct financial oversight

CAPITOL NEWS
LINCOLN — Is Nebraska subject to a special session of the Unicameral this summer?
 That's the question that has been posed to the attorney general by the Unicameral's Education Committee in connection with a missing $2.5 million in state aid to local schools money.
 The local schools were planning on receiving that money in July before the end of their fiscal year.
 But through a series of legislative slip ups the money was cut from the budget during last November's special session in an attempt to ease treasury cash demands and was not put back in the budget as intended during this year's regular session.
 The education committee held a public hearing and school district representatives said they were going to be in financial trouble if they don't get the money this summer.
 Gov. J. J. Exon said he thinks the problem can be solved without having to spend $5,000 and $10,000 on a special session.
 However, the governor said if the legal opinions point solidly in the direction of a special session, he has his own private dream.

Wants Budget Cut
 "If a special session is called by reason of absolute necessity, I think it would be well for the lawmakers to take another look at that budget," Exon said, referring to the $47.6 million state general fund budget he unsuccessfully tried to trim down closer to the $390 million appropriated for the current fiscal year using his veto powers.
 The loss of the money, he added, was the result of "legislative tinkering" with legislation and spending plans he has objected to over the years.
 The governor was quick to say that while he doesn't really favor the idea of a special session, he does realize some districts will have problems because the money isn't there.
 He said he has asked the State Department of Administrative Services to pinpoint those districts with serious problems.
 Some school administrators have suggested borrowing money to cover their shortages with the understanding the legislature would repay the amounts borrowed when they go into regular session next year.
 Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings, appropriations chairman, said the omission of the money in the budget passed by this year's legislature was the result of a situation he has objected to for some time — annual session of the Unicameral.

 Marvel renewed his contention that if annual sessions are to stay, the lawmakers will either have to go to work on a full-time basis or the number of bills introduced each session will have to be cut back sharply to allow more time for major bills.
 If there is no agreement on how the money will be provided, one school official suggested someone might take it upon himself to force one.
 "If you don't do something about it, someone is going to sue the state," Don Stroh, Millard superintendent, told the education committee.
Court Won't Face Death Issue
 It looks as if the Nebraska Supreme Court won't be ruling on the constitutionality of the state's 1973 death penalty law until after the U.S. Supreme Court completes its review of the national capital punishment issue.
 The nation's high court in 1972 struck down all state death penalty laws and has agreed to take a look at the laws passed since then.
 There are not four men on death row in Nebraska, each affording the State Supreme Court an opportunity to take its own look at the 1973 law.

 Under that law, cases are automatically appealed once a death penalty is imposed.
 The first time a death penalty law was used was last August when the Douglas County District Court sentenced Rodney Seward of Omaha to death in the electric chair.
 But last week was the final week of oral arguments before the Nebraska Supreme Court until the fall term begins in September and the State's briefs in support of the law were not filed in time to get the case on the docket.
 The U.S. Supreme Court, meanwhile, has promised it would act as soon as possible on the issue.
 In other Nebraska Supreme Court action, the seven judges ruled in separate cases city eminent domain powers are superior to county zoning powers and that condemnations may proceed nearly unchecked as long as a valid public purpose is involved.
 In so ruling, the high court rejected an attempt by Seward County to block plans for a new Seward airport using county zoning powers.
 And, the high court reversed a lower court decision that blocked attempts by the Millard School District from taking 40 acres of Boys Town land as the site for a new high school.

 The court noted when it comes to airports, the state has been trying to promote aviation.
 Seward County should not be able to thwart this state objective through the medium of its zoning authority, which is derived from the state itself, the court said.
Horses Exempted From Taxes
 York County attorney Michael Murphy wanted to know if snowmobiles and golf carts were exempted from property taxes as household goods and personal effects.
 The State Justice Department said that was an interesting question, but the whole issue of exempted items was in need of review in view of conflicting opinions from the justice department and the State Revenue Department over the years.
 Yes, said Ralph Gillan, assistant attorney general, snowmobiles and golf carts are personal property and as such are exempt from property taxes.

And, Gillan said, so are horses, as long as they are used for personal pleasure and recreational purposes.
 The attorney said he looked at the question from the standpoint of other animals not used for making money, such as dogs and cats. He said generally one could exclude dogs and cats because they are literally part of the household.
 However, he said some dogs and cats are not allowed in the house.
 "To get into such distinctions" as to whether an animal lives in the house or outside "would, in our opinion, be chaotic," Gillan said.
 "We therefore believe that horses, or any other types of animals kept as pets or for recreational purposes by the owner and his family, should be classified as personal effects and granted the exemption," he said.
 The justice department also took another look at other recreation and hobby equipment.
 As a result, it reversed a 1967 decision deciding that cameras, guns, fishing equipment, hunting equipment, etc. were taxable.
 Motorboats, Gillan said, remain taxable. But rowing canoes, rowboats and other boats not powered by motors.

Chamber offers model small claims act

Although most business people strongly adhere to the maxim, "the customer is always right," there are still times when a consumer feels he's getting the run around. With literally millions of products and businesses, the odds favor its happening occasionally.
 Businessmen are trying hard today to see that it doesn't. After all, it's in the businessman's own self interest to keep his customers happy.
 Nevertheless, snafus do occur. People make mistakes. And some products emerge with bugs in them, despite rigorous quality control systems.
 But I think most people understand that problems will come up. What they want is not perfection, but simply a prompt correction when things go wrong.
 How can you help yourself when you have a problem with a product or service? The first and most obvious step is to complain to the company that provided it.
 If the company is a small, local firm, then chances are that you can go straight to the top without much difficulty.
 Big corporations are another kettle of fish. You may not even know where the "top" is located, much less which official to contact. Therefore, I think it's important, especially for big companies, to have a responsible consumer complaint handling mechanism. It should be easy for the customer to find out who to write or telephone. And response to complaints should be courteous, prompt and individual. Many of the best companies today do have such systems.
 Sometimes, though, there are still honest differences of opinion between the company and the customer. And in such cases, it's a good idea to have available an impartial third party to mediate disputes, for the benefit of both the customer and the company.
 Several industries are establishing industry-wide complaint mediation systems operated by their trade association. In many communities, the Better Business Bureau or the local Chamber of Commerce will try to mediate disputes between companies and individuals.
 Normally, mediation systems involve the convening of a volunteer panel of experts who meet on an established schedule to consider complaints. The panel is authorized to call in additional technical experts, if necessary. The mediators start by trying to get the parties involved to resolve their differences through mutual discussion. If this fails, the panel considers the case in detail and recommends a solution to both the company and the consumer. Either party is free to reject the recommendation.

 But suppose these mechanisms don't exist or don't work to your satisfaction. What then? I say go to court. It can be the most accessible, quickest, and most decisive remedy.
 The National Chamber has drawn up a Model Small Claims Court Act for use by state legislatures in places where these courts either do not exist or do not measure up. We also have information on successful company complaint-handling mechanisms, and on mediation and arbitration programs. For more information, write Director, Consumer Affairs, Chamber of Commerce of the United States, 1615 H. Street, N.W., Washington 20007. Small claims courts have been established in many parts of the country to provide an informal, inexpensive means of resolving minor legal disputes. It was — and is — a good idea in theory. But they haven't always worked well in practice.
 To be effective, small claims courts must offer easy access to all citizens, be open evenings and Saturdays, establish procedures to insure that judgments are carried out, and handle cases promptly — preferably within a month of filing. And they should take pains to see that an inexperienced consumer is not placed at a disadvantage by trying to represent himself against more sophisticated adversaries.

OBSERVATIONS

Senate should pass rule

The U.S. Senate is expected to vote soon on a proposal which would change its floor procedure and, we think, result in a more orderly handling of legislation.
 The "germaneness rule" would require that amendments offered by senators be relevant to the legislation being considered.
 Such a limitation now applies only to appropriation bills and in some cases to measures on which debate has been limited.
 As things stand now, there is nothing to prevent a senator from tacking an amendment providing for a pet project onto a bill which deals with an entirely different subject.
 Under the pending proposal the Senate could ban irrelevant amendments to legislation under discussion. The Senate Rules Committee has already approved the proposal.
 Opponents view the proposal as "gag rule," which would restrict debate and prevent consideration of timely issues.
 The State of Nebraska has a strict rule which limits legislative bills to one subject. The topic can be broad, but it prevents, for example, tacking an amendment dealing with state parks onto a banking bill.
 Odds are that Senate won't pass the limitation proposal. It would end a tradition and do away with a senatorial prerogative. But the idea is a good one and should be approved. Good legislation shouldn't be used as a vehicle for whatever pet projects senators want to push through. The limitation would result in more orderly handling of legislation, and would make it easier for the public to keep tabs on legislative action. — Jim Strayer.

Agriculture still 'favorite whipping boy'

If retail food price increases for 1976 are held to two to five per cent above last year as forecast by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, then that achievement will just have to be attributed to the productivity of U.S. Farmers and to no one else. The true story must be told again and again.
 For the outlook currently is for record crops of feed grains and wheat, a big carryover of soybeans, and increased supplies of beef and pork and economic forecasts are predicting lower farm commodity prices generally.
 Currently the farmer's share of the U.S. consumer food dollar is about 40 cents, approximately what it was in the period between 1965 and 1972. In 1973, it hit 46 cents, dropped back to 43 cents in 1974 and 42 cents last year. Labor and transportation are taking up most of the slack.
 When the major unions negotiate new contracts as is happening this year, all production costs advance. When the Teamsters negotiate a $10,000 a year wage increase as happened this spring, a sizable share of that has to be reflected in the cost of transporting agricultural products. When the rubber unions go for huge cost of living wage settlements, then those settlements must be reflected in car, truck and tractor tire prices.

 According to government figures, the cost of farm machinery in March was 17 per cent above the previous March. Overall, farm production costs as figured in March were eight per cent higher than in March 1975. With the price of wheat, feed grains, soybeans, slaughter cattle and hogs generally at or below year ago levels, it becomes obvious that the farm and ranch economy is bearing the burden for the continued spiral of inflation.
 During April, 8 per cent jump in the nation's wholesale price index made headlines throughout the nation and the Labor Department placed most of the blame on farm and food prices. Cattle prices have already lost most of the $10 per cwt. increase they took in a 30-day period and are back to bare cost of production levels or below.
 Consumers know from personal experience that when the price of hospital and medical services, automobiles, taxes, insurance, clothing, transportation, education, and virtually all goods and services increase, they never go down. But somehow, because these costs are absorbed fewer times a year, the complaints about them are less concentrated and vocal.

 But the housewife shopping at the supermarket two or three times each week is acutely aware of this focal point of the family budget. Most consumers in America today are far removed from the original source in the food chain, even to the point of not understanding that farm prices fluctuate according to supply and demand rather than being priced at an inflexible figure like manufactured goods. Somehow the message seldom gets across that the farmer's share of the food dollar has been shrinking while the costs of food transportation, packaging, labor, and marketing have been inexorably rising.
 Inflation is the major culprit in the whole picture. The federal government cannot run $50 billion annual deficits without constantly fueling the inflationary spiral. But what is so obviously unfair is that the agricultural sector which has done the best job of dampening that spiral by consistently improving its productivity, gets limited credit when the inflation news is good and becomes the favorite whipping boy when the news is bad. Somehow the true story must be told to consumers in language they will understand. — M. M. Van Kirk, Nebraska Farm Bureau.

YOU AND YOUR CAR

By the Automotive Information Council

The "axle dancer" and "tapping on the pavement" are not latter day versions of the "Charleston" or the "bunny hop" but a lot of us are doing them. Both are symptoms of worn shock absorbers.
 Tire tapping is a malfunction that takes tread off your tire on every bounce. That turkey trotting axle does strange things to the rear — like a skid that is totally unexpected.
 The Automotive Information Council notes that there are several ways to know when you need new shocks. The most obvious is an oil leak. A front end dip and rock when you come to a stop is another. Shocks can be checked when the car is idle. Bounce the rear and the front with your two hands. Do it as hard as you can. If the car bounces more than twice, chances are you are prospect for fresh shocks.
 The experts say that shock absorbers should be evaluated about every 20,000 to 25,000 miles. Even a brand new automobile might need shock replacements if the vehicle is called upon to perform a service beyond its normal operation.
 New car manufacturers recommend heavy duty shocks if your car is going to be used to pull a trailer. Too much weight drags the rear end down and that can do strange things to the balance of your automobile. Make sure you are figuring the weight of a trailer load correct. For example, a brand new auto hitch is really a 400 pound load! If the hitch is four feet back from the rear axle, another thing to check. Shock mountings can wear out and the whole shock should be replaced.
 Importantly, worn shock absorbers can cost you maintenance money. They are rough on tires and can throw your car out of balance, just like overloading on the rear end.
 An overloaded car may need springs as well as shocks. They can be purchased in combination. It's called a spring overload unit. If on occasion the car is going to be overloaded, you might want to consider an air adjustable unit.
 Always replace shock absorbers in pairs. Shocks, of course, can be purchased and installed in one repair shop or service center. Or you can do it yourself. It isn't rated as one of the tougher automotive replacement jobs.
 If you have a specific suspension problem, write to the Automotive Information Council, 28333 Telegraph Road, Southfield, Michigan 48076.

'Consumer Needs to Be More Aware of Conserving Energy'

Using cryogenics — the science of the supercold — petroleum companies are hoping to be able to preserve and store more natural gases in the future to thwart the present energy crunch, said Mrs. Joan Lovell, consumer consultant for Peoples Natural Gas.

Speaking at Wayne Kiwanis Club meeting Monday, Mrs. Lovell pointed out that gas companies have been converting natural gas into a liquid for easy storage once the fuel is freed from the earth. Scientists convert the gas into a liquid by lowering the temperature of the gas to a minus 260 degrees.

Mrs. Lovell noted this is one way Peoples Natural Gas is able to save the consumer further expense. But, she added, the consumer can help himself by not wasting gas.

"The average consumer doesn't worry about a shortage until it hits him," she said, adding that a person should be conscious of conservation before he is forced to cut down.

Studies today show that natural gas can be used to help reduce pollution caused by soot and smoke that industries create in their manufacturing processes. Already some companies have installed burners in their smoke stacks to burn away the soot and smoke at a temperature of 1,100 degrees.

Natural gas can clean polluted air because it is a clean burning gas.

"The problem, she pointed out, is that there isn't enough gas on hand to continue the program nationwide. Because of the federal government's regulation of the price of natural gas at the well head, many petroleum companies feel that the selling price of gas won't cover the cost of drilling new wells.

If the government would deregulate the price of gas at the well head, there would be enough competition price-wise for companies to look for new wells, she said.

During the meeting, club president Dan Sherry announced that the annual club picnic would be Monday, June 28, at 7 p.m. at Bressler Park.

Laurel Youth Suffers Cut In Accident

A Laurel youth was slightly injured at about 6:20 Tuesday night when a car in which he was a passenger was involved in a collision on Highway 57 adjacent to Carroll.

The Wayne County sheriff's department said Mike Martin, 15, of Laurel, suffered a cut on his right eyebrow in the mishap, which occurred at the intersection of Highway 57 and a county road bordering Carroll on the north.

Mrs. Esther Hansen, 60, of Carroll was northbound on the highway and attempted to make a left turn onto the county road, when her car was struck by an auto driven by Garth Paulsen, 17, of Laurel.

Paulsen was southbound on the highway and tried to stop when Mrs. Hansen turned in front of him, but was unable to avoid the collision. The Hansen car sustained damage to the right front end and the Paulsen auto received extensive front end damage.

DEMONSTRATING how liquid nitrogen can freeze a tennis ball, Mrs. Lovell dips the ball into a beaker filled with the gas. After several seconds in the beaker, the ball becomes hard as a rock.

Pigs don't like to be overcrowded in confinement... That is the conclusion that Bob Fritschen, University of Nebraska District Swine Specialist, reported at the Midwest Section, American Society of Animal Science meeting in Ames, Ia., June 3.

Fritschen: Overcrowding Cuts Gains For Swine

He reported that when 13 vs. 10 pigs were penned, the pigs with 13 pigs posted slower gain and poorer feed efficiency. In addition, tail biting occurred among 50 per cent of those in the 10-pig groups and among 36 per cent of the pigs in the 13-pig groups. In another related study he reported that during the summer, in a building with a center east-west alley, that pigs on the north side of the building gained faster and more efficiently than those on the south side. Fritschen stated that the difference was due to the ventilation air on the north side being somewhat cooler than the air entering the ventilation inlets on the south side. He suggested that in the case of buildings which are mechanically ventilated, bringing in as much air as possible from out of the shade on the north side of the building should keep the building cooler, resulting in improved pig performance.

You're Tops 4H Club Members

Modern Misses, 4H Club met May 25 in the home of Jodi Flier with 14 members and 11 mothers present. Pal Wert was the club's guest and showed the members how to take care of their skin and hair. While helping each member, she distributed information and answered questions. She also gave each person a nail file and a bar of PH balanced soap. Jodi gave a demonstration on how to make slush. Afterwards lunch was served by Mrs. Flier. The next meeting will be held in the home of Dawn Carstens of June 8. News reporter, Judy Bauermeister.

Wayne Peppy Pals On May 29, members of the Wayne Peppy Pals 4H Club each took three decorations out to Laporte Cemetery. Red, white and blue ribbons were placed around the stones, small flags at the entrance and the graves were decorated by the club.

All eight members and their families of the Wayne Peppy Pals 4H Club spent the weekend of June 4, 5 and 6 camping at Ponca State Park. Matt Baier and Rod Porter, who are enrolled in Bachelor Bob cooking, cooked the meals for the Richard Baier and Robert Porter families. Mr. Porter was chief campfire builder.

The Baiers led the group on a nature hike. After the hike, the group roasted wieners and marshmallows. Saturday began with a visit by Donley Bourn, park superintendent, to answer questions about the club's wildlife conservation project. Dick Ruhnquist led the group on a fossil hunt. After lunch and a short rest, Hilbert Johns guided 15 adults and children down the road for a horseback ride over the trails. After supper, Howard Peters directed a softball game, which ended with a score of 11-11. Sunday morning had its excitement when Robert Dolata killed a baby rattlesnake. Rodney Porter, news reporter.

Extension Economist Says Higher Farm Income Mean Less Property Tax Concern

Despite the fact that taxes on farm real estate in Nebraska have continued to increase steadily, farmers and ranchers have become relatively less concerned over "property tax relief," because of higher farm incomes since 1972.

That's the thesis of University of Nebraska Extension economist Dr. Everett E. Peterson, who believes resistance to further increases in property taxes is greatest in Lincoln and Omaha.

"This should improve the chances for enactment of a more equitable method of financing public schools in 1977 or 1978," Peterson commented. He pointed out that "property taxes have risen in the past two years because of inflation and failure of efforts to increase state aid to elementary and secondary schools."

Nationally, in 1973-74, the latest period for which figures are available, Nebraska ranked 14th from the highest in property taxes per capita, 20th in per capita expenditure for local schools and 16th as to personal income per capita, according to

Peterson. Writing in the NU agricultural economics department publication, "Cornhusker Economics," he said "only Massachusetts and New Hampshire provided a smaller percentage of state support for schools than did Nebraska."

Nebraska property owners paid nearly $400 million in property taxes in 1973-74, and almost two-thirds of this total went to school districts, he said. He reminded that all property taxes go to local governments, with funds from this revenue source prohibited for state government use since 1966.

Farm real estate taxes amounted to $110 million in 1974, some $38 million more than in 1967 when several major tax reform measures were enacted by the Legislature. Total farm real estate taxes increased 52 per cent from 1967 to 1974, with the average tax per acre rising by 56 per cent on about the same amount of land. During the period, property taxes rose faster than land values. With a sharp increase in gross and net income in 1973-74, real estate taxes declined as a per cent of farm income compared with selected years 1967 and 1970.

In comparison to neighboring states Missouri, Kansas and Iowa, farm real estate taxes per acre rose faster in Nebraska from 1970 to 1973. Missouri "caught up" with Nebraska in this comparison in 1973, Peterson said.

Since 1967, Nebraska has ranked highest in relation to the same three adjacent states in terms of taxes per $100 of full value of farm real estate. In Nebraska, the taxes per $100 were $1.22 in 1967, rising to $1.59 in 1974. Iowa kept pace with Nebraska in 1973 and 1974, while property taxes declined relative to land values in Missouri and Kansas.

Collinwood Coyotes

The meeting of the Collinwood Coyotes 4H Club was held in the home of Dawn and David Burcham May 20 at 8 p.m. The meeting was called to order by Brad Stewart. Dawn Burcham called the roll with 10 answering.

The group talked about getting 4H fair signs done and about the judging contest at the Lori Lee Farms. Arrangements were made for painting the baskets on main street in Allen. Kirt Hansen led the 4H pledge and made a motion to adjourn the meeting. Steve Stewart seconded the motion. Brad Stewart adjourned the meeting.

Next meeting will be held in the home of Kirk and Tania Hansen on June 9 at 8 p.m. Tania Hansen, news reporter.

Coyotes May Find Experiment in Bad Taste

By RANDY GORDON

Agricultural Communications University of Nebraska-Lincoln Although not all the results are in yet, research of a technique designed to teach coyotes to avoid some of their favorite dishes appears to offer promising possibilities, according to Dr. Philip Gipson, extension wildlife specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The technique, called taste aversion conditioning, has been tested by injecting the chemical lithium chloride into sheep carcasses, which causes coyotes and other predators to vomit after eating some of the tainted flesh.

Researchers hope the technique, pioneered by Dr. John Garcia, behavioral psychologist at UCLA, can be used as a form of predator control by making coyotes avoid domestic livestock and poultry.

Since lithium chloride is tasteless, Dr. Gipson said, coyotes consuming tainted carcasses associate their illness with the food containing the chemical.

"It's similar to a child eating too many hot dogs," he said. "If he gets sick on them, he won't touch one for a long time."

Although most research to date has focused on reducing sheep losses, the technique may lend itself well to turkey production in Nebraska, where there are large numbers of birds in small enclosures, Dr. Gipson said. There also is potential for reducing losses of calves and hogs, he added.

He said at least one local turkey producer is interested in university representatives test

While many people fear nuclear power plants, such plants have been operating safely in the U.S. and in other nations for 20 years. No member of the public has ever been killed or injured as a result of a nuclear related accident.

ing aversive conditioning as a damage control technique on his farm. One of Dr. Gipson's graduate students, Bill Andelt, is completing his master of sciences thesis research on troublesome coyotes near the farm.

"It looks like we could put turkey carcasses around the pen, after injecting them with lithium chloride in water solution," he said. "As coyotes approached the turkey pens, they would find the carcasses, feed on them, and they may never enter the pens."

Another method would outfit the turkeys with packages containing lithium chloride. Coyotes then would swallow some of the chemical when attempting to kill the birds.

"The package makes the coyotes sick and teaches them not to kill turkeys," Dr. Gipson said.

For the conditioning program to be effective, it may be necessary for treated animals to be confined to a relatively small area so that predators can learn by experience not to eat livestock and poultry, he said.

"The coyotes are going to have to come into a small area to feed," he said. "If you have sheep or cattle on the open range which are constantly moving, they would often encounter new coyotes that had not been conditioned to avoid livestock. If you've conditioned a group of coyotes that have a home range in one location and the livestock move to places where there are new coyotes, then you've got the problem all over again."

Dr. Gipson said one benefit of the non-lethal form of predator control is that it may be more acceptable to environmentalists. Apparently, he said, there are no long-term detrimental effects with lithium chloride as long as it is used in relatively small amounts. He said even fairly large doses of the chemical do not seem to kill coyotes.

But he said criticism of the technique has been voiced by some ranchers and wildlife researchers, who think the chemical approach may only be teaching coyotes to leave dead sheep alone with no important reduction in killing of live sheep.

"We know that coyotes are scavengers and that dead livestock may be an important part of their diets," Dr. Gipson said. "If we should teach them to avoid dead carcasses but not to

Butz Reports Rural Areas Progressing

Since 1970, nonmetropolitan America has made substantial progress in employment, income, housing and population retention and growth, according to a new report to Congress from the Secretary of Agriculture.

The report states that progress is less apparent for many rural community services and facilities. Based on rising crime rates, the absence of adequate public transportation, and a continuing shortage of health professionals in rural areas, the report highlights these as three areas of community service especially needing improvement.

The report, "Rural Development Goals — Third Annual Report of the Secretary of Agriculture to the Congress," is required annually under the Rural Development Act of 1972.

The report also outlines federal program activities in rural areas during fiscal 1975 and discusses the rural development leadership and coordination work of the Department's Rural Development Service. Single copies of the report are available from Information Staff Rural Development Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

FORAGE MANAGEMENT
No single system of forage management is best for all farms because of differences in herd size, labor availability, topography, mechanization, and land values.

The following descriptions of forage management systems will help you determine which would be best for your operation.

CONVENTIONAL GRAZING
In conventional grazing, cattle are permitted to graze an entire pasture without restriction. It's easy to manage and may be the only way to utilize creek pastures or rough hill land. Conventional grazing returns the least in milk or feed per acre, but it is sometimes the most practical way of grazing herds on non-irrigable land.

ROTATION GRAZING
Rotation grazing is more productive than conventional grazing, but requires cross-fencing or providing several small pastures that will each furnish a few days or weeks grazing. It is the most practical way to handle 50 or more cows.

STRIP GRAZING
This most intensified method of rotation grazing requires cross-fencing pastures into long narrow strips and provides green pastures each day. Strip grazing provides maximum yields of milk and pasture per acre, but it also means a greater fencing-and-daily-labor requirement than other grazing systems.

GREEN-CHOP FEEDING
Green-chop feeding involves chopping or mowing pasture forage and hauling it directly to the cows for feed in a bunk or self-feeding wagon.

The yield per acre of either milk or green forage from perennial pastures may not be any higher with this system than with strip grazing perennial grasses. But it is a much better way to use tall-growing annual crops such as oats, sudan and hybrid forage sorghums.

You become more dependent on equipment and good weather with this system. It is best for large herds where pasture is often in short supply or at some distance from the barn. In most cases, green-chopping is not practical for herds of less than 30 to 40 cows.

STORED FEED
Stored feeding is nothing more than following the same feeding program in summer as during the winter.

Year-around use of feeding equipment and feed storages reduces the cost of these facilities and can justify greater mechanization.

Comparable levels of milk production should be obtained under all these systems. The big difference is in yield of milk per acre, which favors strip grazing, green-chopped feeding and stored feeding.

Police Blotter

A car operated by Margaret Korn, rural Wayne, sustained minor damage to the left front fender about 1:15 p.m. Saturday when her car struck a St. Bernard chasing a rabbit on the 800 block of Pine Heights. Apparently not hurt, the dog ran off.

About 8 a.m. Saturday, Lavern
 Osterdorf, 421 W. Third, reported that a vehicle had driven across her lawn and into her garden.

Sound is a form of energy that begins when something vibrates. The vibrations then spread through the air as waves which eventually reach the ear-drums.

Time Limit Changed To Appeal Payment

People who disagree with a decision on their social security or supplemental security income (SSI) claim now have 60 days to request a reconsideration, according to Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk.

The time limit was changed as a result of a recent amendment to the law, Branch said.

Formerly, SSI claimants had only 30 days to request a reconsideration, while there was a six-month time limit for asking for review of a decision on a social security retirement disability, survivors, or Medicare claim.

A reconsideration is usually the first step in the appeals process available to social security claimants.

Claimants are notified in writing of any decision that affects their application, eligibility, or payment amount," Branch said. "They will have 60 days from the time they get that initial decision to ask for a reconsideration. The date of receipt is printed on the five days after the notice is mailed unless you can show that you did not get it until later, or not at all."

People can file a request for a reconsideration at any social security office. The request must be in writing—in a letter or on a form available at any social security office.

People who disagree with the reconsideration decision may ask for a hearing before a presiding officer of the Bureau of Hearings and Appeals of the Social Security Administration.

"Your request for a hearing must be filed within 60 days after you receive notice of the reconsideration decision," Branch said. People who disagree with the presiding officer's decision may ask for a review by the Appeals Council.

"The notice you receive of the hearing decision will tell you how much time you have to ask for an Appeals Council review," Branch said.

The Appeals Council decides whether it will review a hearing decision. "If you disagree with the Appeals Council decision, you may bring suit in a Federal district court," Branch said.

People may be represented by a qualified person of their choice at any stage in the claims or appeals process. "If you have any questions about the decision," Branch said, "get in touch with your social security office. The people there will be glad to help you in any way they can."

The Social Security Administration is an agency of the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.
