Bicentennial Singers Wanted

The Wayne Ministerial Association will sponsor an ecumenical Bicentennial worship service in Wayne on the Fourth of July and an all-city choir is being organized for the all-city choir. The services will begin at 7:30 p.m. July 4 at the Willow Bowl on the Wayne State College campus. Rehearsals for the choir are being conducted Tuesday evenings beginning at 7:30 at the Wayne United Presbyterian Church. Jerry Glaser, director of music for the church and leader for the all-city choir, said anyone wishing to sing with the ecumenical choir is invited to attend the rehearsals. The Wayne Bicentennial committee met Thursday night to discuss plans for the celebration which will begin Friday night, July 2, and extend through July 5.

Chairman Mrs. Roberta Welle displayed a certificate of commendation from President Gerald Ford to Wayne for its efforts as a Bicentennial community. She said it will be displayed permanently in the Wayne County museum now being prepared. A drawing of the Bicentennial cake which will be cut following the July 4th service was also seen. See BICENTENNIAL, page 5

Jon Meierhenry Is Triple Winner In Judging

Wayne County 4-H'ers had an opportunity last week to polish their livestock judging skills during contests sponsored by the Teens Supreme junior leaders club. The Teens Supreme were entirely responsible for organizing the judging events and awarding trophies. Don Kubik was contest judge for the dairy contest at the John Anderson farm. Judy Bauermeister was junior division winner and Wes Sprouls received the senior trophy. Jon Meierhenry received the junior trophy and Hugh Jaeger the senior trophy in beef competition. Area beef specialist Vernon Krause was judge for the contest at the Gerry Janke farm. Retired extension specialist Wolf Tolman judged the sheep contest at the Roy Gramlich farm, placing Jon Meierhenry first in the junior division and Blaine Nelson first in the senior division. Meierhenry added a third trophy to his string, as the champion judge in the swine contest. Dwight Anderson received the senior award—Robert Hansen was the swine contest official. District judging competition is scheduled for June 30.

Arson Suspected in Fire At Dude Ranch Drive-In

Arson is suspected as a possible cause in a fire responsible for over $40,000 in damages at the Dude Ranch Drive-In Theater in Wayne early Friday morning. Firemen answered the call about 3:30 Friday morning and extinguished a fire in a supply room in the building which also houses the movie projectors and concession area.

After the fire was out, assistant fire chief Dean Bruggeman discovered that a lock on the east door to the wooden building had been forced. Following investigation by deputy state fire marshal Verlin Hansen, Wayne fire chief Dick Korn reported that arson is suspected because there was no electrical wiring or other indication of accidental ignition at the point where the fire began, and because of the forced lock. The theater was broken into June 3, according to the Wayne County Sheriff's department, also involved in investigating the fire. Entry was gained then by forcing a door on the west side of the building. Cigarettes, candy and other concessions, and some hand tools were reported missing in that incident, and a stereo turntable was destroyed.

but would have a sound technician check the sound Wednesday. March said he hopes to have the theater in operation by Friday or Saturday but that will depend on the extent of damages. Korn estimated damage to the building at $12,000 and valued contents lost in the fire at $30,000.

Guardsmen Will Strike Up Band

Nebraska National Guard bandmen will perform Tuesday night at Ramsey Theatre on the Wayne State College campus, beginning at 7:30. The musicians, members of the 43rd Army Band, a component of the Nebraska National Guard, will be making the Wayne appearance as part of a statewide tour. The band can trace its lineage back to 1894. The Lincoln-based Guard unit received its present designation in 1947 during a reorganization of the Nebraska National Guard. A large portion of the band members are professional musicians or music educators and although a military organization, the band's repertoire includes a variety of tunes including modern and popular songs as well as traditional music and choral arrangements.

Plans Are Completed for Highway 35 Improvement

The Nebraska Department of Roads has completed the draft planning study report on the proposed improvement of a segment of Nebraska Highway 35 (Seventh St.) in Wayne, beginning about one-third of a mile east of the west corporate limits and extending east about a mile. Copies of the report are available for inspection at the DOR's district office at 408 North 13th St. in Norfolk, and are also available by writing to the Public Hearing Officer, Nebraska Department of Roads, Box 94759 Lincoln, 68509. Comments about the report may be submitted to the Public Hearing Officer until July 12. Following that date the comments will be reviewed and the final planning study report will be prepared.

Laurel Will Build School

It was the third try and the margin was narrow but voters in the Laurel Concord school district Thursday approved an $850,000 bond issue to finance construction of a new elementary school and gymnasium.

According to Cedar County election officials, the issue carried 631 494, a 27 vote margin. Statistics weren't available regarding total number of voters.

Lions Vote $5,000 for Park

The Wayne Lions Club began working in 1965 to convert a trash dump east of their community into a camping park, and they haven't quit working on the project yet. The Lions Club board of directors at their last meeting agreed a loan of up to $5,000 to install restroom facilities at the park. When the project began 11 years ago, the plot, located just west of the municipal airport site, was a dump. Today, grass and young trees greet visitors who stop there to use the picnic shelter, two fire places and eight camper hookups. Converting the ground into a park has been largely a joint City of Wayne-Lions Club effort. A trash pit there was filled in 1965, with the Lions paying for the dirt and the city taking care of the hauling. The city also furnished water main line to extend the city water system to the park, with the Lions paying labor costs.

In 1966, the Lions had the ground plowed, seeded grass, and planted 400 trees. The total number of trees has since grown to over 100, plus replacement of earlier planting which died. The bell of young trees around the park will provide shade and a wind break when full grown. The Lions received assistance on the free planting project. Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts from Wayne helped plant shrubbery in the park, and have donated trees. Another city-Lions joint effort provided a pole-type shelter for picnickers, with the city supplying the materials and Lions providing labor and paint. The Lions installed two fire places and playground equipment in 1974. The city put in security lights for the area and pays the tab for power. An access road from the airport entrance was also gravelled by the Lions, who maintain the road.

Lions Club members periodically perform groundskeeping chores at the park, and also credit airport manager Al Robinson with mowing. The most recent addition to facilities was a building installed by the city to serve both the park and airport. The city paid $1,800 toward the price of the tank with Lions costs in excess of that amount, not yet determined. Campers at the park can use any of the eight electrical hook ups free of charge. Water is available and the new septic tank made possible a dumping station where campers can drain their own tanks. The Lions hope to complete accommodations for campers by building restroom facilities at the site. That building will be retained, according to school superintendent Jim Lokquist, and will be used as a multi-purpose room. Vocal music activities will be conducted on the stage in the present gym, and the lunch room located in the building will probably be expanded. A new elementary school will have several regular classrooms separated by moveable sound-proof partitions, and a library, and arts and science room, and a special education room. Annual mill levy to retire the bond will be 7.25 mills. That will amount of about $2.53 in property taxes each year for $1,000 of actual property value.

DEPUTY STATE fire marshal Verlin Hansen of Osmond looks through the debris as he investigates the fire which destroyed a supply room at the Dude Ranch Drive-In Theater in Wayne early Friday morning. Arson is suspected as a possible cause.

Decision Puts Cap on Bottle Shop

A Wayne businessman announced Friday that he will be closing the doors to his enterprise and will be leaving Wayne. Doug Finn, owner of the Bottle Shop located at 421 Main St., said he received notification from the State Liquor Control Commission that his application for a Class C liquor license had been denied. Because of that decision, Finn said, he will not continue in the package liquor business, and will leave Wayne. Finn approached the city council at their meeting May 11 requesting their recommendation that he be granted the license, but the body voted to recommend against the recommendation.

Council members John Vakoc and Ted Bahe cast votes against the resolution to return a negative recommendation. Vernon Russell, Jimmie Thomas, Leo Hansen and Ivan Beeks voted in favor of recommending to the liquor commission that Finn not be given the license. Carolyn Filter and Darrel Fuellebier were not present for the vote. A majority of the entire council is needed to return a recommendation on license applications. Without a clear majority, mayor Freeman Decker's vote to recommend against the license was deciding. "Finn had told the council he needs the Class C license, which would have allowed him to add on sale retailing, in order to remain competitive. Voters in Wayne last fall approved a measure to allow the city to issue Class C license. Previous to that action, only establishments with bottle club licenses could sell liquor by the drink, and holders of bottle club licenses are prohibited from selling package liquor. Passage of the Class C issue essentially meant that bars in town can sell all types of liquor for consumption either on or off the premises. The Bottle Shop has been operated as a package liquor outlet only. Finn was in the process of remodeling the business so he could operate it as a bar as well as a package store. Most bar owners in town had already applied for and received Class C licenses and Finn said the sudden proliferation of off-sale outlets made it impossible for him to continue in business without on sale privileges. The Bottle Shop is located in a commercial zone. During the hearing for the application, one of the reasons given for the negative vote was that persons living in adjacent residential areas had said they were opposed to having a bar located that close to their homes.

Councilman Bahe did not let the issue die, however. At the next meeting, he introduced a motion which gave the council a chance to reconsider. Although the city's official recommendation to the liquor commission could not be changed, Bahe's motion directed city administrator Fred Krieger to appear at the liquor commission hearing on June 3 to testify that the city favored granting the license. Russell, Hansen and Filter voted against the motion. Bahe, Fuellebier, Vakoc and Beeks voted in favor. Thomas was absent. That motion apparently carried little weight, however, as the results of the commission's See BOTTLE, page 5

Freys Keep Wheels Turning at Art Studio

CARLOS FREY operates the pipe-bender used to make the framework for the kick-operated pottery wheel which he designed and builds. Frey learned welding skills as a sculptor which helped him in building the equipment used to produce the wheel. A special feature of the kick-wheel is that it completely disassembles into a compact package for shipping.

Wheels began turning in earnest Thursday at the Mid-America Art studio in Wayne—pottery wheels that is. Carlos and Sherlan Frey, owners of the business, began the first of two 10-day pottery workshops they will be conducting this summer, and when students began producing their wheel-thrown pottery, it was on wheels made by Frey in a home-grown factory. Frey, who was with the Wayne State College art department for 10 years before opening the art studio at 7th and Logan Streets in Wayne, not only designed the wheels, but also designed and built the equipment which he uses to produce them. Pipe which forms the framework for the wheels is bent on a machine which Frey welded together in his garage. Pipe is bent around various forms, with a hand-operated hydraulic jack supplying the necessary force. Frey also built the forms in which the 30-inch, 180 pound concrete kick-wheels are cast. A turning lathe in his garage is used to machine the shafts which connect the wheel, rotated by foot action of the seated potter, to the wheel head, on which clay is placed and shaped into pottery while it rotates. The metal wheel heads are cast in Creighton but Frey also does machine work to finish them. The metal splash guard around the head might look familiar to some Northeast Nebraskans. It is simply a hog pan with the center cut out. Cutting is performed on another Frey-designed machine, made from a converted potter's wheel with electric motor drive. The wooden table top and seat for the Frey kick-wheel is produced on a wood router in the garage behind the Mid-America studio, using templates designed by Frey. The multi-talented artist explained that the various welding and carpentry skills needed to produce the manufacturing equipment are almost second-nature to him now. He was a sculptor major while pursuing bachelor and master of fine arts degrees at the University of Kansas. That requires working with a variety of materials such as metal, wood and stone. Frey said, and sculptors develop the skills needed to convert those raw materials into works of art. Frey has sold about 60 of his potter's wheels, shipping them as far as Pennsylvania and Hawaii. He plans to begin a monthly advertising campaign in September through a nationally distributed art trade magazine, and will have three assistants moving to Wayne to help with the production, and to assist with pottery classes. After receiving his bachelors degree, Frey returned to his home town of Liberal, Kans., where he established a portrait studio, and taught adult painting classes at night in surrounding communities. He designed a handy carrying case for artists supplies to accommodate his teaching travels, and recently contracted with a WSC graduate now living in Iowa, Lynn Peterson, to produce a limited number of which sold quickly. Frey is now considering licensing production of his design to a major art supply company. Another product is also shipped from Wayne under the auspices of Frey's Mid-America Art Studio. He designed a machine for blending clay into a useful potter's material. Handicapped workers at the Northeast Nebraska Opportunities Center were offered a chance to operate the machine and now two to four workers are employed blending clays from Missouri, Kentucky and Ohio for shipment to potters throughout the nation. Frey's activities aren't confined to production of art materials however. He taught pottery classes at his studio

O'Donnell Seeks Party Position

Allen O'Donnell of Wayne has announced that he will seek to unseat Tom Kelley of Omaha from his position as Nebraska's Democratic National Committee man when the party holds its convention in Kearney later this month. Kelley announced Thursday that he will seek reelection, according to the Associated Press. O'Donnell is chairman of the Democratic party in Wayne County and in the First Congressional District, and is a member of the state party's executive, finance and affirmative action committees. O'Donnell said he is concerned about the party's inability to elect Democrats to state and national offices. Hess Dyas, unsuccessful candidate for the party's nomination in May's primary election for the senate, and former state party leader, will head a committee to work for O'Donnell's candidacy.

Right to Life Members Encourage Senate Bid

Aaron Butler of Wayne announced Thursday that he will seek to file by petition as a candidate for senator in Nebraska's 17th legislative district, opposing incumbent Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City. Gil Fournier, also of Wayne, the only other candidate to oppose Murphy's reelection during the present campaign, announced earlier last week that he was withdrawing from the race. Butler will need the signatures of 350 qualified voters in the district in order to have his name placed on the November general election ballot. He must file by Aug. 24. Butler and Murphy, cousins, both ran for the Unicameral seat in 1968 but were defeated. Murphy was elected in 1972. Butler said he was asked to run for the office by members of the local Right to Life group, an organization opposed to abortion. A business instructor at Metro Community College in Kansas City, Butler also operates an education management consulting service there, but maintains his legal residence in Wayne, where his family lives. He was a Wayne State College faculty member from 1966-68. Butler, through his consulting service, is responsible for a study which says Wayne State College is the most efficiently administered of the four state colleges, accomplishing the most with the dollars it receives. The report also claims WSC is the most poorly financed of the four schools, on a per pupil basis. In a similar study, Butler analyzed six of the Big Eight schools (excluding Oklahoma and Oklahoma State), and concluded that the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has the second highest efficiency rating, and the second lowest level of support. He said the data was presented to fiscal analysts for the Unicameral Appropriations Committee, to the State College Board of Trustees, and to Gov. J. James Exon's office, and thinks it had some influence in increased funding for WSC and UNL.

OBSERVATIONS

Individuals important

Only a few weeks remain before the people of the United States will be celebrating their 200th anniversary as a nation and countless committees are working to make those final plans and take care of last-minute details.

Because of the commendable effort put forth by county and community organizations, there is no doubt that the several celebrations being planned for the local area will be successful.

But individuals should be making plans, too, about what special thing, they will do personally to observe the United States' 200th birthday. Independence and individual freedom are the foundation of the republic, and it seems only fitting that each person should do at least one thing, great or small, private or public, to individually observe the anniversary. — Jim Strayer.

Guest editorial 'Dangerous bill'

By Congressman Charles Thone

One of the most dangerous bills to come before Congress in the five and one half years I've been in Washington! That's my description of the bill called the Full Employment and Balanced Growth Act of 1976, sponsored by Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.) and Representative Augustus F. Hawkins (D., Calif.).

Rep. Hawkins has said the bill might cost $20.40 billion in federal monies per year. The sponsors "vastly understated" costs, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. The proposed legislation would cost an additional $50 billion a year in federal red ink spending, according to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

I am extremely concerned and alarmed over proposals for such wild, reckless spending of tax money that Uncle Sam doesn't have. Yet, this bill has in it threats against our American way of life even more dangerous than its profligate spending.

The bill proposes that the main economic decisions of the United States no longer be made by hundreds of thousands of businessmen and women acting independently, but that basic decisions be made by the federal government. Under the bill, the federal government would set annual and long-range goals for employment, production and purchasing power.

The federal government wouldn't confine itself merely to the overall economy but would be pressuring various types of industries. Senator Humphrey said the bill "provides a way for us to look at particular industries and sectors and see what kinds of objectives and policies we ought to establish in those sectors." Congress might decide that it would be good if one industry expanded and another shut down, or as Mr. Humphrey put it, "National economic goals are not just technical considerations for economists, but are broad choices that reflect the spirit and direction of society."

Senator Humphrey himself has described this bill as the "most consequential social legislation in 30 years. Representative Albert H. Quie (R., Minn.) said it would "put the federal government totally in control of all aspects of American life."

The bill would result in more snooping by the federal government into all aspects of business. In this regard, Senator Humphrey said, "We need better information if we hope to do an effective job of economic planning in this country. I think that the bill provides a sufficient mandate to gather all the information that will be needed. If it does not, then the bill should be strengthened to put more emphasis on information and analysis."

The bill proposes to create however many millions of WPA-type jobs that may be necessary to keep the unemployment rate under three per cent. The guarantee of relatively high-paying government jobs would ruin private enterprise. Everyone inclined to loaf, or slack off or give only a fraction of an effort would feel secure. If fired for incompetence, a person would be guaranteed a federal job!

Michael Wachter, a University of Pennsylvania economist, estimates that the bill would cause an inflation rate of 15 per cent per year. A Library of Congress study reports the bill would cause the inflation rate to surge back to the double digits.

Americans are loudly saying that they want less government — not more. Yet some of the Presidential candidates who are running against the Washington establishment have endorsed the Humphrey-Hawkins fiasco. And it appears that the skids are greased for its early passage in the U.S. House of Representatives. I'll do all I can to stop it.

No winners

A movement to improve the appeal of Wayne's business district is underway. Empty store buildings give a bad impression where business is concerned, but action taken by members of the city council will apparently result in one procedure from the business community.

Doug Finn, owner of the Bottle Shop, announced Friday that he will be going out of business and leaving Wayne.

Finn's decision came because the State Liquor Commission declined to grant him a Class C liquor license. The commission's decision apparently was due to the city council's negative recommendation regarding the license application.

Finn is the only such request turned down by the city since voters approved the Class C issue last fall. Other businesses are pleading their need for such a license to remain competitive in the liquor business received approval. Finn's did not.

As a result of that, one businessman will be uprooting himself to move his business to another community where, perhaps, opportunity is more equally distributed.

Wayne, instead of having a business which would have been remodeled both inside and outside, will now have a boarded-up building for visitors to view.

It's easy to see who the losers are in this case. Where are the winners? — Jim Strayer.

Did You Remember?

Hello, remember me? Some people call me Old Glory, others call me the Stars and Stripes. Also I have been referred to as the Star Spangled Banner. But what ever they call me, I am your flag, or as I proudly state, the flag of the United States of America. There is something that has been bothering me, so I thought I might talk it over with you. Because it is about you and me.

I remember some time ago, I think it was Memorial Day. People were lined up on both sides of the street to watch the parade. The town's high school band was in back of me and naturally I was leading the parade. When your daddy saw me coming along waving in the breeze, he immediately removed his hat and placed it against his left shoulder so that his hand was directly over his heart. Remember?

And you, I remember you. Standing there as straight as a soldier, you didn't have any hat but you were giving the right salute. They taught you in school to place your hand over your heart. Remember little sister — not to be outdone — she was saluting the same as you — was very proud as I came down your street. There were some soldiers home on leave and they were standing at attention giving the military salute. Ladies as well as men all paying me reverence that I deserved.

Now I may sound as if I am a little conceited. Well I am. I have a right to be. Because I represent the finest country in the world, the United States of America. More than one aggressive nation has tried to haul me down but they all felt the tury of this freedom loving country. You know, you had to go and defend me. And a mighty fine job you did too.

What happened? I'm still the same old flag. Oh I have a couple more stars added since you were a boy. A lot more blood has been shed since that Memorial Day so long ago. Dad is gone now. The old home town has a new look. The last time I came down your street I saw some of the old landmarks were gone, but in their place shined majestically in the sun were a number of new buildings, beautiful new homes. Yes sir, the old town sure has changed.

But now I don't feel as proud as I used to. When I come down your street, you just stand there with your hands in your pockets and give me a small glance and then look away. When I think of all the places I have been. Anzio, Guadalcanal, Korea. Who knows where I'll be next. Then I see the children running around and shouting. They don't seem to know who I am. I saw one man take his hat off and then look around. He didn't see anybody else with theirs off so he quickly put his back on.

Is it a sin to be patriotic any more? Have you forgotten what I stand for? Have you forgotten all the battlefields where men fought and died to keep this nation free? When you salute me, you are actually saluting them.

Take a look at the Memorial Honor Rolls sometime. Look at the names of those that never came back. Some of them were friends or relatives of yours. Probably went to the same school with some of them. That's what you are saluting. Not me.

Well it won't be long until I'll be coming down your street again. So when you see me, stand straight, place your hand over your heart and you'll really see me waving back. My salute to you. And I'll know that — You Remembered! — Leland Scott.

STRAYER THOUGHTS

By Jim Strayer

I found the results of Congressman Charles Thone's poll of First District voters interesting and in at least one case, a little frightening.

According to the poll, published in part in Thursday's issue of the Herald, 94 per cent of the respondents oppose the United States giving up control of the Panama Canal. I just hope that if keeping the big ditch boils down to a fight, those folks are willing to do it.

Credit Deserved

I may have forgotten to give some Wayne County youngsters credit they richly deserve. The Peppy Pats 4-H Club was responsible for decorating the La Porte Cemetery for Memorial Day. The Teens-Superstars took care of cleanup chores at the cemetery, and Gingham Girls were responsible for making the wreaths, which decorated graves. Members of the three clubs certainly deserve a hearty thanks for their efforts.

Edith Turns Author

"Homer" Smothers, who was editor of the Nebraska Democrat, later the Wayne News, has a book in print now. Smothers, now living in California, is the author of "How We Lived?!" the story of his 75 years of living, interlaced with the lives of three generations of his family.

World of Poetry is offering a $1776 grand prize in a Bicentennial Poetry contest. Rules and official entry forms are available by writing World of Poetry, 801 Portola Dr., Drawer 8, San Francisco, Cal. 94127. Entry deadline is July 31.

Busy Bicentennial

Looks like the next couple of weeks will be busy ones for the Herald staff. Allen, Wakefield and Wayne have Bicentennial celebrations coming up, and we will be busy putting the final touches on our Bicentennial souvenir edition, scheduled for distribution at the end of June.

Herald subscribers will be receiving the special edition in place of the regular June 28th paper, and additional copies will be available. The souvenir edition will contain features on various aspects of Wayne County's history, including schools, churches, early settlers, businesses, communities and individuals.

Another 'Sting'?

Sounds like there's another "sting" being tried in Northeast Nebraska. Dick Lindberg, copublisher of the West Point newspapers, had this report in his column.

We received a call Monday from an interesting swindle called the National Negro Press. The caller salesman asked our permission to repeat the ad we had run last year. We knew we had never heard of the outfit before, but when we asked what the ad said last year, he had the copy ready. He even told us the price was still the same we had paid last year — $95.

When we tried to call the caller into giving us a phone number to call back, he wiggled out with several excuses. There was no way we were going to trace him. "Let the buyer beware."

News of Note around Northeast Nebraska

THE CEDAR County Fair at Harting has received $1,000 from Ak-Sar-Bon, according to resident F. J. Pettz and secretary W. H. Pick Jr. The money will be matched with local funds and used for construction of a large exhibit hall. Work is expected to begin in August of 1978.

MADISON city council voted recently for a resolution agreeing to a request of the county commissioners to form a sewer district that would handle the new courthouse and some of the lots in the Northern Heights Addition of Madison. The commissioners had offered to pay for 50 per cent of the cost of the project.

ARCHBISHOP Daniel E. Sheehan, D.D. of Omaha, was in Ponca June 3 to dedicate a memorial that was constructed by the parishioners of St. Joseph's Church in memory of St. Paul's Church which was destroyed by fire and lightning in 1972. The memorial consists of a retaining wall 24 feet wide by eight feet high, constructed with colored bricks and blocks. Located on the concrete platform is a marble altar, and embedded in the retaining wall are two bronze plaques that state the history of the old St. Paul's Church and the names of all the priests who have served in the community.

CUMING County board of supervisors have approved a resolution to drop membership in the Region 5 Civil Defense organization. Commissioner Ed Straftman introduced the resolution which said the membership was being dropped because "federal monies are not coming as promised." The resolution also noted that Cuming County will have its own program based on "the needs of the county" with local control.

REHEARSALS are underway by the Randolph Community Theatre for their play, "A Feudin' Over Yonder," which will be presented at 8 p.m. on the evenings of June 18 and 19 at the West School gym. A cake and ice cream social is being planned after each performance.

TWO MAJOR fires in less than an hour in Pierce last week caused heavy damage to a home in Pierce and a two-story house on a farm northwest of town. A large two-story home of Mr. and Mrs. Darrel Wragge was badly damaged and a hog farrowing house on the Dick Zierke farm about three miles northwest of Pierce was destroyed. Zierke lost between 50 and 60 small pigs in the fire. Three smaller buildings were badly damaged.

MELAN VOTERS Tuesday approved a bond issue to construct a sewer system in that village. The vote was 32 in favor, 10 opposed. It is not known when work will begin on the project.

Out of Old

Nebraska

Although Archibald Jerrard Weaver did not live past his middle years, his influence on Nebraska politics was profound. Weaver's papers, now a part of the Nebraska State Historical Society's Manuscript Collections, reflect that influence. It is only through donors, such as the Weaver family, that the Historical Society can preserve for scholars the total scope of Nebraska's political history.

Archibald Weaver was born at Dundaff, Pennsylvania, on April 15, 1843. During his youth he worked as a farm hand until he entered Wyoming Seminary in Kingston, Pennsylvania, at the age of 17. He was graduated and subsequently taught at the school until 1867 when he entered Harvard Law School. In 1869 he was admitted to the Nebraska bar. He came to Nebraska in its formative years and established a law practice in Falls City. A Republican, he soon became involved in the political activity which surrounded him and was chosen delegate to the 1871 Constitutional Convention. He was elected district attorney for the First Judicial District in 1872. He returned to the Constitutional Convention in 1875 and was personally responsible for much of the document's phraseology. In 1875 Weaver was elected judge of the 1st Judicial District and was re-elected in 1879. In 1882 he made a bid for the United States Congress from the newly created 1st Congressional District (Saunders, Douglas, Lancaster, Sarpy, Cass, Otoe, Gage, Johnson, Nemaha, Pawnee, and Richardson Counties). Victorious (Weaver 17,002 votes; Democrat John Redick 12,690; Farmer's Alliance-Anti-Monopolist John Gilbert, 3,707), he assumed his seat in 1884. Re-elected in 1886 for a second term, his principal activity was the development of legislation to establish the Interstate Commerce Act. While in Congress he served simultaneously as chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Nebraska. In April 1887, one month after the expiration of his second term, Weaver died at 44 years of age following a short, unexpected illness. He was mourned as a man of promise not allowed time to reach his full political capabilities. He is remembered as a Nebraskan who devoted his entire career as prosecutor, judge, and congressman to public service. The Spring issue of "Nebraska History," quarterly publication of the "Nebraska State Historical Society," carries an article, "The Congressional Career of Archibald Jerrard Weaver, 1882-1887," by Donald D. Snoddy.

YOU AND YOUR CAR

By the Automotive Information Council

The variety of auto industry nameplates — on a general rise since the start of the Sixties — is about to shrink but that won't help the motorist in need of a good used car.

Perhaps, more than any other time in automotive history, the used-car prospect should know more about what he is buying, how he will use the vehicle and not allow his emotions to be the major consideration.

As a first step, the Automotive Information Council suggests a perusal of the classified advertising pages of your daily newspaper. That will provide a price-range of what you might expect to pay. A note of caution: In addition, you may have to pay a state tax (most states), a title-transfer fee, insurance you haven't been paying if the used car is the first car for you, or an additional vehicle. So, look beyond the advertised price of the car to be sure it's within your budget.

Don't overbuy. If you live in a large city and the vehicle's chief use is transportation to a place of employment, intermediate, compact or a smaller domestic or foreign automobile might be your top transportation ticket.

Naturally, it is advantageous to buy a used car from a dealer with a good reputation — or a relative or friend or neighbor with a car that you have observed over a period of time. Some dealers will offer a warranty with a recent model used car. Get the warranty in writing. Chrysler Corporation, in a recent survey of the used car market, warns against buying police or government vehicles. Most of these cars have unusually high mileage and have been given rough use by a number of drivers. Often, these vehicles are sold through an auction and it is easy to overbid on what looks like a bargain but turns into a bad buy.

Buying a car from a stranger is dangerous. In recent times, thefts have approached a million vehicles annually. That's not to say that you should avoid the big cities. Beware if the asking price is fantastically lower than the prevailing market.

Litter project

Dear Editor: There was and is a lot being done to help improve America in this Bicentennial year of 1976. One of the efforts to help beautify this country was done by the Combination Kids 4-H Club. They met May 2 to pick-up trash along the highway north of Wayne. A whole pickup load of junk (mainly beer cans) was collected in a mile-and-a-half stretch. About a month later, on June 5, they again met to see just how much trash accumulated on the same stretch of highway. Just one short month later another half a pickup load of junk had collected. The amount of trash along the road could be an indication of a lack of respect many Americans have for their Bicentennial year. The Combination Kids feel that much of the litter along the American roads could be eliminated, if people would think before they toss it there in the first place. The Combination Kids: Cindy, Bob, Marvin Hansen.

Murray Smacks in the Winning Run

Midgets Rally in the Seventh with Five Runs

Wayne blasted across five runs in the bottom of the seventh and catcher Kevin Murray smacked the winning run the next frame to give the Midgets a 6-5 win over visiting Bancroft Friday night.

The win put the locals in a first place tie with 3-0 Wakefield in the Ralph Bishop League while Bancroft falls to 2-1.

Center Fielder Al Nissen belted a two-run double to right field to score the tying runs and send the game into extra frames. Nissen, who was one for two at the plate, sent the ball flying over the out-reached arms of Bancroft's outfielder to score Ginn for the tie ball game.

Left fielder, Dean Carroll attempted to end the game earlier after he singled to deep right but failed to beat the throw to home. "I told these kids that they had to get their heads up and start playing ball. After five innings they started to get their heads up and play," said coach Hank Overin.

In the meantime, Bancroft scored two runs in the second and another in the third for a 3-0 lead. The area club then pushed across two more runs in the top of seventh to pad their lead to 5-0.

The game wasn't without its share of errors. Wayne committed 11 miscues while Bancroft was charged with nine.

Doug Carroll started on the mound for Wayne until the fourth when Overin called on Tom Ginn who got the Midgets off to a 3-0 start in the opening frame. Ginn singled and later scored on Weible's fielder's choice, which also scored second baseman Terry Lutt.

Legion Pounds West Point for Fourth Victory

Wayne Legion pushed its overall record to 4-2 Thursday night with a 10-1 drubbing of host West Point.

The locals took command in the third frame, scoring six runs off two hits and breezed past West Point on the three-hit pitching of Paul Mallette. For the hard-throwing righthander, the win was his second against one defeat.

Mallette wiffed 14 West Point batters and gave up the only run of the night in the second frame when relief pitcher Mark Schlecht walked, advanced on an error and scored on a base hit by right fielder Rusty Adams.

Wayne's second baseman Randy Park led off in the third with a single and went to second on a passed ball. Starting West Point hurler Ken Wuestewald loaded the sacks on a pair of walks and issued two more Center fielder Mark Brandt singled to score another run before errors allowed to cross the plate, said Wayne coach Hank Overin.

Wayne scored one run in the fourth when left fielder Lowe singled and scored on catcher Mike Manes' sacrifice.

The locals made the score 10-1 with three runs in the fifth, including Lowe's third run of the night. Lowe also finished as the top slugger with a pair of singles in four at bats.

WS Officially Starts In CSIC Next Month

Eight colleges in Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri—Wayne State among them—will become members of the Central States Intercollegiate Conference July 1, 1976.

Presidents of the eight schools approved the league's constitution and bylaws at a meeting last week, climaxing several months of planning.

Five members of the CSIC have been in the Great Plains Athletic Conference—Kearney State of Nebraska and four Kansas schools, Emporia State, Fort Hays State, Kansas State-Pittsburg and Washburn University, Topeka. The other members will be Wayne State, Missouri Western at St. Joseph and Missouri Southern at Joplin.

The conference will follow National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) guidelines and standards.

Dr. Brendan J. McDonald, president of Kearney State, will head the league in the coming year. Other officers are Dr. John Visser, Emporia State, vice-president; Dr. George Budd, Kansas State-Pittsburg, secretary; and Dr. John Henderson, Washburn, treasurer. All are presidents of their respective colleges. Allen Zikmund, Wayne third baseman Mark Gansbom makes the force out play against a Bancroft runner in the first inning of the Midget contest between the undefeated clubs in the Ralph Bishop League. Wayne went eight innings to take its third victory in the Ralph Bishop League.

Second Week Of Cats Camp Moved to July

Kearney State will serve as chairman of the athletic directors committee.

To begin, the conference will sponsor championship in football and basketball for men, volleyball and basketball for women.

Other championships will be recognized if five of the eight schools compete in a sport," Dr. McDonald said. "We anticipate requests from coaches (men) in baseball, cross country, golf, tennis, track and wrestling, and softball, tennis and track for women."

A commissioner for the conference will be selected by Aug. 1, Dr. McDonald said. Heading the commissioner selection committee is Dr. Visser of Emporia. See WS STARTS, page 5

Down on the Floor

IT MIGHT look like a mistake, but Wayne State coach Jim Sewing cautions "good work in this defensive tag drill by Brad Emry, left, of Wayne, and Curt Oltmans of Norfolk, two of 40 boys at the Cats Camp the past week. Larson, on defense, was supposed to keep Emry, on offense, from the basket, even if it meant taking a spill. Larson did both, and forced Emry off balance, too.

Sports

Wayne Victory Tightens Race for First in NEN

Wayne town team is back in the race for first in the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League.

Although the locals trail league-leader Homer by two games, Wayne displayed the type of hitting needed to produce a top contender Thursday night when it connected for 16 hits and dropped Allen-Martinburg, 13-5.

The win boosted the town team's record to 2-2 and put it in a five-way tie for second in the eight-team league.

Leading Wayne's hitting were shortstop Steve Hix, third baseman Larry Raabe and first baseman Fritz Weible who had three hits each.

Raabe rapped a pair of doubles to lead the long-ball hitters. He smacked his first two-bagger in the four-run fifth and connected again in the four-run eighth. Hix's time driving in two runs.

Both Hix and Weible were instrumental in getting Wayne off to a 3-0 start in the opening frame. Hix singled and later scored on Weible's fielder's choice, which also scored second baseman Terry Lutt.

Allen, which is among the five teams in the second-place tie, got into trouble in the early going when starter Jim Auck left the mound after the first inning with a possible slipped disc. As a result, manager Keith Hill called on Neil Blohm who wasn't quite rested following Sunday's 3-2 loss to Ponca. In the fourth, Gary Troth tried his hand on the mound for the first time this season. He gave up 12 runs on 12 hits.

Allen took a brief 5-4 lead in the top of the fifth when the visitors punched across three runs off four hits, including catcher Lee Schipuli's double. Three times Allen had the bases loaded, but was able to cash in only one frame.

With one away in the second, Wayne hurler Lyle Blivens loaded the sacks on walks. Troth blasted a fly to center fielder Rick Ginn who nabbed it on the run and rifled it home to catcher Mike Meyer who nailed first baseman Steve Diederich on the slide for the double play. In the sixth, Wayne again halted Allen's scoring threat when relief pitcher Roger Saul struckout the side after Allen got three men on. Allen took advantage of a bases-loaded situation in the fifth to score three runs.

 The four Nebraska College Conference schools will continue to play each other in the coming year and as long as they can agree on scheduling, Wayne athletic director LeRoy Simpson said.

90 St. Bernard loses contest

Wayne police reported two accidents this week, bringing the total for the year to 90, compared with 88 for the same period last year.

88 1975 Total

One accident was a case of a car vs. St. Bernard. During these busy summer months it's a good idea to keep an extra sharp watch for dogs and their young owners.

The other accident was a rear-end collision when one vehicle struck another, stopped in the traffic lane. Allow plenty of room between cars so there is time to stop.

Wakefield '9' Tops Pender

Wakefield's Legion team had to go an extra frame Friday night to notch its first victory in the Ralph Bishop League.

Pitcher Mike Soderberg took over in the seventh to post the victory.

Dean Sharp's base hit in the bottom of the eighth scored teammate Tony Peters from second to give Wakefield a come-from-behind 7-6 decision over visiting Pender and even the club's mark of 1-1 in the league and 2-3 overall.

Wakefield's big rally came in the fourth run inning where the area club tied the score at six-all. Wes Lueth opened the inning with a base hit and scored on Jono Kline's two-base swing. Peters' hit to right field was missed by Pender's outfielder to allow Kline to touch across the second run. Brad Jones doubled to drive home Peters and a throwing error on Pender allowed Jones to score the fourth run.

Pitcher Mike Soderberg took over in the seventh to post the victory.

 throughout the winter and is now busy instructing students using a dozen or so wheels in the yard behind the house which he converted to a studio.

His summer class began Wednesday, June 9, and will continue through Friday, June 18. Sessions meet from 8 a.m. until noon, resume at 4 p.m. until a break at 6 p.m., and then continue from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., with the studio remaining open until midnight. A second class, following a similar schedule will be held June 21-30.

In addition to pottery and craft classes, Frey still finds time to meet a considerable demand for portraiture work, and converts scrap metal and lumber into artistic furniture and decorations for the home occupied by him, Sherian and their son, Chad.

Although she teaches speech on a part time basis in the WSC drama department, Sherian is a full partner in the studio. An art and drama graduate of Emporia Teacher's College in Kansas, she was responsible for starting the art program at Wayne High School in 1968.

Tiger Muskies

Being Stocked At Wagon Train

Wagon Train Lake east of Hickman has been stocked with 2,775 two-inch tiger muskies by the Game and Parks Commission as part of an effort to provide a trophy fish for eastern Nebraska fishermen.

Another 9,000 will be stocked at Branched Oak Lake near Malcolm, but not until they are raised to about six inches at the Commission's North Platte fish hatchery.

The fish bound for Branched Oak must be larger when released because that lake has an established fish population that would prey heavily on any small fish which are stocked. However, the two-inchers should work just fine in Wagon Train, since that lake was renovated last summer and has no large fish.

The tiger muskie is a hybrid of the muskellunge and the northern pike. Its muskellunge background makes the tiger a gamey fighter that grows to impressive size. However, the hybrid grows more rapidly than the muskellunge, is easier to raise in hatcheries, and grows at a faster rate. Fisheries biologists estimate that the tigers in Wagon Train should reach 30 to 35 inches in three years.

The tiger muskies were produced at a federal hatchery in North Dakota and provided to the Game and Parks Commission in exchange for other species propagated in Commission hatcheries.

 presented and the committee chairman said the Wayne State College food service has agreed to donate use of its facilities for the cake baking.

The official Bicentennial cake will serve about 350. Mrs. Welts said, and Wayne County residents wishing to bake a cake and decorate it in a Bicentennial theme are encouraged to do so for the Independence Day celebration.

Bicentennial parade chairman Gerald Hix said Tuesday is the deadline for parade entries.

The Wayne County Mrs. Jayces will be making arrangements for the ringing of bells at 1 p.m. July 4, at the same time bells will ring across the nation.

Mrs. Welts said a complete listing of Bicentennial events will be released as soon as all plans are final.

 considerations show.

Finn said Friday that failure to receive the license leaves him little choice but close his doors.

He said that it appears any business improvements anyone wants to make in Wayne might be in jeopardy because "apparently city zoning laws don't mean anything."

He said the Bottle Shop is located in a commercial zone supposedly suitable for any business that fits the building.

The development, Finn said "does give me an inclination of what any new business in Wayne has to put up with. The town isn't behind business."

Having this happen after operating the same type of business in Wayne for three years doesn't look good for anyone else wanting to locate in town, Finn said.

"One week, the city may back them, and the next week, stab them."

IRRIGATION DEMAND & DEVELOPMENT

Nebraska Leads the Nation in Rate of Irrigation Development

In the five years from 1969 to 1974, Nebraska, had 4.2 times the rate of development of Texas and 4.7 times the development of California, the next two highest states.

While both Texas and California have over eight and one-half million acres under irrigation as compared to Nebraska's five and one half million acres, Nebraska's rate of development was four to five times higher.

Furthermore, Nebraska shows more potential for continued expansion of irrigation than any other state.

Nebraska's State Water Plan shows that up to 19 million acres or nearly 40 per cent of fillable land in the state could be irrigated provided proper management procedures are employed.

The determination of irrigated acres was not based on the availability of irrigation water. Presently, 1.1 million acres of land are irrigated from surface water irrigation projects and rivers and streams. The remaining 4.4 million acres are irrigated from groundwater well-sources.

IRRIGATION IN NEBRASKA PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE
University of Nebraska — Conservation and Survey Division — V.H. Dreeszen, Director

Water Sources

Nebraska has two main sources of water. Approximately one million acre feet enter Nebraska through the North and South Platte Rivers. Also 86 million acre feet are added to the state by rainfall.

Over seven million acre feet are lost from the state through the Platte, Niobrara, Republican, Blue and Nemaha Rivers.

Estimates now show that by 1985 about seven million acres will be irrigated about six million of which will be irrigated from groundwater wells. This seven million acres will require 13 million acre feet of water under present management.

Research underway at the present time indicates that maximum yields may be able to be achieved by use of automated gated pipe systems and proper scheduling of center pivot systems which could reduce water requirements by 40 to 50 per cent.

Employing information from the Conservation and Survey Division, University of Nebraska and the Platte Level "B" Study on the Elkhorn Basin, it appears that there are several areas of limited groundwater recharge in the Lower Elkhorn NRD.

In order to assist in planned irrigation development, your natural resources district has initiated an irrigation well monitoring program plus laying the groundwork for a scheduling program for irrigators.

By measuring what effect irrigation development is having on groundwater recharge, overdevelopment of water-short areas can be avoided.

Center Pivot Irrigation Is Gaining Popularity

By using information from the Remote Sensing Center at the Conservation and Survey Division, University of Nebraska, approximately 2,000 new center pivot irrigation systems are being added each of the past four years for which figures are available. Several reasons for this rise in interest are offered. One, low labor requirements, two, water efficiency, and three, adaptability to a wide range of land and topography.

Irrigation Raises Concerns In Water Requirements

According to the "Strength Through Agricultural Resources Report", January, 1976, agricultural uses required 4.1 million acre-feet of groundwater for 1973 as compared to 2.4 million acres feet in 1964. Surface water requirements remained relatively stable for the same period with 2.2 million acre feet in 1964 to 2.4 million acre feet in 1973.

It would appear that unless surface water irrigation projects are constructed nearly all of the future irrigation developments will make use of groundwater sources.
