

'Magic Globe' Will Take Kids On Trip Into Nation's Past

The Wayne Mrs. Jaycees will once again be sponsoring a local appearance of the Magic Globe Players children's theater.

The 55-minute Bicentennial "Salute to America" will be presented Tuesday, beginning at 10 a.m. at Bressler Park.

The performance will be moved to the West Elementary School in case of rain.

By spinning their "magic globe", the troupe will travel through time from 1492, when Columbus first set sail to the west, through early colonial America, the signing of the Declaration of Independence and the American Revolution, to more modern American events such as the invention of the telephone, and into the future to the space age.

The Magic Globe Players, from Blmarck, N.D., perform in-the-round-with-children-seated on four sides of a portable stage. Youngsters become a part of the performance as they are asked to help act out many of the stories and skills.

A variety of dramatic techniques, puppetry, pantomime, story telling, acting, and music, are used to tell the stories of American history.

The North Dakota troupe has traveled over 50,000 miles in nine north-central states during the past four summers, performing before 150,000 children and adults.

James Fisher, producer of the Magic Globe show, commenting on the success of the endeavor, said, "I feel that we let the children use their imaginations. We can't build the castles that children are able to imagine."

Tickets to the performance are available from the Mrs. Jaycees.

Essay Winners Write On Bicentennial Theme

Eleanor Edwards, a member of the United Presbyterian Women of Wayne, has announced winners of an essay contest sponsored by the Presbyterian ladies.

Youngsters in Wayne County were asked to write their stories using the theme "What My Country Means to Me." The contest, which drew some 90 entries, began in January.

Winners in the high school division are Lori Hall of Wayne High, first place, and Lori Sharlock, also of Wayne High School, second.

Seventh and eighth grade winners were Mary Bowder, eighth grader from Winside School, first; Joan Bowers, eighth grader from Winside, second and Mayvonne Isdm, seventh grader from Shotles School, third.

A fifth grader from rural School District 57, Christine Heisterkamp, took first in the fifth and sixth grade division. Larry Bowers, sixth grader from rural School District 95 received second, and Kara Kugler, sixth grader from Wayne Middle School, won third.

Miss Edwards said the winners will receive checks in recognition as part of Wayne's Bicentennial celebration at the city auditorium on July 2 at 8 p.m.

WSC Graduate Receives Alumnus Award

Former Nebraska governor Val Peterson will join five other distinguished Americans as a recipient of the Distinguished Alumnus Award of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU).

The award will be presented Nov. 12 during the association's annual meeting in New Orleans.

Wayne State College president Lyle Seymour and AASCU executive director Allan Oster made the announcement. Peterson is a 1927 Wayne State College graduate.

The AASCU award is presented each year to a state college or university alumnus whom the board of directors believes has enriched the American experience in art, public service, state-manship, education or industry. Previous recipients of the award include President Lyndon B. Johnson, NBC chairman Julian Goodman, author James Michener, Leslie Warner, chairman of General Telephone and Electronics, and Phillip Sanchez, U.S. ambassador to Honduras.

Recipients are selected from among the alumni of the 324 colleges and universities belonging to AASCU.

Peterson's career in politics and public service has influenced state, national, and international affairs. He was Nebraska governor from 1947 to 1953. He served as an administrative assistant to President Dwight Eisenhower and was ambassador to Denmark. As ambassador to Finland he was host to strategic arms limitation talks between the United States and the Soviet Union, and has also been the U.S. representative at various NATO meetings.

Reflecting on his public service career, Peterson said one of the toughest jobs he tackled was that of federal Civil Defense administrator during the Eisenhower administration.

The former Nebraska governor had joined the Eisenhower staff in 1953 as an administrative assistant, serving in a liaison capacity between the president and the administrative branch of government.

Eisenhower appointed Peterson to the Civil Defense directors position, giving him responsibility—and all powers appropriate to the presidency—in directing all federal activities in relief to disaster-stricken areas.

Peterson recalled one plan he had for attempting to divert a disaster, which he was glad he did not have to put into action. It appeared that a volcano in Hawaii would erupt, and if it did, destroy Hilo. Peterson's plan was to attempt to blast a barricade of stone in the lava's path, to divert it into the ocean. He admits he wasn't sure the plan would work, but could see no alternative. Luckily, the eruption did not occur.

It was during his service with the Eisenhower administration that Peterson first met one of the other winners of the AASCU award. Peterson flew to Texas to survey a drought-stricken area along with a number of congressional leaders, including then-Senate majority leader Lyndon B. Johnson.

As ambassador to Finland, Peterson met another of the winners of the award, author James Michener. Michener and his wife came to Finland to participate in American Days. The author was the United States representative to the celebration and made the key address, and the Micheners were guests of the Petersons for several days.

Commenting on his selection as recipient of the AASCU award, Peterson, a Wayne High School and Wayne State College graduate said, "I appreciate the award and its significance and I can't help but think that in this town (Wayne), there are a good number of people responsible."

Shopper Claims Jackpot

Ray Butts of Wayne was the winner of $750 in Birthday Bucks Thursday night, June 17, when his birth date, July 18, 1935, exactly matched the date announced in Wayne businesses.

Butts was shopping in Bill's G.W. when the winning date was announced. Store owner Bill Lueders presented the Birthday Bucks, good as cash in participating Wayne businesses, in a special ceremony Tuesday morning.

Butts' win ended a long dry spell in the Birthday Bucks promotion. Ted Reed won $1,000 March 20, 1975, and Arlene Baird won $300 the following week, March 27, 1975. Butts is the first winner since then.

There has been a total of nine jackpot winners, including two ties, since the Birthday Bucks contest was initiated in June, 1973.

On Thursday nights when no one wins the jackpot prize, the person whose birth date comes closest to the date announced wins a $25 consolation prize. A total of $9,276 has been awarded

Designer To Explain Renovation Method

Wayne businessmen are reminded to attend the special meeting Tuesday sponsored by the downtown improvement committee.

Iowa designer Al Nelson will make a presentation at a noon luncheon at Les' Steak House about methods for improving the appearance of buildings.

Nelson has been responsible for designing building renovation projects throughout the Midwest, including David City and Columbus. Nelson's method is primarily to clean brick on old buildings, then color-stain it, using contrasting colors to highlight the architectural features prominent in many older buildings.

The meeting is being sponsored by the downtown committee in an effort to encourage businessmen to make plans to spruce up their buildings.

The committee has introduced a plan to renovate the downtown business district in Wayne. Part of that plan includes widening the section of Highway 15 which is also Main St. in the area.

Any reconstructing project must be initiated by the state and highway department officials have indicated that isn't planned for several years. The downtown improvement committee would like the city government to take whatever steps are possible to see DESIGNER, page 10

Wayne's 12-Hit Attack Topples Wakefield, 10-1

Powered by its 12-hit attack, Wayne town team Sunday night downed host Wakefield 10-1 for the locals' second straight win and their fourth overall in the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League.

Leading the explosion at the plate for Wayne were second baseman Terry Luft who had two singles and a double in five times at the plate, third baseman Larry Raabe, and left fielder Rick Ginn with two singles, a double and right fielder Eric Danke and pitcher Roger Saul with a single and double each.

Hidden behind the scenes was shortstop Steve Hix who blasted a circuit hit in his first time at the plate to give Wayne a 1-0 lead in the opening frame. Wayne's biggest output came in the sixth inning where it scored four runs on two hits and five walks off relief hurler Randy Nelson.

Winning pitcher Saul struck out 11 Wakefield batters and gave up six hits. Waketfield scored its only run in the bottom of the eighth when shortstop Rob Eaton doubled to drive in second baseman Tim Rouse who walked to first and went to second on an error.

Tonight (Thursday) Wayne takes its 43 record to league leader Homer for an 8 p.m. contest, Waketfield, which stands at 2-5, travels to Newcastle.

Halt Wisner Rally, 9-7 Juniors Stay Close In Loop Race

Only one game behind the leader, that's how Wayne Legion stands after Monday night's 9-7 squeaker over Wisner to give the locals a 2-1 record in the Ralph Bishop League, one game behind undefeated Laurel.

The narrow victory didn't unfold until the second half of the seven-inning contest when both clubs broke a pitchers' duel between Wayne's Paul Mallette and Wisner's Doug Kinastrol.

Although Wisner took a 1-0 lead in the third when a runner scored on a passed ball, both hurlers continued to get them selves out of trouble.

For Mallette, he had 10 strikeouts going into the sixth frame while Kinastrol, relied on his fielders to shove off Wayne's charges when the bases were loaded in the first and when Wayne had two on in the second.

The duel ended in the top of the fifth when Wayne pushed across three runs on three hits, including a double by catcher, Mike Manes to lead off the inning.

Wayne added five more runs in the sixth for an 8-1 lead before Wisner produced three in its half of the sixth; Wayne's security run came in the seventh when third baseman Rod Turner, who was safe on first via an error, came home on Larry Creighton's two-bagger.

Wisner shaved Wayne's lead to two with the help of catcher Mark McGill's solo home run with one away. An error and a passed ball allowed Wisner to score two more runs before left fielder Monte Lowe nabbed a pair of hits to end the game.

Overall Wayne's record stands at 8-3, including a twinbill with Onawa Sunday.

Both clubs split, each winning a game by one run—Onawa took the opener, 3-2, on a two-hit pitching of Craig Conrad who shared pitching chores with two other teammates.

Top of the Lineup Gives Midgets Win

The top four players in the lineup for Wayne Midgets Monday night did all the hitting and scoring to produce the locals' 8-3 victory over host Wisner and continue their club's undefeated role in the Ralph Bishop League.

Wayne, which is 6-0 going into Friday night's home clash with twice-battled Waketfield, pounced on Wisner hurler Jeff Beckman for seven hits, including three in the three-run first inning.

Leadoff hitter Steve Bodenstedt, who led teammates with three runs, doubled, in the first frame and scored on pitcher Vic Sharpe's single. First baseman Doug Carroll, the third batter in the lineup, came back with a base hit before shortstop Tom Ginn walked to get on base.

A sacrifice bunt by catcher Kevin Murray scored Wayne's second run of the inning and an error on Wisner's left fielder who muffed Dean Carroll's fly allowed Wayne to score its third run.

Bodenstedt, Sharpe and Ginn each finished with two hits each. Wisner countered with three runs in the bottom of the second to tie the match. But a sacrifice bunt by Doug Carroll in the fourth allowed Bodenstedt to score his second run of the night and put Wayne in front to stay.

Laurel Midgets Claim 2nd Win

Laurel Midgets posted their second win of the season Monday night by stomping host Pender 18-4 on pitcher Mike Martin's three-hitter.

Laurel struck out 12 big runs for six hits in the sixth frame to claim the Midgets' first win in the Ralph Bishop League and their second in eight outings.

First baseman Brad Saunders and second baseman Duane Nelson each drove in a run on their doubles in the sixth as Laurel capitalized on three of Pender's four errors and four walks issued to Laurel batters.

They're just getting more games under their belts, said Laurel's coaching staff, pointed out that the Midgets are reducing the number of errors and improving on their hitting.

For Martin, the team victory also meant his second victory as Pender batters.

Right fielder Brian Blatchford drove in five runs on a pair of home runs Monday night to power Laurel Juniors to a 13-2 whipping of host Pender.

The win pushed the Legion's mark to 4-0 in the Ralph Bishop League and 9-2 overall.

Blatchford ripped his first circuit hit in the third inning, driving in three runs for Laurel's 6-0 command. In the five-run fifth, he smacked his second homer with a runner on.

For the night, Laurel batters teamed up for 13 hits. Also leading coach Bob Weisenberg's club at the plate were Steve Thompson, Cleve Stolpe and Brian Johnson with three hits each. Stolpe and Jon Erwin each had a double.

Friday Laurel travels to Wisner for a Midget and Legion contests.

Kiwanis Picnic Will Be Monday At Bressler Park

The annual Wayne Kiwanis family picnic will be held Monday evening at 7 at Bressler Park.

The dinner will be catered and it will cost members 25 cents, their wives and other adult visitors $2.50 and children from six to 12 years of age, $1.50. Children below five are free.

According to club president Dan Sherry the picnic will take the place of the regular Monday afternoon meeting.

During this week's meeting, membership chairman Max Lundstrom inducted Tim Boyle as the latest member. Boyle, who is administrator of Wayne Care Centre, and his wife, Debra, recently moved to Wayne from Omaha.

Following the induction, program chairman Sid Hillier presented a film on senior citizens in the United States and their need to keep active after retirement.

Title "Use it in good health, Charlie," the film depicted a person who is about to retire and the future which might lie ahead for him.

Retirement is a frightening experience for most people because persons anticipate they'll lose their independence, freedom and place among society's workers, the film pointed out.

"Looking or acting young isn't the answer" to overcoming the feeling of inadequacy when a person reaches retirement age. Feeling young is the answer, it said.

Senior years have to be more productive in order to be pleasant, the film went on to say. And to be productive a person has to remain independent, active and healthy.

The best way to stay healthy is through preventative health care.

Echoing statements made previously by human resources chairman Linda Baddorf, Mrs. Scott said the idea behind the parent aid program isn't to alarm anyone about rampant child abuse in Wayne, because, so far as anyone knows now, it doesn't exist.

That doesn't mean there aren't possible cases, however, and the idea behind the parent aid program is to have people ready to help when the need arises.

Child abuse, Mrs. Scott said, is defined as an act of commission. Something is done to the child, or an act of omission, something which should be done for the child by the parent that isn't.

Local Savings Reach Record Because residents of Wayne County accumulated a record year of savings in the past year, they are in better financial shape than they have been for some time.

They salted away a greater proportion of their income than normally, putting much of it into savings banks, savings and loan accounts, U.S. savings bonds and a like.

The large nest egg of savings in the hands of local families represents a treasure trove of additional spending power.

Those with very small incomes find it difficult to save anything. Families with $7,500 left after taxes have been putting away about 3.5 percent, on average, those with $12,000 net, 7.4 percent, and those with $15,000, close to 8.6 percent.

The amount of new money that the Wayne County population slowed away during the year in the various types of savings came to an estimated $3,433,000.

The findings are based upon national data gathered by the Federal Reserve Board, the Commerce Board and others and upon income and spending figures for each area of the country.

The reports show that, for the most part, the Wayne County population slowed away during the year in the various types of savings came to an estimated $3,433,000.

Child neglect is usually caused when parents don't have resources to fall back on when they encounter problems in child rearing. They might be in a situation where they have neither family or friends to provide any break from child raising chores.

Whatever the cause, the result is usually frustration for the parent. That is where the parent aids will help, by providing an attentive ear, and perhaps some advice based on experience.

That doesn't mean there aren't possible cases, however, and the idea behind the parent aid program is to have people ready to help when the need arises.

EXTENSION NOTES

OUTDOOR COOKERY The lively aroma of outdoor cooking tempts an appetite any time. With summer coming it's time to move to the outdoors and enjoy the atmosphere. Thoughts of food naturally follow.

Dining then becomes relaxed and informal. Outdoor foods must fill the day's nutritional needs with an appealing variety of flavor, texture, and color.

The choice of meat usually forms the basis of a complete menu. Nearly any cut of meat that is suitable for broiling, panbroiling, pan-frying or roasting may be cooked over the coals.

Use of a meat thermometer is the only accurate guide for a perfect roast. It should be inserted into the lean of the meat at a slight angle so that the tip is in the center but not resting on the roasting rack or in fat.

Make sure there is plenty for everyone. When shopping plan on one-half to three-fourths pound of boneless steak or roast per person. If usually takes

When possible, food should be served immediately after cooking. Food is safest at temperatures above 140 degrees F and below 45 degrees F. Keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold.

A cooler can be made from two cardboard boxes, one smaller than the other. Use at least half inch thickness of newspapers to cover the bottom of the larger box.

Eastern Nebraskans feel left out -- for a change

CAPITOL NEWS
LINCOLN — More than 240 communities in Nebraska are seeking state and federal assistance for construction of sewage treatment plants.

Nearly every year the State Environmental Control Department is faced with a list of "that just every year" the state and federal dollars haven't even made it half way down the list.

This year, there's a different problem. So far, there is no money at all available from Washington.

George Ludwig, grant administrator for the environmental control department, said the Federal Environmental Protection Agency and President Ford both failed to turn over to Congress a budget for the assistance program.

However, he said there is a congressional version of a budget for the program that has made it through the Senate. But it will be a while yet before the final word is known on the legislation.

Nebraska received $38.5 million dollars for the government fiscal year that will end June 30.

Under the Senate version of a budget for the program, Ludwig said the state would get about $30 million. He said that that would be a decrease. If that amount were there each year, for a "reasonable" period of time, "we could live with that."

Federal Portion 75 per cent
 Under the assistance program, the federal government picks up the tab for 75 per cent of the project cost. The state and local governments split the remainder equally.

As to exactly how much the environmental control department says will be needed the next two decades to rid the state of pollution, Ludwig said it was $1.5 billion last year and he doesn't foresee a change in that estimate.

In talking about the program, Ludwig got off on a side issue that has bothered Nebraska's smaller communities since the assistance program first began. Those smaller communities just can't seem to get high enough on the priority list to get any of that state and federal assistance and get good sewage treatment plants.

Ludwig said there was no change in the factors used in putting together this year's priority list and thus the same problem is there.

"Basically, the administrator said, there really isn't anything at all that surprising about the smaller communities feeling discriminated against."

"The law penalizes the small town," Ludwig said.

The idea behind the whole program, he said, was to stop the pollution that was occurring across the nation.

"Why doesn't the little town get on the list? It's because he isn't polluting," Ludwig said.

 For years, western Nebraska has felt neglected by a state government based in an eastern city and some even talked of leaving the western part of the state and joining with another state.

The reverse has finally happened. The State Board of Education heard a claim from the Omaha area that is being discriminated against because a one-of-a-kind program is located in the west.

The claim came from State Sen. Gerald Koch of Ralston and the subject under discussion was State School for the Trainable Retarded at Cozad and its replacement.

The education board was in the process of officially ordering that the school be closed and that it be replaced by a source center for local school districts which must now shoulder full responsibilities for educating the physically and mentally handicapped within the districts.

"I do not believe it will benefit us one iota," Koch told the board, "any more than the state school has."

The new center will provide diagnostic services and other assistance to schools trying to find the best way of educating the handicapped.

But, noted Koch, the new center at Cozad will still be the only one of its kind in the state and simply is not within reach of eastern Nebraska.

"We're going to have to pay through the nose for diagnostic services," he while schools in the western regions will be able to rely on the Cozad center at prices that are considerably less than those the Omaha area faces.

Koch was trying to get the board to try the new center out for a year and if it turned out to be just what western schools ordered, then more centers like it should be provided so that schools in his area had a place to go.

The board said that's exactly what it had in mind.

Also appearing before the board was Elmer Corbitt superintendent of the Chadron schools. He also asked that if the center works out, similar facilities be made available a little closer to his school district.

Fuel Supplies May Hold
 Remember the "closed" signs that appeared at filling station pumps and doors a few years ago?

Well, those days may be back even though the signs have generally felt the gasoline supply is about up to par.

George Dworak, Nebraska's petroleum allocation officer, said generally the supply of gasoline should hold through the end of this month. But he's unsure of what the situation will be the rest of the summer.

He said refineries have been working at full capacity long past the dates they should have been shut down for regular maintenance and one of these days those refineries will have no choice but to close. He said he's heard some of them are planning just that this summer.

Dworak said there is no doubt that fuel sales are up over last year.

As part of the national effort to make fuel available in an emergency, each state receives at the beginning of each month a reserve supply. In Nebraska's case, there are some 2.6 million gallons in reserve gasoline and 1.75 million gallons of diesel fuel reserve. Dworak said he had calls from people who want to tap those reserves.

In the first four months of this year, Dworak said filling station operators in the state brought in 37 million gallons of gasoline more than for the same months of last year.

No Pay Challenge
 Gov. J. J. Exon's decision to ignore legislative efforts to impose a $1,200 limit on pay increases next year for state employees will not be challenged in the courts.

The Nebraska Association of Public Employees considered the idea. But then the NAPE board decided against a court action seeking enforcement of the limit after careful consideration.

The board said it was afraid if it took the situation to court, all pay increases would be held up and not just those of more than $1,200.

OBSERVATIONS

Embargo cost $3 billion

I read with great interest the letter from Bruce Barrett from Cambridge, Neb., titled "You Lied, Mr. President." I would like to pursue this a little farther.

Not only did Ford lie but so did George Meany perpetrated the biggest theft ever pulled on this nation. This grain embargo cost American farmers in the area of $3 billion. This came directly from farmers' pockets.

So what happens to a farmer's income — it goes back into the economy. What puzzles me is George Meany's position in this. His explanation was that he was concerned about a handful of maritime union members out of work because much of this grain was being shipped on non-union boats. On page 27 of Farmhand News, Jan. 15, 1976, you quoted Richard Bell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, saying that every billion dollars of agriculture exports creates 50,000 jobs for American workers. Isn't it interesting that George Meany was so interested in a few maritime union workers that he would overlook the fact that this had been done at the expense of people to work and a big percent of these people would be union members in building trades — auto workers, farm machinery workers, steel workers, etc. It looks like George Meany really double-crossed his own unemployed members.

Meany had been concerned about the increased cost of food caused by shipment of this grain. It has always been my understanding that union-scale pay buys more groceries than unemployment checks.

This $3 billion would have come out of the pockets of Russia and other countries and would have brought new homes, automobiles, trucks, farm machinery, fertilizers, chemicals, and help provide a better way of life for millions of people in this country. But Gerald Ford and George Meany stole that money out of the economy of this nation. Now, Mr. Meany is wanting the government to institute a gigantic make job program when he just said no to a deal that would have done the same thing in a more dignified manner.

Now, Gerald Ford is wanting farmers to produce another bumper crop. The question arises, "Are farmers going to do it and get double crossed again?" I read in a paper they are going to plant 2 million acres more this year than last year to take up the slack in lower prices. I recall last year when the bottom fell out of the automobile market, the auto makers quit making instead of producing more.

If farmers would cut production on 15 or 20 per cent of their land, they would have more net dollars at the end of the year and conserve a lot of energy — both manpower and petroleum. — Van Garrett, Manager, Dublin (Tex.) Peanut Cooperative, Inc., from Farmhand News.

HAVE A HAPPY DAY

Is Humphrey-Hawkins bill the answer?

Over the last two years, New York State lost more private sector jobs than the other 49 states together, according to a recent Teamsters Union survey.

If we apply to this situation the logic of the Humphrey-Hawkins bill — which would "cure" the national unemployment problem by providing government jobs — then the solution to New York's problem seems obvious: Let the state hire the jobless.

But wait a minute. New York already has the highest percentage of state and local government employees in the nation, 62 per 1,000 population, versus the national average of 54 per 1,000.

These public employees, who in many categories are the highest paid in the country, are costly to support. Also costly are the multitude of expensive "free" services they administer.

Consequently, the combination of state and local taxes in New York is higher, per capita, than any other state's. And New York State taxes high incomes more heavily than any other state.

For these and other reasons, businesses have been leaving New York at an accelerating rate. With them, of course, go the jobs. A study by an international plant location consulting firm, the Funtus Company, quoted in the Amherst (N.Y.) Bee, rates New York State as having the worst business climate in the U.S.

When accountants make this distinction, aside from the crushing taxes? Two New York scholars who looked into the problem — Bernard Lee Weinstein and George Keller — concluded that it is "a new attitude that many New Yorkers, particularly some highly educated, affluent ones in New York City, have developed over several generations of prosperity."

It's a post-industrial attitude, an almost 18th century aristocratic sense that business, making money, trade, salesmanship, and economic expansion are unseemly if not contaminating.

These are the people, according to Weinstein and Keller, who want to redistribute other people's wealth, rather than to create wealth of their own."

On the other hand, the authors say, "the business and financial communities in New York have lost a great deal of their political influence, have increasingly been neglected and more highly taxed, and have often been held up to public ridicule."

As a result of this climate, employers and "a number of New York's most enterprising and hardworking young persons" are being lost "to other states and other regions, where people are less affluent, still struggling, and more appreciative of business acumen."

To be sure, the quality of cultural life and social justice in these poorer regions is often lower, but so is the unemployment, and the material sense that things are coming apart."

Once established, the cycle feeds on itself. As the businesses and the young depart, they leave New York with more than its share of the aged and the poor — the beneficiaries and the victims of a social welfare policy that is quite literally bankrupt.

To be sure, there are things to be said in New York's favor, and Weinstein and Keller say them. Parts of the state are quite healthy economically, the state and New York City are suffering to no extent from national and regional trends, not entirely of their own making, many widespread beliefs about the city and state — such as an unusually high crime rate and excessive labor problems in the private sector — are simply not true.

The authors are not trying to vilify New York. Rather, they want its citizens to face reality, understand its problems, and begin to take advantage of its many remaining resources. It is in that spirit — and in hopes that people in other parts of the country can learn from New York's difficulties — that I repeat some of their comments, taken from an article in Search, the quarterly of the State University of New York.

Will New York correct its mistakes and become more like the rest of the country? Or will the rest of the country make the same mistakes, and become more like New York? For a clue to the answer, from national and regional trends, the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, — Richard Leshar, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Of all the reasons why we're funeral directors, one is foremost: people need us, and we need to be needed.

HISCOX-SCHUMACHER FUNERAL HOMES

Wayne 375-3100 *Carroll

Results of corporation farms predicted

Consumer groups who complain about the cost of food today, better hope that the family-type farm stays in business and that the nation's agriculture never finds itself in a position in which union power could shut down the nation's food production.

And that could happen if sometime in the future agricultural production becomes concentrated under the big factory-type, corporation-controlled units that some economists so frequently predict. That type structure employing a highly educated and skilled management with dozens and perhaps hundreds of workers, would lend itself to the unionizing efforts that pervade all major U.S. industry.

Then the farm unions could time expiration of their contracts with the critical times of the year, spring planting or fall harvest. No contract... then no planting, no irrigating, no harvesting. Let the fields lie idle, or let crops rot on the ground. The corn and milo could stand until winter blizzards arrived. The cows could go unmilked, unless the supervisors and managers would get around to all of them. The fruits and vegetables that must be harvested within a few days for the canning factories could rot on the vines.

The farm union leaders could say, "The auto workers and the rubber workers got a better contract than we did last time. Food is more important than cars and tires. This year as a matter of principle we have to show our members we can outdo the other unions in wage scales and extra benefits."

They would be sure to add, "If the rubber workers can strike all summer to get what they want, so can we. Sure we will win. Ninety-five per cent of the people in this country don't want to starve next winter!"

And of course the farm labor unions could tell their people to sign up for food stamps and maybe unemployment and welfare benefits. And they could call for other union members and sympathetic people to bring them donations of canned goods and some produce, from their backyard gardens so they wouldn't have to go back to work. And if people starve next winter, then of course the blame would be placed on those big farm corporations who refused to sign those union contracts last summer.

Far fetched and impossible? If just hasn't happened with farm production to a great extent because so far "family farmers" have been increasing their productivity, organizing cooperatives and using their ingenuity to stay in business. They can't strike against themselves. When they don't plant or don't harvest, they are out of farming. Bankers take a dim view of lending money to farmers and ranchers who fail to produce as a matter of choice.

Dr. Robert Spitze, a farm policy expert at the University of Illinois, deprecates the view that farms in the future will be factory-type operations. He says that agriculture, particularly crops but to some extent livestock production, is very much related to natural weather cycles and to seasons and has to have a management and a labor which can follow through season by season and this is where the family farm operation so far has been able to compete.

Hopefully he is right because the alternative is not pleasant to contemplate for a people which by and large has never known the meaning of real hunger. — M. M. Van Kirk, Farm Bureau Federation.

Cobs Good Ration for Dairy

'Cobs cash' may become a new slogan for dairy farmers following tests on 30 Holstein cows at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Those tests, the first of their kind, have indicated that treated corn cobs may be substituted for nearly one-fourth of the amount of grain rations used in feed for dairy cattle without any decrease in milk yield, according to Dr. Foster Owen, professor of animal science.

"It (research) indicated that the cobs are a high value ingredient compared to what most people may think cobs are worth," he said. "Certainly there are a lot of savings to be had."

Dr. Owen delivered a paper detailing the study's results at the 71st annual meeting of the American Dairy Science Association Sunday through Tuesday at North Carolina State University in Raleigh, N.C.

Mertyn Nielsen, assistant professor of animal science, and a graduate student, Ivan Soper, also have been working on the project, which started in the spring of 1975.

The corn cobs were treated with one per cent calcium hydroxide and three per cent sodium hydroxide to improve their value, digestibility and energy content, Dr. Owen said. The total ration on a dry basis consisted of half corn silage and half grain.

He said two corn silages were used — one untreated and the other treated with ProSil, a protein substitute containing ammonia, which supplied one-third of the protein in this ration.

Three fiber levels were obtained by adding treated corn cobs, at 0, 12 and 23 per cent of the total ration. This then was substituted for grain into the total ration.

Results showed that milk production remained basically unchanged when corn cobs were substituted for grain to make up 12 per cent of the grain part. At that level, corn cobs composed 24 per cent of the grain part of the ration.

Dr. Owen said when the level of cobs was increased to 23 per cent of the total ration (46 per cent of the grain portion), "there was a little depression in the production of milk, but nothing as great as you may expect from adding cobs at nearly half of the grain ration."

"Even at this level, the production of milk was almost as good as when we included none of the cobs," he said.

"We would expect that farm ers could go with at least 12 per cent cobs in the total dry ration without reducing milk production.

He reported that the study also showed that corn cobs can be effective in increasing the fiber content of rations without reducing milk yield. A certain minimum level of fiber is required to maintain normal milk fat content, high efficiency of milk yield and normal digestive functions.

Further, Dr. Owen said research indicated that ProSil treated silage slightly reduced intake and milk yield when compared to untreated silage where soybean meal was used. But he said the difference was not statistically significant.

He said researchers hope to do additional tests to compare treated and untreated cobs.

Hi-Raters

The Hi Rater Boys 4-H Club met June 10 at the Grace Lutheran Church basement. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mike Reithwisch. Mike Sprouts, Jay Lange, Julie Mabon and Susan Reithwisch were appointed to the committee for the Bicentennial float. Demonstrations were given by Mike Reithwisch on entomology and Mike Heine on tools for calf care.

Lunch was served by the Gillinghams and the Heinenmans.

Meat Board Boss Wants Research

Meat industry nutrition research programs must be increased from five to ten-fold within the next few years if the industry hopes to have a substantial future, warned David Stroud, president of the National Live Stock and Meat Board in a recent talk.

The Meat Board itself currently funds a $100,000 annual program for supporting nutrition research projects which benefit both the American public and the industry.

"But our present level of dollar input is a pittance," Stroud said in remarks, "to a group of scientists gathered to analyze and evaluate research in human nutrition conducted under Meat Board grants. He told the research group that he was setting a minimum goal of $500,000 by 1980 for these projects alone. Additional increased funding also will be required for nutrition education. The Meat Board currently spends approximately another $200,000 in the latter category.

"Too many in the industry thought of a restricted market may seem absurd because meat foods have long been identified as basic in the minds of both the public and health workers," he noted.

"Unfortunately, the food industry in general and the meat industry in particular is under greater pressure than ever before to justify the existence of our products as staple to the good life and good diet," the executive said.

"That much of the negative data about meat is generated from ignorance and misinformation is of no solace to us. People are believing the canards about everything from influenza that has nothing to do with pork to cancer that has no relationship whatsoever to beef to the non-sense purveyed for years about fats, cholesterol and heart disease," he said.

produce the information needed on meat's role in the human diet. Demands for nutrition and health data have increased many times over in just the last few years. If we continue at present funding levels we will fall farther and farther behind in meeting those demands," he predicted.

Since its founding in 1922, the Meat Board has conducted programs of nutrition research and education for both consumers and the health profession. Data developed from the funded experiments has established the basic knowledge of meat's nutritional qualities and has been used to both promote meat and to refute unsubstantiated charges linking meat eating to various human ills and diseases.

USDA NEWS

CATTLE ON FEED UP

Nebraska feedlots on June 1 had 22,000 cattle up 26 per cent from the 1975 total of 17,500, according to the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

WHEAT PROSPECTS IMPROVE

Nebraska's wheat crop is forecast at 97,300,000 bushels, according to Jack A. Swanson, State Statistician of the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. This is 10 per cent higher than last month but one per cent below the 1975 production. If realized, this year's crop would be 14 per cent below the 1958 record production.

PLACEMENTS LOWER

Nebraska farmers marketed 28,000 head of cattle during May, up 38 per cent from last year and three per cent above the comparable month two years ago. May place totals of 248,000 were 10 per cent below a year earlier and eight per cent below two years ago. Cattle marketed were 70 per cent of the previous month.

PASTURE AND RANGE CONDITION

Pasture and range condition in Nebraska averaged 80 per cent on June 1, up six points from a year earlier. Best condition was reported in the Southeast and Northwest districts, while the poorest was reported in the North-Central and Northeast districts.

CATTLE IN STATES UP

The June 1 cattle head count in the United States was 117,000,000, up 1.2 per cent from last year and 1.5 per cent from a year earlier. The increase was due to a 1.5 per cent increase in the number of head in the 12 states which reported an increase.

PLANTING AHEAD OF NORMAL

Planting was actually completed by June 1. This is the same as normal and last year. Planting was ahead of normal the last year throughout May. Sorghum and soybean plantings were almost 90 per cent completed. A year ago, both were about 80 per cent planted with the normal at 70 per cent.

Other expenditures during May totaled $1.2 billion, up 1.5 per cent from a year earlier.

According to Veterans Administration estimates, there are 74,900 American Indians among the nation's veteran population, who receive some $13 million annually in various benefits.

The Leslie Livewires 4-H Club met last Thursday night in the Otto Manak home with fifteen members present. Plans were finalized for the club float for the local parade.

The next meeting will be July 19 in the Biffi Greve home with a family picnic following the club tour.

Increase Predicted in Demand for Soybeans

Soybean production in both Nebraska and the U.S. will gain momentum as world wide protein needs increase, forecasts the Strength Through Agricultural Resources (STAR) report.

One of twelve reports prepared by the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, the soybean study predicts that soybean acreage in Nebraska will reach 1.5 million acres by 1985, a 20 per cent increase. Of the 2.5 billion bushels projected for the U.S. in 1985, more than 1.5 billion will be exported.

Soybean production in Nebraska has grown from 1,000 acres in 1938 to 180,000 acres in 1975 and 1,490,000 acres in 1974. Prices have risen from 92 cents per bushel in 1938 to $3.20 per bushel in 1972 and $6.18 per bushel in 1974.

The report cited reasons for the growth:

- People of other countries are upgrading their diets when economically possible. A world wide demand for protein is expected to increase.
- The consumption of convenience foods, of which soybean oil is an ingredient, has increased its per capita consumption from 17 pounds in 1953 and 32 pounds in 1973.

Technological advances have made possible the conversion of grain and protein feeds into meat.

"Many countries produce large quantities of grain but do not have the protein supply necessary for either animal or human consumption.

Nebraska will contribute substantially to soybean production because of its resources, fertile land, suitable climate, transportation, labor, technological knowledge, agricultural equipment, storage facilities and a soybean processing industry.

But the soybean picture is not without problems, the report maintains.

"Few serious soybean disease and insect problems exist in Nebraska now. As soybean acreage increases, however, these problems are expected to grow.

Higher yielding disease resistant varieties suitable to Nebraska conditions are needed as well as the latest insect harvesting equipment.

Competition for corn can be reduced through more research to solve soybean production problems.

Milk May Inhibit Growth of Tumor Cells

Milk soured with a particular bacteria inhibited the growth of tumor cells in the stomachs of laboratory mice, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln scientist reported here.

P. J. Bailey, a graduate student, reported to a session of the annual meeting of the American Dairy Science Association on work done by himself and Dr. K. M. Shahani, professor of food science and technology.

They tried plain colostrum (the first milk, containing antibodies against diseases), colostrum fermented with either the bacterium L. bulgaricus or the bacterium L. acidophilus, whole milk fermented with the two bacteria, and colostrum fermented with a yogurt culture.

Colostrum alone did not inhibit the growth of the tumor cells, Bailey said.

However, the fermented cultures were increasingly effective in the following order: colostrum fermented with a yogurt culture, colostrum fermented with the bacteria, and milk fermented with the bacteria, he said.

Fermented milk inhibited the growth of the tumor cells by 27 to 41 per cent, he said.

"Milk fermented with L. acidophilus also has an antibiotic effect, according to Shahani.

He and his co-workers have isolated acidophilin, the antibiotic substance produced by the bacterium "in sou" milk and determined the concentration required to cause 50 per cent inhibition of 27 different bacteria.

"Because of this antibacterial activity, acidophilin could perhaps be used to prevent or retard bacterial contamination on equipment and packaging material."

"Also, it may provide natural resistance or immunity to the consumer against several pathogenic infections," Shahani said.

Gain Is Same With Waxy or Dent Corn

White animals may prefer waxy corn over dent, no consistent improvement in gain was observed in experiments at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, a UN-L graduate student reported here.

Scott Brady gave the report to a section of the annual meeting of the Midwestern Section, American Society of Animal Science, in session June 3-4.

Two waxy corns were compared to two dent corns that were genetically similar and grown under identical conditions, he said.

There were five trials, four with lambs and one with Brangus steers, he said.

In trial one each corn was fed in a 90 per cent concentrate ration to lambs for 53 days. Corn gluten meal was used to balance protein content at 12 per cent.

In trial two a waxy and dent corn were used in an 85 per cent concentrate ration balanced to 13 per cent protein with alfalfa hay and soybean meal fed to lambs.

In trial three a waxy and dent corn were fed to Brangus steers for 100 days in a 90 per cent concentrate ration with no protein supplement.

In trial four a waxy and dent corn were fed to lambs for 90 days in an 80 per cent concentrate ration with no protein supplement.

In trial five the lambs indicated a preference for waxy over dent corn.

SELL WINNERS. NOT LOSERS.

Wayne Creep Feed for calves that make you money.

Help your cows and grass turn out big growthy calves — 540-pound winners instead of 375-pound losers at the sale barn.

You can generally figure on a pound of extra gain from every 3 to 4 pounds of Wayne Creep Feed. It closes the nutritional gap as the calf grows and the cow's milk diminishes. And Creep Feed carries an energy protein ratio similar to milk. Plus a high level of antibiotics.

This year, build large-framed, money-making calves that are fit, not fat. See us now for Wayne Creep Feed.
