Rural Carroll Neighbors Keep Covered Wagon Rolling

One of the entries in the Bicenennial parade Saturday will be a covered wagon coming to Wayne from Carroll by way of Ralston.

That sounds like the long way around, and it doesn't exactly follow the trail taken by pioneers on their way west in the 1800's, but this particular wagon has covered a considerable number of miles in the past few months.

Margaret Hansen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hansen of rural Carroll, has taught industrial arts in the Ralston middle school for the past two years. Her industrial arts club this past year wanted a Bicenennial project, so she decided to have them restore a covered wagon.

Locating a wagon in an Omaha suburb didn't seem too practical, so Marge decided to look a little closer to home. Don Liedman, who lives two miles west of Carroll and farms with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Liedman, decided he could give his long-time neighbor a hand. A 1917-vintage Kansas-Nebraska farm wagon sitting idle on the Liedman farm was volunteered. Don agreed to provide materials if the Ralston youngsters would do the work. Liedman retains ownership of the wagon, and the industrial arts club has use of it for a variety of parades and activities.

The wheels and running gear were well-weathered when Liedman pulled the relic out of a snow drift last winter, but the industrial arts club applied some slow grease and sandpaper and sanded the wheels and frame down to solid wood, then applied seven coats of linseed oil and turpentine. Iron work was sanded down and painted black.

The wagon box was too rotten to restore, so a new one was built. Liedman supplied the floor boards from an old farm house which was torn down. Side boards were a little harder to obtain because Margaret wanted to use 18 inch oak plank planks, cut to size. Finding lumber that wide was difficult, but suitable planks were finally provided by a Kansas City firm.

The finished wagon has a 26 inch deep box, formed by 14- and 12 inch wide side boards.

Oak was used throughout the wagon except for two lateral beams which support the box on the running gear. Hemlock was substituted as an economy measure.

The box, like the running gear, was finished with linseed oil and turpentine. Two additional coats, for a total of nine, were applied.

Marge said about a dozen youngsters, seventh and eighth grade boys and girls, did the major portion of the work on the wagon, but she had to again look close to home to solve one problem.

The wooden wheels had shrunk some what after years of disuse and the steel rims no longer fit. Tightening the bands was accomplished by Louis Eroer, a blacksmith in Randolph, only a few miles from the Hansen farm.

The industrial arts student also sanded the canvas top for the covered wagon, but finding the right type of wood for the supporting hoops proved impossible, so steel bands were substituted.

The original wagon was constructed with rivets, but that, too, proved impos-

Council Okays Rate Plan

The Wayne city council Tuesday night decided to implement a new electric rate structure outlined in an original proposal submitted previously by electrical engineering consultant Norman Armstrong.

The council had directed Armstrong to prepare a revision of his initial proposal and that revision was presented Tuesday night, but a majority of the council decided to adopt the original proposal without in-depth study of the revision.

Two factors influenced the decision. Armstrong told the council an error had been made in tables in the initial proposal. Those tables indicated that some consumers with all electric homes could expect rate hikes in the 90 per cent range during the summer months. The corrected tables show those rate increases will be in the 60 per cent range.

Under the revised rate study, increases would have been limited to a maximum of about 50 per cent, with consumers in the middle of the electrical usage range picking up the difference.

That would have meant that "typical" or median customers would have paid about $2.40 a month more in the summer and about $3.60 a month more in the winter under the revised rate study, compared with what they will be paying under the initial study.

Councilman Ted Bahe attempted to table the motion to adopt immediately the initial rate study and was supported in that effort by Darrel Fuehlberth and John Vokoc, but the motion failed.

Bahe pointed out that the council had ordered the revised rate structure prepared at taxpayer expense and said the council should at least look at the revision in depth before making a decision.

A resolution authorizing the new rates will be introduced at the next regular council meeting and the effective date will be set then.

Wayne State College can still expect a 105 per cent increase in electrical rates under the new structure, but won't have the increase implemented fully during the first year.

College officials explained when the initial study was released that, while the college is willing to pay its share for electricity, money for the next school year has already been allocated. Funds to pay power costs under the new rate schedule aren't included in the budget, and immediate implementation would mean cutting back elsewhere in the budget.

In voting to adopt the new rates, the council agrees that WSC should be exempted partially for the first year, with the provision that the portion of electric bills accounted for will be paid back in subsequent years, after college financial officers have had an opportunity to request the additional funds in the budgets for those years.

City administrator Fred Brink reported to the council on possible financing of a project to cover an open storm sewer in the Roosevelt Park area.

The city had earlier applied for a federal grant to finance the project, estimated to cost $200,000.

Discussion of the project became somewhat heated regard-

Unity Is Committeeman's Goal

A Wayne State College faculty member Sunday edged a candidate backed by Gov. J. J. Exon for one of the three top positions in the Nebraska Democratic Party.

Allen O'Donnell, a WSC political science professor, defeated incumbent national committeeman Tom Kelley of Omaha 197-189 in secret balloting at the Democratic state convention in Kearney.

O'Donnell was nominated by former state party chairman Hess Dyas, who was defeated by Omaha mayor Ed Zornisky in the May primary race for the party's senatorial nomination.

Mrs. Carol Dyas, nominated Mrs. Frances Ohmsd of Guide Rock, who defeated another Exon backed candidate, incumbent Mrs. Dolores Christensen of Minden, for the committeewoman slot.

Party chairman Dick White of Lincoln had no opposition.

The election was the first in party leaders' memory in which Omaha and Douglas County were left without representation among the top officers.

Exon said fund raising may be hampered in Douglas County, where 97,533 of the state's 358,703 registered Democrats live.

O'Donnell said Monday fund raising is a major concern and he intends to work with Douglas County Democrats, to assure them that they are needed and that they share the same goals.

O'Donnell was chairman of the Democratic First Congressional District organization prior to the election Sunday of Jim Roberts of Lincoln. He is also Wayne County chairman, but said Monday he would have to confer with members of the state party's central committee offices concurrently if demands of the national committeeman's post dictate, he will probably step down from the county chairmanship, O'Donnell said.

A former Air Force senior master sergeant, O'Donnell received his bachelor and masters degrees in international relations before retiring from the military. He has been at WSC for five years and prior to that was a faculty member at South east Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau.

"I'm no miracle worker, but I intend to work hard to elect Democrats," O'Donnell said. "I want to ensure that people can identify with what the Democratic party stands for."

At the convention Sunday, Dyas denied that the election was a fight between his supporters and those of Exon O'Donnell reinforced that Monday, saying he has long worked closely with the Democratic governor and will continue to do so as national committeeman.

Celebration Begins

The Wayne Herald is sponsoring a free barbecue today (Thursday) in recognition of the paper's 100th anniversary and the nation's 200th birthday.

The barbecue, in the parking lot just south of the newspaper building, is one of a number of events scheduled through Monday to celebrate the Bicenennial.

Herald staff members will be serving from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. and from 4:30 until 7:30 p.m.

Because of the time involved in preparing for the barbecue, and because staff members will be participating in the Bicenennial activities, The Wayne Herald will not publish an edition for Monday, July 5. The regular publication schedule will resume Thursday, July 8.

The 3M Extension Club will sponsor a style show Friday night, beginning at 8, with Marge Porter and Carolyn Mills as hostesses.

The evening's program, at the city auditorium, will begin with the presentation of the county Bicenennial senior citizens king and queen.

The style show will follow with county residents modeling Bicenennial outfits. The Treble Clet singers of the First United Methodist Church will provide music for the program.

The Wayne CB'ers will crown a Bicenennial-teen queen after the style show, and the Wayne County Jaycees will judge an entrance parade in the evening.

Bicenennial awards from a variety of contests held throughout the year will also be presented during the program, and the evening program will end with a community sing-along, led by Jack Kubik.

Entries in the Bicenennial parade will assemble at Wayne State College at 10 Saturday morning and the parade will begin its march down Main St. at 10:30.

Parade chairman Gerry Hix said more than 100 units are expected for the parade.

After the parade, activities will again move to the city auditorium where the Wayne senior citizens will be demonstrating a variety of pioneer skills and serving lunch.

Bicenennial chairman Roberta Weite suggested that Saturday afternoon would be a good time to view Bicenennial displays in windows of downtown businesses.

An evening Teens from Norfolk will present a square dance exhibition Saturday night at 7:30 in front of the auditorium.

Activities Sunday will begin with the 13th Annual Wayne County Fair, starting at 11 a.m. at the county fairgrounds.

Beils will ring throughout Wayne County and across the nation at 1 p.m. Sunday in commemoration of the Bicenennial.

An ecumenical church service will begin Sunday night at 7:30 in Willow bowl on the Wayne State College campus and will include music by a city-wide choir.

The budget proposal prepared Friday will be published in The Wayne Herald prior to the meeting. An explanation of the budget will be presented at the public hearing and citizens will have an opportunity to comment on the budget.

THE WAGON RESTORED by Margaret Hansen's industrial arts club gets a careful inspection by Don Liedman in preparation for its participation in many area parades.

SPEAKING OF PEOPLE

District Convention Held

"God's Word is Our Great Heritage" was the theme for the 13th biennial convention of the Nebraska District, Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod, held June 22-24 at the Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church in Hader.

Forty-eight pastors, eight teachers, and 42 delegates from the nine-state area were represented at the three-day meeting.

Dr. Siebert Becker of the Wisconsin Lutheran Seminary delivered an essay, entitled "The Historical Critical Method of Bible Interpretation." He pointed out that by using such methods of biblical criticism, the full and final authority of scripture is undermined. In contrast, it was emphasized that the Bible stands by itself and need not be proven or verified by scholarly study.

Among the various resolutions, it was voted to establish a Nebraska District special ministries board to coordinate efforts in the areas of service to the aging, military, student, and the visually, hearing and mentally handicapped.

A report was given by the Nebraska Lutheran High School Association on their efforts to establish an area high school within the Nebraska District.

The convention re-elected the Rev. Gerald Free of Omaha to his fourth term as district president. The Rev. Paul Knickelbein of Oklahoma City and the Rev. William Leerssen of Winner, S.D. were re-elected first and second vice presidents respectively, and the Rev. William Goehring of Salt Lake City was re-elected secretary.

Mahrt, Blohm Toss 1-Hitter To Lead Allen

Jeff Mahrt's debut on the mound for Allen Thursday night will be easily forgotten, at least not by Wakefield fans.

Mahrt and ace hurler Neil Blohm Sunday night combined to throw a one-hitter to snuff out the home team, 4-2, in Northeast Nebraska Baseball League play.

The win kept Allen in a tight race for second in the league with a 5-3 record, right behind league-leader Homer. Mean while, Wakefield falls to a 2-6 mark.

The game had all the flavor of a pitcher's duel as both pitching staffs whiffed a total of 29 batters. Mahrt, a hard-throwing left hander, had eight strikeouts and Blohm had 10. Wakefield's Rob Eaton had 10 strikeouts in his first time on the mound in nearly two years.

Wakefield started out with a quick 1-0 in the first frame when first baseman Steve Kay walked and rounded the bases on errors before stealing home. Allen tied the match in the top of the fifth on Blohm's base hit which scored Mahrt.

With two outs Wakefield went back in the lead in its half of the fifth when Eaton walked and later scored on Wakefield's only hit, a single by left fielder Mike Barge. The home team loaded the sacks when Mahrt issued a walk to Dale Belt before Blohm took over the reins to retire the side.

Allen continued its string of scoring runs with two in the sixth and one in the seventh.

Somethin' Missin'

FIRST BASEMAN Dean Carroll of Wayne whips around to make a quick tag on Wakefield catcher Dean Sharp as he scrambles back to the bag. But Carroll's attempt was minus one thing — the ball. Ginn's 3-Run Circuit Blast Powers Wayne Past Kingpin Homer

Wayne town team pulled one of its biggest upsets in the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League Tuesday night by handing kingpin Homer a 7-1 defeat, the second for the league leaders in eight contests.

The victory avenged a 4-3 setback Wayne suffered when the two teams met in the season opener in May.

The ingredients for Wayne's fifth win against four losses were the strong arm pitching of Lyle Blivens and the timely hitting, including left fielder Rick Ginn's three-run homer in the fifth frame.

Blivens, who didn't give up any hits, took over in the top of the fourth, replacing manager Don Goeden who hadn't seen any action since his retirement from league ball several years ago.

Goeden, who gave up only one hit, looked strong for the first two frames with a good mixture of curve and fast balls to keep Homer batters guessing. It was in the third that his arm began to tire and he put two Homer players on base, including center fielder Dan Pearson who scored on second baseman Merlin Berkanpas' single shot to shallow left.

The locals took charge with back to back singles by Steve Ivy and Mike Dashiue to open the bottom of the fourth and set up Ginn's smash over left field. With one away, Wayne hitters continued their hot streak as Larry Raabe and Bob Nelson each got base hits. Blivens' sacrifice bunt scored Raabe and Nelson came home when Mike Creighton's pop fly bounced out of the glove of right fielder Gary Quade.

Homer's change on the mound brought Bob Baxter in to replace starter Gerald Jacobson, but Baxter walked two of his first three hitters to set up another Wayne scoring charge. With two away, second baseman Terry Luff ripped a single to score Raabe and Blivens.

Ginn ended the contest as Wayne's leading hitter with a single and circuit hit in four at bats.

Wayne's victory was a complete about face from Sunday's 8-4 loss to visiting Newcastle. "It's the help at back-to-back home runs by Vel Seyler and Monte Miller, Newcastle built a 5-0 lead in the top of the fifth. Wayne clipped the margin to 5-1 in the bottom of the fifth on Hix's double which scored Mike Creighton.

Since the seventh, both teams exchanged runs, but Newcastle still came out on top. The visitors pushed across two and Wayne collected one each by Luff, Herb Harris and Blivens for a 7-4 ball game.

Roger Saul started on the mound for Wayne before Blivens came in during the sixth frame. Saul, however, has decided to quit playing town team ball for the summer in order to save his arm for college. 500.

Green, Players Are Suspended From DC Games

Dakota City manager Arnie "Red" Green and two of his players won't be allowed to play in several upcoming games, it was decided by managers of the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League during a special meeting Friday night in Wakefield.

The decision to suspend Green from two games and catcher Jerry Stinger and center fielder Dennis Eley from one game each resulted after the trio displayed "conduct unbecoming a player" during fights with Wakefield and Allen-Marlinsburg.

Green will not be allowed to manage the Newcastle-Dakota City and Wayne-Dakota City games, if these games aren't played as scheduled, then the suspension will cover games involving Wakefield and Allen, managers agreed.

In a letter to Green, league secretary Merlin "Lethy" Olson said, "The manager can not sit in the dugout nor near the team's dugout. Any attempt by you (Green) to manage the team while on suspension or any harassment of the opposing team or the umpires by you from the stands will mean automatic forfeiture of the game. Eley is suspended for the See GREEN, page 7

Juniors Lose Two Straight Overin: We've Got to Beef Up Our Hitting

"They just don't want to practice on their own," said a disgruntled Wayne coach Hank Overin after his junior team suffered a second straight loss Monday night, this time to up-and-coming Emerson, 5-2. "I don't have all the time necessary to work with the players, so they're going to have to work on their own if they want to win." Overin pointed out after Wayne got only one hit against Emerson.

The home team took charge in the four-run fifth frame when Wayne pitcher Paul Mallette walked two Emerson players and hit two others with pitches. Shortstop Dave Hix relieved Mallette after the first six batters, walking two before claiming the last two outs.

Emerson, which moved into a tie for third with 33 Wayne in the Ralph Bishop League scored single runs in the second and third frames to take a 2-0 command. Wayne got on the scoreboard on a run by Mallette who had walked and scored on an Emerson error. First baseman Bob Kentling scored Wayne's final run in the top of the seventh.

Friday night the locals ran into the same problem — lack of hitting. Wakefield hurler Brad Jones teamed up with Mike Soderberg to allow Wayne only one hit as Wakefield took a 5-2 decision.

Wakefield scored four runs in the opening frame off Wayne's Dave Hix with the help of two walks, a single and a Wayne miscue.

Wayne broke the scoring ice with two runs in the fourth. Jones loaded the sacks on walks before center fielder Mike Sharer ripped a two-run single to score left fielder Monte Love and second baseman Randy Park. Wakefield mentor Paul Eaton then substituted Soderberg.

Wakefield scored the insurance run in the bottom of the sixth when right fielder Tony Pefers walked, advanced on an error and scored on Jones' fielder's choice.

Eor Hix, who struckout 11 and walked five, the loss was his second against four wins.

Work on College Track to Start

Renovation of Wayne State's running track with an all-weather surface has the start of its signal, and work is expected to begin soon, with completion in September.

Wayne president Lyle Seymour said the State College Board of Trustees approved contracts Friday with two firms that entered low bids. Penro Construction Co. of Pender, and Western Engineering Co. of Hartland, Ia.

Penro will install a storm drain system inside the track to carry away water from the football field. Cost: $11,615.50. Western's bid of $40,393.11 includes resurfacing of the track and improvements to high jump and long jump areas. Architect fees to Consolidated Engineers and Architects, Norfolk, will bring total cost under the $60,000 budgeted by the board.

Dr. LeRoy Simpson, WS athletic director and track coach, said the renovation will put a three-inch base of asphalt concrete on the old track, topped by one inch of resilient asphalt, a substance laden with rubber granules.

The track is designed to metric distances.

Hunters Should Reserve Blinds

It might seem a bit early to be making goose hunting plans, but waterfowlers eyeing a blind at Plattsmouth or Clear Creek waterfowl management areas can make their first move on today (Thursday) when the Game and Parks commission begins accepting applications. Applications for blinds at Plattsmouth will be accepted until Aug. 30, and a drawing for reservations will be held Sept. 1 at the area headquarters. Those successful in that drawing will get the use of a blind for one day during the season.

Forms for the Plattsmouth area are available by writing the Plattsmouth Waterfowl Management Area, P.O. Box 525, Plattsmouth, Ne., 68048, or in person at Game and Parks Commission Headquarters in Lincoln. Applicants for the Clear Creek facility above Lake McConaughy will be competing for the season's rights to 20 blind sites on the area. Successful applicants must construct their own blinds on the designated sites. Applications for Clear Creek must be at Commission Headquarters by DIDN'T mind the extra time off last week because there wasn't a weekend to worry about, but the short break didn't stop the news from happening around the area.

For instance, Wayne Midget coach Hank Overin called Friday to inform the staff that Wednesday night of this week was the date set for the annual North-South Midget All-Star game in the Ralph Bishop League. Hank wanted special mention in the weekend paper because the game was set for 7 p.m. at the Wayne Field. After I reminded Hank that there wasn't a weekend paper, we decided that the next best thing to do would be at least mention the names of the players from Wayne, Wakefield and Laurel who represented their clubs in the game.

Wayne has three players on the team who made last year's list. They are Vic Sharpe, Doug Carroll and Steve Bodsstedt. The fourth player from Wayne is Tom Ginn. From Wakefield were Bron Kline, Dean Sharp, Doug Starzl and Brad Jones. Laurel's foursome included Mike, Martin, Steve Anderson, Ron Gadeken and Don Dalton.

Four players each from Emerson, Wakefield, Wayne and Laurel made up the North squad while four players each from Wisner, Bancroft, Walthill and Pender made up the South team.

WAYNE'S Midget and Junior teams will be traveling to Coleridge for the Class C American Legion district playoffs last weekend in July, according to the latest word from Overin.

Also in that district are teams from Wakefield, Randolph and Coleridge. Winners will advance to the area Class C meet at Wakefield.

HOPE next week to do a little research on the effect of the press upon the functions of an athlete. There has been much discussion on the subject. Some persons feel that the press can easily damage an athlete's future by either depicting the youth as one of the best in his field (giving him a big head) or by gutting him down for making a wrong play, causing the player to perhaps lose confidence in himself.

ALSO LEARNED that a graduate of Wayne State College, Reggy Swanson, was one of many athletic trainers from around the country who were selected to help out during last week's U.S. Olympic Track and Field trials in Eugene, Ore.

The 22-year-old rural Wayne man, who will teach this fall in Oregon, is a 1975 December graduate of Wayne State where he earned a bachelor's degree in physical education.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Swanson, Reggy played football and basketball at Wayne State and at Laurel High School.

ONE ALL-STAR game I don't want to forget is the Northeast Nebraska Baseball League clash, set for July 14 at Wakefield. According to league secretary Merlin "Lefty" Olson, the league will be divided into two teams, with players from four clubs making up each team.

Players from Ponca, Allen-Marlinburg, Newcastle and Wayne will face players selected from Wakefield, Pender, Homer and Dakota City. Exactly who will play in the all-star tilt will be decided by July 8. Lefty pointed out.

Emerson Hands Midgets First Loss in 8 Games

Wayne Midgets have lost a week to shape up for Monday's contest with a Laurel club if the locals want to remain alive in the race for first place in the Ralph Bishop League.

Laurel comes into the home tilt at Wayne with only a 1-7 record, but coach Hank Overin isn't taking the area club lightly especially after Wayne suffered its first loss Monday night to host Emerson.

The locals were riding a seven-game winning streak when coach Bud Utemark's club shot the air out of Wayne's balloon with a 5-2 decision.

Wayne outhit Emerson, 8-4, but the locals were riding a seven-game winning trail in the 18 and under division.

Wayne girls got by Laurel Wednesday, 11-9, to get back on the winning trail in the 18 and under division.

Bev Munter led Wayne's ninth hit attack with a pair of doubles, the first of which helped to put the locals in the lead 5-1 going into the bottom of the fourth.

Laurel came back in its half of the fourth with five big runs to forge a 6-3 lead, with the help of a triple by third baseman Bowman. Wayne scored four runs in the fifth and single runs in the last two frames for the team's second win against two losses.

On Saturday, June 19, Wakefield opened Wayne, 17-15, as both teams combined for 36 hits. Lisa Paul, Mary Kober and Lori Sampson were the big hitters for Wakefield. Paul singled three times and had a double, Kober had two singles and a triple and Sampson banged three base hits.

Jolene Bennett and Sue Schwartz had three singles each for Wayne.

Both the 13 and under and the 15 and under girls team remain undefeated.

Wayne's 15 and under team pushed its record to six victories with a 9-7 decision over Wakefield and a 10-0 blanking of Laurel. Winning pitcher Lesa Barclay smacked a pair of singles and a triple in the Wakefield game.

In the 13 and under contest, Wayne topped Laurel 10-1 for its third win.

Emerson enjoyed scoring runs in the first, second and fourth innings before pushing two across in the bottom of the fifth on an error and a fielder's choice.

Wayne was in the driver's seat against Wakefield Friday night, scoring six runs in the second inning en route to an 11-5 victory over the former league leaders.

Carroll again carried the hefty bat with a pair of singles and a double in four times at bat.

Wayne took advantage of the sluggish pitching of Brad Jones in the second inning to score the majority of its six runs. Jones walked five Wayne batters and gave up five hits before coach Paul Eaton began his first of five substitutions on the mound for Wakefield.

California transfer Rick Guy was next on the mound, but his stint lasted only an inning before Doug Starzl went to the hill. Later Eaton called on another player before giving the ball back to Starzl to complete the game.

Pets of U.S. Presidents: TR's Menagerie

An unforgettable episode in his life was his charge of the U.S. Cavalry Rough Riders up Kettle Hill at San Juan led by Lt. Col. "Teddy" Roosevelt.

Equally unforgettable to anyone visiting the White House grounds during his presidency was the amusing aggregation of various pet animals there.

Roosevelt started an entirely new chapter in the history of White House pets at the turn of the 20th century when he became the nation's youngest President at age 42. He ushered in what has been called the "White House Period" in which the Executive Mansion was thrown open to pets of all kinds.

His included nine riding horses, two carriage horses, Algonquin—a white Arabian stallion, a calico pony, Pete, bull terrier, Sailor Boy, Chesapeake retriever, Jack—Kermit Roosevelt's dog, a guinea pig, Alice Roosevelt's spaniel, Skip, a mongrel, Rollo, a St. Bernard, Josiah, a budger, two pet cats, "Toby" was a naturalist, outdoorsman, explorer, and big game sportsman. It was a time of simpler pleasures, and family pets were part of that.

Sailor Boy, Jack retriever, liked to go boating with the children. If they forgot to take him, he'd jump in the water, swim to the boat and clamber aboard.

Rollo, the St. Bernard, was the children's favorite dog. The good nature of this big fellow was a White House legend.

Summer White House "Zoo"

And the family's Summer White House estate at Oyster Bay, Long Island, harbored an animal world resembling a zoo. Species included lion, hyena, wildcat, egret, zebra, five bears, kangaroos, and various other small animals, reptiles and birds.

Obviously, the Roosevelt's loved animals of all kinds. "Toby" was a naturalist, outdoorsman, explorer, and big game sportsman. It was a time of simpler pleasures, and family pets were part of that.

Sailor Boy, Jack retriever, liked to go boating with the children. If they forgot to take him, he'd jump in the water, swim to the boat and clamber aboard.

Wagon Keeps Rollin'

HARDWARE FOR this covered wagon came from the Fred Liedman farm near Carroll, as did the running gear. Photo on the left shows the brake mechanism after it was sanded and painted. Right photo shows spring seat and interior. Restoration work was done by a Ralston middle school industrial arts club, under the direction of Margaret Hanson, formerly of rural Carroll. The wagon will be seen in Wayne's Bicentennial parade.

The first Stars and Stripes, whose birthday we observe on June 14, was created on that date, in 1777, when, according to the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve, the Continental Congress resolved: "That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, that the union be thirteen stars, white, in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

Report Shows: Food, Cars Pace Sales in County

How much are Wayne County families spending per year? Where are they spending it and for what? According to a market report just released, consumer outlays in local stores — for food, automobiles, wearing apparel and other products — were at a relatively high level in the past year. Most retailers in the area were able to report increases over the previous year.

With most local families enjoying bigger incomes than before, they were in a position to spend more and were willing to do so, despite the fact that their gains were offset to a considerable extent by rising costs.

The facts and figures, showing just how the consumer dollar was spent locally, are contained in the new market study, made by the Standard Rate and Data Service. Comparable data is included for other sections of the county.

According to the findings in Wayne County, a large part of the dollar went to stores selling food and automotive equipment. Between them, they garnered 44 per cent of all retail business in the area.

In other parts of the United States, they got 37 per cent of the total and, in the West North Central states, 38 per cent.

The amount spent for food alone, in local supermarkets, butcher shops, bakeries, delicatessens and the like totaled more than $3,714,000.

This expenditure covers only food bought for home consumption. It does not include money spent in restaurants and in other eating and drinking places.

The report shows, also, that business was good in the automotive field, where sales of cars, motorcycles, trailers, boats and related equipment reached $6,523,000.

Market strength was also in evidence in the local area in most other retail lines.

Department stores and variety shops carrying general merchandise chalked up $1,772,000.

Those specializing in coats, dresses, shoes and other articles of apparel grossed $607,000.

Sales of furniture and home furnishings added up to $591,000.

As for the near future, most economists are optimistic. With employment rising and income and savings at a peak, they foresee a period of good times ahead.

Veterinarian Tours Nebraska

A veterinarian who was born and raised in Ireland and worked in Rhodesia, South Africa visited Wayne and parts of Northeast Nebraska this week.

Dr. George H.G. Stewart, who recently attended the International Pig Veterinary Society

Congress in Iowa, stayed with the Ken Liska family during his two-day visit Monday and Tuesday to study the swine industry in the Midwest.

Stewart, who was a practicing veterinarian for 20 years in Ireland before going to Rhodesia six years ago as a swine consultant, pointed out that he was amazed at how efficient the pig industry is in America and particularly in the Midwest.

During his stay, Drs. Stewart and Liska visited several dairy and pig farms in the area. Among those were dairy farms belonging to Don Kubik and John Anderson and hog farms operated by Lane and Lyle Maroltz, Hoskins, Wilfred Nelson, Laurel, Lewis Luff and Larry Nichols. Wayne and Greater NEN Pig Coop, Wayne.

They also toured the Northeast Station near Concord and a center pivot irrigation system on the Fred Janke farm, rural Wayne.

About his stays in South Africa and Ireland, Dr. Stewart said that the primary cause of the struggles in both countries is international Communism, and the strife involving Blacks and Whites in Rhodesia isn't racial alone as newspapers and net works have reported, he said Blacks from other countries have stirred up Blacks living in Rhodesia against the Whites who have ruled.

Looking at the Catholic Protestant struggle in Ireland, Dr. Stewart again noted that the problem isn't internal alone. Communism is the instigator, he said.

ent in fixing up their buildings. The committee believes that building renovations by individual businessmen would be helpful in convincing the state to move up on its timetable plans to widen Highway 15. Main St. in Wayne's downtown business district.

A number of building owners who attended Tuesday's meeting expressed an interest in Nelson's services and the improvement committee will circulate a list businessmen, giving them an opportunity to sign if they are interested in renovating their buildings.

Nelson will return to Wayne July 20 for another noon luncheon at Les' Steak House where he will give his presentation again for those who missed the initial meetings, and to meet with store owners who have called they are interested in having him provide a design for renovation of their buildings.

Nelson said cost of the drawings is about $2 a front-foot for individual buildings, but that the cost drops when several businesses in the same community contract for his services at the same time. This also facilitates coming up with a design in which adjacent buildings complement each other.

False Alarms Prompt Police CB Directive

Local citizen band (CB) radio operators who want to call for police assistance via radio will have to give more than their CB handle.

Wayne police chief Vern Fairchild said his department has received numerous false alarm type calls from CB operators who gave only their CB nickname or call letters.

Followup is important in most investigations, Fairchild said, and that means persons registering complaints must give their name and address so they can be contacted by officers if necessary.

The Wayne County sheriff's office has also received some false alarm calls. The sheriff's department does not have CB equipment but has had calls relayed by the police department dispatcher.

Fairchild's directive states that the department will not dispatch emergency manpower or equipment for any other agency based upon CB reports in which the operator is not identified.

Rain for June Is 3rd Lowest

Precipitation for the month of June this year is the third lowest amount on record, according to Pat Gross of Tri-State Finance.

The least amount of rain recorded for June was in 1933 when Wayne received 1.08 inches of moisture his records show. The records go back to 1914. In 1936 Wayne had only 1.53 of moisture, he added.

Last Thursday Wayne and the surrounding area ended nearly a 25-day drought when an inch fell in Wayne. Other area towns included Winside, recorded over two inches.

The average amount of rain fall for this month is between six to seven inches, Gross said.

Job Service Officer Plans Wayne Visit

ing who will pay for the project. Vakoc supports the position that at least part of the project should be paid for by special assessments. That would mean owners whose property drains into the storm sewer would help pay for the project. A sizeable portion of the community benefits from the storm sewer.

That could mean some difficulties in filing up the special assessment district and could mean some delay in beginning the project.

Vernon Russell suggested that, because of the complexity of the project, it might be more practical to finance it as a general obligation of the city.

Vakoc was adamant regarding the special assessment method of financing, Russell replied, saying he has been trying to get some action on the storm sewer for three years because it is dangerous to children in the area and a health hazard.

"I hope we don't have to have a child drown before the council will finally take action," Russell said.

Vakoc called that a "cheap shot" saying he is just as concerned about safety as Russell, but that he feels he has an obligation to his constituents to ensure that special assessments are levied for city projects in cases where property owners received special benefits.

Russell responded, saying he has no objection to an assessment for the project, so long as the ditch is covered.

Uphot of the discussion was that Brink was directed to obtain an estimate as to what the engineering costs would be for the project and for setting up the assessment district.

In other action the council agreed to have Brink, street commissioner Vern Schultz, and electric system supervisor Bill Mellor examine the Girl Scout cabin and estimate the cost for making needed repairs. Mrs. Robert Carhart requested that the city continue to perform maintenance duties on the cabin, owned by the Girl Scouts, but located on city property.

Approved a $42,821.27 budget for the airport authority for the fiscal year which begins in August. City property taxes will provide about $6,500 of that amount with the remainder being provided through airport revenues.

Tax levy for the airport will be two mills, compared with one mill for the current fiscal year. Airport authority chairman Frank Prather said the additional mill will be used to help pay off some $30,000 in registered warrants owed the city electric fund. The airport authority inherited the indebtedness when it was formed a year ago. Prather said the organization feels the debts must be paid before any further improvements to the airport can be considered.

Passed a resolution giving street commissioner Schultz authority to direct property owners to mow weeds.

Approved a 5.5 per cent cost of living raise for city employees, excluding the city administrator and city clerk.

Failed to give final approval to an ordinance creating an improvement district in the downtown business area, because of uncertainties regarding exactly what is proposed for the area. The ordinance will be read for the second time at the next regular session.

Authorized Brink to ask for engineering specifications for an industrial tractor and to advertise for bids.

Approved a resolution for the sale of land in the city industrial tract to the National Nebraska Fiberglass Corporation.

City attorney Budd Bornhoff reported that the contract had been submitted to the company for the signature. He said local proceedings will begin as soon as it is returned and signed by the mayor.

Legality of the contract is in question because of a recent Nebraska Supreme Court decision. After the contract is executed, the city will sue for execution of the contract. The fiberglass company wants to be assured of a clear title to the property, and a favorable judge's decision could ensure that.

Wakeness beyond the common experience of an occasional difficulty in getting to sleep has significance and should be investigated by a physician, according to the Nebraska Medical Association.

A bad day at the office, trouble at home or difficulty in school can cause a person to have difficulty in falling asleep and then remaining asleep. The association warns that sedatives and sleep products should be used only for occasional relief and not as a perpetual crutch.

When wakeness occurs without apparent cause and persists, it is time to be sure that unrecognized diseases which may be causing it are identified and treated.

Report Changes in SS Payments

Working people under 72 getting social security retirement, survivors or dependents payments should report any changes in their 1976 earnings estimates as soon as possible, according to Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk.

The Norfolk social security office is at 1310 Norfolk Avenue. The phone number is 371-1595.

"People who find they are earning less than they originally estimated may get additional social security payments during 1976 if they report the change," Branch said.

Wayne Man Wins $25 Bucks Prize

"I can use $25 anytime," commented Louis Meyer of Wayne after he won the consolation prize last week during the weekly Birthday Bucks promotion sponsored by participating businesses.

Meyer, whose birthday is Nov. 12, 1914, was three days away from matching the winning birth date of Nov. 9, drawn by David Kraemer of Gamble's and announced at 8:15 p.m. Thursday. Had Meyer's date matched the winning date he would have won $300 in Birthday Bucks. As a result, this week's total goes up $75 to $325.

Meyer was in the Black Knight at the time the winning date was announced. Tonight (Thursday) some luck shopper will have a chance to match his birthday with the winning date when the drawing is held. No purchase or registration are necessary to be a winner. However, a shopper must be present in a participating store when the date is announced.

Vern Nobbes Host Family Reunion

Cheaply made, poor quality sunglasses can cause eye strain and fatigue, warns the Nebraska Society for the Prevention of Blindness. Before buying them, check sunglasses in and against the light for scratches, streaks, bubbles, blurs or other flaws in the lenses. And, check, too, that the lenses are of equal color and density, as badly matched ones can severely affect depth perception. The best sunglasses, suggests the Society, have lenses ground of ophthalmic glass or high-quality plastic, in a gray, green, or brown tint, with a light-transmission factor of 30 per cent or less.

WS Students on the Road

Trip to Mexico Includes Visit by Kissinger

A group of Wayne State students went to Mexico expecting to see the sights and say something they did not expect — a fellow American named Henry Kissinger.

It was in Mexico City, right across the street from the hotel where the Wayne class was staying that the Secretary of State laid a wreath at a monument commemorating the Mexican Revolution of 1917.

So the American students, who might otherwise live a lifetime without seeing a U.S. cabinet officer, shook hands with Dr. Kissinger, and presently some of them were being interviewed by a Mexican radio station.

This was among recollections of the June 7-21 study tour mentioned by Dr. Monte McLaws, Wayne State associate professor of history who directed the trip. His entourage included 20 students taking the tour for credit in Spanish or history, 17 going as "tourists," and an assistant director, Stephanie Hays, who teaches English and Spanish at Norfolk High School.

Before the trip, Dr. McLaws assigned credit students to read three books on Mexico. One of them written about 1950, analyzed poverty in Mexico — painting a picture of grim American students could not believe it, the professor said. But they found conditions really that way even now.

Students who enrolled for credit are required to write a paper relating their observations. McLaws recalled his observations of what seemed to impress his students:

"The grandeur of early civilizations in Mexico, especially the architecture of pre-Spanish times." The group visited a world-renowned anthropological museum in Mexico City and some of the notable ancient ruins.

"The size and complexity and hectic traffic of Mexico City (population about 12 million) and its extremes of wealth and poverty."

"Easy-going simplicity of life in the smaller towns. A common entertainment — strolling through the town square of an evening to chat with friends."

"Hard labor almost everywhere. Example large crews of men along highways cutting grass with machetes. They are transported to the job and left all week, living in tents along the way."

"Collective farms around Torreón, center of a land reform experiment after the 1917 revolution, in which the government look over all the land, hired farmers, provided the implements."

"How have the collectives worked?" "Now very successfully, I think," McLaws said. "There is no individual ownership of land and so little incentive." He observed few tractors. Most of the farmers apparently cultivated with hand plows pulled by horse, mule or ox. The land is rocky, hilly, dry.

Curiously, major crops besides corn in the Torreón region are cactus, source of aquila, and century plants which yield a form of beer, brewed right in the hollowed-out plant, and usable fibers from leaves.

The Wayne group traveled by bus, American to the border, then a Mexican bus with two drivers who stayed with the tour all the way ("First drivers you could want — friendly, personable, involved with the tour," McLaws said.)

The professor summed up his impression of student comments this way: "I never really appreciated what we have in the U.S., compared with the poverty in Mexico."

Theater Class Will Perform July 7-8

One of the new classes on the Wayne State College campus this summer is Reader's Theatre, which meets daily with Arthur Dirks, WSC communication arts instructor.

Students in the course study the dramatic reading of various types of literature - short stories, poems, essays and theatrical works. But reader's theatre should not be confused with a simple reading, emphasizes Dirks. "It is much more dramatic."

The material is broken down into voices. Some lighting is used, and scenes are suggested with a minimum of stage setting.

Those curious about reader's theatre will have the opportunity to get a first hand look next month when Dirks' class of five students gives a presentation at the Wayne State College Student Center. The performances, set for Wednesday and Thursday, July 7 and 8 will begin at 9 p.m. at the Menagerie Room in the Student Center.

Students are adapting their own material and directing the production themselves. The theme has not yet been chosen. Admission will be free.

Boat Trip Planned

Members of Northeast RY will meet Saturday, July 17, for a boat ride down the Missouri River, according to Roy Stohler, area youth specialist at the Northeast Station near Concord.

Mrs. Jean Kuehl, Curtis and Steven, Milwaukee, Wisc., spent Thursday in the Elmer Monk home. That evening they were guests in the Dean Wolfram home, Columbus.

CANNING LIDS

Canning lids seem to be appearing in all sorts of places—department stores, farm stores, hardware stores as well as in grocery stores. Many of the lids have new faces and new names. The question is, will the new brands and kinds of lids perform as well as the ones we are accustomed to using?

The Food and Drug Administration does not recommend the plastic lid or insert, lined with a sealing compound and used with a screw ring, or the plasticized film called "canning skin". These plastic materials are somewhat permeable and may allow oxidation of the canned food, affecting both the appearance and quality of the food.

Most two piece lids of the type we have used before should be reliable if the enamel lining is not scratched and the sealing compound is elastic and not damaged. One piece lids that are supposed to be reusable are questioned.

One company makes colorful plastic rings. We have used these once in a pressure canner and they performed well. At this time, there is no way of knowing how they will stand up under repeated use.

Prices of lids vary from store to store. The U.S.D.A. reports that the 1976 supply of home canning lids will be almost double the amount produced last year. The distribution pattern will follow the canning season, starting in the South and moving North.

An old photograph taken in the Korlwright and Carven studio in Wayne prompted Carl Melin of Vastras, Sweden to trace his family's lineage and led to a visit to Wayne County by he and his wife, Ethel.

The Melins will observe the United States Bicentennial in Wayne. They are now guests of his third cousin, Lawrence Backstrom, who farms west of town.

When Melin retired he found a picture of the family of Andros Backstrom, Lawrence's grand father, who came to the United States from Sweden in 1869, eventually settling in Wayne County in 1882. Andros Backstrom and Melin's grandfather, August Backstrom were brother. Melin became interested in finding his American relatives after finding a photo taken in Wayne of Andros Backstrom and his family, and ran an advertisement in the Minneapolis Daily News, along with the picture.

Mr. and Mrs. Lars Granath saw the advertisement and contacted the Lawrence Backstrom family, who in turn wrote to their Swedish cousins.

The Melins had planned to visit in Nebraska last year, but decided to wait until this summer, after they learned the Swedish Pioneer Historical Society was planning a U.S. tour in conjunction with the Bicentennial.

Mr. and Mrs. Melin stayed with the tour group until they reached Duluth, Minn., then traveled by bus to Sioux City. Their home of Vastras, population 127,000, is located in a hilly, wooded region, with many lakes. The couple found Northeast Nebraska a surprise. They had expected miles of flat country, but find the rolling hills lovely, the people friendly, and hope to make a return visit.

Other relatives they are visiting in the Wayne, Wakefield, and Oakland areas include Donald, Franklin, Aldan and Dean Backstrom, Ephraim, Harold and Ted Johnson, Mrs. Clarence Gison, and Mrs. Ted James. Altogether, Melin has 22 American cousins.

Melin noted that the journey he and his wife made to the U.S. was much easier than that of Andros Backstrom. The Melins' journey took eight hours by air. Andros and his family took 18 weeks to arrive in the United States. Two of three children died at sea and the third child and the first Mrs. Backstrom later died in Illinois. Andros remarried after moving to Wayne County.

The Swedish visitors will be guests in Wayne County until after the Fourth of July celebration. They will rejoin their tour group Wednesday in Chicago.

After the noon meal, the business meeting was held with Walter Flier Jr., of Hoskins being elected president and Mrs. Walter Windhorst of North Platte, secretary-treasurer.

Eighteen towns were represented with out of state relatives attending from Philadelphia, Penn., and Lakeland and Okabea, Minn.

Attending Camp Karlov, Bruggeman, Kay Woodman, Sherril Marolt and Mary Wantoch are spending this week at Camp Messiah, Polk, Nebr.

Members of Peace United Church of Christ will hold a no-host dinner Sunday, July 4, at the church to welcome Pastor and Mrs. Galen Hahn.

Everyone is asked to bring their own table service, coffee and cold drinks will be furnished.

Health Tips Today's children must be educated to the realization that a major portion of their lives will be lived as "senior citizens."

The Nebraska Medical Association reports that many authorities in the field of aging maintain that intelligent application of existing knowledge should produce an average life expectancy of 90 to 100 or more years.

Experts suggest that the same kind of today's parents toward their own parents and childhood memories will largely determine what they can expect from their children.

The medical association points out that the needs are the same at any age; companionship, privacy, separate friendships, mutual consideration, tolerance, courtesy and usefulness. With planning and understanding, these needs can be satisfied in the three-generation, as well as in the two-generation household.

New Pastor At Hoskins

The Rev. Galen E. Hahn, new pastor of the Peace-United Church of Christ in Hoskins, will deliver his first sermon Sunday, July 4. He replaces the Rev. Ira Wilcox of Coleridge, who was served the Peach church as interim pastor for the past 10 months.

Pastor Hahn comes to Hoskins from Winchester, W.V., where he served the Congregational United Church of Christ. A native of Frederick, Md., he graduated from Catawba College in Salisbury, N.C., and received his master of divinity degree from Yale Divinity School in New Haven, Conn.

He has also studied education at Boston University School of Education, New School for Social Research in New York City and National Association for Youth Outreach Workers in Chicago, and other schools.

He was parish intern in Norwalk, Conn., and was ordained in June of 1972 at his home church. As assistant minister in Grand Rapids, Mich., Hahn directed a church school, developed a youth program, led retreats and served the 1,200-member church during the pastor's absence.

Since serving the Winchester parish, Hahn has reactivated the church and served on many community and church related boards.

His wife, Sandra, is a native of DeWitt, Ark. She has taught music and worked with youth in the mental health field.

We're sure that Rockefeller was not advocating the abandonment of the basic principles that govern the activity of most successful individuals. What he was suggesting was that we look for new ways to apply these principles, to achieve new goals.

When you "travel the worn paths of accepted success" you have a great deal of company and competition. With a little imagination, new concepts and new ideas, you can insure the success of your venture.

Summer Course Means Travel

Summer school isn't dull stuff for the dozen high school students including Ron Uelch of Wayne, who are enrolled in the National Science Foundation science training program at Wayne State College.

The students, who arrived June 14 for the six-week course, have already traveled to DeSoto Bend Wildlife Refuge north of Blair on the Missouri River, and to Indian Cave State Park in the southeastern part of Nebraska to study marine biology and related topics. They have visited the site of a proposed power plant north of Lynch on the Missouri River, and have inspected a central pivot irrigation system near Meadow Grove. Still ahead of them is a visit to the Omaha Public Power District's coal-fired power plant, a guided tour of Gavins Point Dam, a trip to Ponca State Park to study deciduous trees and a canoe trip down the Missouri River, among other things.

Sandwiched in between the field trips are lab work, lectures, discussions and personal research on the Wayne State College campus.

Motives of Panama Canal Zone residents questioned

Harris is a registered lobbyist for Panama. The following article first appeared in the Foreign Affairs Newsletter, published by The Institute for International Policy.

By GODFREY HARRIS

Important economic matters surrounding the Panama Canal are not often discussed by those debating the terms of a new treaty to govern future jurisdiction over the Zone and operation of the waterway. Sometimes forgotten is the fact that superlatively do not fit into the 60-year-old locks; that only about nine per cent of U.S. international trade passes through the Canal; that an estimated seven tenths of one per cent of our annual intercoastal trade depends on the Canal; and that the number of annual transits through the Canal has dropped 15 per cent since 1970 while the cost of supporting the U.S. civilian establishment has jumped 34 per cent.

Of all of these matters, perhaps the latter point is most often ignored. Yet, an analysis of these support costs suggests that retention of the Canal may now be more a matter of the American taxpayer supporting an excessive lifestyle for a fourth generation of Zonians than a matter vital to the future well-being of the United States itself.

In budgeting their annual costs, the two Canal agencies — the Canal Zone Government and the Panama Canal Company — have been consistently high in their estimation of expected revenues and equally low on estimated expenditures.

In FY 1973, the budget estimated that total Canal revenues would exceed expenditures by $4,922,000. The actual loss in that year was $1.3 million. For FY 1974, a revised estimate of the loss was $11.8 million. For FY 1975, the budget had the Canal breaking even; the results showed another loss of $6.4 million.

Zonian officials have never really had to justify how they spend almost $400 million U.S. dollars each year to run the Canal and Zone.

Governmental housing rentals for Americans in the Zone average only $12.17 per month with utilities — a sum which effectively increases the average annual income of employees over State-side citizens by at least 10 per cent.

American employees in the Zone receive 45.5 work days per year in paid holidays — 125 per cent more vacation time than most Americans receive.

American employees in the Zone receive a 15 per cent differential on salaries and retirement benefits; this salary bonus is paid to other U.S. personnel working in the Republic of Panama add, equally important, no other U.S. employee anywhere receives a retirement differential.

American residents in the Zone pay no state or local taxes whatever — something which costs all other Americans an estimated average of 17 per cent of their annual incomes — while their groceries and notions are sold to them at cost in government commissaries.

While surplus monies from shipping might have been sent back to the Treasury, as the law requires, no one State-side probably would have noticed. As a result surpluses have been made to reinvest in support of advantages that other colonialists elsewhere have surely enjoyed. Of late, however, there has been no surplus to hide. There has also been no thought given to retrenching on the lifestyle either. To solve the dilemma, other agency contributions quietly increased until the tolls had to be raised for the first time in 1974. Now the Canal Company, shaken by a recent pilot's strike protesting cost saving changes, has asked Congress to raise them again.

In short, some wonder whether those Zonians who so actively lobby for the maintenance of the status quo in the Canal Zone are actually as concerned for America's vital National interests as they are for their own individual self-interest.

Salvation Army Workingman's Hotel Omaha, 1906

The Salvation Army has traditionally concerned itself with the downtrodden, the penniless, the alcoholic — the man who was down and almost out. Some charitable agencies have felt uncomfortable dealing with him or he felt uncomfortable dealing with them. But not the Salvation Army.

In December, 1906, the Omaha World-Herald (see files at the Nebraska State Historical Society) sent one of its reporters (unnamed) disguised as a hobo to get the story of "Omaha's Down and Out." A 7-column headline summarizes his experiences. "Reporter Takes Hobo's Chances. Pictures of Salvation Army Workingman's Hotel (18 So. 10th), where the lifetime is thrown out — finds human nature most interesting there and the compulsory bath an important part of the institution." Following are excerpts from the newsmagazine's full page article.

"It is alarmingly easy to pass yourself as a member of the down and out club, to simulate it so well that lifetime members give you the hand of fellowship. A three weeks' stay away from the barber's chair had supplied (me) one of the badges of the craft, for a scratch beard will cause the world to put you down in the column of the questionnaires." He headed for the Workingman's Hotel, a haven for the unemployed who were honestly looking for jobs. One "vet" of the routine warned him that "Omaha is not easy from a panhandler's point of view. The police are too prone to pick them up." Labor, if only occasional, seemed preferable. Some of the men loitering around the hotel contemplating asking for a night's work, but one accepted a job grubbing stumps at $1.25 a day.

Beds are available at 15c per night to guests looking for work, the reporter learned. Admittance was contingent on taking a bath at 6 p.m. and turning in by 10. Prospective bathers were taken to the cellar where showers were provided. Clothing was fumigated with sulphur during the process — so thoroughly no crumbs or other furniture could escape. The attendant repeatedly urged the bathers toward the full force of the spray, which to those unaccustomed to water was too much at one time. "Probably a long time since you've had a good scrub and probably you won't take another soon," the attendant said. "Little more soap on your neck there. It's mighty dry." All the dirt had to come off before towels were issued. Even so, towels were soured in a bucket of hot water and had to answer also for a wash rag. "It required skill and training to dry with a wet towel," the reporter recalled, "and the men who shined my shoes were over some wet towels." Shoes, the most important part of the hobo's wardrobe, went under his pillow while his clothes were hung on a nail near the now cleansed hobo's cot.

One guest pointed out that "a fellow ought to blow into this place every two weeks and get cleaned up." Another agreed but said it really "didn't make much difference whether the water was whether a man was clean or not." A "vet" lodger insisted he "wasn't a bum. As long as you've got money to pay you ain't one."

Signs on the walls gave the basic rules: "Disputing not permitted. No loud talking after 10 p.m. . . . Guests leaving must take their baggage or it will be sold in 30 days. . . . Salvation Army will not be responsible for any property lost or stolen."

When the reporter left in the morning, he took the advice of a veteran hobo and let the wind blow the sulphur from his clothes. "The last time I was here," the hobo said, "I went right to the saloon and stood by the stove. Pretty soon everybody was coughing and sneezing and the bouncer threw me out."

After changing into good clothes, the newly shaven reporter went back to talk to Mrs. Dodd, the hotel proprietor. He found that no man who indicated he wanted work was refused a room; those without 50 cents could be lodged on order from the Salvation Army. "I've seen some stormy nights the rules were often waived. Mr. Dodd handled the shower room and hotel maintenance and helped arrange jobs for the men. The hotel provided no meal service, but Mrs. Dodd was careful to see that her guests found places to eat, especially on holidays. She occasionally lent them small sums of money but had always been repaid, she said.

Some rooms in the hotel were occupied by permanent guests, one a youngster who had found full-time employment in a brick plant. Such guests had to go through the fumigating process but once they were required to take a weekly bath.

The reporter found out from Mrs. Dodd why he wasn't offered a job. His disguise was insufficient to cover up his status. The Dodd's had sized him up "as a man who was (not) very keen about getting a job," and since the newsmag left promptly in the morning, they assumed their estimate had been correct. During good-weather, "March to Thanksgiving," job demand had exceeded the supply, Dodd said.

The reporter also came away with respect for the Salvation Army operation. "From personal experience it is apparent that for the man who has been thrust across the borderline of Down-and-out-land, the Workingman's Hotel affords an opportunity for regaining a hold on oneself, on life, and on the bread problem."

Energy is critical farm question

Farm and ranch people who produce the nation's food and the world's largest source of exported foods have a very large stake in what this nation ultimately does about the increasingly gloomy energy outlook.

The marvelous productivity of American agriculture has developed mainly through a relatively cheap and dependable supply of petroleum products which has enabled the U.S. farmer to produce enough food to supply himself and 55 other people. He has been able to divert one third of this cropland acreage which was once needed to feed and maintain his horse to production of grain for people and livestock to feed people.

Fifteen per cent of the nation's total energy demand is used by the agriculture industry and every acre that is cultivated and harvested today requires 72 gallons of petroleum, and nine of those gallons come from imported oil subject to the whims and monopoly control of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). OPEC can raise the price of crude anytime or as the Arab countries did in 1973, apply another embargo.

Unfortunately the U.S. is more dependent on foreign oil exports today than it was in 1973 — to the tune of an extra million barrels per day. Americans, after a brief period of conservation and despite the higher prices, are using petroleum products as if the oil sources would be plentiful forever instead of totally depleted in a relatively few short years. Environmentalists oppose the new power plants and the coal-fired electrical generating plants which would provide electricity for the nation's farms and industries, reduce the dependence of foreign oil and conserve dwindling domestic supplies. They busy delay and throw roadblocks into offshore exploration for new domestic oil and natural gas sources.

Congress has displayed a shortsighted unwillingness to come to grips with the deteriorating energy situation. The energy bill passed by the Congress early this year has in the course of just a few short months drastically reduced the amount of expiratory drilling for domestic oil and gas reserves. Because of increased imports of foreign crude, the nation has plentiful supplies of gasoline, diesel fuel, LP gas and residual oils on hand. But the nation's oil supplies are more dependent than ever on foreign sources which three years ago arbitrarily tripled the price of crude in one swoop.

Some politicians with their typical penchant for confusing the issues have been offering such solutions as a breakup of the large petroleum companies, a proposal advanced by such people as Ralph Nader and his following. The petroleum companies can take care of themselves but farmers and ranchers know that such action won't produce one more barrel of domestic crude or open up a single new natural gas field, or reduce the price of gasoline and diesel fuel one cent. The proposal is about as logical as telling farmers they could buy their tractors and combines cheaper if Congress passed a law to break up John Deere and International Harvester.

The productivity of U.S. agriculture is dependent primarily on making petroleum sources last until replacement sources of energy can be developed. Every interruption and every delay in the needed overall energy development program increases the vulnerability of this nation's food supplies. When the oil and gas pipeline stops flowing, the argument is not going to be over whether to drive a big car or small car, it will be over whether there will be enough food produced to go around — M. M. Van Kirk, Farm Bureau Federation.

"Probably the best example of a safety feature on your car is the lap and shoulder restraint belt."

Governor Jim Exon

It's been shown that without a safety belt the motorist might be stunned or knocked unconscious by the crash — which would considerably lessen the chances of escaping from the vehicle alive. Belts enable individuals to remain securely in their seats, and if necessary, the driver may apply the brakes or take evasive action without fear of injuring the passengers.

As Governor, I urge you to be a defensive driver. Buckle up every time you get in the car, and help make the bicentennial year a safe year.

Technology is still important

When King Archidamos III of Sparta learned about the catapult, he swore an oath and predicted there would no longer be a place in warfare for human bravery. That was roughly 365 B.C.

The king has lots of company through history. During the reign of the Emperor Trajan, one of the leading technical experts of the Roman Empire, Sextus Julius Frontinus, advised against research on the weapons of war. He said there was no hope of further improvement.

The crossbow was supposed to end war. Then the machine gun.

More recently, a whole host of eminent scientists and weapons experts stated firmly that the atomic bomb couldn't possibly work.

But why pick on the military? Civilian estimates of future technology have been at least as far off.

In 1899, the director of the U.S. Patent Office urged President McKinley to close the office, because "everything that can be invented has been invented."

Not long after the birth of the airplane, the astronomer William Pickering wrote, "The popular mind often pictures gigantic flying machines speeding across the Atlantic carrying innumerable passengers. It seems safe to say that such ideas must be wholly visionary."

Wilbur Wright, who presumably believed in airplanes, didn't see any future for the horseless carriage. And Edison was convinced that AC electricity was too dangerous for general use (I wonder if the anti-nuclear power people know that?).

Resource depletion prediction is a specialty in itself. It's positively amazing the number of times we are supposed to have run out of this-and-that by now.

A little over 100 years ago, the noted British economist Stanley Jevons predicted an imminent shortage of coal.

Theodore Roosevelt fretted, in 1906, that we were in danger of exhausting our mineral reserves.

An expert study in 1929 forecast the end of the world in reserves in 10 years. A similar study, made in 1944, said the U.S.A. would run out of tin, nickel, zinc, lead and manganese by 1972. In 1972, the Club of Rome was forecasting the end of tin supplies in "only" 15 years.

There's one school of scientists that predicts the end of civilization through a gradual cooling of the climate, because of man's activities. Another school of scientists predicts the end of civilization through a gradual heating up of the climate, because of man's activities. No doubt they've got some confused souls fearing the occurrence of both disasters simultaneously.

And so it goes. Throughout history there has been a persistent tendency to underestimate the potential of future technology, and an equally persistent tendency to underestimate the available supplies of raw materials. Today, it seems worse than ever. The country is full of gloom and doom grouches who hungrily grasp at popularizations every news item of disaster. It must seem some obscure psychological need.

It would be foolhardy to ignore the existence of technology's dangerous by-products. But they can — and will — be dealt with intelligently. It would be more foolhardy still to ignore the greater dangers technology has reduced or eliminated.

Tax ruling may be sought

CAPITOL NEWS

LINCOLN — This fall the decision will be made on whether to go after a court ruling similar to ones handed down in other states which cut down the heavy reliance on local property taxes for local school support.

State Sen. Gerald Koch of Ralston, who led an unsuccessful battle this year for legislation to increase Nebraska's local school aid from $55 million a year in state money, promised a court suit.

He wanted a passage of a bill that would have increased state aid by $15 million a year until state taxes were responsible for 40 per cent of total school operating costs.

Koch said he is now in the process of redrafting aid increase legislation and will unveil it during a series of September meetings across the state.

He said school officials and others would be invited to those hearings. Basically, the senator said those attending the meetings will be asked whether they want to try the legislature one more time to go to court over state aid.

The legislation, which will include alternative funding, is being worked out in cooperation with a State Education Department official as well as representatives of school districts of various sizes and locations, Koch said.

He said he intends to present the impact of the various alternatives on the districts at the time he unveils the plans so all can see what will happen.

The approach, he said, is far different from going to court where such things as distribution formulas might well be new but unacceptable to at least some.

The legislative process, Koch said, offers room for negotiations.

The first step is not to push for action on the state aid increase issue, which at one point also included $2.5 million in busing money for the Omaha public schools, because groups were splintered too badly to reconcile differences in the closing days of the session.

Omaha schools are facing a court-ordered segregation plan that includes the transfers of students from one school to another.

Koch said in addition to boosting state aid and thus cutting reliance on over-worked local property taxes, he hopes to more nearly equalize the financial capabilities of local schools.

In turn, he said he hopes that will bring about more uniformity on the quality side.

More Doctors Available

State Sen. Jack Mills of Big Springs said he has uncovered something he found very interesting in the field of educating doctors.

A nationwide problem in medical education is not enough room for those who apply each year for classroom space.

Mills said his research into ways of increasing the number of physicians in rural areas turned up the fact that side Nebraskaans were going to medical school in Mexico.

NEBRASKA HIGHWAY SAFETY PROGRAM

NEBRASKA HIGHWAY SAFETY PROGRAM

Also, Mills said some of those students apply for openings created in the upper classes of medical schools when someone drops out.

However, he also said that in Mexico, those who apply for those openings are automatically tossed out of school whether they get the spot back in their native land or not.

Nebraska does not give examinations to fill upper class openings at the medical center.

Mills generally has been concentrating on getting more residency programs in the state. He said he is in the Kearney-Grand Island/Hastings area.

He said headway has been made steadily but efforts suffered a serious blow when Dr. Robert Sparks, chancellor of the NU Medical Center, decided to quit and take another job.

Another Wildlife Proposal

The Unicameral's Public Works Committee may hold hearings later this year in an attempt to enlighten the public on a new U.S. Fish and Wildlife proposal.

Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island made the request for the hearings. In making that request, he said the proposal would not be confused with the one now drawing attention which calls for creation of a Platte River refuge that would stretch from Chapman to Sutherland.

The new one, which Kelly said is relatively unknown, would place the land west of the highway 81 and south of a line through Kearney in a critical habitat area.

If the designation goes through, no building permits would be issued for projects receiving federal financial assistance without being cleared by the fish and wildlife service.

"Maybe it's a good thing," remarked Kelly.

But for now he said he couldn't tell and he knew landowners and others in the area didn't even know about the proposal let alone do they have enough information to figure out if it is good or bad.

The committee hearings would generally act as a forum for disseminating information.

Phone Companies to Account

The Nebraska Public Service Commission has ordered all telephone companies in the state to submit cash data on customer service charges for unlisted telephone numbers.

Commissioner Duane Gay of Columbus requested the order saying elderly phone subscribers often want unlisted numbers but object to an extra charge. Or, he said, they just can't afford the extra charge due to restricted budgets.

Commissioner Jack Roberts of Ord said he hasn't been getting all that many complaints about the situation.

Instead, he said the complaints have been generally about installation charges being unreasonable.

"That's where the real holler comes from," he said.

NEBRASKA PORK PRODUCERS have an estimated 2.5 million hogs on hand June 1, according to the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. This is 19 per cent above a year ago but seven per cent below two years ago.

Breeding stock is up 17 per cent from last year and market hogs are up 12 per cent.

PIG CROP UP 23 PER CENT

Farrowings during the spring March-May quarter totaled 195,000 sows, producing a pig crop of 1,077,000 which is a 23 per cent increase from last year's total of 881,000 piglets from two years ago.

JUNE-AUGUST INTENTIONS UP 14 PER CENT

The farrowing intentions of the Nebraska pork producers for the June-August quarter are up 16 per cent from last year, with 145,000 sows intended for farrowing. This total is three per cent lower than the comparable period two years ago.

Nebraska pork producers as of June 1, intend to farrow 170,000 sows during the September-December quarter. This would be a 17 per cent increase from the fall quarter of last year and 10 per cent above farrowings in the fall quarter of 1974.

'Soybean Crop Has Greatest Potential'

The results of a three-year surge in soybean research at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln were revealed when more than 40 producers, NU specialists and directors of the Nebraska Soybean Association Board met in Lincoln recently.

"The potential is greater for soybeans than for any other crop in Nebraska is evident from what we've seen today," said Eugene Glock of Rising City, secretary of the Nebraska Soybean Development Utilization and Marketing Board and past president of the Nebraska Soybean Association.

Getting that point across to soybean producers and showing the extent of soybean research at NU was the purpose of the meeting, he said.

Just three years ago, Glock explained, a similar meeting was held where soybean producers presented NU specialists with specific marketing and production problems requiring extensive research to solve. Since that time, he said, the Nebraska Soybean Association has lobbied in the Nebraska Legislature for specific monies (other than check-off) to fund badly needed research.

"And our efforts paid off," Glock said. "I don't think soybean producers raised a single problem today that NU scientists are not working on."

A total Institute involvement was evident as 21 NU agronomists, animal scientists, entomologists, agricultural engineers and plant pathologists presented the results of their efforts.

In the area of soybean breeding, efforts have been made to obtain well-adapted soybean parents which are superior for use under Nebraska conditions. Varieties are being developed to adapt to high temperatures and to increase water use efficiency. Weather maps are being studied to determine the effect of irrigation at certain times.

Herbicide research for soybeans has moved from mainly preplant and preemergence herbicides to increased interest in selective postemergence herbicide applications. Of annual weeds and among soybeans, the large-seeded broadleaf weeds are the most difficult to control. Also with the use of minimum tillage methods, such as perennial weeds as common milkweed and hemp dogbane are increasing as problem species.

Experiments at the NU Field Laboratory at Mead have revealed that soybeans may not be able to produce enough nitrogen for good yield. Application of nitrogen fertilizer will require more knowledge about soil and plant system interaction.

Research is continuing on the problem of chlorosis—a yellowing of the plant due to an inability to use iron. Although researchers do not know the cause of chlorosis, they do know that soils of high pH, lime and calcium makeup set the stage for the malady. Iron treatments have not been successful because of the uniformity of application is difficult to achieve.

Cropping sequence studies have revealed that yields are decreased in a moisture depletion situation or following continuous planting of soybeans. Minimum tillage, therefore, will play a significant role in preventing moisture depletion.

Insect damage and bacterial diseases have not been significant problems in Nebraska, although neighboring states are experiencing difficulties, NU researchers pointed out. These problems in neighboring states are potential problems for Nebraska as soybean acreage increases.

At present chemicals are expensive or too non-specific to help kill bacteria. Studies are being conducted on bacteria that produce antibiotics which kill other bacteria.

Although soybeans are nutritional animal feed, they can inhibit the growth of animals that consume them, researchers noted. Soybeans must be toasted to a nutrient level. The protein is reduced in nutritive value. Work is being done to identify the inhibitor, to find out how it works in the animal and to develop an inhibitor control.

In ruminant animals, a portion of soybean protein turns into ammonia when it reaches the rumen. Although bacteria later convert some of the ammonia to amino acids (protein), it would be desirable to increase the amount of protein by passing the rumen in order to improve the efficiency of protein use. Work is being done to get the protein into the animal's system by bypassing the rumen.

To wrap up the soybean research picture at NU, the Strength Through Agricultural Resources (STAR) report was presented to the group. One of twelve areas covered by the STAR committee, the soybean report outlined soybean production and research to improve production and worldwide need.

According to the report, soybean production in Nebraska has increased from 1,000 acres in 1938, with an average yield of 12 bushels per acre, to 1,100,000 acres yielding 24 bushels per acre in 1974. Acreage is projected to be 1.5 million acres yielding 35 bushels per acre in 1985. Total U.S. soybean production in 1985 is projected to be 2.5 billion bushels with more than 1.5 billion to be exported.

Why the promising future? Nebraska has the resources needed for soybean production—fertile land, suitable climate, truck and rail transportation, technical knowledge, agricultural equipment, processing facilities and soybean processing industry.

However, more research is needed to solve current production and this calls for more money, summarized Eugene Glock.

The Nebraska and American Soybean Associations have tried to take the needs of soybean farmers to our state capitol and to Washington," Glock said.

"We need all the members we can get. Last year we had only 100 members for lobbying compared to labor organizations which have millions of dollars to spend for lobbying."

Longest Line

THE LONGEST AND heaviest string of equipment hitched behind a tractor under test at the University of Nebraska Tractor Testing Laboratory was assembled when the 458 International came on the scene. The tractor, at the front end of the train, is rated 235 horsepower on the drawbar and has a 298 cubic inch engine. With ballast for testing purpose it weighed 29,870 lbs. In addition to the test car, which weighs about 20,000 lbs., Dr. Louis Levitsky, engineer in charge of tractor testing, hooked on a John Deere 5920, Oliver 1855 and a Massey Ferguson 1155. It was estimated the total train without the test tractor strung out for 100 feet and had a total static weight of 65,000 lbs. The tractor tested pulls against the compression and friction of engines of the tractors hooked on behind, and the test car records the horsepower and other performance characteristics. The International, one of the largest ever tested at the lab, will be seen at the annual Tractor Power and Safety Day at Mead on July 27.

UNBELIEVABLE

If a pair of house flies mated today, and if their descendants all lived and reproduced normally, their offspring would cover the earth several feet deep 4 months from now. In manure or garbage one pair of flies can increase to a million pairs within six generations or 12 weeks.

ALSO UNBELIEVABLE

I have had some calls concerning corn that has less if any roots. This is not due to root rot, but simply a case of roots failing to develop due to dry soil around the roots.

FALSE CHINCH BUGS

I had a call from Herlin Heineman that insects were severely damaging some of his corn. The insects were identified as the false chinch bug. Entomologists tell me that the false chinch bug is similar to the chinch bug. Only an entomologist would know or care about the difference between the two types of insects.

CORN BORER

Eggs have been laid for a record number of corn borers. But the amount of the infestation will depend upon weather conditions and size of corn plants. The conditions favorable for corn borer development in 1976 to late June are: 1. Warm, balmy nights, especially in the late evening. 2. Lack of hot, dry winds. 3. Corn reaching 30 inches or more in extended height. Under these conditions corn borers can be a problem any year, regardless of the size of overwintering populations.

Ever notice how hot it is behind a refrigerator? That's because a refrigerator works by channeling heat out of the machine and into the air.

Twin Seeding Test Didn't Increase Sorghum Yield

Experiments indicate little hope that twin seeding will increase the yield of grain sorghum hybrids, according to Dr. William Ross, agricultural research service (ARS) scientist stationed at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Ross cooperated in the experiment with A. J. Cassidy, ARS scientist at Kansas State University.

In cooperative ARS experiment station tests last year at Mead and Manhattan, Kan., regular single seeded hybrids outyielded their twin seeded counterparts, he said.

The two state average of the varieties tested was 95 bushels per acre for the regular hybrids and 86 bushels for the twin-seeded, he said.

The twin seeded hybrids had more grains per head than single seeded hybrids, but the twin seeded grains were smaller and lighter and heads were smaller, he said.

The twin seeded hybrids had fewer grain bearing spikelets than the regular hybrids, Ross said.

The data showed no difference between the two types in heads per plant, test weight, maturity time, or plant height, he said.

"Rivals" were originally "persons dwelling on opposite sides of a river" or "Latin rivales" a river man.

Hay, Silage Recommended Use for Local Oat Crop

NEBRASKA FEED GRAIN STOCKS

Nebraska feed grain stocks (corn, oats, barley and grain sorghum) in all positions totaled 5.6 million bushels on June 1, according to the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. Disappearance since April 1 was three million tons.

Disappearance includes utilization and all movement from Nebraska farms and warehouses. Comparisons for Nebraska are not available as this is the first year June 1 grain stocks have been collected. This replaces the former July 1 series.

Total stocks of corn were 166.6 million bushels. Average monthly disappearance of 43.1 million bushels was 62 per cent higher than the same period in 1975. Sorghum stocks totaled 27.1 million bushels. Average monthly disappearance for sorghum from April 1 to June 1 of 9.3 million bushels was 33 per cent higher than last year.

Oats stocks in Nebraska totaled over a million bushels while barley stocks totaled 6 million bushels. Wheat stocks amounted to 36.1 million bushels, with disappearance of 6.6 million bushels per month, two per cent greater than last year. Hay stocks totaled 68,000 bushels as of June 1.

Soybean stocks totaled 15.8 million bushels. Average monthly disappearance of 4.1 million bushels was 30 per cent greater than last year.

1985 may be the farthest thing from your mind when comparing flexible irrigation systems to the others. But we think it is as the last 20 potentially good years of good yields for you, good customers for us. That's why we choose to offer the circular irrigation systems with the best warranty package in the business—20 year corrosion warranty on steel and aluminum pipe, and a 3 year warranty on all parts, including trees!

We could list dozens of reasons why the features on Reinke Water Management Systems are unmatched in the irrigation industry. But you know more than that. You know you invest in a irrigation—by a company and a dealer. If we didn't offer the world's Finest Circular Irrigation Systems, we couldn't make this kind of offer. If we weren't your neighbor, we wouldn't want to waste more reasons? Stop by, we'll give you more.
