

Readers Theater Final Is Tonight

The second of two performances of "This Mortal Coil" by the Wayne State College Theatre is scheduled for tonight (Thursday) at the Menagerie Theatre in the lower level of the Student Union, beginning at 8 p.m.

The special production technique presented is readers theater, in which literature other than a stage play is divided among several voices, usually with a narrator, bringing it to life in performance of voices. Professional productions include "John Brown's Body" and "Spoon River Anthology."

The WSC production mingles several types of writing including poetry, essays, short stories and a portion of a novel into 90 minutes of entertainment.

The public is invited to attend and no admission is charged.

Bells Ring-In Bicentennial

Americans across the world celebrated the nation's Bicentennial birthday in a variety of ways Sunday and the local area was no exception.

Wayne's Fourth of July featured an ecumenical church service, fireworks, a parade and various contests.

Festivities began Thursday, July 1 with a free barbecue sponsored by The Wayne Herald, which is also celebrating its 100th year of service to the community.

Publisher Alan Cramer said about 1,000 beef sandwiches were served at the noon and evening meals in the parking lot just south of the Herald building.

Activities centered on the city auditorium Friday night for a style show arranged by Mrs. Verne Mills and Mrs. Bob Porter.

Wayne County senior citizens king and queen candidates were presented to the audience. George Baird, 89, and Mabel Salvidge, 91, were named as the county's senior Bicentennial royalty, as the oldest contestants born in Wayne County.

Attendees were Carroll—William Swanson and Mrs. Ed Shufelt; Hoskins—Mr. and Mrs. H.C. Falk; Sholes—Walter Tietgen and Mrs. Glade McFadden; Wakefield—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bull; Wayne—Jack Skeehan and Mrs. David Theophilus; Winside—Fred Wittler and Mrs. Martha Lutt.

Tenth grade division: winner—Lori Sherlock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Sherlock of Wayne; eleventh grade division: winner—Lori Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kent Hall of Wayne.

The Wayne County Jaycees handed out prizes Friday night for the best beards in the county. Results of the contest are: Bob Jordan, longest beard; Bob Johnson, darkest beard; Phil Griess, thinnest beard, and Bob Porter, fullest beard.

There was plenty of music during the Friday night program. The Treble Clef Singers of the United Methodist Church performed several numbers during the style show and the Borrowed Singers group from Neligh performed later in the evening. In addition, Mrs. Joan Kulk led a community sing along, accompanied by Varda Morris.

Thone Reveals July Schedule

Congressman Charles Thone will be meeting local constituents July 31 during the Wayne County Fair.

Thone's office this week released a tentative schedule of activities for the remainder of July and has indicated the Congressman will attend the tractor pull contests scheduled for 7 p.m. on July 31 at the fair.

Other nearby appearances include a visit Sunday at the Whittall Jaycee parade, beginning at 2 p.m.

Business Property Now Being Listed

A lister of commercial property has started visiting Wayne County businesses as part of the current updating of property values according to county assessor Doris Stipp.

Youth Suffers Punctured Lung

An 18-year-old Wayne youth was in good condition in Providence Medical Center Tuesday following a fireworks mishap shortly before midnight Friday.

Bret Spence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jess Spence Jr., suffered a punctured lung when a firework he was holding backfired, causing the pointed end of the stick to strike Spence's chest.

In a related incident last week, an eight-year-old Wayne youth, David Jensen, suffered an eye injury when a fire cracker apparently blew up in his face.

Son of Mrs. Lella Jensen, David was treated at Providence Medical Center as an outpatient before he went to a Norfolk specialist. It wasn't known Tuesday if Jensen will lose his sight in one eye.

Truck Weigh-In Set for Laurel

Truckers driving in the Laurel area will be weighed and viewed at their trucks weighed as part of a state-wide survey, the Nebraska Department of Roads (DOR), announced, but emphasized that no tickets will be issued for overweight trucks.

Surveys are conducted to provide commercial vehicle characteristics to the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Information pertaining to axle and vehicle weights, axle spacing, commodity transported, and type of fuel, combined with other traffic data, will provide a basis for determining demand and usage of highway facilities within the state and will help develop truck design standards.

The truck survey in the Laurel area will be at the weigh station west of the intersection of Highways 57 and 15, from 6 a.m. until 2 p.m. on July 21.

Law Consolidation Plan Moving Ahead in County

Winside mayor Dallas Puls and a village board members Vernon Hill and John Gallop Tuesday discussed Wayne County's law consolidation plan with the county commissioners during their regular meeting.

The Winside delegation was told that the sheriff's office will provide police services for one of three additional deputies to live in the community.

A Law Enforcement Assistance Administration grant is providing funds for the first year of the project in which three additional deputies will be hired. The county sheriff's office will provide police services for all communities in the county except Wayne which will retain its own force.

Three patrol cars have been ordered as part of the project but have not been received. Sheriff Don Welte Tuesday confirmed that he will hire Wayne police officer Leroy Jensen as deputy. Jensen, who joined the Wayne force about 10 months ago, will probably join the department later in July, depending on when equipment becomes available.

City Spending Is Less Than Budget

Wayne city council members meeting for a special work session Friday afternoon were not able to complete their budget proposal for the fiscal year starting Aug. 1 but did receive some good news when city administrator Fred Brink told them total expenditures for the fiscal year ending July 31 will be some $400,000 less than was budgeted.

Brink said nearly $2.57 million was budgeted for fiscal 1975-76, but by the end of the month, the city will have spent only about $2.15 million.

It is hard to pinpoint just where the savings were made, Brink said, but pointed out that expenditures for nearly every fund in the budget are less than what had been allowed for.

The administrator's proposed budget for 1976-77 totaled $3.35 million, but that includes some $400,000 for improving the city electric system, and $200,000 for a project and cover an open storm sewer in the Roosevelt park area.

Subtracting those two items, not included in last year's budget, leaves $2,760,000, compared with the $2,570,000 budgeted last year.

Cost of covering the storm sewer may not be that high if the council decides to go ahead with the project. A proposal has been forwarded that city workers undertake the project and Brink estimates that would reduce costs to around $150,000.

About $208,000 of the budget will come from local property taxes. Based on a total valuation of $9.4 million, Brink proposed a mill levy for city taxpayers of 22.15 mills, compared to 21.52 last year.

The proposed levy would have actually been lower than the 1975-76 levy, but an additional mill has been approved by the council for the airport authority.

State statute requires a one mill levy for municipal airports and makes the additional mill optional. The airport authority asked for the increase in order to begin paying off some $30,000 in debts which the authority inherited when it was formed a year ago.

The council will lock in a final budget proposal at the regular meeting scheduled for July 13. A public hearing on the budget will be conducted during the July 27 meeting and final approval is expected then.

Three Bound Over District Court

In a preliminary hearing in Wayne County court Friday, three men charged with felonies were bound over to district court.

Charged with pig stealing are Morris Wayman, three counts, and his brother Terry Wayman, one count, both of Pender, and Clifford Hurlbert of Neligh, two counts.

Pig theft is a felony under Nebraska law, regardless of the value of property taken.

The three were arrested June 4. Charges stem from alleged thefts of pigs from the Brian Kal farm southeast of Wayne on three separate occasions in May and June.

Pending the preliminary hearing, Morris Wayman and Hurlbert were released on $2,500 bond and Terry Wayman on $1,000 bond. Bond was continued in district court. No date for trial has been set.

School Budget Is $1.3 Million

The Wayne Carroll board of education Monday night adopted an operating budget of nearly $1.3 million for the 1976-77 school year, up from $1.27 million for 1975-76.

Total budget approved is $1,412,117; but $112,700 of that amount is for items such as the lunch program for which the school district is reimbursed, leaving an operating budget of $1,299,417.

The board also voted to retain a three mill levy for a special building sinking fund.

The sinking fund monies are available for making permanent improvements to school facilities and during the meeting the board approved one such expenditure.

Tentative approval was given for installation of a sprinkler system for the new athletic field now under construction, pending a favorable recommendation by the project's architect.

A sprinkler system was included in the original plan but rejected by the board because of its cost—about $100,000.

School superintendent Francis Haun presented a proposal forwarded by an irrigation supply company for a system to ring the football field, plus a line of sprinklers down the center. Cost of the materials will be $2,900, and school maintenance personnel will undertake installation of the system.

In terms of dollars added, increases in salaries were big items in the 1976-77 budget. The approved budget allows for a $296,657 outlay for secondary teachers' salaries up from $269,501 for the fiscal year now ending.

Elementary teachers' salaries will cost $392,000, compared with $387,198.

Broken down into individual funds, the 1976-77 budget, compared with the 1975-76 budget, looks like this administration—$48,725-$53,000; instruction—$860,694-$898,242; other school services—$44,970-$62,375; operation of plant—$97,800-$104,745; maintenance of plant—$21,250-$24,850; fixed charges—$111,400-$139,350; capital outlay—$30,225-$13,175.

Report Says Day Care Good When Both Parents Work

Changing relationships between family life and vocation, especially the trend for women to work outside the home, have been marked as primary family life concerns in Nebraska, according to a recent Strength Through Agricultural Resources (STAR) report.

The report says recent changes in sexual roles and family life have created a "strong need in Nebraska for positive and creative methods in dealing with these changes."

STAR was published in 12 parts by the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The report cites recent statistics and studies which show an increasing number of single-parent families and families with both parents working outside the home. It describes a need to provide care for children of working parents and to increase feelings of responsibility and belonging among 11 to 15 year olds.

The STAR authors conclude that the solution to providing care for children of working parents is in institutionalized day care centers.

resulting in a waste of, creative talent, causing feelings of isolation and uselessness and failing to prepare young persons for parenthood and work.

Recommended solutions to these problems are the involvement of 11 to 15 year olds in their parents' community programs and work.

The STAR report recommends that day care centers be located in or near schools to enable young persons to gain actual experience with small children.

In another area, the report's authors say social and family bonds have suffered from the current changing roles of men and women.

According to the report, "women's liberation continues to be a major influence in contemporary life. Despite its great humanizing potential, its movement has led us into some very traumatic experiences in a very short time."

The report says women's problems are rooted in societal assumptions that child care is primarily a mother's responsibility. In addition, the report states that women have been raised to believe that their wants and needs are less important than those of other family members. As a result, women often feel guilty when they assert their own needs and wants.

The report concludes that family tension could be reduced if societal attitudes were changed. Mothers need not feel guilty about wanting to "do their own thing," the report states, adding that it should not be assumed that child care is the sole responsibility of women.

Evangelical Covenant Church of Pender was the scene of the wedding June 26 uniting in marriage JoAnn Marie Larson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Verdoil Larson, Pender, and Mark D. Beiermann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Beiermann, Wayne.

The Rev. Carl Ramgren officiated at the 8 p.m. double ring ceremony. Deborah Larson sang "Follow Me" and "The Wedding Song," accompanied by Mrs. Kerwin Kent.

Church decorations featured bouquets of multi-colored flowers at the altar, a unity candle, and a pew candelabra with greenery and multi-colored bows.

The bride appeared at her parents' side in a full-length gown of polyorganza over bridal taffeta. The sheer yoke over the shoulders enhanced the high neckline which was trimmed in imported Venise lace. Matching lace and pearls accented the bodice of the gown. Venise lace appliques adorned the angel sleeves and a pinarole look was obtained with double rows of Venise lace which floated down the front of the 10 1/2 skirt and extended into a chapel length train. Her chapel-length veil with Venise lace appliques was edged in Venise lace and attached to a Juliet cap, and she carried a cascade of multi-colored flowers, stephanotis and baby's breath with a removable white orchid.

The bridegroom wore a candlelight cutaway with tails, matching trousers, white ruffled shirt and brown velvet bow tie. He wore a pink rosebud boutonniere accented with baby's breath. His attendants wore candlelight coats with a cutaway front, matching trousers, brown velvet bow ties and ruffled shirts which matched the bridesmaid's dresses. They wore tinted carnations. Fathers of the couple had white carnations boutonnieres centered with a pink rosebud.

Candles were lighted by Roxanne Von Seggern and Karlene Carlson. Flower girl was Stephanie Soenksen and ring bearer was Terry Engelmeyer.

The bride's mother wore a lavender lace and chiffon gown with a lavender orchid, and Mrs. Beiermann selected a coral knit with a white orchid corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Persighei of Stanton and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Carlson of Bancroft greeted the guests who attended a reception afterward in the church parlors. Mrs. Mike Beiermann registered guests. Becky Wichman is in charge of gifts.

Laurel Hands Legion Fourth Straight Loss

Wayne Legion suffered its fourth straight setback Monday night, this time to league-leader Laurel by the score of 10-4.

Laurel, which got only one hit in the first frame, scored seven big runs off pitcher Paul Matlette who walked five batters and sent two others to first when they were hit by pitched balls before Gary Munter took over with two away.

The lead was too much for coach Hank Overlin's club to overcome as Laurel hurler Jeff Creamer, who threw a no-hitter against the locals in the teams' first meeting, struck out eight and got good fielding from his inside crew.

Wayne managed two runs in the second after singles by Mike Sherner, Monte Lowe and Rod Turner loaded the bases. Creamer walked Randy Park to bring home Sherner before a sacrifice bunt by Mike Manes drove in the second run.

In the bottom of the seventh, Wayne added two more runs when shortstop Dan Hix and catcher Larry Creighton, who had each singled, later scored.

Wakfield's Legion pounced on a costly Wayne error in the bottom of the seventh to score the winning run for a 3-2 decision Sunday night at Wakfield in a non-league contest.

With one away, Wakfield had runners on first and second when second baseman Wes Luthfi hit a grounder to first baseman Randy Park who got the force out before he overthrew first base his overthrow to first allow shortstop Mike Soderberg to round third and come home.

Wayne High Will Be Open For Athletes

Beginning tonight (Thursday) the Wayne High School auditorium will be open at 8 o'clock for all local high school and junior high athletes who will be participating in football and volleyball this season.

The auditorium will then be open every Tuesday night so athletes may develop conditioning skills for the upcoming year, said assistant football coach Ron Carnes.

Coaches at Wayne High are volunteering to supervise the athletes who indicated an interest by signing a survey card.

"The coaches feel this is one way athletes can indicate their interest in making the coming sports year a success," Carnes pointed out.

Cats CageCamp Opens Sunday

The second session of Cats Cage Camp 1976 opens Sunday at Wayne State College with girls invited to participate.

In previous Wayne basketball camps dating to 1970, it has been a boys-only affair. But WSC coach Jim Seward, camp director, had enough requests from girls before the June session this year that he spread the welcome mat for the second week.

The camp starting Sunday for seven days is open to boys and girls who will be in fifth through twelfth grades next fall. Seward said the girls will train separately part of the time, but See CAMP, page 5

Preliminary Report Shows: Wayne Course Among Top Three in State

Although final results won't be available until the end of this month, preliminary results show that the Wayne Country Club is one of the top three courses of its size in the state.

That was the comment Sunday by Ron Krumm, one of two persons hired by the Nebraska Amateur Golf Association and the nearly 70 golf courses across the state to rate the courses according to U.S. Golf Association and Nebraska Amateur Golf Association standards.

Krumm pointed out that the Wayne course is one of the best watered courses. As a result, it has good greens, fairways and tees.

Krumm and his partner Bruce Perkins hale from Minnesota where Krumm works for the University of Minnesota and Perkins is a sales representative for a high fidelity company.

What are they doing traveling courses in Nebraska? Both discovered last year that there are very few persons in the United States who are qualified to rate courses. And since the demand is growing for more courses to be rated according to RGA rules, they decided to take a two-week course to learn the trade and rate courses during part of their summer vacations.

By the end of this week they expect to have their share of the courses in Nebraska completed in time to take the results to a Minneapolis firm which will feed the information to a computer and make it available to the tested courses by the end of the month.

Perkins pointed out that his team is one of the few traveling in the state to rate courses. An average work day may include rating three, four or possibly five courses in a day, depending on the traveling distances between the courses.

In time to take the team measures the actual yardage — the main ingredient in the rating. Course conditions either add or subtract.

For example, fairways wider than 40 yards subtract from the difficulty, narrower than 30 yards add to the difficulty. Other subtractions include no sand traps, only one fairway trap, traps with no lips, no rough, unwatered fairways, fairways that extend beyond the green.

Adding to the difficulty are: —Out of bounds within 25 to 50 yards of the landing area; water hazards, severe slopes, blind approaches, rough cut over three inches, etc.

On the average it takes about 3 1/2 to 4 hours to travel a course and rate it, starting from the 18th hole and working back, they pointed out. The reason they start with the 18th is to let golfers know there is someone ahead of them to prevent accidents.

In Northeast Nebraska the pair will cover eight courses, including courses at Stanton, Beemer, Wayne, South Sioux City, Hartington, Norfolk, Plainview and Neligh.

The idea of traveling so much is one facet of the job both really enjoy. They get to meet a lot of people and talk with a number of course managers, they agreed.

For Perkins, who is single, meeting people is right up his alley since he's a salesman. Speaking for Krumm, Perkins noted that his partner is married, but his wife's mind. "I'll bet she said, 'Go have a good time,'" Perkins smiled.

Examining one of the transits used to measure yardage between the tee off areas and holes on the Wayne Country Club course are, from left, Dave Shipull, Don 'Red' Echtenkamp, Bruce Perkins, Del Stollenberg and Ron Krumm. Shipull, Echtenkamp and Stollenberg are part of the crew who take care of and operate the course, which was being rated Sunday by Perkins and Krumm.

CC Amateur Is This Weekend

Over 200 persons have signed up for the annual Wayne Country Club Amateur golf tournament this weekend.

Flight players have the option to tee off either Saturday or Sunday for the 18-hole event, players who signed up the 27-hole championship flight must play Sunday, according to club officials.

Last year's defending champion and winner of an earlier club tournament, Larry Sock of Norfolk has elected to skip this meet.

Prizes will be awarded to the top eight individuals in the championship flight and top four in other flights. There also will be a drawing for persons who didn't win during the two-day meet.

Breakfast and lunch will be served at the club house. Although the tournament is full, officials pointed out that there may be some openings if others decide to drop out. Entry fee is $13.

Winside Gals Stand at 7-0

Undeafated and going strong. That's how Winside girls softball coach Jim Winside described his 18 and under club after his girls Monday topped Wakfield 19-9 for Winside's seventh victory.

The winners pounded across four runs each in the third and fourth frames behind the leadership of pitcher Barb Peter who smacked a home run to lead off the fourth frame and doubled.

Wakfield had its share of big hitters in Patsy Murphy with a pair of triples, Robin Mills with a triple, Lynn Holm and Cindy Rouse with a double each. Losing pitcher was Kathy Schwarzen.

Last week Winside posted a 15-2 decision over Wisner with the aid of a two-run circuit hit by Jill Stenwall.

In the 15 and under bracket, Winside upped its record to 4-2 with 9-6 and 6-3 wins over Wakfield and Wisner.

The winners blasted 11 singles, including three by Brenda Voss, Robyn Wink and Krisi Duering to trounce Wakefield, 9-6. Against Wisner, the victors pushed across four runs in the third inning to all but seal the victory.

Town Team Riding Three-Game Skein east Nebraska Baseball League play.

Bivens, who relieved starter Don Goeden last week to guide his club to a 7-1 upset of Homer went all the way for Wayne against Allen to record the team's seventh win against four losses.

The host struck early in the game with a pair of hits off Bivens to score two runs in the opening frame. But the salty right-hander quelled Allen's hopes of scoring in the next six frames as Allen connected for only two singles.

Meanwhile, Wayne put its batting machinery in gear by scoring all of its runs in the second, third and fourth innings.

Catcher Mike Meyer, left fielder Mic Daenke and right fielder Bob Nelson connected for back-to-back run scoring singles in the second frame to put their club in the lead to stay, 3-0.

In the third Wayne added three more runs on a run-See TOWN, page 7

Movin' Up

Wayne town team is in a second-place tie with former league-leader Homer in the eight-team Northeast Nebraska Baseball League. Both trail the new leader, Newcastle, by a half game.

The shift in the lead resulted last week when Homer was upended for the second straight game, this time by Newcastle.

Earlier, Wayne handed Homer a loss.

Sunday night Wayne goes after its fourth consecutive NNBL victory when the club hosts Pender at 8 o'clock in the city ballpark.

Midgets Take Nip, Tuck Battle, 6-5

Laurel and Wayne Midgets battled for eight innings Monday night before the locals could claim a 6-5 victory in the two-hour contest at the city ballpark.

Visiting Laurel scored five runs in the top of the fifth to tie the game and send it into three extra frames before first baseman Vic Sharpe, who doubled off the glove of left fielder Marty Calhoun, scored on a bases-loaded walk issued Laurel hurler Mike Martin.

The win boosted Wayne to 8-1 in the Ralph Bishop League and kept the locals on top of the eight-team loop going into Friday night's away game at Watfield. Meanwhile, Laurel dropped to 1-8. The area club will play Friday at Emerson.

Wayne seemed assured of taking an easy victory after scoring three runs off a single and a double in the fourth frame for a 5-0 command. Starting pitcher Doug Carroll doubled to score teammate Steve Bodenstedt from second before relief pitcher Tom Ginn singled in first baseman Vic Sharpe, who walked and Carroll.

Wayne took a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the third when Bodenstedt and Sharpe scored on a pair of Laurel miscues.

Laurel turned the tide in the fifth inning when the visitors collected three runs off Carroll and a pair via Kévin Dieckler's two-run single off Ginn, who came in the game with no outs.

The win was a welcomed one after the Midgets suffered a 5-4 setback Sunday at the hands of Wakfield in a non-league game at the Wakefield ballpark.

Wayne scored two runs in the top of the seventh on Wakfield errors to knot the score at four-all. But the hosts countered in its half on what should have been "a sure double play for right fielder Rick Harding scored on a base hit by Jeff Simpson.

Lessmann Garners Pair of Seconds

Go-kart driver Dave Lessmann of Wayne earned a pair of second-place trophies over the weekend in races at Fremont and Ceresco.

Sunday night—at Ceresco he placed second in one heat and fifth in another for the overall second-place award, and Saturday night he got a first and fourth for another overall second-place trophy.

Lessmann's first race Sunday night wasn't without its woes. Traveling at about 85 miles per hour during the street race, he lost control of his car and damaged the front end. Lessmann continued in the race, pushing his car across the finish line for fifth place.

The world's laborage comes from a French railway strike in 1912 when the workers sabotaged the railway line by cutting the shoes (sabot in French) holding the railway ties.

North Holds on for 7-6 Victory

The heavily favored North squad stretched its unbeaten string to four Wednesday night with a 7-6 squeaker over the South in the annual Ralph Bishop League Midget All Star title at the Wayne ball park.

The North had two obstacles in its way before it finally got its scoring attack started mid-way through the nine inning contest.

The toughest problem was South hurler Tim Wegner who whiffed five North batters and didn't give up any hits during his three inning stint. The hard-throwing right hander issued two walks in the third, the first of which resulted in the Yankees setting up their first score of the night.

Left fielder Steve Anderson was the first North player to get on base. After stealing second, Anderson moved to third when Wegner was called for a balk. With one away, Wayne's Vic Sharpe was issued a walk before he was thrown out in an attempt to steal second. Meanwhile, Anderson caught the South off guard and raced home for the score.

The North put on its biggest scoring show in the fifth frame when the Rebels' Jim Raabe and Wisner got into throwing trouble by walking five allowing most of the North's four runs in that frame. Steve Martin of Pender took over for Raabe and went to the ninth where Terry Bargman of Bancroft finished.

Behind Jeff Beckman's two-run double in the sixth, the South whittled the lead to 6-5. In the bottom half of the seventh, the North got its insurance run on a run bing single by Tom Ginn of Wayne.

This year is the first time in the four-year history of the All-Star contest the North team has been the favorite to win the contest.

Suhr Aces No. 8 Hole

A Wayne golfer, Connie Suhr, aced the par 3, 187-yard eighth hole Wednesday at the Wayne Country Club.

Using a two-wood, Suhr collected his first hole-in-one before eight other persons who witnessed the feat. Watching were Dick Pfanz, Dick Berry, Bob Armbruster, Dick Wacker, Jim Marsh, Gene Claussen, Budd Bornhoff and Les Lutz.

The hole-in-one was the first reported this season at the Wayne club. There were rumors, however, that an out-of-town golfer had shot an ace but left long before the word had got out among persons at the club house, according to manager Del Stoltenberg.

Family Swim Set

A special time has been set aside at the Municipal Swimming Pool in Wayne for adults and families.

The pool will be open from 5 to 7 p.m., Monday through Friday for those persons wishing to swim without a large crowd, said assistant manager Mrs. Don Zeiss.

THE QUESTION of giving an athlete too much ink versus not enough often crosses a sportswriter's mind as he sits down to type out a story about events such as basketball, football or baseball games, and the player or players who were instrumental in the victory or loss.

The one thing that's in front of a writer's mind (or at least should be) is to tell "as it is," whether that means a pat on the back for the person or persons who deserve it or pointed a bad play which may have resulted in a game lost.

In any case, the question still comes up, "Is the story going to help or hinder an athlete's ability in future games?"

Perhaps this question really isn't as important as I make it. But it has been pointed out that in other cases, a reporter's accounts of a game has affected an athlete, both good and bad.

With that in mind, I want to look at what a sports psychologist has to say about the pressures created by writers and parents and placed upon young athletes.

I refer you to a story written by Lincoln Journal prep sports writer Randy York and his accounts during a recent sportswriters and sportscasters seminar in Salisbury, N.C.

THE ENORMOUS number of injuries may say something about American sport, but the most damaging injury of all never gets counted — the emotional abuse in athletics, said Dr. Tom Tulko, professor of psychology at San Jose State University.

"Kids all over the country are being fractured inside psychologically. You just can't see it," Tulko told a group of sportswriters and sportscasters at a Catawba College seminar last week in Salisbury, N.C.

Explaining the basic philosophy in his latest book, "Winning Is Everything and Other American Myths," Tulko said over-competitive children's athletic programs can cause permanent psychological damage.

Adult pressures, he said, have turned innumerable youth leagues into the first step of a giant farm system designed to discourage all but the most talented.

"In any other area," Tulko said, "we would classify this obsession to win as an epidemic. It's a vicious circle. Little League and Pop Warner coaches are burning a phenomenally large number of kids out before the spark is here and before they're even eligible to vote."

According to Tulko, the "winning-is-everything" mentality exacts a heavy toll from the millions of children who don't make a cut, warm the bench or make mistakes in high pressure situations.

Failure in sports or fear of it "can destroy a child's self-esteem as quickly as failure in the classroom," Tulko said. "It can turn him away from physical activity for life, foster negative attitudes towards authority figures and encourage hostile aggressive behavior."

Tulko emphasized "I am not against athletics. I follow the Red Sox and Mets like everyone else. I am not against competition because it's the best way to find out your limits. And I'm not against winning because that's when you start feeling like you're worthwhile."

"I'm just against the insanity of it all," he said. "It has engulfed us so slowly and insidiously that we can't see it. People who have no training in child development are interfering with kids' lives. If their values are distorted and they're the models where is the health?"

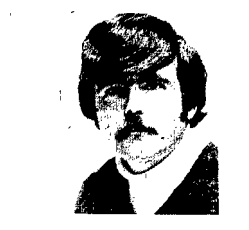

Tulko and his co-author, former Life magazine sports editor William Bruns reject winning as the major purpose of children's sports. They urge parents and coaches to make sports fun, teach basic skills to all participants and foster individual emotional growth.

Swimming is a pet target of Tulko. "Almost 30,000 swimmers swim 50 to 100 miles a week," he noted. "Fish don't even swim that many miles a week. What does this country need with 30,000 blind, tired, sore-shouldered, 16-year-olds?"

Visualizing the typical Little League, Tulko said "when he's at bat, the whole family's at bat. Dad is saying 'get a hit, kid, because I'm a terrific dad! Don't get one and I'm a schmuck!'"

The age with which Tulko is most concerned is 8 through 14 — the foundation of the athletic personality, which will be either warped or nurtured in future years.

"I'm not as concerned about the high school athlete because they're basic personalities that are pretty well-formed," Tulko said. "They have been in the competitive environment and know the mad demands. I just think the younger kids can be taught in a more humane way."

Tulko cited examples of actual programs achieving all primary goals:

—In YMCA football programs, players are evaluated before the season begins and are distributed among the teams to ensure even matchups.

—The Hobbs, N.M., High School basketball team has won seven state championships while playing every player in every game. It uses a continuous full-court press, requiring frequent substitution to give each player a rest.

—Several Little League programs use artificial pitching machines, increasing the number of hits and frequently stopping the game to give the spot instruction or discuss strategy while the players, catch their breath.

According to Tulko, the youthful hockey players' skills have improved tremendously.

"In California, a group of basketball coaches led the kids invent their own game," Tulko pointed out. "You know what they came up with? They made a rule where a game is not over until everyone has officially scored."

"Can you imagine Harvey Fudd, the only guy who hasn't scored?" asked Tulko. "Everyone's rooting for him. He finally puts one in. The game's over. He's not the goat. He's the hero."

Only kids would come up with such a way to improve self-esteem.

Thought for Today

By Brian McBride "Within us all there are wells of thought and dynamo of energy which are not suspected until emergencies arise. Then we find it simple to double or triple our former capacities and amaze ourselves with results."

Thomas J. Watson

The genius who built the giant IBM Corporation must have had many opportunities to test this theory. In business, perhaps more often than in domestic life, crises arise which must be met and skillfully handled.

When a mistake might mean disaster, how comforting to realize that our capacity to deal with emergencies is far greater than expected and that, we can obtain results that will amaze even ourselves.

You can be sure your wishes are followed exactly by making pre-need arrangements well in advance of need. Financial aspects can be prearranged, too. Ask us for details.

Damage Is Extensive

A FIRE ABOUT 1:30 p.m. Sunday damaged the roof and the upper story of the Joe Coble residence in Wakefield. According to fire chief Milford 'Short' Kay, the fire apparently started when a pop bottle rocket landed on the top of the wood-shingled roof and set it off. Coble's daughter spotted the fire and told her mother who phoned the Wakefield Volunteer Fire Department. Using two pumper trucks and a tanker, the blaze was extinguished in about 40 minutes. No estimate of damage given. Later that day the Wakefield department was called out to Big Red Farms, a branch of Waldgamb Egg Co. in Wakefield, to put out a grass fire.

scoring single by shortstop Steve Hix and a two-run base hit by Meyer. Pitcher Jim Auck, who started on the mound for Allen, walked center fielder Mike Creighton and third baseman Larry Raabe before an error allowed Creighton to ramble home. Second baseman Terry Luff, who had doubled in his first time at bat, smacked another two-base hit to score Raabe and Ginn. Meyer singled off relief pitcher Neil Blom to score Luff.

Allen made a late charge in the last two frames, scoring a total of four runs. Second baseman Kevin Hill, who was hit by a pitched ball, scored in the eighth on a sacrifice by Blom, in the three-run ninth. Blom's walked thru Allen runners to load the sacks. With one away designated hitter Jerry Friedrichs, who connected for four hits in five times at the plate, doubled in two runs before Blom singled in another runner.

The win for Wayne was its third straight, including Thursday night's 8-4 decision over Dakota City. Again the locals bunched up their scoring attack by pushing across three runs each in the third and fourth frames and two in the sixth.

Creighton led Wayne's scoring and hitting spree as he rapped three base hits and scored three runs in five at bats.

Luff chalked up the victory on the mound for Wayne, giving up eight hits.

Winside Board: Rates Go Up

The Winside town board Tuesday night discussed but took no action on possible increases in water and electric rates.

According to village chairman Dallas Puls water rates may go up from 40 cents per 1,000 gallons to 50 cents per 1,000 gallons, if members make their decision next month.

The increase is based on rising costs to supply the consumer and to help pay for the new well which was completed last year, he said. Puls didn't give any figure for an increase in electric rates.

In other action, members agreed to change the siren blast for storm warnings to one three-minute blast. This was done to conform with state regulations.

Members also learned that the new six inch water main from the new well to the stand pipe should be installed by the end of this week.

Rest assured.

son, and Carroll mayor Ken Eddie. The 13th annual Wayne County Homecoming events on the Fourth with competition at the county fairgrounds starting at 10 a.m. Results are listed in the sports pages elsewhere in this issue.

Wayne and communities across the nation heralded the nation's 200th birthday at 1 p.m. Sunday by sounding bells.

About 600 persons attended ecumenical church services Sunday night at Willow Bowl on the WSC campus.

Clergymen who conducted the services were Rev. Kenneth Edmunds, First United Methodist Church; Rev. Donliver Peterson, St. Paul's Lutheran Church; Rev. Kenneth deFrees, Redeemer Lutheran Church; Rev. Thomas McDermott, St. Mary's Catholic Church; Rev. Mark Weber, First Church of Christ (Christian); Rev. Robert Haas, United Presbyterian Church; David Prescott, Assembly of God Church; Rev. George Francis, Wesleyan Methodist Church.

John Glaser led a 31-voice choir made up of members for the various community churches.

Following the service, a special Bicentennial birthday cake was cut.

Mrs. Pat Dolata was chairman for the committee which provided the three-foot high, five-tiered, cream-filled, cake, plus another dozen cakes decorated in a Bicentennial theme.

Bill's Market, Wittig's Food Center, Gibson's Discount Center and the Shredco's Allen Hatchery provided the ingredients for the giant cake.

Mrs. Dolata and helpers Mrs. Howard Witt, Mrs. Dick Carmen and Mrs. Cliff Wait spent a full day baking the cake at the Broughton food service kitchen on the WSC campus. Another day was needed to apply the red, white and blue frosting in a patriotic design which featured a figure of Uncle Sam between 12-inch pillars. Mrs. Wette was president of the three-foot high, five-tiered cake which was crowned with flags and candles.

Additional cakes provided by Mrs. Jack Ruback, Mrs. Edward Nissen, Mrs. Carl Lenz, Mrs. Joe Corbit, Mrs. Russel Luft, Mr. and Mrs. Shredco's, Mrs. Herbert Niemann, Mrs. Harold Fleer, Mrs. Jim Corbit, Mrs. Arline Ulrich, Mrs. Rollie Longe and Vel's Bakery.

The Peppy Pals 4-H club helped serve cake following the church service. The cake was also served following the dedication of the Wayne County Historical Society Museum Monday afternoon, and at the Wayne Care Centre Monday night.

Fourth of July festivities were topped off by the annual fireworks display presented by the Jaycees in the city ball park.

Mrs. Wette was mistress of ceremonies Monday afternoon for the opening of the museum in the family home of the late Rollie Ley. She introduced Wayne County Historical Society president Lucile Larson who introduced children of Rollie Ley, present for the ceremony. They are Henry Ley, Mrs. Marjorie Armstrong and Mrs. Joy Hein, all of Wayne, and Mrs. Mary Alice Champe of Carmel, Cal. Mrs. Milton Auker, also of California, could not be present for the ceremony.

The museum was made possible through donation of the house to the historical society by the Rollie Ley children. The museum was furnished and prepared by the historical society and the Questers antique collectors club.

John Lindahl, curator for the John G. Neihardt Cultural Center at Bancroft was guest speaker for the occasion.

A Nellig native, Lindahl received his bachelor of arts in education from WSC in 1970 and is now completing requirements for his masters degree. A former English teacher, Lindahl said he became interested in the curator's position because of his love of the works of the Nebraska poet laureate. He became curator April 22.

Speaking on behalf of the Nebraska Historical Society, Lindahl briefly traced the history of the Ley family and noted that a $200 loan from the State National Bank founded by Henry Ley Sr. made possible the publication of Neihardt's first work, "Divine Enchantment."

Following Lindahl's address, mayor Decker cut the ceremonial ribbon and more than 450 guests toured the museum during the afternoon.

Mrs. Larson said the museum will be open Thursday evenings from 7 until 9, and Sunday afternoons from 1 until 5.

Vietnam era veterans may be eligible for a business loan of up to $50,000 from the Small Business Administration (SBA), as the result of an agreement with the Veterans Administration. Information may be obtained at all SBA and VA regional offices.

Bucks Prize Jumps to $350

The top prize in this week's Birthday Bucks drawing climbs $25 to $350 after last week's jackpot went unclaimed.

Last Thursday night a Wayne woman Rhonda Hank, 715 A Valley Dr., won the $25 consolation award for her birthday being the closest to the winning jack-pot drawn at random by Mrs. Tony Thompson of King's Carpets.

Mrs. Hank, who was in Gries Rexall Store, was born on May 10, 1911. The winning date was April 11, 1951.

Tonight (Thursday) another drawing will be held at 8:15. Anyone can be a winner by being present in a participating business. No purchases or registration are necessary to win the Birthday Bucks.

Unicameral finds alternative to special session

CAPITOL NEWS
LINCOLN — A special session of the Unicameral apparently has been avoided. The question of having one arose in connection with $2.5 million in state aid to local schools money, due to be paid out this month, that turned up on the missing in action list at the conclusion of this year's session.

The Unicameral's Education Committee called in school officials and asked them about a special session. And then the committee asked the State Justice Department whether there was some way to get the money out to the schools without a special session. The justice department said no, there wasn't.

But lawmakers indicated they were reluctant and Gov. J. J. Exon was not enthusiastic, even though he called the one last November that started the whole thing.

Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue, the first to mention a special session, was also the one who finally joked about it, saying "Blood-letting is a winter sport," he said.

His committee had just voted unanimously for an alternative to calling the 49 whose sport Lewis was referring to into session. The decision, which had Exon's approval, is to ask the 1977 Unicameral for a deficiency appropriation of $2.5 million. In addition, the efficiency request would appropriate six per cent interest, or about $75,000.

The interest money will be allocated to the schools that must borrow money to make up the lost aid because they have no cash reserves. Those with cash reserves may also get interest money to replace the yield they normally get from investing surplus cash.

The aid money was removed from the budget during last November's special session, called to ease a state financial crunch. It wasn't until after this year's regular session adjourned that it was discovered the lawmakers had failed to replace the money.

Lawmakers and the governor both had indicated that it be there as part of the state's $55 million a year state aid program.

Bees Same as Beef
The Nebraska Supreme Court has decided there is a similarity between bees and beef.

The similarity is the way they must be treated when it comes time to figure personal property taxes.

It seems Sherman County tried to tax bees Harold Knoefler of Knoefler Honey Farms had brought into the state after Jan. 1, the day that personal property on hand is assessed.

During the trial, a State Revenue Department official said he thought bees were kind of livestock, basically because they were used to make money.

He also said that since 1922, livestock brought into the state or born or brought into the state after tax day are not taxed that year.

The Sherman County District Court agreed and Sherman County appealed.

"We find no reasonable distinction for tangible personal property taxes between livestock and honey bees or other living creatures used for commercial purposes," the court said, ruling in Knoefler's favor.

The Supreme Court also ruled there is no room for mistakes when a lender who makes a loan to a commercial firm faces a default on the loan.

The DeLay National Bank at Norfolk decided to sell the inventory of Jacobson Appliances to cover business notes. Procedures for such sales are contained in Nebraska's Uniform Commercial Code.

Money from the sale was not enough to cover the defaulted loans so the bank filed suit to get the remainder. The Madison County district court awarded the bank $11,623.

The Supreme Court reversed the decision of the lower court because the bank failed to give proper notice of all the sales to Jacobson.

Two judges didn't like it. Judge Hale McCown, speaking for the minority, said the ruling resulted from convenience because the courts, if just one mistake was found, could rule the whole thing invalid without having to figure out which sales in a series were valid and which were not.

Animal Research Pays Off
A University of Nebraska scientist reports the first hurdle has been cleared in the possible use of a calf, diarrhea virus to ward off a form found in humans that is sometimes fatal to those under age six.

Dr. C.A. Mebus heads a team of three who developed the calf virus. The foal-like virus the team traced diarrhea to — there are at least two other viruses that cause the disease — was similar to one found in humans and the National Health Institute got interested.

Mebus said the foal-like virus is "one of the more important ones" in terms of impact on dairy and beef herds.

The institute thought the vaccine might provide the key for a vaccine humans could use.

The deadly diarrhea hits hardest in the hungry nations of the world, but is not unknown in the country. Two deaths have been attributed to it in Nebraska.

In India, an estimated 215 million a year die from it. In order to test out the idea on using the vaccine on humans, Mebus gave the vaccine to a calf before it was born and then upon birth challenged it with the human virus. It didn't contract the disease.

Mebus explained newborn calves are susceptible to the human virus, but within hours develop the same natural immunity to it that humans do to the animal form.

Mebus said it will take an undetermined number of tests before the vaccine is ever tried on humans.

If it is, the vaccine will be "cooled" considerably in strength.

The idea of using an animal virus to help humans is nothing new, the researcher notes. Originally, cowpox was used to immunize humans against smallpox.

The calf vaccine was developed in 1970 at the request of livestock producers who previously faced potential diarrhea losses of up to 80 per cent of their calves if the disease struck.

The researchers first examined one virus and then a second. The second is the foal-like virus. They are also working to identify a third. Before the team got to work, most thought diarrhea was brought on by bacteria that had to be treated after it was in rather than a virus that could be immunized against. The vaccine was cleared for use in 1972.

OBSERVATIONS

Victory for the people

As a prelude to Independence Day, the Supreme Court's decision regarding the gag order issued last October in the Charles Simants murder case was a real "Happy Birthday, America" present. Lincoln County district court Judge Hugh Stuart, who issued the gag order restricting news coverage of the case in North Platte, said the high court's ruling will "cut down on the number of gag orders that are being entered."

The Supreme Court ruling opinion written by Chief Justice Warren Burger said 1st Amendment guarantees of freedom of the press were violated by Stuart's order. The court's vote against the Simants gag order was unanimous and indications are that "barriers will remain high" regarding restraints on news coverage.

The right to a fair trial and the right of the public to know are complimentary, not directly opposed as some people today seem to think. Experiences in other nations have shown that when freedom of the press is lost, other freedoms also begin to fall by the wayside.

The unanimous ruling strongly reaffirms that freedom of the press is important in America, and journalists across the nation rejoiced at news of the decision. But the ruling isn't just a victory for the press, it's a victory for the people of the United States. It demonstrates that those freedoms which were held to be important 200 years ago are still considered vital today, and that the system set up 200 years ago to protect those freedoms still works today — Jim Strayer.

An American absurdity

Another decision handed down last week by the Supreme Court is certain to draw considerable attention.

The court ruled that minors do not need the consent of their parents to have an abortion. In the same ruling, the justices also said a wife may obtain an abortion without the consent of her husband.

The second part of that ruling seems to tear at the very fabric of the American family. Communication and functioning as a partnership are essential to a successful marriage and by its action the Supreme Court has officially condoned an action which violates those principles. A look at divorce statistics should convince anyone that this type of action is not needed.

Minors being able to obtain an abortion without their parent's consent is one of the absurdities of American life. A young girl can now obtain an abortion on her own, but needs mom and dad's okay before a doctor can pierce her eardrums. — Bob Bartlett and Jim Strayer.

Americans made it happen

The Bicentennial year continues. But the major celebration, we suspect, is done. For some, at least, that is probably cause for a sigh of relief, tinged with a bit of sadness — the first, because of all the many hours of work which sent into preparing for the celebration; and second, because it is past.

In retrospect, we will probably think of things which could have been done but weren't. But nationally and locally, it was one heck of a birthday party. With so much to do, there wasn't much time for TV watching (thank heavens) but we did catch part of a newscast about the celebration in Seward. It was satisfying to see that the networks, in the midst of covering the celebration in Washington, New York, St.

Louis and other major cities, didn't neglect America's grass roots. Seward was an appropriate location for national coverage, but it could just as well have been any of the countless other small towns across the nation which put on their own celebration, including those in Wayne County and the surrounding area.

If you attended Allen's week long celebration, or Wakefield's "Almost Anything Goes" games, or Wayne's two-hour long parade, or any of the other events sponsored by these and other communities, you know what we mean.

By any standard, the Bicentennial Birthday celebration, locally and across the nation was an unequalled success. The American people made it so. — Jim Strayer.

Complacency deadly

Response to the presentation made June 29 by artist Al Nelson was encouraging and gratifying. Nelson is the artist responsible for designing building renovations throughout the Midwest and his slide presentation, showing before-and-after scenes of his projects, was impressive and convincing.

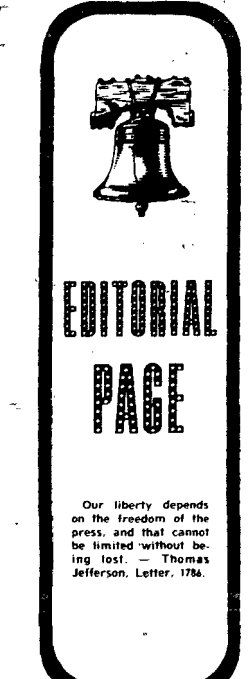

Complacency is deadly for communities like Wayne. For those owners who are ready to move ahead with renovation, or are at least willing to consider it, we say "Thanks for being interested in making Wayne an even better community than it is."

To those who are dead set against doing anything we can only say, "You probably keep your home looking good, why not do the same with the building which makes that lovely home possible?" — Jim Strayer.

Whether or not to join in the project, is of course, up to each individual building owner. It is easy to say "Wayne doesn't have a bad-looking downtown area now," and we would agree. We would add, however, "But it could look so much better."

California nuclear vote 'good news'

The news media are often accused of being negative, of reporting only the bad things. There is some truth to the charge. Front page headline stuff tends to be "bad," since the bad news is usually the most dramatic.

And there is always a temptation for a columnist to affect something because, frankly, it's more fun — makes for more colorful, punchy copy. Besides, if you're trying to present the business point of view, there's never a shortage of idiotic accusations to deal with.

But if you stop to think about it, the "bad" news really comprises a very small part of your newspaper, or of a radio or TV station's broadcast day. Nevertheless, I suspect that many in the news business feel slightly grateful — as I do — when something "good" happens that is also newsworthy. One of the best examples of that happy occurrence to cross my desk lately is the two-to-one rejection by California voters of Proposition 13, which would have effectively discouraged the construction of nuclear power plants in the state.

There are risks associated with the use of nuclear power, just as there are risks inherent in the use of electricity, natural gas and gasoline. We accept these latter risks because we understand them, and we believe the benefits outweigh them.

But nuclear power is newer, therefore less familiar. And the strange is often scary — especially when it is associated with anything as awesome as atomic explosives. So it is easy to see how people could be frightened away from nuclear power, by ignorance or misinformation. And consistently the more to the credit of the people of California that they weren't.

The nuclear power question will be debated in other states in coming months. Here are a few of the fundamentals to keep in mind if your state is one of them:

—Why do we need nuclear power? It is less costly than oil, and unlike the fossil fuels, contributes nothing to air pollution. It is also less susceptible to interruption because of political developments overseas. And, we will soon need every practical power source available to meet our growing energy needs, even with drastic conservation measures.

—Can it blow up like an atomic bomb? No. For an atomic explosion to occur, the proper amount of nuclear material must be hurled together by a chemical explosion. In a power reactor, the nuclear material is separated by non-nuclear material. There is no way it can combine rapidly enough to explode.

The absolute worst that could happen is for a reactor to melt down, but that doesn't melt. This might cause radioactive steam or other material to escape into the atmosphere, if a whole series of safety devices failed at once. Some people could be harmed by such an event, but the chances of being a victim are less than those of being struck by lightning. The nuclear industry has compiled an enviable safety record. No one has ever been killed or even seriously injured in the operating experience of our 60 nuclear electric plants.

—What about the disposal of radioactive waste? This is a problem that deserves to be taken seriously. We need to depend on nuclear power for hundreds of years, the accumulation of waste products could become difficult to manage. But we don't. Nuclear fission power will probably be important to us only for about 50 years — just long enough to bridge the gap until solar energy, long-lasting power sources such as solar energy and hydrogen fusion, neither of which poses a significant waste or safety problem.

—Could terrorists steal material for an atomic bomb from a civilian nuclear plant? Yes. It's a grave threat that should be taken seriously. Terrorists could also steal the material from a military installation, even though a civilian nuclear power industry. Precautions can — and will — be taken.

In sum, nuclear power has both advantages and disadvantages, with the former preponderant. The hazards are well understood. We know how to deal with them.

So I salute the voters of California, for keeping cool heads while the opposition suffered a core meltdown from an excess of uncontrolled not air. Richard Leshner, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Water control efforts applauded

If Nebraska's spectacular growth in irrigation development, is to continue, all Nebraskans and their legislators will inevitably have to face up to two major controversial issues — transfer to surplus water, and the watershed to another and acceptance of some system of water rights and conservation of the state's underground water resources.

Progress has been made and continues to be made by the Nebraska Legislature and by the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. The state's vast underground water resources are being surveyed and monitored in continuing studies. Conservation techniques are steadily developed and recommended.

The Public Works Committee of the Legislature headed by Sen. Maurice Kremer of Aurora again is conducting studies and hearings under direction of Legislative Resolution No. 139 which recognizes the problems as follows:

"Whereas, the Eighty-Fourth Legislature of Nebraska, Second Session, recognizes the importance of proper water and related land resources development to the future of the State of Nebraska; and

"Whereas, this Legislature also recognizes that such proper development may require changes or additions to the statutes of Nebraska; and

"Whereas, such possible changes may include, but not be limited to recognition of the interrelationship of underground and surface waters and their conjunctive use, diversion of water from one river basin to other river basins, problems relating to the digging of water wells, and the maintenance of uncontaminated underground water sources, problems created by a 'dual system' of surface water rights, implementation of management policy and standards capable of satisfying federal requirements so as to preclude federal intervention into the state's rights in water resources, establishment of a system of preferences for uses of water to assure domestic supply and to assure that municipalities receive adequate supplies of water, recognition of the importance of water to Nebraska's irrigation-supported agricultural economy, and provisions to insure a continued supply of good quality water for Nebraska."

That portion of the resolution does a good job of wrapping up the complexity of Nebraska's water situation and illustrates how very well informed the members of the Public Works Committee and its chairman are concerning it.

The relatively slow pace of the state's needed water conservation measures basically stems from a reliance on the part of the general public and of farmers and ranchers themselves to recognize and support remedial measures. Any trans-basin diversion suggestion always produced a storm of protest. Forty years ago, the Tri-County Project which has been such a boon to Central Nebraska flourished on the argument and survived on assurance that no water would get over the hump into another river basin.

Proposals to limit drilling of deep wells and use of water in areas which have been showing almost uninterrupted declines in their water tables for many years are regularly met with great reservations. There exists a simplistic view among many landowners that "I own the land and everything that is underneath it and nobody is going to restrict my use of it."

There must be willingness to recognize that unless changes are made within a few years, some "slow recharge" areas of our state will be pumped dry of their underground water resources and priorities won't mean very much to any irrigator in those areas. The Public Works Committee at its hearings needs positive proposals and solutions rather than stonewall obstacles. — M. M. Van Kirk, Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation.

Kinship claimed

Dear Editor: I am sorry to learn that Sen. Murphy's mother has denied our two families are related. It was taught that "Mother is always right" and have learned from hard knocks not to argue with any "Mrs. Murphy."

Therein lies the rub, though. Bob's mother is not a "blond" Murphy. Mine is, but my "Minnie Murphy," half German and half Irish. (Her mother was the only Maggie Murphy in history to be 100 per cent German.)

Bob and I agreed in the 1968 Senate race against each other that we had to be cousins, since both families came from Galena, Ill., a very small town back then. His great-grandfather, Denis, arrived in New York in 1840, soon going on to Galena. My great grandfather James was already there, having served in the 3rd Illinois Infantry as a Lieutenant in the Mexican War.

The gravity of this matter is such that I have decided to go to Galena, as well as to Murphysboro, to get it all straight.

For my part, I hope we are related. It's nice having a banker in the family. There was another one who changed his name when he got into Florida real estate. All our poor relatives claimed him anyway till he got into income tax trouble.

It's different with my mother. She doesn't mind the banker part, but she doesn't like politicians.

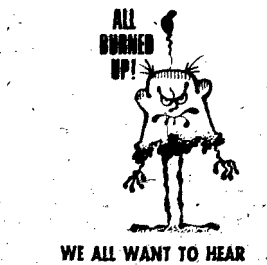

I had to assure her I was the underdog in this race to keep my welcome to her house.

For awhile I thought about asking for a loan from Bob to use in the campaign. Maybe I had better go somewhere else. — Aaron Butler, petitioner for senate, 17th District.

Sen. Murphy was queried about this matter and although his response was one of amusement, he did say that his father had traced the family's lineage back to Ireland. He said he is certain that he and Butler are not related.

Butler is attempting to have his name placed on the ballot for the November general election so he can oppose Murphy for the 17th District Unicameral seat, now held by Sen. Murphy.

We won't say anything about our opinion of the claimed kinship, but certainly it is interesting that the matter is being one way or the other on the election. It isn't a campaign issue, doesn't have any bearing on either candidate's ability to serve, and shouldn't be given a second thought by voters when it comes time to mark their ballots. — Jim Strayer.

Seed Viable for 13 Years

Shattercane seed can last so many years in the soil that a farmer had best rogue fields when the weed first appears and before it sets seed, according to Dr. O.C. Burnside.

Burnside, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln agronomist, described an experiment in which shattercane seed was buried and then dug up periodically and tested for germination over a 14-year period.

The seeds were buried at Alliance, North Platte and Lincoln in soils typical of the area. They survived, 11, 12 and 13 years respectively at the three sites.

The experiment had been set up for a 20-year period, but the scientists found no viable seed at the 14th year.

The aim was to determine the influence of time, soil type with and among locations, and climatic conditions across Nebraska on shattercane seed persistence in soil.

Average shattercane seed germination dropped from 96 to 39 per cent in 14 years, but they generally retained above 30 per cent germination through the eighth year, according to Burnside.

"Seed viability dropped from 12 per cent at nine years to zero per cent 14 years after burial," he said.

The seed in the experiment was buried in sod, he said.

While seed survival should be less in tilled soil, the practice of rouging small patches should prevent a serious problem from developing because of the ability of the produced seed to survive in soil, he said.

The seed generally infests an area by being planted for forage, as a contaminant in some sorghum seed, manure, runoff water, irrigation water, or by passing through livestock that are grazing the field, he said.

"Control measures are available, but they will have to be continued a number of years once shattercane becomes established.

"Therefore, a farmer should try to eliminate the problem before it becomes established on his farm and save himself a lot of future expense and grief," Burnside concluded.

GROWING CAULIFLOWER

Tie developing cauliflower heads when they reach the size of a quarter and begin to spread the leaves enclosing them. Since plants do not all develop at the same time, go through the garden every two to three days and tie up the longest leaves around expanding heads.

During hot weather, expanding heads may reach harvestable size in four to six days. At harvest, heads should be fully developed, compact and white. Cut heads with a sharp knife leaving at least one whorl of leaves to protect the head. Caul

FLOWER HEADS WILL KEEP TWO TO THREE WEEKS IN THE REFRIGERATOR

Start a fall crop of cauliflower in your garden in July.

CUT FLOWERS

The secret of keeping cut flowers fresh is to keep a supply of water coming up through the stems. All cutting should be completed with sharp shears or knife. This will avoid crushing conducting vessels of the stem. A slanting cut will expose more water absorbing vessels. The slanting cuts will also allow water to enter the stem.

Carry a bucket of water to the garden rather than a basket, so the final cuts could be made underwater. This prevents air from clogging up the water conducting vessels. The stems of plants which exude a milky sap should be sealed by searing them in a flame or boiling them in water. Woody stems should be split or crushed to increase water intake.

Most flowers fade after pollination. Therefore, harvesting should be completed as plants begin to mature. Then remove the stems before they can pollinate the flowers.

Flower stems are usually filled with water early in the morning. Most flowers will recover best if harvested at this time. Hollow stemmed flowers such as gladioli and zinnias may be cut in later afternoon and quickly plunged into water.

GRASSHOPPER CONTROL

Control grasshoppers in vegetable garden with 25 per cent or malathion 57 per cent liquid concentrates diluted two teaspoons to one gallon of water. Malathion can be used one to seven days before harvest. Do not disperse one to four days. The mixture is for spray application to consumption will be listed on labels.

Identification Is Important Step In Control of Insects, Disease

Identification of unknown plants, diseases and insects in that garden and the field is necessary for detecting new infestations and for developing new control methods, according to University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension specialists.

Unidentified insects or plants should first be taken to a county extension agency. Any specimens the agent cannot identify should be sent to extension specialists at area and district offices or to the university.

NU extension entomologist Robert Roselle cautions that insect specimens arrive in good condition. He suggested preserving soft bodies or larval insects in a vial filled with a solution of one-half rubbing alcohol and one-half white vinegar, mailed in a sturdy cardboard box, or mailing tube. Hard bodied specimens can be sent dry by wrapping carefully in tissue and mailing in a strong box or mailing tube marked "fragile."

A letter of description should be enclosed which includes location where insect was found, description of any damage done to plants and type of plant. The damaged plants should be packaged between dry paper towels and wrapped in waxed or brown paper.

Specimens should be sent to the Entomology Department, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, East Campus, Lincoln, NE 68583.

Sending plants for disease identifica tion requires the same careful packaging, according to NU extension plant pathologist David Wyson.

The most important thing is to send an entire living plant. For identification of root rots or seedling blights, dig up moist soil around the roots. Surround the roots with the moist soil and place in plastic bag. It also is best to send along a healthy plant.

The same directions apply for small grains. Vegetables or fruits should be sent still attached to the stem or twig. Pick those that are not entirely rotten and place them in an unsealed plastic bag.

For turf samples, send a four inch diameter plug cut out to three inches in depth. Wrap the soil and roots.

All plant specimens should be placed in a noncrushable box marked "please rush — plant material."

A letter should be enclosed containing the name of the landowner, where sample was collected (for records), location of the land (city or county and garden or field), date sample was collected, history of fertilizer and herbicide use on the ground, cropping history of the land, degree of damage and explanation of when the disease was first noticed.

Specimens should be sent to the Department of Plant Pathology, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, East Campus, Lincoln, NE 68583.

UN-L Receives $135,000 Grant For Grain Sorghum Research

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln has received a grant of $135,000 from the U.S. Department of State's Agency for International Development (AID) to support grain sorghum studies.

The studies, started in the middle 1960's and headed by Dr. Jerry Eastin of the agronomy department, are aimed at learning how various physiological processes affect yield and how this information can be used by plant breeders.

The program has been supported for the past 10 years by the Rockefeller Foundation and for three years by AID. The Rockefeller Foundation is concluding its part in supporting the program, which has attracted world-wide attention.

"The goal is to understand the growth and development of the crop well enough to be able to maximize grain yield over the range of environments where sorghum culture exists now or is likely in the future.

"Setting sights on such a broad goal requires a good deal of optimism if some might logically view such optimism as foolhardiness for good reason.

"Crop yield is dictated by a whole host of physiological processes interacting with the environment simultaneously or successively in a field canopy.

"These include photosynthesis, translocation, respiration, protein synthesis, carbohydrate synthesis, and others.

"Scores of scientists have spent lifetimes investigating any and all of these processes," Eastin said.

At Nebraska, six scientists are seeking an integrated view of all these processes, trying to determine which one or two are the most limiting in a given situation," Eastin said.

The success of the sorghum physiology team is attested to by the 10 years of support from the Rockefeller Foundation and, more recently, AID.

In order to conduct their research, the team has had to develop two instruments that are now being used world-wide by other scientists.

One measures photosynthetically active radiation and another measures leaf area in the field without the need to destroy the leaf.

Team members also have become involved in international consultation in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India, South America, and Africa.

They are teaching courses based on the work and this, together with their exposure in other countries, has attracted students from many countries to do graduate work in their laboratory.

Some of their findings are already being used to develop improved lines of grain sorghum.

Quick and proper action could save the life of someone who is choking, says the Nebraska Medical Association.

If an infant is choking from something in the throat, hold the baby by the ankles, letting the head hang straight down. Open the baby's mouth, pull the tongue forward and let the obstruction fall out.

If the choking victim is a small child, hold the victim over your leg and give several sharp pats between the shoulder blades. For an adult, place the victim on the side of the body with the head lower than the body and apply several sharp blows between the shoulder blades.

Remember to clear the victim's throat, pull the tongue forward and start mouth-to-mouth breathing if the victim has trouble breathing.

Drought Is All a Matter of Degree!

For two foreign visitors to the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, drought is all a matter of degree. E.J. "Ted" Mostyn, an agricultural engineer from Great Britain, and A.L. There is absolutely no risk of a nuclear power plant exploding like a nuclear weapon, since it hasn't enough of the fuel that must be used for weapons.

We're still calling it a dry period, which usually lasts for six months or more," Turner said. "Droughts, last for years." Meanwhile, Englanders are dealing with "a pattern which hasn't yet emerged, although it's clarifying," Mostyn said. In both countries, the southern parts have been worst hit by the dry weather, the two men said. Mostyn said southern England's horticultural crops such as what he called severe signs of drought strain. He said northern England and Scotland have received above average amounts of rain during the nation's three-month dry period.

He said the drought has not had a serious effect on barley or wheat crops, which are grown mostly in eastern England. Turner said he is unsure how Australia's major crop - wheat - will fare, but he thinks yields will decrease because of a dry fallow period before fields were planted, resulting in low soil moisture. The effects of dry weather on the two nations' social lives, however, appear to differ, largely because of Australia's extensive city water reservoir systems. "The average person in Melbourne would never know that the rest of the state is suffering unless he travels around," Turner said. "City people still walk in their garden and wash their cars much the same as they would do at any other time." He said the country's reservoirs store water discharged from adjacent streams during wet years for subsequent dry years. "That means that the water supply for towns is costly and the rest of the state is suffering unless he travels around," Turner said. Number Speeds Claims

People covered by Medicare medical insurance can assure faster payment of their claims if they make sure their health insurance number is on the claim form, according to Dale Brighi, social security district manager in Norfolk.

The number identifies a claim for Medicare payment on bills for medical services. "If you put a wrong health insurance number - or don't enter a number - on a 'Request for Medicare Payment' form, a search for your correct number is necessary," Brighi said. "The search can delay your payment."

Medical insurance number helps pay for doctor bills and many other medical expenses of almost everyone 65 and over, disabled people under 65 who have been entitled to social security disability payments for 24 consecutive months or more, and eligible workers or members of their families who have permanent kidney failure.
