

Petitions Filed in Ponca On Form of Government

Thomas Carey of Ponca Friday filed petitions to place on the November ballots a pair of issues aimed at changing the organization of government in Dixon County.

One proposal is to change from the supervisor to commissioner form of county government. The other proposal is to change the basis of election for either supervisors or commissioners from individual districts to the county electorate at large.

Switching from the present seven-man board of supervisors to a three-man board of commissioners would have several effects in addition to reducing the size of the governing body.

Under the present supervisor system, the county is divided into townships with each township electing its own local board.

The township board can levy a property tax of up to eight mills, and is responsible for overseeing the maintenance of rural roads in the township, with the exception of mail routes.

Each of the seven supervisors is elected from a district, and is responsible for the maintenance of mail routes within the district.

If the commissioner form of government is adopted the townships would no longer be organized governmental subdivisions.

The county commissioners would become responsible for maintenance of all rural roads within the county. That could have the effect of reducing the amount of money available for road maintenance. The county mill levy is now at 14.28 mills, the maximum allowed by law. The limit would not increase under the commissioner setup. Funds for maintenance of all county roads would be provided through the county mill levy, because there would no longer be any township levy to take care of part of the roads.

Carey said Friday he had obtained 596 signatures on the petition requesting that the issue be placed on the ballot. The signatures of 259 registered voters are needed to accomplish that goal.

The second issue, which Carey wants to see on the ballot would change the basis for electing members of the county governing board. Supervisors are now elected by district, and commissioners would be elected by district if the first issue passes, but the at-large issue does not.

Switching to an at-large electoral base would mean each voter in the county would be eligible to vote for each member of either the board of supervisors or board of commissioners, as individual offices came up for election.

Carey said he had 711 signatures on the petition to place the at-large issue on the ballot, with 583 valid signatures required. County clerk Esther Brennan, the county's chief election official, will verify each signature on the two petitions, and if enough signatures are found to be valid, will include the issues on the November ballot for Dixon County.

Dixon County Sheriff Has New Number

Dixon County residents needing to contact the sheriff's department will have to dial a new number now.

Sheriff Dean Chase said the number change is the result of the need for two telephone lines into his office, instead of the previous single line. The new number is 755-2255.

Chase said official calls sometimes tend to be lengthy and the second line will help to insure that his office can be reached when help is needed.

Legion Champions

WAYNE BASEBALL fans turned out for the second time this year to welcome the home team back from a state tourney victory. Members of Wayne's Legion baseball team lead the way into town displaying the trophy they received after winning the state Class C Section title last week in Colerberg. Earlier this year, the Wayne High team captured the state Class B high school baseball title.

Problems Prompt Water Conference

Several dry years in Northeast Nebraska have brought about some unique water problems for the region and those problems have prompted a meeting in Wayne Tuesday to discuss the situation.

The Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District (LENRD) is sponsoring the conference which will begin at 1:30 p.m. in the Student Center on the Wayne State College campus.

A panel of eight speakers will each cover an aspect of water usage during a 10 to 15 minute talk. The individual presentations will be followed by a question and answer period.

Steve Oltmans LENRD manager explained the reason for the Wayne meeting. "I'm sure the reason the (LENRD) directors called the meeting is because they are all concerned about the unique water problems in Northeast Nebraska."

Those problems are particularly acute in Wayne County, Oltmans said, but emphasized that they extend throughout the Elkhorn River basin.

Irrigation development is continuing in the region, largely because of dry conditions which have persisted the past few years, Oltmans said. The growing demand for irrigation has severely reduced base flow in several streams and some instances of domestic well failures have been reported, including a couple of cases in Wayne County this year.

Cystic Fibrosis Leaders Named

A pair of Wayne County women have been named chairmen of the 1976 Breath of Life Campaign for their respective communities.

Mrs. Larry Alderson will oversee the campaign, to raise funds to fight children's lung diseases, in Carroll, and Mrs. Steve Davids is chairman for Hoskins.

The campaign is conducted by the Nebraska chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. James Demman, president, announced the appointments of Mrs. Alderson and Mrs. Davids.

The 1976 Breath of Life campaign will be conducted during September, national Cystic Fibrosis Month.

Cystic fibrosis is an incurable genetic disease, inherited when both parents carry the recessive gene. It is believed that one in 20 persons in the United States may carry the recessive cystic fibrosis gene without knowing.

Because of improved therapy and research many cystic fibrosis patients are now able to live into their teens and young adulthood. Nebraska has one of the leading clinics in the nation at the University of Nebraska hospital at Omaha.

Oltmans said he anticipates continuing irrigation development, but believes most people aren't knowledgeable about state water laws.

"We'd like to invite the public to attend this meeting so we can demonstrate the various aspects of irrigation development, and laws governing use of water in Nebraska."

The meeting is just as important as non-irrigators as those who are now irrigating, Oltmans said. Many farmers are beginning to consider irrigation. Understanding the long-term aspects, both technical and economic, is important, especially in an area where potential for development is limited, Oltmans said.

Included on the panel of specialist who will be making presentations are: —Don Spitz, Wayne County extension agent, "Status of Water Problems in Wayne County."

Butler Over Top In Petition Drive

Aaron Butler of Wayne Friday said he expects to sign an affidavit Wednesday in Nebraska Secretary State Allen Butler's office accepting nomination by petition to run for the 17th Legislative District senatorial seat held by Sen. Bob Murphy of South Sioux City.

Butler announced in June that he would seek to have his name placed in nomination through a petition drive. The required number of signatures to qualify is 470.

Butler Friday said he had more than 600 signatures verified as valid registered voters by clerks of the counties in Iowa, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota — and said he expected to have more than 1,000 signatures by the time the petition is filed before the Tuesday deadline.

"I am very surprised at and very grateful for the substantial response to the petition drive," Butler said.

Middle School Registration Begins

Registration for new Wayne Middle School students, grades five through eight, is scheduled for today (Monday) from 9 a.m. until noon, and from 1 to 3 p.m.

High school students who have not registered may do so beginning today by seeing guidance counselor Curtis Frye in his office during regular hours, 8:30 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Classes for Wayne Carroll district students will begin Monday, Aug. 30. Middle school students will pick up class schedules at 8:20 a.m. in the school gym. An abbreviated class schedule will be observed and —Gerald Svoboda, research geologist, conservation and survey division, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, "History of Irrigation Development in Nebraska."

Water Management Tool." —LaVern Stelson, agricultural research service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, "Energy Sources and Management for Irrigation Needs."

—Fred Salmon, Wakefield, "Views From a Local Well Driller."

—Richard Hahn, "Comments from Lower Elkhorn NRD Director."

Following the initial presentations by panel members, the floor will be opened for questions from the public in regard to specific water and management questions.

Chamber Plans Fall Expo

The Wayne Chamber of Commerce was unable to have its annual Spring Expo this year because of scheduling problems, but is now planning a fall event for Sept. 17 and 18.

Roy Korh is chairman for the Fall Expo. Exhibitors interested in arranging for booths can call Korh at 375-2110.

Arrangements for entertainment have not yet been completed, but Chamber manager Howard Witt said a style show and cooking school are again being contemplated.

Wayne shoppers will have a couple of weeks to register to win a 1968 automobile as part of the Chamber "Back to School" promotion.

Registration forms are available to licensed drivers at participating businesses. Registration slips will be delivered to the Chamber office by 3 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 4, with the drawing to follow at 4. No purchase is necessary to register for the prize.

Driving Skills Rusty? JCs Are Offering Course

Drivers who feel they may need to brush up on their defensive driving skills will have an opportunity to do so next month when a four-week defensive driving course starts at Wayne-Carroll High School.

Sponsored by the Wayne County Jaycees, the course will be taught by Sgt. Curtis Cochran of the Nebraska State Patrol office in Norfolk.

Classes will meet in room 202 every Tuesday evening at 7 for the remainder of the month. Registration fee is $5 per person and the deadline to sign up is Saturday, Sept. 4.

Persons wishing to take part in the course can contact JC Daie Preston at his home in Wayne for registration blanks. Butts said he expects from 40 to 50 licensed drivers, will be limited to 20 persons.

County Crop Loss Estimate Near $20 Million

Crop losses caused by drought will cost Wayne County farmers nearly $20 million, according to a report filed Friday by the county emergency committee.

Estimates of losses are arrived at by comparing what it appears fields will yield this year with the average yield in a normal year.

Some 115,000 acres of the county's 122,000 acres of corn have suffered significant yield losses, according to the report, and yields this year are predicted at 55 percent of the normal average of 80 bushels an acre. In terms of financial loss, that amounts to $14,163,000.

Ray Butts, director of the county ASCS (Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service) said the 7,000 acres of corn which haven't suffered significant yield reductions are irrigated fields.

All of the other three crops reported on — alfalfa, soybeans, and oats, have had 100 per cent of total acres affected by the drought.

Reduction on the 20,000 acres of alfalfa in the county is estimated at 80 per cent, with normal yield set at three tons an acre. The emergency committee figures that represents a $2,800,000 loss for county farmers.

Soybeans reduction is set at 40 per cent below the 25 bushel an acre average for a normal year. Dollars registered on the 30,000 acres in the county add up to $1,701,000.

The normal 60 bushel an acre average for some 42,000 acres of oats was estimated at 25 per cent, a $850,500 loss.

Total for the estimate of losses is $19,599,500. The emergency committee had previously filed a report estimating losses from crop reduction at $14.5 million.

Failure to receive enough additional moisture to improve the crop outlook prompted another meeting Friday morning so a revised estimate could be prepared in time for submission before the deadline Wednesday to the Nebraska State Emergency Board.

The board will decide Friday whether or not to ask federal officials for disaster designations for individual counties.

Farmers within designated counties will become eligible for low interest loans from the Farmers Home Administration.

A number of other counties in Northeast Nebraska have filed similar reports, including Dixon County, estimating $11.8 million in losses caused by crop yield reductions, and Cedar County, with losses estimated at $11.7 million.

Farmers who suffer losses amounting to more than 50 per cent of their programmed yield are also eligible for crop disaster payments, Butts said.

Programmed yield is arriving at by multiplying the number of acres allotted under ASCS grain programs by the normal yield established by the ASCS.

About 80 Wayne County farmers have already filed for the crop disaster payments, Butts said. No county disaster designation is necessary for a farmer to apply and determination of payment is made by the ASCS county board. No determination of payment has been made on the applications received so far.

Most of the farmers who have filed for the crop disaster payments so far are planning to cut corn for silage or green chop. Butts said he expects from 40 to 70 per cent of the farmers in Wayne County to eventually make application.

OBSERVATIONS

Important meeting

The conference scheduled for Tuesday on groundwater usage is probably one of the more important meetings which will convene in Wayne County this year.

Farming is a complex business, one which requires expertise in an ever-increasing number of fields. Understanding the legal and technical aspects of using groundwater water is becoming more important each year. As irrigation development continues it will become vital that farmers add knowledge of the subject to an already impressive catalog of subjects.

Incidents in Northeast Nebraska this summer have graphically pointed out the necessity for thorough understanding of the subject, and some of the problems which can arise.

Domestic wells in two locations in Wayne County have had their water level pumped below normal. A similar incident in Madison County has resulted in a suit being filed in district court, seeking to enjoin an irrigator from continued use of a well.

Controls to prevent such occasions might be necessary. We generally have a knee-jerk reflex against any type of additional governmental controls. However, in the case of ground water controls are imposed only at the request of the people involved, and through natural resources districts, governed by locally elected officials. It should also be noted that a significant portion of NRD directors are themselves farmers.

Whether or not controls will ever be needed locally is a question which will be answered by time and changing conditions. But the fact that problems have arisen indicates that it would be wise for anyone affected by ground water usage to attend the meeting. — Jim Strayer.

STRAYEr Thoughts

By Jim Strayer

Ellene and Dave Jager began their marriage in style Aug. 14. David drove through Wayne on an old John Deere tractor, with his bride behind. In a decorative measure presider, the bride's mother asked that the item be included with the wedding story, but I felt it was more appropriate here. Best wishes, Ellene and Dave.

Sort of reminds me of our wedding. I didn't mind the exterior decorations on our car, (my brothers and cousins planned for months), but I got a little upset over having the car filled with newspapers. Guess it was appropriate considering my occupation, but I still vowed to get revenge. Missed the opportunity, however. My sneaky brother-in-law got married when we were in Tennessee and couldn't get back to Fairbury for the wedding.

Heavy Turnout

I'm predicting a heavy voter turnout in Dixon County in November. Not only is it a presidential election year, but voters there will be deciding whether or not to switch the county government from supervisors to commissioners, and whether or not to elect county government at large, rather than by districts.

More Flats

Almost forgot a postscript to a previous item. I had mentioned about the problems Marge has had with her car commuting from Allen to Wayne. A couple of weeks ago she and Gary and the kids went camping — and got a couple of flat tires.

However, she reports that since my mention of her car problems, they have ceased. So if you have something that's really bugging you, see your friendly editor columnist.

(There is a slight problem, Marge said that since her problem ceased, three friends have had flats.)

Vacation Time

I should mention that Lavon Beckman, our regular society editor was on vacation last week. Receptionist Roseann did an admirable job filling in. Same goes for Dan Vardavka who handled the sports desk while Bob Bartlett tested his skills on a variety of Nebraska golf courses.

We're No. 1

Wayne won its second state baseball championship for 1976. This time it was the Wayne Legion team, which brought back the Class C Legion title after a tough tournament in Gothenburg. Congratulations are certainly due to all the players, coach, Hank Overin, and the fans who have supported the team.

National Fiberglass

Action taken last week by Wayne Industries was welcome news. The non-profit industrial development corporation is going to pay the premiums for title insurance for National Fiberglass which will build a plant here. Construction of the plant building was delayed by legal complications but title insurance will clear the way. National Fiberglass will be a great asset to the community.

YOU AND YOUR CAR

By the Automotive Information Council

"Life and death means a lot more than the ABC's," says an Indiana State University educator who is trying to upgrade high school instruction in driver training.

Dr. Walter W. Gray, holder of a doctorate in driver education told the Automotive Information Council that "too many schools regard the training of future motorists as a secondary subject. 'The Certification of teachers needs to be toughened,' he contends. 'Too often the jobs are given to football coaches during the off-season or to chemistry teachers looking for summer income.'

He also believes that state examiners, on whose judgement a driver candidate passes or fails, are a weak link in the total safety picture. "Examiners, in many cases, get their jobs through political plum." He favors civil service qualification as a possible answer.

The educator in Terre Haute would like to see each prospective driver take 90 hours of classroom work compared to the prevailing 60 hours and eight hours on the road instruction compared to the six months now offer. Noting that driving is becoming increasingly complex, Dr. Gray says his courses represent a continual series of exams based on judgment. "It is the type of teaching that cannot be found in a textbook," he explains.

On the school's own training course, 20 students are paired off in 10 vehicles. There is only one instructor who sits in a glass booth and maintains communication with each car via two-way radio. Dr. Gray thinks this arrangement makes the students more responsible and saves money. "Lower costs are a big thing with school administrators," he notes, "and at ISU the program is working with virtually no accidents."

Alcohol has been recognized as a factor in half the traffic fatalities but Dr. Gray does not believe in showing his students horror pictures of killer accidents. "We teach them the chemistry of alcohol, the effects of the metabolism on the body," he reports. The university also invites "volunteers" to come in and test their reflexes on a classroom simulator. The "volunteer" steadily consumes a diet of beer and after each glass "drives" the simulator. The class observes how the increase in consumption affects driving ability.

Dr. Gray has a simple formula at ISU. Quality program plus quality teacher equals quality driver.

Out of Old Nebraska

Before the 17th Amendment to the constitution (ratified 1913), U.S. senators were elected by state legislatures, not by popular vote. Prior to that date a Nebraska aspirant for the Senate could use one or more of the following approaches to gain the office: (1) line up support of incumbent state senators; (2) back candidates for the Legislature who were favorable to him; (3) court the favor of party "kingmakers" who could influence legislators; (4) urge the voters to give him a vote of confidence through the means of a preferential ballot, which, however, was not binding on legislators.

Elected U.S. senator in 1903 was First District Congressman Elmer J. Burkett, Republican, who had mastered the complicated process with a remarkable degree of success. He took all 32 Republican State Senate votes and 86 of 100 State House of Representatives votes. Editor Richard McCall of the Democratic Omaha World Herald got nine Fusion (Democrat Populist) votes; Col. Alfred Sorenson got one and James A. Douglas, one. The senator at 36 went to Washington, D.C. as the youngest member of the upper body of Congress.

The real "opponent" for Burkett, however, in this political drama had been William Jennings Bryan, whose name was not even mentioned to the Legislature in the final showdown, since it was perceived that he would be embarrassed in defeat. Nationally known after two unsuccessful runs at the presidency (1896 and 1900), he was for all his fame unable to persuade voters in his home state to do the one thing really necessary for his election — send Democratic or Fusion candidates to the Legislature.

In the summer and fall of 1904, both Bryan and Burkett campaigned vigorously across the state urging "top to bottom" voting on straight party lines. Burkett, a candidate himself for re-election to Congress, spent 50 days in the field, speaking two or three times daily. Bryan appeared in nearly all state legislative districts in behalf of candidates favorable to his ambitions, making up to eight rear platform speeches daily from his special railroad car.

With the immensely popular President Teddy Roosevelt heading the national ticket, the Bryan has led us to defeat and Bryan's doom was sealed. Afterward Burkett could but lick his wounds and analyze the election in a long press release. Some of his detractors within his own party were bitter. One wrote: "Twice he (Bryan) has led us to defeat and this year he was the main cause of our defeat. It is extremely doubtful if the Democratic party will ever again be a great factor in the affairs of the country, but will hereafter rank with the Populists, Socialists, and Prohibitionists." The "vote of confidence for senator" provision on the ballot resulted from the submission of such a plan to voters at the same time they approved the Constitution of 1875. The unique proposal was overwhelmingly adopted, probably indicating the public's desire to elect U.S. senators by popular vote. At no time did the Legislature, however, provide for a popular ballot for direct election of senators. The submission clause was "permissive only and not mandatory or self-executing." Votes of confidence, which were cast for senator were not officially tabulated and the result was not binding on members of the Legislature.

In the pre-election campaigning of November, 1904, Col. Sorenson, a "Roosewater" (Omaha Bee editor) Republican die-hard, plugged his candidacy for the U.S. Senate in the following advertisement: "You will find a blank space on the ballot for his (Sorenson's) name. Write his name herein and place an X in the square after his name. This will be a preferential vote." But he got nowhere against the Burkett tide. At times state senator and representative commitments on ballots carried this phrase following the candidate's name: "Promises to vote for the people's choice for U.S. Senator."

Burkett was easily reelected to Congress, the only position he had officially campaigned for, but he resigned as congressman when named senator by the Legislature. E.M. Pullard was selected to replace him in the House of Representatives. After six years in Washington, Burkett was unable to marshal enough support in the Nebraska Legislature to gain a second term and Gilbert M. Hitchcock succeeded him.

Prospects Bright For Dove Hunters

In Nebraska

Prospects appear bright for Nebraska dove hunters as the Sept. 1st season opens approaches.

According to surveys by Nebraska Game and Parks Commission biologists, the dove population is more than 10 per cent higher than last year. This is especially encouraging in light of the fact that Nebraska is one of the top states in terms of dove numbers.

Nebraska is not a traditional dove hunting state, having been closed from the early 1950's through 1974. Dove hunting was legalized, and more than 51,000 hunters took advantage of the 30-day season. During last year's season, conservation officers and landowners noticed very few problems caused by concentrated hunting pressure, trespassing and law violations.

The trouble-free record of last year's season, plus the modest increase in the dove population has prompted a slight longer season than last year's 30 days. This year the board of Game and Parks Commissioners selected a 45-day hunt, closing on Oct. 15. While longer than last year's hunt, it is still more conservative than the 60-day season authorized by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Bag limit is 10 doves, and the possession limit is 20.

Normally, the dove season peaks early in September when the already high native population combines with the influx of migrating birds from the north. Dove numbers taper off by the end of September, although a few birds remain through most of the fall. If weather stays mild, the birds will linger, but any cold snap will send them high-tailing it south with little delay.

Legal requirement for dove hunting is the basic Nebraska hunting license. No upland bird stamp or federal migratory waterfowl stamp is needed. Hunters between 12 and 16 do not need a hunting license, but they must have completed a hunter safety course recognized by the Game and Parks Commission. Hunters 11 and under do not need the hunter safety card, but they must be supervised by a licensed adult while hunting.

A Hard Return

USING two hands, Steven Gleadowing fires a return volley to Tom Schiepenbach of Pierce this day afternoon in the first round of the Wayne Amateur Tennis Tournament on the Wayne State courts. Grounding of Populium could call the college courts his old stomping grounds, because the WS student is the No. six man on the college tennis team. Finals of the three day meet, which included men's doubles and women's singles and doubles, was Saturday.

Wrestling Meet at Creighton

Creighton will be the sight of the Nebraska state wrestling championships Sunday, Sept. 5. Winners from the six divisions will go to the nationals at Petaluma, Calif., where they will compete for national titles. Sponsored by Creighton Area Jaycees, the tournament is open to men under 150 pounds, 150-175 pounds, 175-200 pounds and 200 pounds and over. The women's divisions are under 135 and over 135. Registration will be from 9 a.m. to noon Sunday at Creighton High School. Entry fee is $15 per person. Winners will receive trophies and jackets.

'Winside Spikers Lack Experience'

"We had a losing season last year and we lost all our starters, so you can see where we stand," said first-year coach Kathy O'Connor as she prepares her Winside girls for the 1976 volleyball season. Returning to this year's club are four letter winners, seniors Barb Peter, LeBell Zoffka, Lori Lienemann and junior Darci Janke. However, those four players won't make up for the lack of playing experience needed to produce a winning club, Mrs. O'Connor cautioned.

Of the 42 girls out for the season, underclassmen dominate the squad with 12 sophomores and 12 freshmen. Also making up the team are nine juniors and seven seniors. The coach expects a lot of underclassmen to see action this year as she stresses hustle, hard work and desire during the practice sessions. "Our aim this year is to play a lot of defense. If we play well we could come on strong at the end of the year," she pointed out.

Perhaps one player she is looking to bolster her defense is the team's tallest player, 5-10 junior Paula Hoemann and on offense are Jane Weibke and Zoffka, the strongest servers.

Mrs. O'Connor, who was an assistant to Don Leighton before he stepped down last season, will be assisted by Lance Bristol.

Looking over favorites in the Lewis and Clark Conference, Mrs. O'Connor said Osmond again would have to be considered the top club to beat in the Clark division.

Winside won't have to contend with Osmond until the second half of the season when the Wildkitten travel to the Tiger-Six. WINSIDE page five

Runningbacks Are Aplenty at Winside, But Quarterbacks Remain Questionable

Having plenty of runningbacks on hand shouldn't be any problem for Winside football coach Ron Peck when he and his charges open the grid campaign against Wynol, Sept. 3.

The second-year head man has three returning speedsters who lettered last year plus two underclassmen who will be fighting for a running slot.

"This is the most depth I've ever had in running," the coach smiled. He added that with the excess "in running talent he might take some of the backs and convert them into ends.

"They're just too good to send to the bench," he quipped.

In the backfield will be senior Wayne Smith, who ran 10.5 in the 100 during track season last year. Juniors Cliff Tiltama and Ed Morris also possess the quick speed as well as sophomores Mitch Pfeiffer and Joedy Brummeis.

Pfeiffer, who didn't letter last year, and Tiltama are the biggest backs, carrying 180 pounds on 6-1 frames. Morris weighs in at 150 while Smith and Brummeis tip the scales at 145 each.

The head man figures Winside should have a pretty good offense with all-conference center, senior Neil Wagner, leading the way. The 6-0, 175-pound senior also plays line-backer on defense, one area where he really shines, Peck said.

Making up the line will be senior guards Brad Langenberg, Dale Bowder and Junior LaVerie Miller. Tackles include Juniors Bill Thomas and Bryan Svoboda. Ends are Dan Brockman and Chuck Mann.

The biggest question facing the Wildcats is the strength at quarterback. Last year's 7-2 club was directed by Tyler Freverl and Bryan Denklau, both of whom graduated.

Trying to fill that gap will be senior Jeff Carstens, who saw limited action at the signal calling post in early practice sessions. Carstens appears to have the tools for a running game, but lacks the playing experience to command a smooth-running offense.

Peck is confident with more practice and playing experience under his belt, Carstens will be able to direct the club. One area which Carstens does need to improve is passing. "We lost all our receivers. If we can throw the ball decent we will have a good game."

Right now the head man is prepping sophomore Paul Roberts possibly as a throwing quarterback. Although Roberts lacks the stature (5-9, 135), the coach feels he is looking good now and throwing better than Carstens.

Defensively, Winside should be again strong on the line as most of the linemen on offense also see double duty on defense. Carstens, who a defensive end

WS Players, Grads Fill Net Finals

For a tournament which was predominately loaded with out-of-town players, the adult division of the Wayne Amateur Tennis Tournament is drawing its share of local and former local players in Saturday's final.

Defending men's 20-25 singles champion, Mike Lidie of Wayne, was set Saturday morning to play against the winner of Russ Kirkpatrick - Larry Pochop match for the title.

Rick Noyes, a member of the WS tennis team, played Scott Chesley for the men's 26-31 singles title. At 4-30, WS tennis coach Wes Fritz was set to meet Bill Jochem of Norfolk, also a WS graduate, for the men's 32-37 singles title.

In men's seniors division, Tom Roberts, another WS graduate, was scheduled to play Byron Ballantyne of Norfolk in the finals.

In doubles, Kirkpatrick Lidie was set to meet the team of Pochop Fritz for the 19-29 final, and in the senior division, Fritz and Roberts were to meet the duo of Steve Bell Scott Chesley of Norfolk.

Wayne State student Shari Judie was scheduled to meet Julie Ryan for the women's singles championship. In women's doubles, Sue Paar, WS, and Marcie Schuffgen of Norfolk were to have played the team of Ryan and Maulding.

The top four teams in the Pro division and the first two teams in the Con division of the Wayne Country Club men's golf league have wrapped up playoff spots.

In the playoffs which start Wednesday, Sept. 1, are Pro division leader Team 10 along with teams 3, 5 and 7. Playing on those teams are: 10 - Fred Gildersleeve, Chuck McDermott, Neil Dinges, Keith Mosley; 3 - Harold Schroeder, Dick Armstrong, Chuck Surber; Dave Hove; 5 - John Addison, Tom McClain, Cal Ward, Wilbur Weddingfield, and 7 - Duane Blumenkamp, Steve Schumacher, Harold Inqalls, Dan Gardner.

In the Con division Teams 27 and 24 make up half of the playoffs. On those foursomes are: 27 - Sid Hillier, Gene Cornett, Don Zeiss, Ray Kelton; 24 - Dave Schulte, Joe Nuss, Harold Matney, Joe Dorcey. The remaining two teams will be decided later.

The top four teams in each division will battle to represent its half in the league championship set for sometime in September.

Done for the Year

Because O'Neill couldn't make up Monday night's dual meet, Wayne summer swim team ended the season last week with a 2-2 record.

Coach Scott Oriscal said he was pleased with the performance of his swimmers who added a second place finish in the 14 team Harrington Invitational earlier this summer.

Wayne Spikers Stand Taller for '76 Season

Wayne High will field a volleyball team which has something no other squad under coach Mavis Dalton has had plenty of in its four-year history of the sport.

That something is height. Five of the top 10 players who likely will see varsity action this fall range in size from 5-6 1/2 to 6-1, giving coach Dalton one of the key ingredients for "her spikers to repeat as Husker Conference champs and to earn another trip to the state meet.

Wayne, which finished with a 17-3 record last year and fourth in the state Class B tourney at North Platte, will need to get more playing experience in before the Blue Devils can set their sights on defending their Husker title.

Back on this year's squad of 33 is only one returning letterman, 5-2 senior Stephanie Dorcy. "The chances to repeat the (Husker) title will require a lot of work, but I think we can do it," Mrs. Dalton pointed out.

One reason for the coach's optimism is that all the players know there are five varsity positions open. In the past, those positions generally were filled with returning letter winners.

Expected to be battling for the front line are juniors Sydney Mosley, 5-11, Kelly Frevert, 5-10; Lori Johnson, 5-9; Chris Brink, 5-6, and senior Julie Overin, 5-8.

Because of the added height the coach is planning an offensive change from three spikers and three set persons to four spikers and two setups.

The team Mrs. Dalton figures to beat in the West Husker Conference is Wisner Pilger which returns all its players from last year's club that finished strong.

Wayne will get a chance to see how well developed Wisner is when the two teams play in the eight team Beemer tournament

Larry Welch of Hoskins is president of the company which owns the operation. Loyal Lack as of Belden is vice president. In all, 10 co-equal partners own the operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Alderson of Carroll will manage the business. They will soon be moving to a new home built at the plant site.

IRRIGATION WELL NUMBERS UP

The dry, hot Nebraska weather has resulted in a dramatic increase in the number of wells drilled for irrigation in the state, according to Paul Fischbach, Extension irrigatorist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

From 1963-70, "years of pretty good rainfall," there was an annual increase of 1,616 wells, Fischbach said. But from 1972, when there were 40,526 wells in the state, the number jumped to 46,483 by 1975 — an increase of nearly 3,000 wells annually.

"This year it's going to be even higher," Fischbach said. "The first year of the drought (1974) spurred people who normally weren't even thinking of irrigating their fields to drill wells to insure their crop production."

But Fischbach said some problems have arisen because of a few irrigation systems have not been compatible with areas into which drilling for wells have occurred, resulting in encrustation, precipitation and corrosion of the well.

"They are drilling into 'problem wells' where it is more difficult to get water," he said.

Fischbach said precipitation is caused by a chemical reaction among differing salts in the various water levels of the well which plugs up perforations in the system. Iron and sulfur bacteria in the organic layer of the soil through which the well is drilled also can encrust perforations, he said.

Fischbach lists steps for those interested in drilling a well:

- Hire a driller to drill a test hole to see if well water is available.
- Consider various options on the type of irrigation system to be used based upon the characteristics of the land. He said irrigatorists encouraged buying the system using the lowest amount of energy.
- Consider various casings for the well. He said concrete or cement asbestos casings are adequate for normal situations or cases in which corrosion is a problem, but steel, fiberglass or PVC casing should be used when drilling "problem wells" where encrustation is likely.

However, he said the "biggest problem of irrigatorists still is that so many irrigators do not know how much water they apply once they have the system."

BARBUR FILLS COOPERATIVE LOWER ELKHORN NRD UNIVERSITY OF NEBRASKA FORESTER POSITION

John Barbur, Rose Hill, Kansas native, has filled the position in an NRD Forester Program beginning his duties on August 1, 1976. The Forester position was a cooperative venture between the University of Nebraska and the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District with the University paying 60 per cent of the program cost and the lower Elkhorn NRD providing the balance.

Lower Elkhorn NRD General Manager Steve Oltmans explained the cooperative program is an ideal example of inter-agency cooperation to provide additional service to residents in the Lower Elkhorn NRD in the forestry department.

Barbur, a graduate of the University of Missouri, Columbia, will be completing a timber inventory during the month of August then officing at the Northeast Station in Concord.

The NRD Forester's primary responsibilities will hinge on assisting with community forestry, planning, disease identification and treatment and experiment work with windbreak planting patterns.

Phone Provides Many Services

"Ideas about how telephones can be used have advanced to the point where they are no longer understandable," wrote a savvy ten-year-old recently in a classroom essay on Alexander Graham Bell's magic invention. The far-out trend seems to have started overseas, where for years callers in various countries have been able to dial everything from jokes and horoscopes to recipes and the latest hit records.

In Sweden a dial-a-furnace service was offered. By letting the phone ring a predetermined number of times, subscribers could activate a device that turned on the heat in their vacation homes.

Four years ago, weather were the only dependable extras offered in the United States. Now callers in some cities can dial a joke, check ski conditions on distant slopes, and get a pollution report.

"Public announcement services have been around for decades," says a Bell System spokesman. "Yet in another sense, we're only beginning to discover this mass communications medium. By combining creativity and aggressive marketing efforts, I believe we'll see dramatic development in this field over the next few years."

Public demand is already keeping the wires hot. A dial-a-BBQ service in upstate New York was so popular that people couldn't get through until the fifth try. A dial-a-story offered by a library for children in Pittsburgh drew as many as 15,000 calls a day, disrupting regular service.

Popular numbers in other cities provide advice for teenagers, Bible readings, and information on lost dogs.

Even the weather report that stalwart of recorded messages has been affected by the trend. Not long ago after a weekend of rain, the so-called lady in Washington, D.C., concluded her forecast by murmuring, "Hang in there, tiger!" On a succeeding hot, sticky morning, she ended her prediction with, "It may be hot today. Be cool!"

In some cities, callers hear the address of a bank or other business before the day's forecast. The companies think it's good advertising to sponsor the weather.

"We get a lot of weather questions from children and we have to route them to government experts, but we really like it," said a bank official in the Midwest.

Recordings still haven't replaced the lady who fields most of the calls and questions. Through the years the telephone operator has saved lives, helped people in distress, located stray cats, and answered hundreds of puzzles from an unpredictable public.

A few years ago, a group of bachelors called a New York City operator to ask how to cook a turkey. They had won. She found out how much it weighed, figured out how long it should be in the oven, and called back with precise cooking instructions.

Norfolk Couple Wed Saturday

lars and cuffs. They had flowers in their hair and carried nosegays. The men of the party wore mint green tuxedos with matching shirts.

Mrs. Doeschler wore a bright pink floor-length gown with a shawl. The groom's mother chose a blue floor-length gown with a white bodice and shawl.

Registering the 300 guests at the reception in the church basement was Roxie Meyer, Norfolk. Shirley Prokup and Cindy Lubbersstedt arranged the gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Vern Schulz, Wayne, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Widholm, Norfolk, served as hosts for the event. Waitresses were Joan Schaeffer, Linda Jensen, and Lea Ann Richardson, all of Wayne.
