

Candidate Favors

Zero Base Budget, Automatic End

For Federal Programs

Omaha mayor Ed Zorinsky, Democratic candidate, said in an interview Saturday that he believes manipulation by the federal government has resulted in lower prices for farm products and he thinks the farm market must be stabilized if family farms are to survive.

Zorinsky, who lunched in Wayne with local Democratic party members before making a scheduled appearance at the Dakota-Thurlston Fair at South Sioux City, said the government should stop interfering with the farm market and allow prices to seek their own level.

He added that he does favor guaranteeing that farmers will be able to recover production costs.

Excessive imports of beef have caused lower cattle prices, Zorinsky said, pointing out that the allegedly illegal imports weren't discovered until an election year.

Food production is in a bigger crisis than the energy industry because of the rapidly growing world population, Zorinsky said. "If it weren't for the five per cent of the Americans who are farmers, providing food, the rest of the Americans who aren't farmers wouldn't be able to pursue the occupations they are now engaged in."

The Omaha mayor, who is challenging Republican John McCollister for the senate seat, said he also believes increasing the farm inheritance tax exemption to $400,000 or 50 per cent of assessed value is also vital to preserving family farms.

"I've been to too many sales where the farm was being sold to meet inheritance tax requirements."

Agriculture is especially important, Zorinsky said, because sales of farm products are needed to offset our balance of trade deficit.

On labor, Zorinsky said he supported President Ford's veto of the common site picketing bill and added that he also favors "right to work laws."

Tax laws should be made more equitable, Zorinsky said. Corporations pay a disproportionately small amount of taxes and that should be changed, he said.

While he doesn't want to see incentives take away from industry, he believes there are "sufficient loopholes" now. Special interest groups receive benefits now beyond what they should have, he said.

The candidate said he does not favor vehicle divestiture of oil companies — breaking up of companies which control oil production — from well to pump. He does favor horizontal divestiture, preventing existing oil companies from gaining control of alternate energy sources being developed. That could slow development, Zorinsky said, because oil companies will want to get all the profit they can out of petroleum before alternative sources come into general use.

The federal government should subsidize energy research to a great extent, Zorinsky said. Nuclear energy at best is an interim solution to energy problems and greater emphasis should be placed on developing other sources, such as solar and geo-thermal energy.

"I don't know exactly how much is being spent on energy research, but it isn't enough," Zorinsky said. "People are entitled to a long range program with a target date" for alternate energy sources.

The federal government should start giving people reasons why they should work, rather than why they shouldn't, Zorinsky said about proposed federalizing of welfare programs.

He said that as a businessman he often encountered people who weren't willing to take a job, because they didn't feel it paid enough more than welfare benefits to be worthwhile.

"If a person receiving welfare is offered a job and refuses it, payments should be cut-off."

Zero base budgeting would also cut down on federal spending, Zorinsky said. He said his use of the budgeting technique is responsible for Omaha being one of 26 cities in the United States to retain a triple A credit rating.

With zero base budgeting, the entire budget proposal for each program is considered each fiscal year, rather than considering only increases or decreases based on the previous year's allocation — incremental budgeting, considered conventional and used by the federal government and most state and local governments.

Zorinsky said government programs should have automatic termination dates so they aren't continued beyond their usefulness.

Defense spending could probably be held down too, Zorinsky said, if defense contractors were required to make firm bids rather than bidding for projects and then later asking for more money.

"I support a defense second to none," Zorinsky said. "If we don't have sufficient deterrent power to protect our shores, inflation and unemployment become academic. But I feel that a lot of fat could be cut from the defense budget."

Thieves Strike Store 2nd Time

For the second time in less than a month the Ben Franklin Store in Wayne has been broken into.

Police discovered that the door to the rear entrance had been opened about 12:30 a.m. Sunday and inside a safe and cash register had been damaged.

According to reports, a small safe had been dragged outside where an attempt was made to pry it open. The safe sustained minor damage to the hinge before it was returned to the building.

Earlier last month, thieves broke into the rear of the store and took about $110 from the cash register.

Sales Increase Tops Average

Wayne County proved to be a better-than-average market in the past year, according to a nation-wide business survey just released.

Economic activity in the area was at a relatively high level as local families, with rising incomes, increased their spending for goods and services.

The details are presented in the new, copyrighted "Survey of Buying Power," compiled by Sales and Marketing Management. It indicates just how much was earned and spent in the year by people in each section of the country.

In Wayne County, the amount of money available for discretionary spending was relatively large, the figures show.

Local residents had net earnings, after payment of personal taxes, totaling $35,770,000, as compared with the previous year's $34,588,000.

What this broke down to on a per family basis, is indicated by the median income locally, which came to $9,445 per household, as against the previous year's $8,938 per household.

Half the families earned more than this and half earned less. It was higher than the median reported for many parts of the country.

USDA Offices Plan Move

Wayne County USDA offices will be moved next week if remodeling is completed in the building which will house the three offices.

Ray Butts, Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation (ASCS) director, and his office and the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) will move into the new quarters Wednesday if the refurbishing is finished. Arnold Marr, Soil Conservation Service (SCS) director, said he hasn't made any definite plans yet but will probably move his office sometime during next week.

The move had originally been scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 1, but was delayed because contractors were still working on the building interior.

All three offices will be located in the building formerly used by Coryell Auto as a reconditioning shop. It is located on Logan St., in the block south of Second St.

Main goal for the move is to locate all USDA offices in the county under one roof, providing "one stop" service for county farmers. Off-street parking for USDA clients will be available at the new building site.

In addition to convenience for clients, the three offices will be able to pool staff and office equipment, Butts said.

Offices will be closed on moving day, he added, but should be ready for business in the new building the following day.

The Nebraska Committee for the Humanities funds projects across the state, focusing on public discussion of issues. Projects must be designed to involve scholars in the humanities and their backgrounds in a discussion with the public.

In addition to the evening conference for the general public, a similar meeting will be scheduled in the afternoon for high school students, Cowdin said.

Nearly 400 Have Filed For Disaster Payments

Nearly 400 Wayne County farmers have filed for crop disaster payments, ASCS director Ray Butts said Tuesday, that he expects that number to double.

If Butts' prediction is correct, it will mean that about three-fourths of the farmers in Wayne County will file for the payments, designed to help them recover a portion of their production costs when they suffer reductions in yield of 50 per cent or more.

Determination of eligibility is made on an individual basis by the ASCS (Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service) county committee.

Farmers become eligible for the payments when their actual yield is less than half of their programmed yield. Programmed yield is determined by multiplying allowed acres by the established normal yield. Actual yield is subtracted from programmed yield and payment is made on the number of bushels below normal.

Payment rates this year are: corn, 57 cents a bushel, barley, 43 cents a bushel, grain sorghum, 50 cents a bushel, wheat, 76 cents a bushel.

The disaster payment program applies to feed grain only and soybean losses are not covered.

Butts calculated that about $2 million in crop disaster payments will be made in Wayne County this year, about 10 per cent of the $20 million loss estimated by the county emergency board, and recovering about 20 per cent of production costs, Butts said.

The county emergency board prepared its estimate of crop losses two weeks ago and sent the report to the State Emergency Board. Based on the board's findings, Gov. J. J. Exon Friday declared crop disasters in 40 Nebraska counties and forwarded his recommendation to the Secretary of Agriculture, asking for a disaster declaration.

That action, which normally would be approved according to state ASCS director Paul Sindt, would make farmers in designated counties eligible for five per cent interest loans from the Farmers Home Administration. Loans would be payable over a five to seven-year period.

Pool Manager Pay Clarified

Wayne city councilman Jimmie Thomas said Tuesday night he had received a number of complaints after the annual salary for managing the city swimming pool was listed in a legal publication as $6,000.

In fact, Thomas said, one Wayne-Carroll school board member vowed to see that high school principal Don Zeiss' salary was cut if the information was correct.

The information was correct, but then again, it wasn't.

Here's what happened: Nebraska law requires that the annual salary of the position be published, based on the monthly salary extended over a 12-month period.

The monthly salary is $500, which yields the $6,000 a year figure, but the pool manager position is only filled during the summer months and the manager is paid only during that three-month period.

No Fire This Time

A fire at Wayne Care Centre, 918 Main, turned out to be a false alarm shortly before 12:30 p.m. Monday when apparently a resident pulled the alarm, said fire chief Dick Korn.

Council Votes to Endorse Highway 35 Improvement

Despite previously expressed opposition, the Wayne city council Tuesday night voted to notify the State Department of Roads (DOR) that the council favors proceeding with a proposed project to resurface and widen the section of Highway 35 constituting Seventh St. in Wayne.

DOR officials at a previous council meeting explained that in order for the state to share costs in resurfacing the street, it would have to be widened from its present 30 to 52 feet, to accommodate four lanes of traffic.

That is the minimum standard necessary to comply with federal regulations. Failure to comply would eliminate the obtaining of federal funds to help finance the project, and without federal assistance the state would not participate, the council was told then.

The roads department officials also informed the council at the earlier meeting that a petition opposing the four-lane proposal had been received at DOR headquarters in Lincoln, bearing the signatures of virtually everyone owning property adjacent to the section of highway. A Wayne resident who attended that meeting also said that about 360 signatures of persons not owning adjacent property had been obtained on a similar petition.

Councilman John Vukob was the lone dissenter in the vote.

Action on a proposed ordinance to create a downtown improvement district was again delayed. Several council members questioned whether the boundaries proposed in the ordinance at the request of the downtown improvement committee would be appropriate.

Property on the west half of Main St. between Third and Fourth Streets was excluded because a majority of property owners in the section had apparently expressed their opposition to the district.

County Budget Tops $2 Million

The Wayne County board of commissioners Tuesday approved a budget for fiscal 1977 totaling more than $2 million.

Only one county resident was present for the 10 a.m. hearing when the commissioners approved the $2,113,567 budget without change.

The tax levy on local property values will raise about $609,000. The total budget, county clerk Norris Weible said, The county has some $994,000 in cash on hand, and miscellaneous revenues will contribute about $703,000.

Other sources include some $47,000 in federal grant project funds, about $51,000 in mortgage tax, and nearly $280,000 in revenue sharing funds.

Biggest item on the budget is for road and bridge maintenance, $659,476, compared with $605,475 for last year.

Merlin Beierman, chairman of the three-man board of commissioners, cited higher material costs as one of the main reasons for the road fund increase.

"Good roads are important and people want them," commissioner Floyd Butts commented. "We try to give them what they want."

The general fund is budgeted at $439,853. About $373,000 was spent under the fund during fiscal 1975-76. Weible said higher costs for utilities and supplies, and a cost of living increase in wages, account for much of the general fund increase.

Based on a final property valuation of $42,965,170, the mill levy required to meet the budget obligations is 14.18. Of the total, a .45 mill levy for the county fair is not included in the amount when figuring the total which must be less than the 14.285 mill limit dictated by Nebraska law. That gives a 13.73 mill levy for purposes of limitation, which means that if property valuations remain stable, the commissioners will be limited to a .45 increase next year to meet any additional costs.

Revaluation of property is currently underway, but the new valuations are not scheduled to go into effect until January, 1978. Beierman said that last year at this time 34 Nebraska counties has levies of more than 14 mills and he is sure increasing costs will mean additional counties will be near the maximum levy this year.

That will probably dictate some very tight budgeting next year, unless the Unicameral acts to increase the property tax levy limit.

Beierman said that staying under the present limit next year will be tight for Wayne County. "But I think we will be able to manage it."

A veteran missionary, Rev. Avery is on furlough after a five-year term of service in Peru where he has ministered since 1948. During that time he has served as mission coordinator, evangelist, church planter, teacher and builder.

The Bible school in Chiclayo has been an important factor in the training of pastors and development of the church.

The Wesleyan Church serves in 34 countries, including Canada, Great Britain and the United States. While the major emphasis in the overseas outreach of the church is placed on gospel evangelism, an extensive medical and educational program has been carried on by the denomination in several areas.

Commission Sets Hunting Regulations

The Game and Parks Commission set the remainder of Nebraska's fall hunting and trapping seasons before a capacity crowd of interested sportsmen during an evening session.

The session produced regulations that seemed to suit most of the sportsmen attending, particularly the waterfowl hunters who customarily disagreed in previous years. The chief reason for this was authorization by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to establish separate regulations for light geese (snows and blues) and dark geese (Canadas and whitefronts).

The 1976 light goose season will run Oct. 2 through Dec. 26, with bag and possession limits of 5. Dark goose hunting will go from Oct. 9 through Dec. 19 statewide, but bag limits vary for eastern and western Nebraska. East of U.S. Highway 183, daily limit of one Canada and one whitefront and the possession limit is two dark geese, either all Canadas or two Canadas and two whitefronts. Beginning Nov. 22, limits in west will be the same as in the eastern zone.

Duck season this year will again be under the point system of bag and possession limits. The duck season opens on Oct. 14 statewide, and runs for 60 days in the east and 83 days in the west. Closing dates are Dec. 12 in the eastern half of Nebraska and Jan. 4 in the High Plains area of western Nebraska.

Shooting hours for all waterfowl seasons are one-half hour before sunrise to sunset.

The pheasant season for 1976 will run from Oct. 30 through Dec. 31, with limits of three daily and nine in possession for all but the Pánhandle. There, the season will run only 10 days, from Oct. 30 through Nov. 8, and the limits will be two daily and six in possession.

Quail hunting will open one week later on Nov. 6, and run through Jan. 16 throughout the state. The daily bag limit will be six birds, and possession limit will be 18.

Fall turkey season will open on Oct. 30, and close on Nov. 12. The Niobrara Unit offers 600 shotgun permits, 100 more than last year, while the Round Top area offers 1,500 Archery turkey hunting runs from Oct. 1 through Oct. 29, and all of Nebraska west of U.S. Highway 81 is open.

Shooting hours for all upland game and small game is 15 minutes before sunrise to sunset, while waterfowl hours are 30 minutes before sunrise to sunset.

Wanted: Armchair Quarterbacks, Fans

Armchair, quarterbacks and diehard fans of the grid sport are welcomed to the first weekly meeting of the Second Guessers club noon today (Thursday) at Jeff's Cafe, 212 Main.

Coaching staffs from Wayne High and Wayne State are expected to be on hand to give their preseason outlooks for the coming year. Wildcat mentor Del Stoltenberg will give an insight into his 11-game season as a new member of the Central States Intercollegiate Conference. Wayne High coaches Ron Carnes and Don Koenig will outline their season if they can make the meeting, said club president Bill Workman.

The smorgasbord dinner is open to anyone who wants to attend. Cost is for the meal only.

Taking Turns

WAYNE HIGH'S football team had some bright moments offensively and defensively during scrimmage Monday night. Behind a wall of blockers, running back Mark Brandt, right, is able to go around left end for a sizeable gain. The next play, however, was the defense's turn to show how it can stop the No. one offensive unit. Below, a swarm of defenders surround a runner for no gain. The scrimmage was one of several the Blue Devils held prior to Friday night's season opener against Class A South Sioux City.

Marsh, Suhr Take Firsts Prep Picks: It All Starts Friday

By BOB BARTLETT

Unlike past seasons, all five area football teams will start their nine game slates Friday night.

Under the lights are Wayne, Laurel and Allen, which play at away fields and Winside and Wakefield, which start their 1976-77 seasons at home.

One of the minds of most local fans is the Wayne South Sioux City tilt at the Cardinals' field. During the past two games, the Blue Devils have emerged from their underdog role to beat the Red Birds.

From the SSC's viewpoint, here's what head men David Lee of SSC and Ron Carnes and Don Koenig have to say about Friday's game.

David Lee, South Sioux City—We're pleased with the execution but we're floundering a bit in front line contact. That is, we're coming up but we're not hitting well enough.

To beat Wayne we're going to have to take away their offense and establish our running game. Wayne plays basic football — blocks and tackles well and hits hard. I expect Wayne to be as tough as anyone we play this year.

At 6:17, junior Kurt Anderson will be at the controls, behind a front line that averages about 180 pounds. In the backfield will be Mike Raynor and Mickey Spillane, both 150, and Dave Zobel, 175. No one receiver is tight end Steve Menuey at 6:0, 185.

Ron Carnes and Don Koenig, Wayne High — "We must play excellent ball, especially pass defense. We can't afford to give South Sioux any early cheap touchdowns."

Defensively, Wayne should be very good. We have a good pass rush from our line.

"Our offense will be geared towards running like it has in the past, but we have to throw to keep SSC off balance."

This week's selections (winner in boldface):

Wayne at South Sioux City — In past seasons the Blue Devils have established themselves as title contenders early in the year with victory streaks. Friday should be the start of a long string of wins.

Allen at Winnebago — Eagles have shown the spirit in practices to be a winner as they have been in opening games with Winnebago.

Laurel at Randolph — Coach Joe Boyle should be happy with the outcome of his first game as the Bears' leader.

Wynot at Winside — Wildcats shouldn't have any problem here establishing themselves as one of the top teams in the Clark division.

Lyons at Wakefield — Wakefield has the senior leadership and team spirit to prevail in this contest.

Cramer Sinks Ace on No. 17

Wayne golfer Alan Cramer scored a hole-in-one at the Wayne Country Club Sunday. Cramer used a five-wood into a stiff breeze to ace the 177-yard 17th hole.

Playing in Cramer's foursome were Charles McDermott, Walter Moller and George Thorbeck.

Cramer was the fourth ace at the Wayne CC this year. The feat was performed earlier by Darrel Fueberth, Les Lutt, and Conrad Suhr.

Cats Appearing to Jell Midway Through Practice

Half way through pre-season practice, Wayne State's football Wildcats are beginning to jell and they're not. It depends on what positions the coaches are looking at.

Coach Del Stoltenberg, talking to Kiwanis Club Monday, could cite some strong positions, with capable veterans or newcomers. But he could mention some problem spots, left open by players who graduated or did not return.

Chief area of concern is filling the two linebacker slots, which are keys to Wayne's defense pattern. Missing are senior All-American Mike Riedman and Wayne resident Rod Hoops, a rare performer who earned starting duty as a freshman. He is reported to have gone to California, but has not returned to the coaches what he plans to do.

Result: Inbacker jobs are up for competition. Stoltenberg said.

How about the middle guard position vacated by Ali Ameri? Pat Donohoe? Stoltenberg noted that lots of folks ask who could replace him. Not much worry there, because Stoltenberg thinks junior Duane Carlson of Hooper is ready to take over. He did outstanding work substiting for Donohoe. Also a good prospect at middle guard is sophomore Greg Welch, Norfolk.

Both defensive tackle positions are open, with Mark Campbell, Oakland sophomore, locking onto one, Stoltenberg said, and the other one a contest between junior Duane Carlson brother of Duane, and freshman Joe Wisniewski, Bellevue.

Gary Krajciv, Gretna senior, returns solidly as a defensive end starter. The other end appears occupied by Dave Carper, Scribner junior.

Over on offense, there are gaps too, but Stoltenberg sees pretty good manpower coming along in Wayne's "I" formation, tailback is the workhorse position, and here — shh! — apply there's talent and depth to replacing rusty Brian Moller, Mike McClator, Gretna senior, is No. 1, but a pair of freshmen are welcome surprises.

One is Bob Barry of Battle Creek. Stoltenberg described him this way: "He combines speed and power, about the closest to anybody we have had since Sam Singleton." Wayne fans remember the spectacular rushing of Singleton, 1967-70, as he broke most Wildcat running records.

Another fresh tailback prospect is Anthony Shoemaker, a 5'10 and 150-pound bundle of speed and agility with a 4.6 time in the 40 yard sprint. He's the team's fastest. Saturday in scrimmage he ripped for a touchdown of about 70 yards.

Among others on offense, Stoltenberg naturally mentioned senior split end Maurice Mintken who increases his Wayne career pass receiving record with every catch and yard.

Sometime this year, Maurice just might get a pass from freshman brother Mark, a

Laurel Mentor Expects Longer Practices to Payoff in Volleyball

"We're working three times as hard in practice than the players did last year. The girls are alert and snappy plus they have the confidence to be a winner." Those are the reflections of a first-year head volleyball coach Dwight Iverson of his Laurel girls as she heads into his first year of action since graduating from the University of South Dakota at Springfield this spring.

Iverson, who was assistant girls coach for two years while at USDs, said coaching in the college ranks and in high school really doesn't differ too much. If the spirit is there, any team can be a winner, were some of his thoughts about the game.

Nine returning letter winners reported to this fall's session, including seven seniors and two juniors. Senior Paula Buss, who represented Laurel in the Northeast Nebraska Activities Conference all-over selections, is the tallest player on the Bears' squad, standing a 5-9.

Because Laurel isn't really tall, the head man feels his girls will have to work harder in practice to develop the quickness for a sharp defense.

Iverson admitted that this year's team is going to have to forget about last year's miserable season which produced only one victory. "These same girls had a winning season in basketball. There's no reason they can't have a winning season in volleyball," Iverson emphasized.

The head coach and his new assistant Patsy Reinohl are concentrating the bulk of their drills on getting in shape as well as spiking and setting up the plays.

Besides Buss, other senior veterans returning are Jean Erwin, Sandy Bloom, Roxanne Gade, Doreen Hanson, Kelly McCoy, juniors Cheryl, Abis and Elaine Guern.

Also showing leadership on the floor are juniors Cindy Schaefer, Susan Stark, sophomore Deanna Mauz and freshman Jan Cooper.

Laurel opens its season to night (Thursday) in a home match against conference foe Neligh. The rest of the schedule:

'Solid Crops' Helps to Mold Cat Harriers

Cross country competition starts in a hurry for Wayne State runners this fall, but coach LeRoy Simpson is optimistic with a solid crop ready to go in the Chadron State Invitational Saturday.

Returning are Ed Burnett, last year's top performer, Don Rinehart, Chip Hagerman, Andy Myrtle, Dale Sohl, Al Libby, and Jerry Sanders — who won the Nebraska College Conference championship in 1975. Also back after a year's absence is Roger Kuhlmann, along with freshman Mark Baumer.

Ten meets are on the Wildcat schedule now — five of them at home. That's a welcome treat for the harriers, who enjoyed only one home event last year.

First of the home meets Oct. 7, with the Wayne Invitational. Later on, the NCC and district NIAA meets are scheduled here.

Wayne Country Club will host a four man best ball golf tournament for club members, beginning at 9 a.m. Monday.

Cost to enter is $5 per player.

Only 3 Weeks Left to Ready For PP&K Test

Local youngsters should be "dusting off" their footballs and loosening up their throwing arms for the 1976 Punt, Pass and Kick competition, which will be held Saturday, Sept. 18, at 1 p.m. at Wayne State's Memorial Field.

This year's PP&K contest will be sponsored by Roy Hurd Ford Mercury and Wayne Lions Club.

Nationally PP&K is celebrating its 16th anniversary. It is sponsored by the Ford Dealers of America in cooperation with the National Football League.

Since it was started in 1961, the program has attracted more than 12 million youngsters — and participation this year is expected to top the 1,200,000 mark.

Participants in the Punt, Pass and Kick program compete only against their own age. Any youngster 8 through 13 years of age, accompanied by a parent or guardian, may register to compete in PP&K at any participating Ford Dealer. There is no entrance fee and no body contact during competition. No special equipment is needed and participating does not impair a youngster's amateur standing.

Scoring is based on accuracy and range with one point added for every foot of punting, passing and kicking distance, and a point subtracted for every "heat-off-a-center" throw.

4-Man Is Monday

EVERY YEAR about this time a lot of talk is generated about the West Husker Conference folding. This year is no exception.

What spurred the rumors this year is the possibility of Wakefield dropping out of the eight-team league to join the Lewis and Clark Conference. Wakefield athletic director Lytle Trullinger withheld making a comment at this time, but added he would make a comment at a later date.

Is there a possibility that the league will fold?

"I have no reason to believe that the conference will fold this year; maybe in a few years," said Wayne AD Harold "Mac" Maciejewski. Mac based his comments on the fact that the new state playoff system for football may cause a lot of leagues to realign themselves so that teams of the same class will play each other.

This year's president of the West Husker Conference, Glen Plettner of Cambus Lakeview, agrees that schools of the same class playing each other on football would be the ideal situation. But for now, his school has no qualms about playing B and C clubs.

As for the league falling apart, Plettner said he hasn't heard anything about a breakup. "At least nothing is said during the conference meetings, so I would have to assume that some schools are doing something else without the knowledge of league schools," he commented.

Plettner said his school overall is happy with the eight team league now that conference schools have voted to drop two four-team divisions in the West Husker in favor of just one division. What that means is that the league school with the best win-loss percentage among the league will represent the loop in the annual playoff against the East Husker representative.

LEO CORBIN of Hooper sends a congratulations to Legion coach Hank Overin and his squad for winning the state Class C title in Gothenberg several weeks ago.

Corbin, who is the Area A Legion Commander, pointed out that his area had three of four possible teams win state championships. In addition to Wayne, Arlington won the Class B Legion title while Bancroft finished as the top Midget club in C. West Point lost its bid for the B Midget title when it fell to Central City.

NEXT WEEK marks the start of the weekly athletes of the week program. New this year will be the addition of a girls athlete of the week award for the outstanding female athlete as voted by coaches from the five area high schools and selected by the sports staff.

The reason for honoring a girl athlete along with the top male athlete is the growing popularity of girls sports and the increased participants in the female sector.

Coaches are asked to make their nominations when they phone in the results of their games or matches. Each athlete who is selected as the top player of the week will receive a billfold size card honoring the person for his or her accomplishments, plus a newspaper clip ping of the story.

AGAIN starting up this year will be the weekly predictions of winners in prep football. Last year's percentage of right picks was close to 750. I'll try to see if I can't match that mark again. For a peek at this week's selections, check elsewhere on the sports pages.

BEGINNING Friday, Sept. 10, the Allen Community Club will sponsor a sports booster breakfast at the Country Kitchen in Allen. That night Allen will play its first home game, going against rival Wakefield.

Under new rules this year, those attending the coffee hour must purchase a ticket for all home games.

LEARNED from Wayne State football coach Don Stollenberg that former WS outstanding defensive end Stan Lewis was cut from the Seattle Seahawks. Stollenberg mentioned that the cut was a surprise to him since Seattle is one of two new expansion clubs in the National Football League.

Stan told the head man that he thinks he might have a chance to play for the New York Giants.

New Patrolmen Now on Duty

Two new members of the Wayne police department, Bob West and Ron Surber, began their duties Wednesday as patrolmen.

West, who was manager of a steak house in Norfolk, is a native of Lake of the Ozarks, Mo. Following graduation from Camdenton High, he attended Southwestern College in Winfield, Kan., where he graduated in 1972 with a bachelor's degree in physical education and health. Bob, 26, and his wife, Kathy, have one son, Aaron, 26 months.

Born in Sidney, Surber is 23 years old and single. Surber graduated from Sidney High and attended a law enforcement school in Grand Island before he became a member of the Holdrege police department.

The new patrolmen are replacing LeRoy Janssen and Robert Selig who resigned.

SURFACING OF Wayne State's running track began Friday when Western Engineering Co. of Marian, Ia. laid a three-inch deep, 30-foot wide layer of asphaltic concrete. It was a long job, starting with a 10-foot strip in the morning and ending late in the evening with a third 10-foot strip. One more layer was scheduled for Tuesday. That will be a one-inch coating of resinated asphalt, loaded with rubber granules. The track renovation will cost a bit under $60,000 and provide an all-weather running surface. Construction officials said it would be about two weeks before the track could be used. The 14-day period is needed to allow the new track to settle.

City attorney Budd Bornhoft said the change was made at the request of the improvement committee. "I'm not sure if this is what the committee wants or what the council wants," he also said he wanted to consult with a bonding company before the council takes action on the ordinance with the half-block deleted. The council agreed to meet again with the improvement committee before preparing a revised ordinance.

Controversy again centered around at what stage planning of improvement should reach before the ordinance is passed. Councilman Vernon Russell said a detailed plan of the project with cost estimates should be ready at the time the ordinance is passed, so property owners in the district will know what the project will cost them before they consider whether or not to petition out the district. Such a petition would have to be filed within about 60 days after passage of the ordinance in an open storm sewer in the Roosevelt Park area of Wayne.

The council has been considering for more than a year a proposal to install some type of culvert so the open ditch can be filled. So far, costs estimated at $220,000 have deferred any action, as well as controversy over whether to finance the project through a special assessment or as a general obligation. Brink presented a proposal which he thinks would make the project feasible for less than $100,000 by using city employees to provide most of the labor.

City workers would pre-cast four-foot sections of concrete box culvert with a six-foot by six-foot cross section, and would install the sections when their work schedule allows. The project would be completed over a two to three-year period Brink said. The council gave no final approval for proceeding with the plan, but did authorize the test borings to determine what type of base must be provided for the culvert after excavation to accommodate it.

Mrs. Lella Maynard, president of the Wayne Federated Women's Club, addressed the council, explaining the difficulties facing the club by a recent change in the work schedule of city auditorium manager Mert Ellis. Ellis was previously available during all hours to help prepare for various meetings in the Women's Club Room of the auditorium. The room was included when the auditorium was built through $6,000 provided by the Federated Women. Since then, a portion of the club's revenue has been derived from the nominal rental fee charged for use of the room. It has been a custom of long standing that Ellis has prepared the room for such meetings. Ellis recently was put on an 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. work schedule, and three hours of that time is devoted to driving the city taxi.

In a related matter Tuesday night, the council voted to change the taxi hours from 9 a.m. until noon to an afternoon schedule. Brink said he believes that will provide a partial solution to the problem outlined by Mrs. Maynard and agreed to see what else can be done to alleviate the situation.

The administrator said the new afternoon taxi hours and the date when they will begin will be announced later. The council tabled action regarding retaining a realtor to handle the sale of a house owned at 208 W. Third St., across the street from the city auditorium and previously provided to Ellis as part of his condition of employment.

Only one realtor had contacted Brink about the matter and the council agreed to table action until others had an opportunity to consider it. The council split on a proposal to give Brink a 7.5 per-cent salary increase, from $20,700 to $22,555. Brink said every other city employee has had a salary increase of at least 10 per cent in the past year. Those pay hikes were the result of cost of living and merit increases.

Mayor Freeman Decker broke the tie by voting against the proposal after suggesting that the ordinance be reintroduced with the salary set at $21,900 a year. Following reintroduction of the new amount, the ordinance failed to gain the three-fourths vote required to suspend the rules which would have allowed final passage. The ordinance will be considered for second reading at the next meeting.

The council also opened bids for three separate sets of items: an industrial tractor with backhoe, an evaporative cooler for the city light plant, and other electrical equipment needed to increase the plant's capacity. The council deferred letting bids on any of the items pending recommendations to be heard at the next council meeting.

The council also agreed to change from industrial to agricultural the zoning for property where the Wayne Rendering Plant was located before being destroyed by fire last year.

Missouri River Art Festival Is Underway

Common works of nature transform into visual eye-pleasers at the Missouri River Art Festival, a display which began Wednesday at the Nordstrand Art Gallery on the Wayne State College campus.

A group from the Northeast Nebraska area assembled the art show with relics salvaged from the Missouri River location near Ponca. The display includes art work in diversified forms, ranging from photography of surroundings to sculpture composed solely of discovered objects.

Showing works in the festival are college students Rick and Julie Noyes, featuring a chair they made of logs and other materials. Leroy VonGlan, displaying pottery formed from Missouri River earth and Ken Wagner, showing photos of the area. Specializing in multimedia, Godfred and Lonnie Beardshear have jewelry, water color selections, and Dr. Wood sculpture on display. Dr. Bob Johnson, a professor in communication arts at WSC, has created a new art form, podma, inspired from his cabin.

An instructor from the North east Technical Community College, Barb Schmitt, has written poetry for the art festival. Running from Sept. 1 to 10, the display will be open to the public from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Nordstrand Art Gallery, located on the second floor of the Peterson Fine Arts Center.

discretionary spending, most local families loosened their purse strings and returned to the marketplace to buy the cars, washing machines, refrigerators and other big-ticket items that they had been holding back on for some time. The net result was that business was good for retail merchants in Wayne County. Their sales volume in the year came to $20,755,000, topping the prior year's $18,781,000.

The increase was 10.5 per cent. It was 4.8 per cent elsewhere in the United States and 8.4 per cent in the West North Central States.

According to forecasts by government agencies and others, the general expectation is for economic progress during the rest of 1976 and most of 1977. The rate and the extent of improvement will depend chiefly, however, on public confidence, according to The Conference Board. Although most consumers are in a spending mood again, there are many who are holding back, waiting for further evidence of stability.

Thought for Today
By Rowan Wiltse

"When one must make a hurried decision, the best answer is always 'No', because 'No' is more easily changed to 'Yes' than 'Yes' is changed to 'No'."

Charles E. Nielson
Too often, we are asked to make decisions without complete information or without an opportunity to consider what the consequences might be; whatever we decide.

Nielson's rule is a good one—it has a built-in safety factor. It's usually easy to change a 'No' to a 'Yes' but almost impossible, once a 'Yes' decision is made, to reverse the verdict.

We are prepared to conduct perfectly appropriate services for all faiths, all creeds, all fraternal orders.

Senator says emotions enter into right to die question

CAPITOL NEWS
LINCOLN—State Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln says he is having a lot of trouble trying to keep emotions out of an attempted objective look at a person's right to die.

"We are not talking here about euthanasia," Luedtke said.

"That is a conscious act of killing someone for some reason. Under Nebraska law that should be and is murder."

The right of a person to die when there is no hope of recovery, especially when medical science is now capable of keeping certain organs functioning while the person is in a vegetative state, is the real issue, he said.

It is one that touches families, doctors and lawyers.

Luedtke authored a resolution in this year's session of the legislature calling for an interim study on the right to die in issue. The study is being handled by his Judiciary Committee.

In short, the whole question arose from the nationwide attention given to the case of Karen Quintan, whose parents wanted to pull the plug on life-sustaining machines because they felt the presence of life was a technical rather than real fact.

"My purpose in studying this is not to legalize euthanasia," Luedtke said.

The literal definition given to the word euthanasia by the dictionary is "mercy killing."

Luedtke said this right to die centers not on forcing the death of a person, particularly those who can no longer decide for themselves.

"Playing God?"

Instead, he said the question is "How far can we go as human beings in playing God—forcing someone to live when they are basically in a vegetative state?"

Therefore, Luedtke said the study issues he is interested in proper include:

—Whether the lawbooks should contain a legal definition of death and "ordinary care" as opposed to "heroic" care that only keeps a body alive.

—Whether to specifically protect the rights of some to simply refuse treatment as well as the ability of family members to end treatment.

—Whether law should provide for "living wills" in which a person puts a limit on the measures medical personnel could employ in keeping his body alive.

Whether there should be specifically assigned responsibilities for physicians and others in such cases.

State Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, however, has a concern.

"We want to find a way of making sure the motives of the family members making the decision to pull the plug are beyond question a reason to end a life."

"Peoples' judgments cannot be trusted," said Chambers, especially when a life is at stake and in view of the continuous changes in what modern medicine can do now and what it can do next week.

The Omaha lawmaker said he was especially concerned about decisions being made solely for economic reasons.

He was thinking primarily of those cases in which a person underwent a treatment voluntarily on a hope or promise that it would effect a cure, but instead the patient lapsed into a coma.

During a recent hearing on the right to die issue, Chambers questioned a number of witnesses on just when they felt a family should be allowed to decide when to pull the plug. None could pinpoint an exact spot in a chain of events.

One witness offered simply that it is up to the family and the physician to decide and it must be decided on what the family thinks the wishes of the person might be.

Chambers then suggested he might take it upon himself to introduce a bill in the 1977 Unicameral which would prohibit decisions to allow a person to die under some circumstances.

Accept Abortions?

Chambers is also involved in the abortion issue.

However, he said whether or not there should be abortions is simply no longer an issue at all. He said because the U.S. Supreme Court has acted, there is nothing to do now but accept the fact they will be performed and go on from there.

He is chairing a judiciary subcommittee that is looking into the situation.

The most recent court decision on abortions threw out as unconstitutional provisions contained in Nebraska law which required parental consent and spouse consent.

A Lincoln attorney, James Bausch, suggested that because the courts did not rule-out the use of some written consent forms, maybe they should include more information on alternatives and possible bad effects.

He said the idea would be to try and make sure that when a woman made a decision to get an abortion that it was an informed one.

"Because of this form, just one decides to have her child, puts it up for adoption and a couple who has no children gets it, I'm happy," the attorney said.

Chambers said, however, the courts have ruled there can be no interference in the decision-making process. He said the "sheer abundance" of paperwork that might be required by such consent forms might be interpreted as undue intervention.

Bausch said that was not his intent.

He said there is a chance that some physicians are not doing what they should now under state law. The law requires physicians to at least verbally inform a woman of alternatives to abortion and where she can get help. She must also be told of the potential dangers involved.

Chambers said he questioned the value of consent forms and even requiring them in the first place.

He noted Nebraska law required parental consent in the cases of minors in an attempt to make sure the girl had all the necessary family counseling on how to avoid an abortion.

Chambers said the statistics indicate there might be more parental coercion into an abortion than help in avoiding one.

He said in 1973, the first year of abortions under a law stemming from the court's landmark decision on abortion, there were 1,218 performed. Of that number, 959 were done with parental consent.

In 1974, there were 3,094 abortions recorded with 2,756 done with parental consent in 1975, 2,453 of 3,406 abortions required parental consent.

Federal pension called 'most generous'

As retirement plans go, it's pretty hard to beat the Federal Government's and even harder to pay for it.

Federal pensions have been increased by 72 per cent since 1969, while the cost of living has risen by 56 per cent and the pay of federal white-collar workers by 58 per cent.

In other words, federal pensioners are not only keeping up with inflation, they're actually coming out ahead of the game. Way ahead. It's nice work, if you can get it.

How did we, the taxpayers, choose to be so generous? Well, it's all done automatically. Take a deep breath and follow the bouncing ball.

Whenever the cost of living rises by at least three per cent over the previous base month, and stays at least that high for three consecutive months, federal pensioners get an increase in their pension checks. The increase is equal to the highest Consumer Price Index increase registered during the three-month period, plus one per cent. So if the CPI hit four per cent during the period, the pension checks are increased by five per cent, payable three months later. The "previous base month" refers to the period in which the last such increase was calculated.

Why plus one per cent? Because there is a time-lag of six months in this process, between the time the cost of living rises and the time the pensioner is compensated for it in his monthly check. The extra one per cent — known as the one per cent kicker — is supposed to compensate for the delay. As you can see, however, the benefit increases are compounding, overcompensating wildly.

Let's keep things in proper perspective. Not only do private pension plans lack a "kicker," very few of them — less than four per cent — even feature cost-of-living adjustments. It's not that private employers want to be cruel to the retired, it's just that unlike the Congress, they are unable to be generous with other people's money.

Why would Congress do such an irresponsible thing? A big clue may be found in the list of those covered by this marvelous money machine. Included are those retiring from the following groups: The federal civil service, the uniformed services, the foreign service, the CIA, the Federal Reserve Board, judges and school teachers of the District of Columbia, and... I'll bet you guessed it — members of Congress and their staff employees.

Even one retired member of Congress, Hastings Keith, has complained publicly about the cost of this system, which he calls "the most generous pension plan in existence." He notes that his own pension, which started out at $1,500 a month, has increased over a 35-month period to $2,206 — a 45.5 per cent increase during a period when the cost of living went up 28 per cent.

It is true that federal employees contribute part of their pay to their pension plan. But it is also true that pension increases on this order of magnitude cannot be covered by those contributions. The boilers of this federal gravy train will have to be stoked from general revenues — that is, from taxes taken mostly from people who are allowed to pay for the federal wage benefits, but not to benefit from them; people who suffer from the inflation triggered by federal deficits.

There is a bill in the House to repeal the one per cent kicker and simultaneously reduce the delay in compensating federal pensioners for cost-of-living increases. It was introduced by David Henderson (D-N.C.), chairman of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee. This bill is numbered H.R. 14520. It may be passed as an amendment to another bill, H.R. 12882.

If this package passes in the House, it will mean go to the Senate, where it may be allowed to gather dust in hopes that everyone will forget about it in the hubbub of an election year. You can be sure the federal employees' organizations will fight like tigers to see that that happens. And the Hill people will hardly be anxious to kill their golden goose. So only a major public outcry is likely to get action. And there's very little time left in this session.

That means it's up to you.

Hearings important for beef producers

Two of the six public hearings being conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture relative to the proposed research and information order for the beef checkoff program are at locations accessible to Nebraska beef producers and their respective organizations and Nebraska's No. 1 industry should be fully represented Oct. 5 in Denver, Colo. and Oct. 17 at Des Moines, Iowa.

How well cattle people respond to the opportunity to provide input into the checkoff program will be a tipoff on how the producers participate and vote when the critical referendum vote comes up next spring. The Secretary of Agriculture was authorized to issue such an order by the Beef Research and Information Act enacted into law last May. Such an order would establish a Beef Board, composed of producers, which would conduct the research and information program for cattle and beef. The proposed order to be considered at the hearings was submitted to the USDA by the Beef Development Task Force composed of representatives of national and state beef and dairy organizations.

The hearings provide opportunity for public examination of all provisions contained in the proposal. Any interested person may testify at any of the hearings which will be continued beyond one day if necessary.

If producers in the referendum next spring vote favorably on the beef checkoff program, a nationally coordinated research and information program will be financed by an assessment of up to one-half of one per cent of the value of each animal slaughtered. There is a provision for a refund to producers who do not want to take part in the program. It is estimated that the checkoff will produce between $30 million and $40 million annually.

It is planned that part of the money will go into financing beef research programs related to improved production and marketing. Another major portion would be used in promotion of beef consumption and improved consumer relations for the beef industry. If the checkoff were currently operating, undoubtedly money would be spent to promote sales of beef during this period of large supplies and low cattle prices which has producers and leaders in an economic bind.

Between now and referendum time, cattle industry groups have geared up to present the details of the proposed program to cattle producers and encourage their participation. The order will be come effective only if at least 50 per cent of the producers who register vote, and if two-thirds of those vote affirmatively. The order, if approved, would be administered by a beef board of not more than 68 members appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture from nominations submitted by organizations with a substantial beef producer membership.

The referendum is a "one producer, one vote" proposition in which the small producer's vote counts equally with the large producer. Early proposals that the act provide for a "weighted vote" based on the number of cattle a producer marketed would have meant that the large feedlot operators could have monopolized the decision making and were abandoned after a long struggle. Now it is up to the small producers to acquaint themselves with the program and make sure they register and cast their votes in the referendum. This is no time for any cattle producer or leader to default on his decision making right and opportunity of the entire program will be doomed to failure. — M. M. VanKirk, Farm Bureau Federation.

OBSERVATIONS

Robbed twice

Senate investigators, following a four-month probe, estimated that more than half of the nation's $15 billion a year bill for Medicaid is gobbled up by fraudulent practices.

Undercover investigators, certified as health-care Capitol physician Dr. Freeman Carey, made more than 200 visits to "Medicaid mills" complaining of minor ailments, usually colds.

Only one doctor told them to go home because there was nothing wrong with him. Otherwise they underwent a barrage of X-rays, collected a bushel of prescriptions, underwent electrocardiograms (for heart conditions), tuberculosis tests, allergy tests, hearing tests, glaucoma tests (for eye disease) electroencephalogram tests (for brain disease), blood test and urine tests. (One woman was told her urine specimen tested normal, which was interesting because it was a water and cleaning fluid mixture collected in the rest room).

Medicaid, which began in 1966, is intended to provide health care for Americans too poor to pay for it. Federal state and local funds are used to underwrite the program. The $15 billion price tag in 1966 has increased 10-fold since then.

The basic idea behind Medicaid is acceptable. No one should be opposed to the idea of adequate health care for persons unable to afford it.

Pouring billions of dollars into fraudulent health care operations, however, doesn't provide any useful service. It detracts from the original intent of the program, and robs the American taxpayer.

Here in the Midwest, we get robbed twice. Like everyone else, we shell out hard-earned dollars to buy unnecessary medical "services" such as glaucoma tests for someone complaining of a cold.

At the same time, over the long haul, we end up losing out where health care is concerned.

How? There is a tremendous shortage of doctors in this part of the country. Doctors here don't really have time to perpetrate fraud, even if they wanted to. Because of the shortage, doctors here have to be dedicated and work long, hard hours to meet the legitimate health care needs of their patients.

If pickings weren't so good in areas where dense population and mismanaged programs like Medicaid provide opportunities to defraud the government out of billions, perhaps establishing a needed, productive medical practice in areas like ours would become a bit more appealing to some health care practitioners. — Jim Strayer.

EPA: State Water Quality Plan Would Reduce Federal Involvement

An Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) representative made in a plea in Lincoln, Aug. 26, for Nebraskaans to develop their own water quality plans keeping the federal involvement down to a minimum.

James Agee, EPA western coordinator from San Francisco, said "we are giving local people ample leeway and authority to develop their own 208 planning process."

Under the Federal Clean Water Act of 1972, section 208, each state must have a Water Quality Plan by November, 1978. These plans will be used to improve the nation's waters where possible by 1983.

Congress has budgeted more than $350 million to EPA to distribute to states to develop state and local plans to identify the best management practices and mechanisms for regulatory powers. Nebraska's projected allocation is $88.7 million.

"Funding is a real problem. We are not even sure if Congress will continue to provide funds after the planning process has been completed in 1978," Agee said.

More than 150 people were on hand for the state's first attempt to get the 208 planning process underway. Other speakers emphasizing the need for local involvement were W.J. Parker, U.S. Soil Conservation Service (SCS) state conservationist in Lincoln and Morrie Bolline, National Association of Conservation Districts (NACD) national 208 project director.

Parker said the new emphasis on non-point source and agriculturally related pollution, "while raising a host of difficult issues, is not a new topic to Natural Resources Districts, U.S. Soil Conservation Service and other U.S. Department of Agriculture agencies."

"However," he said, "the difference is that there are new actors on the scene, new programs proposed and a new national strategy that emphasizes regulation as the proper means of controlling runoff and erosion."

"Certainly, however, having a law that uses within the limits of cities, towns or housing developments or within 200 yards of any inhabited dwelling, and the farmer must sign an agreement to maintain the plants for at least 10 years.

The sweet clover will be available only in 50-pound bags with a maximum of 220 pounds. Each bag should be enough to plant five acres. Any site will qualify except those within the limits of cities and towns.

"Farmers must agree to grow the clover for two years, through the spring of 1979, but longer periods are encouraged. Clover may be planted with certain crops, such as oats, where the crop stubble will be left standing after harvest and the ground is to be rested till the spring of 1979.

Plants and seed will be shipped directly to the cooperators in time for spring planting. Agreement forms are available from the Game and Parks Commission office in Norfolk. Supplies are limited. Allocations will be exhausted in December, so interested persons should act quickly.

says that we are going to stop pollution and clean up the nation's waters by 1983 doesn't solve the problem of how we're going to get the job done."

Parker, who also is current chairman of the Nebraska-USDA Rural Development Committee, noted that in 40 years of experience in controlling soil erosion, new types of grasses to meet conservation needs had to be developed. "In many areas, adapted varieties were not available to do the job.

"We face a similar dilemma in the non-point pollution control program," Parker said. "We don't know all the technological answers." But he expressed optimism that problems can be met in solving non-point pollution, warning that "we need research and development to be fully effective."

Parker outlined a four-step strategy sequence for non-point pollution control:

—Sample the waters of the country, measure the physical and chemical pollutants and determine the severity of the pollution problem.

—Identify why pollutants are in the water, where they come from and how they were transmitted.

—Move onto the lands in the watershed, apply proper conservation techniques and systems, and prevent pollution from reaching the water.

—Re-measure water quality to evaluate how effective the efforts have been.

Parker termed the major problem in getting conservation treatment on critical lands as economic, not technical.

The SCS official warned that "land users, both private and public, often face large investments for conservation treatment, which in many cases will not be balanced by short-term economic returns."

"As in the past," he said, "the classic choices remain: the cooperation of land owners in providing conservation treatment can be obtained through education and persuasion, economic incentives, police power regulation, or some combination of the three."

Turning to the problem of sedimentation, Parker emphasized that "non-point and agriculturally related pollutants are materials that are for the most part, natural in the environment. Sediment does not come exclusively from eroding farm fields or suburban developments, but also can come from the stream bottom, from the banks, from roadside ditches, from landslides, or from many other places in the environment."

He also noted that nitrogen, phosphorus and some other elements commonly associated with non-point source and agriculturally related pollution can come from many places.

Morrie Bolline said the cooperative project with EPA "fosters close working relationships between soil conservationists and water quality officials" in a program of non-point pollution control "that will be effective and acceptable to all concerned."

Bolline pointed out that in the past, conservation districts and their cooperating agencies have engaged in work in a rather broad field of natural resource conservation rather than efforts aimed at specific water quality objectives. Water quality agencies, on the other hand, have concentrated on the control of pollution — and mainly that from municipal and industrial sources.

Recent USDA figures indicate there will be about 11 per cent more broilers in late 1976 than there were a year ago and that production of turkeys, eggs and beef will be greater the last half of this year than they were a year ago.

These increases will give consumers wider meat choices and it is unlikely that the increases can be absorbed by the producers without a substantial reduction in prices. Wellman indicates that 1975 last quarter pork prices could drop $15 or more per hundredweight below 1975 last quarter prices.

The price drop along with continuing high feed prices will dampen hog producer's profits the next few months, he said. A large feed grain crop this fall and less demand for hog exports of feed grains could help hog producers through lower feed prices.

However, Wellman said continued dry weather in western Europe could stimulate feed grain exports this fall and winter and again lead to higher feed prices for hog producers.

A recent USDA report shows that hog producers intend to farrow 17 per cent more hogs between June and November during the same period last year. If this happens, increased hog production will continue into 1977.

Resistance to the passage of an electric current produces heat. This energy "change" produces heat in electrical appliances such as the iron and toaster.

Producers Now Facing Declining Profits

Sharp increases in supplies of pork, and other meat products this fall are expected to cut into pork producers' profits in the next few months, says Dr. Al Wellman, extension agricultural economist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Recent USDA figures indicate there will be about 11 per cent more broilers in late 1976 than there were a year ago and that production of turkeys, eggs and beef will be greater the last half of this year than they were a year ago.

These increases will give consumers wider meat choices and it is unlikely that the increases can be absorbed by the producers without a substantial reduction in prices.

Wellman indicates that 1975 last quarter pork prices could drop $15 or more per hundredweight below 1975 last quarter prices.

The price drop along with continuing high feed prices will dampen hog producer's profits the next few months, he said.

A large feed grain crop this fall and less demand for hog exports of feed grains could help hog producers through lower feed prices.

Safety Specialist Says Beware of Round Balers

The end of the hay baling season is approaching, but during these last few weeks, farmers should be wary of the large round baler.

This word comes from Rollin Schneider, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension safety specialist, who reports that three persons have been killed in Nebraska working with the round baler — one in 1974 and two in 1976.

It's a bad safety practice to work on any kind of equipment while it is left running, Schneider said, as most farm accidents happen in those instances.

The baler itself can catch the unwary operator who gets too close. Operators have been pulled into the baler and killed and in other instances, parts of the bodies have been burned away by friction caused by the moving belts.

The friction buildup is a good reason to carry a fire extinguisher on the baler. Farmers have reported that they dropped the weight of the bale trailer and the four or five bales which they carry approach five tons. This weight had to be stopped by the tractor brakes, so it is a good practice to use the engine as a brake in going down hills. The tractor brakes alone may not be able to stop the load.

Balers and bale handling equipment should carry warning signs or labels. The farmer is urged to read and heed the labels, Schneider warned.

Common sense pointers such as leaving guards in place and keeping hands out of moving parts are important, he cautioned.

Now Is Time To Reverse Culling Trend

Beef cow-calf producers who have been culling their herds the past 18 months should now think about reversing this trend, says Dr. Allen C. Wellman, extension agricultural economist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The reason, he says, is that good heifers saved for replacement this year's calf crop will produce the yearling calves for the 1979-80 market when prices are likely to be more favorable. This calls for long range planning, he said.

Part of the low price problem in recent months has been because supplies of most meats, except veal, have been up and provided consumers with a wide choice of meat products.

Increased production of pork, broilers, turkeys and eggs will continue to compete for the consumer's meat dollar for the rest of this year, Wellman says. Compared to a year earlier, there will be nearly 15 per cent more pork and about 11 per cent more broilers the last six months of 1976 than for the last six months of 1975.

The economist said that despite fewer cattle in feedlots in recent months, prices will not recover to what they were a year ago. This, coupled with high feed grain costs, may cut into the feeder cattle prices this fall. However, Wellman said, a good feed grain crop and small grain exports this year compared to a year ago may make it possible for cattle feeders to realize better profits this fall and early next year despite increased competition from other meat products.

Trees, Seed Available for Wildlife

The Game and Parks Commission is offering farmers and ranchers tree and shrub seeds of any kinds and sweet clover seed for developing wildlife habitat next spring.

Seedlings will be in one of two bundles: either 200 Redcedar and 200 Ponderosa pine; or 30 new programs proposed and a new national strategy that emphasizes regulation as the proper means of controlling runoff and erosion.

Plantings will be available only in 50-pound bags with a maximum of 220 pounds. Each bag should be enough to plant five acres. Any site will qualify except those within the limits of cities and towns.

Farmers must agree to grow the clover for two years, through the spring of 1979, but longer periods are encouraged. Clover may be planted with certain crops, such as oats, where the crop stubble will be left standing after harvest and the ground is to be rested till the spring of 1979.

IRRIGATION SCHEDULING
It's been a very interesting summer for me in working on a soil moisture monitoring program on the Glenn Laberg center pivot irrigation field north of Carroll.

In the first week of June I buried gypsum blocks at six, twelve, twenty four and thirty six inch depths in four different places in the field. The gypsum blocks have wires attached which can be connected to an electrical gauge which registers the amount of moisture at each depth the block is buried at.

Glenn and I were surprised several times after a rain that the moisture blocks didn't indicate any moisture being stored even though the surface was quite wet. If the moisture blocks hadn't shown the need for more irrigation I'm sure Glenn would have shut down for a much longer period than he did. This could have caused him to be short of moisture later on when it wasn't possible to irrigate enough to form the corn plant without using the stored subsoil moisture.

In other words the only way to know what is going on beneath the surface is by using electrical resistance blocks or a soil probe. Glenn followed another good irrigation practice in that he soaked the soil to a depth of five feet or more before the corn was planted. This was a real life-saver in July when the corn had used most of the moisture in the top three feet and had to rely on moisture from the four and five foot depths.

It's wise to continue irrigation this time of year until corn is hard dented and you have a couple of feet of reserve moisture in the soil.

New Trading Post Going Up in Dixon

B and B Fur Company of Dixon is in the process of building its first official trading post.

Due to be completed by Nov. 1, the post will be operated by Bill Moore Sr., and his son Bill Jr., who plan to expand their business to cover a four-state area, including Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota and Minnesota.

The new building is part of the expansion going on in this Northeast Nebraska community of just over 150. About two blocks south of the post, construction plans are underway to add three high bushel bins to the Dixon elevator.

According to the senior member of the trading firm, the initial investment for building and expanding his business will be about four to $500,000. Included in the costs are two new pickups, money for machines to skin animals for their furs and enough capital to pay prospective customers.

Moore, who started working the fur business in 1947, went to work with his son about 15 years ago, trapping and trading furs throughout Nebraska and parts of South Dakota on a part-time basis. The demand and prices paid for furs has increased so much that both feel they can become buyers and sellers and make a profit full-time.

Young Bill learned the ropes of the trade while working in skinning houses in South Dakota and Montana, before he decided to hitch up with his dad.

According to an Associated Press article, the 1976 furs, jackets and stoles totaled $25 million last year — an increase of about 88 per cent over the $27 million worth of furs sold in 1970. "The fur business really relies on women," Bill Sr. quipped. "It's a great business, so we have to go out and get 'em."

The article went on to say that the average price of a good quality, full-length mink coat is now about $6,500, up $2,000 or 44 per cent from five years ago. A raccoon coat goes for about $200, double the 1970 figure. A rabbit coat that used to sell for $150 to $200 now costs $200 to $300. At the top of the price scale, a Russian sable available for $15,000 to $20,000 in 1970 is up to $25,000 to $30,000 today.

Correct Data Can Speed Income Payment

People who plan to apply for supplemental security income payments can save time by first getting together some information about themselves, according to Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk.

The supplemental security income program makes monthly payments to people with little or no income and limited resources who are 65 or over, or blind or disabled. People can get information about applying for the payments by calling or writing any social security office.

When applying, Branch said, "it's a good idea to have with you as many of the following as possible: a checkbook, if you have one, to show how much you have in the bank, any savings account books, stocks and bonds, life insurance policies, automobile registration cards, latest real estate tax statements if you own a home or any land, last year's income tax return, W-2 forms, and evidence of all other income."

It may save time, too, according to Branch, if people applying for supplemental security income payments know how much cash they have on hand and know the value of their car, if they own one.

"You should also have your social security card," he said. "Disabled or blind students 18 to 22 should have a school identification card, tuition receipts, or similar evidence of school attendance."

The supplemental security income program is administered by the Social Security Administration, an agency of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The Norfolk social security office is at 1310 Norfolk Avenue. The phone number is 371-1595.

No Winner So Prize Climbs This Week

The grand prize in this week's Birthday Bucks promotion climbs $25 to $375 as the result of no one winning the top prize during last Thursday night's drawing.

A rural Wayne woman, Mrs. Dennis Luft, came the closest to winning the top prize when her birthday of Sept. 12, 1942 was the closest to the date drawn by Mrs. Irene Jeffery of Jeff's Cafe. That date was Oct. 6, 1942.

Mrs. Luft, who was in Sav-Mor Drug when the date was announced, won the $25 consolation award. She can spend that amount in any participating Wayne business because Birthday Bucks can be spent just like cash.

Tonight (Thursday) another lucky shopper will have a chance to win either prize simply by being in a store when the date is announced.

Look for such clues as excessive eye rubbing, shutting one eye, difficulty with close work, blinking, squinting, tearing, sensitivity to light, itchy or watery eyes, recurring sties or itching and burning, say experts at The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. For a free booklet called "Your Child's Sight," write to The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, 8N, 79 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016.

CONSTRUCTION is underway near the Bill Moore residence in Dixon of a new fur trading post. The building will house machines to skin animals as well as office space to conduct business in a four state area. Working on the project is Bill Sr., left, and his son, Bill Jr.

EXTENSION NOTES

By Kathy Klahn

- MAKE YOUR HOME KID PROOF!
1. If you have "get into everything" preschoolers at home, it's time to think safety. Place your self in your three year old's shoes for a moment. This means viewing the world from the bottom up. Picture those pots, pans, and paper bags as masks, drums, and racing helmets. Tempting, aren't they?
 2. The most potentially dangerous rooms in your house are the kitchen and bathroom, as reported by the General Electric Consumer's Institute. Below are some hints to help you avoid possible accidents.

- Kitchen Tips
1. Cover up electrical sockets with plastic insert plugs, so that children cannot insert objects in the openings.
 2. Pot handles should be turned to the rear of your stove. A saucepan makes a great racing helmet, but not when filled with boiling water!
 3. A mere party to you may be the "heart of deepest Africa" to your toddler. Keep glass bottles and toxic items well out of reach.
 4. Keep knives and sharp objects hidden as much as possible.
- Bath Basics
1. Pits are not candy! Lock your medicine cabinet, if possible.
 2. It's amazing how much an electric blow dryer can sound like a toy submarine to a little ear. Keep electrical appliances away from water.
 3. Put lids back onto shampoo, bubble bath, creme rinse, etc. It's also a good idea to keep these items out of reach and not on the tub ledge.
 4. Use rubber backed rugs to inhibit slipping and sliding. This may prevent grief if there is a mad rush to wash hands at supper time.

Hoskins Board Okays 3 Permits

The Hoskins town board Monday night approved building permits for two homes and a repair shop.

Receiving okays to build homes are David Cheyne and Robert Johnson, both of Hoskins. Gene Brudigan, also of Hoskins, was given approval to build a car repair shop.

In other action, the board officially learned that representatives of the federal and state environmental agencies approved the construction of the new sewer lagoon located north-west of town.

The lagoon, which covers about nine acres, is divided into two cells. At present, only one cell is in use. Hoskins officials expect to be using both cells in about two years.

'Nebraska Experiment Station in Forefront In Meeting World Demand for Nutrition'

Nebraska recognized early the importance of basic science in agriculture. Dr. Warren Sals told a session of the American Chemical Society in San Francisco Monday.

Sals, assistant director of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Agricultural Experiment Station, presented a paper that had been requested by the society for its symposium on "The Role of Universities in Agricultural and Food Research Progress."

While pointing to recent contributions to agriculture and the food industry, Sals expressed confidence that Nebraska would move ahead with research emphasis on improved and more efficient nutrition of humans.

Among recent Nebraska research contributions, he listed:

- Screening of the world collection of wheat germ plasm for genetic sources of improved protein content in wheat.
- From this program already has come Lantoca, a hard red winter wheat that has been consistently about two percentage points higher under all growing conditions than other current varieties.
- Also, experimental hard red winter wheat varieties now being widely tested indicate the genetic potential for five per centage points more protein than current varieties.

Importantly, they do not require high nitrogen fertilizer rates in order to reach their potential.

—Release of improved alfalfa varieties was a factor in making it a major crop in Nebraska and bringing about the state's leadership in the dehydrated alfalfa industry.

This industrial development also has brought about a process for squeezing the juice from the alfalfa plants before drying them further, thus saving precious energy.

However, the major benefit of the process is that, while the "dehydrated" alfalfa protein concentration is reduced from 17-19 per cent protein to 13.15 per cent, a high protein concentrate can be extracted from the fluid for use in satisfying the protein needs of the hungry nations.

The alfalfa protein concentrate (APC) is 75 per cent protein of very high quality which performs well in fortifying cereal foods.

The potential in Nebraska is for the production of 550 pounds of APC per acre per year from freshly cut alfalfa.

Other residues from the APC production process are an excellent feed for chickens and a high carbohydrate whey fraction that is an excellent animal energy source.

Many of the developing nations and several developed nations plan to use APC as a food protein source in the near future.

While its use in the United States is still experimental, APC promises to help improve the nutrition of the young and the old people who lean heavily toward snack foods in their diets.

Restructuring of the poor cuts of beef, pork and lamb through flaking and forming is providing a market for the poorer cuts and scraps by providing tasty, uniform main entree items, sandwich meats and other forms in controlled portions for the fast food and institutional markets.

A Nebraska agronomist has discovered how herbicides kill plants and developed a method for rapid and accurate identification of chemicals that kill weeds, thus reducing costs of the formerly lengthy process.

—Reduced and no-tillage systems have been developed that save considerable energy in crop production while producing crop yields equal to, or better than, yields from conventional tillage.

Ecofallow is an example. It was developed for use in the semi-arid, fallow cropping regions. Chemical weed control is used in place of tillage and compatible crops are planted directly into the standing stubble. The system conserves moisture, reduced wind and water erosion, and produces increased yields.

—More than 25 million tons of crop residues that are low in digestibility are produced in Nebraska each year. Nebraska scientists have developed chemical treatments that can make these residues approximately as digestible for cattle as corn silage.

The Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station has a distinguished record in improving the
