Voters Nix Issues

Dixon County voters Tuesday turned thumbs down on a pair of election issues which would have changed the form of county government had they passed.

A total of 2,387 electors indicated by ballot that they prefer to stick with the present township-supervisor organization rather than switching to a three-man commissioner setup. Commissioner supporters numbered 570.

Thomas Cary of Ponca said he circulated the petition to have the commissioner issue placed on the ballot because he thinks that type of organization would be more efficient.

Opponents countered by saying that townships would be eliminated under the commissioner setup and along with them their taxing authority and revenue sharing dollars which they deemed necessary to continue road maintenance at its present level.

Also rejected by Dixon County voters was a proposal that the county governing body be elected at large rather than by districts.

Members of the current board of supervisors said prior to the election they feared at large elections would eliminate local control and the personal touch in representing county voters. The electors apparently agreed with that view, rejecting the at large proposal 2,102 to 943.

Cary said Wednesday he has registered a complaint regarding what he called a possible violation of Nebraska's open meeting law.

In a letter to Gov. J. X. Exon, Cary said that according to information he had received, three meetings took place last week at the Dixon County courthouse involving the county attorney, township board members and county supervisors.

Cary claims in the letter that the meetings were held to discuss procedures for turning township assets over to the county if township organizations had been discontinued, and "to exhaust township board members to contact friends, neighbors, relatives, etc. to defeat the move to discontinue township organization in Dixon County."

Cary said no notice of the alleged meetings was given to the public and that the public and press were barred. He said no minutes were kept.

Cary claims those alleged meetings violate sections of the open meeting law and requested that Gov. Exon send an investigator to determine if violations have occurred.

Concert Will Conclude Annual Orchestra Clinic

About ninety young musicians will gather in Wayne this Saturday for the annual Junior High Orchestra Clinic.

Michael Pafumbo, music instructor at Wayne State College, will direct the students from Blair, Columbus, Fremont, York and Wayne. Bonita Day, string teacher in the Wayne Public Schools, is coordinating the event.

A full schedule of rehearsals begins at 9:30 a.m. in the Ramsey Theatre in the Val Peterson Fine Arts Center on the college campus. A concert at 7 p.m. will climax the activities. The concert is free and open to the public.

The junior high clinic and a spring elementary clinic have been planned by area string teachers since about 1969. Purpose of the clinics is to give the students a chance to play in large orchestras. Music is prepared prior to clinics.

Saturday's clinic program includes "Camels and Kings" for string orchestra by Slenicki, "Hopak" by Moussorgsky-Isaac, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" by Matesky, "A Salute to Handel" arranged by Gordon, and "Cherish" by Kirkman-Muller.

The contest was the fifth annual event held at Concordia Teacher's College in Seward. Twenty-one students and their accompanists were in competition from Concordia, Midland College, UN-L, Wayne, York College, and private study in Omaha.

Connie Weber, chairman of NATS, also assistant professor of music at Wayne, accompanied Miss Bowen and Miss Crumbliss. Cornell Runestad, associate professor of music, was accompanist for Miss Mallat.

Vote Sends Murphy Back to Statehouse

Legislative candidate Aaron Butler charged incumbent Sen. John R. Murphy with having a poor record in the Nebraska Unicameral but 17th District voters apparently rejected that contention on election day, burying the challenger under an avalanche of Murphy votes.

Butler, a Wayne resident and Kansas City businessman and educator, carried but a single precinct in the three-county legislative district and that by a single vote.

Wayne's third ward voted in favor of Butler 17-16. Elsewhere, tallies such as the 340-87 Murphy romp in Wayne's third ward were more typical, giving the incumbent senator a better than two-to-one edge in his bid for a second term.

Butler repeatedly challenged Murphy's record in one of the most hotly-contested legislative races in recent memory. At one point Butler accused Murphy of "razing the dead by next door" and said "it was proof of the senator's lack of concern for handicapped children. Murphy, who is himself visually impaired, denied the charge and it was later revealed that the alleged victim is the 21-year-old son of Butler's Dakota County campaign chairman.

Murphy supporters in all three counties in the legislative district overwintered opposition voters at the polls.

In Wayne County, election night final totals showed Murphy by a wide margin. See MURPHY, page 12

Hepburn Challenge Succeeds

A 21 year-old challenger ousted the incumbent city councilman in Wayne's first ward in Tuesday's balloting.

Sam Hepburn, a Wayne State College freshman, defeated councilman Ivan Beeks by a better than two-to-one margin — 216 to 101.

Hepburn was an unsuccessful candidate for mayor in 1974, finishing second behind Freeman Decker in a four-way race.

The son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Hepburn of Wayne, the councilman-elect said early Wednesday morning he was happy to win, adding, "How I want to get my feet on the ground and do the best job that I can on the council."

The WSC student has not declared a major area of college study, but indicated he is considering a double major in history and English.

The new first ward councilman, who will take office in December, attributed his success to a door-to-door campaign in which he distributed questionnaires to each home in the ward, and then followed up with a personal visit.

"I tried to talk to everyone in the ward at least once," Hepburn said.

A pair of incumbents return to the council after running unopposed in the general election. Jimmie Thomas will continue to represent the fourth ward and Darrell Fuehlberth the second. See HEPBURN, page 12

Two Appointed To Airport Zoning Board

The Wayne County board of commissioners Monday appointed two members to an airport zoning board.

County appointees Leo Hansen and George Claycomb join Gary Pick and Dr. Ken Liska, previously appointed by the Wayne city council.

The four appointed members will elect a fifth member to the board.

The appointments were made at the request of the Wayne airport authority because a zoning board is a prerequisite for obtaining many federal grants for airport improvements. No proposals for improvements have been forwarded.

Wayne Band Does It Again

For the fifth year in a row, Wayne High School has walked away with the top rating at the annual Nebraska Marching Band Festival at Pershing Auditorium in Lincoln, Saturday.

In Class B competition, Wayne was one of two bands to receive the top rating of outstanding among the 13 bands in that division.

"Each year we've done better and this year was no exception," said Wayne band director Ron Dalton.

The 74-member marching band received one-ratings in playing performance, marching performance and general effect. Also receiving the top rating was Wisner-Pitger.

The rating comes on the heels of another superior rating the Blue Devil band won last week at Wisner.

Youth Suffers Head Injuries In Bike Crash

A 13-year-old Wayne youth remains in satisfactory condition following a pickup-bicycle accident about 6:50 p.m. Sunday in the intersection of Seventh and Lincoln Streets.

Recovering at Providence Medical Center from a scalp laceration and possible concussion is Charles Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Thomas of 720 Douglas.

According to investigating officer Keith Adams, the Thomas youth was gasbound on Seventh Street when the bicycle he was riding struck the side of a pickup operated by Arthur Degryse of Winside.

Degryse told police he was turning left onto Lincoln and didn't see the youth coming because there was no light on the bike.

The bike struck the right side of the pickup, knocking off a side mirror. Damage to the bike was extensive.

No tickets were issued.

Sandahl Is Front-Runner In School Board Election

A Wayne County farmer was the front-runner in a five-way race for three positions up for election on the Wayne-Carroll board of education.

Neil Sandahl collected the most votes — 1,344 — from voters in the 13 precincts and wards containing portions of the school district.

Incumbent Dorothy Ley, a 14-year veteran of the school board, regained her spot on the school governing body by virtue of her 1,275-vote second place finish in the school board sweepstakes.

Another incumbent, Milt Owens, didn't win, place or show in the political race. Jim Hummel received the third highest number of votes — 1,235 — to gain the final school board seat available in the contest. Owens picked up 1,159 votes. Robert Sutherland received 1,031 votes.

The third incumbent whose school board position becomes vacant this year is now chaired by board president Dr. Irv Brandt, who did not seek reelection.

Harline Brugger chalked up 326 votes to finish in front of the field in the Winside board of education race. Dean Janke, with 300 votes, and Randall Bargstadt with 272 votes, were also apparent winners for school board positions.

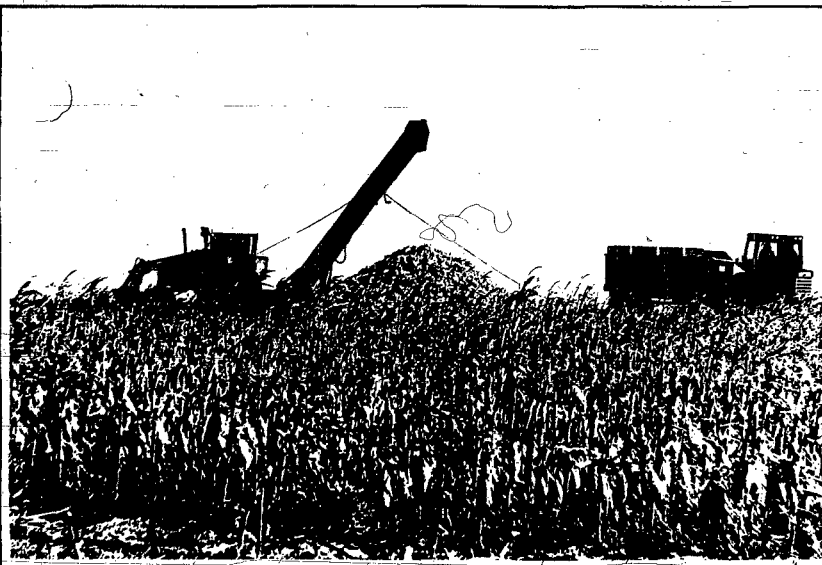

Moller Loses Reelection Bid

Wayne candidate Walter Moller was unsuccessful in his bid for reelection to the Nebraska State Board of Education for District 3.

Wayne County voters favored Moller slightly, giving him 1,823 votes compared with 1,512 for opponent Walter Thompson of Okland.

Thompson won by about 12,000 votes in the district, however, 44,724 to 36,216, according to information supplied Wednesday morning by the Lincoln Journal.

Another Wayne candidate for the state school board position, Fred Mann, was eliminated from the running in the primary election.

Harvest Time

during a relatively dry growing season. The results of the interviews can be found on the Farm Page inside this issue.

Anna Marie Kreifels, area home extension agent at the Northeast Station, near Concord, is searching for men and women who are interested in learning to recane chairs or spin wool. Miss Kreifels said persons should search their attics for treasured chairs that need a new caned seat or back, or for a spinning wheel that could be reactivated. If enough interest is generated in learning the crafts, workshops sessions may be arranged for sometime in 1977. Miss Kreifels said persons who are interested should send their name and address to her at the Northeast Station, Concord, Nebr., 68728, by Dec. 1.

Yearlings Take Over

WAYNE STATE'S 19-0 whitewashing of visiting Northwestern of Iowa Saturday gave coach Del Stoltenberg a good chance to see a lot of players in action, including three yearlings who are proving themselves in almost every contest. Clockwise from bottom left, Kevin Myers (32) intercepts his second of three Northwestern aeriels; wingback Mark Johnson (40) zips around right end for a good gain, and the Cats' leading ground gainer, Bob Barry (25) flies over a mountain of Northwestern players while junior guard Jay Ritchie helps to open a hole. The second win for Wayne also gave defensive coach Ralph Barclay something to be happy about as the head man cracks a Mona Lisa smile through his curling handle bar mustache. Photos by Bob Bartlett.

Anything Goes Saturday; Here Comes Peru State

When Wayne State and Peru State collide Saturday afternoon on the Wayne gridiron, spectators can expect anything to happen, because that's standard in the old rivalry.

Nothing of great consequence in the wide world of football is likely to occur since both teams come in with 2-6 records, both with victories last week. However, the outcome will mean something in the Nebraska College Conference.

Peru is 1-1 after a 28-24 win over Chadron and a 56-26 loss to Kearney. Wayne is 0-1 with a 34-29 loss to Chadron, and after Peru's Wayne will meet Kearney in the Nov. 20th finale. Chadron has finished its NCC campaign at 1-2, including a 26-14 loss to Kearney.

Summed up, this means Wayne could finish anywhere from a championship tie to fourth.

But regardless of conference outcome, the Wayne-Peru clash, starting at 4:30 with a Parents Day crowd in Memorial Stadium will be "a smashing affair if tradition holds.

Wayne players and coaches, including head coach Del Stoltenberg, a Peru grad, always have rated Peru one of the hardest hitting teams they play — no matter what the result.

Statistically, there's not much bragging material on either side. Wayne's total offense averages 187 yards, Peru's 286. Wildcat defense has given up a 263 average while Peru yielded 341. Wayne has scored 97 points to 158. Peru offense produced 125 points, but opponents tallied 219.

A key factor probably will be Wayne's ability to repeat the defense which last Saturday blanked Northwestern College, 19-0.

Wildcat defenders did two things furiously. The line put stifling pressure on two Red Raider passers while the secondary claimed six interceptions. That number equaled the previous season total.

Defensive back Ray Wagner came up with the first and last interceptions. The first, on Northwestern's third play, set up an early Wayne touchdown four plays later. Kirk Gardner ran that one 17 yards.

Wagner's second interception was a spectacular. With only seconds left, Northwestern tried a fourth straight pass. Wagner speared it and raced 65 yards to a touchdown. It was his first in three years on the Wayne State defense. Fellow West Pointer

Kevin Mahlberg kicked the point.

Freshman Kevin Myers intercepted two Raider aeriels in the third quarter. After the second one, Wayne marched 72 yards to a touchdown, by Gardner from three yards. A two-point running conversion attempt failed, as a passing conversion had fizzled on the first TD.

In that 72 yard drive, freshman wingback Mark Johnson ran 31 yards, longest Wildcat rush of the year.

L-C Showdown Is Cancelled

The Lewis and Clark Conference this year will skip its annual showdown between the division winners for the league title.

Walthill, which finished first in the East division, has accepted a berth in the Class C-2 football playoffs and will not be represented in the loop battle. Normally, the second-place team in a division would play for the title, but a conference bylaw states that if either division winner can not make the playoffs, then it will be cancelled.

The Bluejays, who finished the season with an 8-1 record and 6-0 in the conference, would have faced West division winner Osmond.

The Jays will take on St. Edward (8-0) at 1:30 p.m. at Wayne State's Memorial Stadium in the first round of the state playoffs.

November's waterfowl special includes stories on Sandhills duck hunting in "the good old days," spring migration, goose restoration projects, controversy surrounding waterfowl regulation. See NEBRASKAland, page 9

Laurel, Wakefield to Clash

Two area girls volleyball teams, Laurel and Wakefield, will battle tonight (Thursday) for the right to represent their district in the state tournament. Both clubs advanced to the 8 p.m. finals after getting past their first two opponents Monday and Tuesday nights in play at Randolph.

Second-seeded Wakefield had little trouble downing Wynot Monday and whipping Crofton the next night. No scores were available because the coaching staff failed to call in results.

For Laurel coach Dwight Iversen's team, the Bears had to stake a pair of 16-14 sets against See LAUREL, page 9

Norfolk Lady Wins $25 Prize

Lori Lienemann of RR1, Norfolk, won the 7th weekly Wayne Herald Football Contest.

Lori was correct on 18 of 20 picks, missing only Bloomfield over Laurel and Army over Air Force. The Tie-Breaker rule was used once again to determine the winner, with Lori being the only one of the four picking Wayne State over Northwestern Iowa. The other three were Lanny BarHer, Bob Houtek and Ken Gansbom all of Wayne, each recorded a score of 18 correct picks.

Ten contestants had 17 picks, eleven had 16, and 22 entrants had 15 to make this the closest and highest scored contest to date.

Lori was awarded a $25.00 gift certificate to be used as cash at one of the following sponsors:

MONDAY NIGHT'S three-game victory over North Bend was filled with a lot of anxious moments for Wayne coach Mavis Dalton as her volleyball team jumped to quick leads but failed to hang on. Right, junior Kelly Frevert, right bats back a hard hit by a North Bend player in first-set action at Norfolk High's auditorium.

Athletes of the Week

Rarely does a sophomore gain praise from his head coach after losing a ball game. But Winside's Mitch Pfeiffer proved himself to be more mature than the label sophomore might indicate to a team made mostly of veterans.

Friday night Pfeiffer established himself as a prime candidate for all-conference honors and a solid runner in the record books by gaining 155 yards in the Wildcats' losing effort to Osmond, 27-8.

Pfeiffer, who scored Winside's only TD on an eight-yard blast up the middle, also erased the old record of yards gained in a single season by racking up a total of 850 yards, surpassing the old mark of nearly 750.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Pfeiffer of Winside will be one player Peck will be counting on next season to lead Winside's traditional ground attack.

The main reason the sophomore was able to break the school record can be attributed to the fact that Winside had to rely on the old single-wing formation to churn out its yards after both varsity quarterbacks were out of the final game of the season due to injuries.

As a result, Mitch handled the ball a record 43 times to keep his club in the running for the West division title of the Lewis and Clark Conference for most of the game.

It wasn't until the final period that Osmond broke the Cats' defense for the security point(s) to halt Winside's hopes.

Scrappy JVs Fall to USD

Wayne State's junior varsity footballers put up a scrappy battle against the University of South Dakota JV, but lost, 6-3, Monday afternoon on the Wayne field.

USD pushed over its lone score late in the second quarter when Brian Barnes finished a drive of about 50 yards with a one-yard run.

The second half belonged to the young Wildcats, who came out with a hard-charging defense and repeatedly stopped every Coyote effort. Wayne defense pounced on a fumble to stop the one USD challenge into Wildcat territory.

That turnover put the Cats about 30 yards from the goal line, but they had to settle for a 27-yard field goal by Joe Winside.

Devils Aiming for 1st Win over W-P

For the fourth time this season Wayne High's volleyball team will be going against a tough Wisner-Pilger. But this time the scene has changed from a home-court advantage to the site of the Class-B district playoffs at Norfolk High.

Wayne, which had a tough time defeating North Bend Central in first round of districts Monday night, will need to play as a team more so than ever, commented coach Mavis Dalton after her girls won their 11th game in 16 starts.

Wisner again will be the team to beat after the Galors proved themselves during the West started out in strong fashion, taking control early but running into control problems midway through the first set Monday. North Bend tied the match at eight-all and stayed close before the locals pulled the first set out, 15-12.

That 18-minute session was soon followed by another long bout when Wayne jumped off to a 7-1 lead by lost momentum and the set, 16-14.

The Blue Devils got back to their game-winning play in the third period, taking a 10-2 lead before they put the contest away, 15-3.

Senior Stephanie Dorsey was the point leader with 10 followed by Peg Pinkelman with nine and Kelly Frevert with eight.

WS Harriers Go to Kearney

Wayne State cross country runners will compete in the Central States Intercollegiate Conference meet Saturday at Kearney — and it might as well be the NAIA national meet.

Wayne coach LeRoy Simpson considers Kansas State Pittsburg a strong prospect to win the NAIA nationals, and at least two other CSC teams are likely to be among the top 10 or so.

Fort Hays State and Emporia State, as well as Pittsburg, often finish high, giving the CSC high status nationally.

Last Saturday Northwestern College defeated Wayne, 28-31, in a dual here. The visitors place 1,2,4, to make an unbeatable edge. For Wayne, Don Rinehart finished third with a 27:21 time for five miles. Bob Schleicher pulled in fifth, Jerry Sanders sixth.

Sanders arrived only minutes before the run, after a drive from Kansas City, so was not up to par. His normal time over the Wayne course would probably have won the race.

Allen Bows To Newcastle In District VB

Newcastle Tuesday night shut out Allen's hopes of climbing the ladder to Class D district volleyball action at Pender.

The Red Raiders grabbed a pair of sets from coach Steve McManigal's Eagles, 15-8 and 16-14 to end Allen's season with a 6-6 record.

"We forgot our slogan of bump, set and spike," McManigal pointed out. He added that he was disappointed in the game. See ALLEN, page 9.

Wayne Gals Get 2 More

Two more victories went into the Wayne State volleyball record Tuesday at LeMars, Ia. The Wildkittens defeated Briar Cliff, 15-9, 15-6, and Westmar, 15-7, 15-12.

That lifted their season to 21-8 going into the Nebraska State Tournament today (Thursday) through Saturday at Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln. Coach Berniece Fulton expressed one concern after the wins at LeMars: "The girls took it easy, and relaxed we will have to work on getting up for the state tournament. And we're going to work on it."

Kearney State, two-time defending champion, is expected to get No. 1 seeding, and Wayne probably will rate No. 2, based on its record, Mrs. Fulton said.

When is a funeral well conducted? We would say that when those in attendance are not conscious that it is being conducted at all. When the details of direction are unnoticed, when the program moves quietly and smoothly.

We try always to make our own presence as inconspicuous as possible.

ONLY THREE weeks until men's city recreation basketball gets underway. That's the latest word from the man in charge of the sport, Hank Overin.

A league basketball for those persons who like to run a lot starts Monday, Nov. 22, at 7 p.m. at the city auditorium; B league ball for those who prefer a little slower pace opens Wednesday of that week, also at 7.

The 7 p.m. starting times are for newcomers to the sport and veterans who haven't been contacted by Hank. Otherwise, veterans should meet at 8:30.

As in past years, league play is open to all men in town or rural Wayne who are 18 years or older. Sorry, no college students unless they are graduates of Wayne or surrounding high schools.

Hank asks that if there are any players under 25 who want to play recreation ball, to attend the A league meeting first. He doesn't want to overcrowd the B league.

As it stands now, there will be six teams in both leagues with each team scheduled to play 10 games. The 16 week schedule also includes playoffs for all league clubs. Action should end about the middle of March.

Hank adds that there won't be any cost for local players, just $10 for persons living outside of Wayne. During the last recreation board meeting, members decided to drop the $5 fee for local players, he said.

FINAL WORD on a complaint filed by Allen High football coach Cliff Jorgensen against Walthill was scheduled to be released Wednesday of this week following an executive meeting of the Lewis and Clark Conference.

Jorgensen filed a complaint that Walthill failed to field a team following Allen's lone TD of the night.

If, by a slim chance, conference leaders rule in favor of Allen, Walthill may not only lose the game but also its bid to the Class C2 state playoffs which start Friday at Wayne State's Memorial Field.

Cliff's comments: I hope they (Walthill) lose.

ENDED THE prep football season on a winning note, picking four of the five games correctly. However, overall the record stands at a poor 70 per cent.

Last Friday four of the five area teams fell to their opponents: Winside to Osmond, Allen to Walthill, Wakefield to Emerson Hubbard and Wayne to Hartington Cedar Catholic. The only upset was Bloomfield's win over Laurel. For the year my record stands at 29 right, 14 wrong.

Hope to improve that mark when basketball season rolls around the first week of December. Preliminary reports from around the area point out that again Laurel will be in the thick of action for a berth in the state playoffs.

Head man Joel Packs always seems to come up with the material to make his club a contender not only in the North east Nebraska Activities Conference but also in Northeast Nebraska where his teams have earned the reputation as a hard-charging, fast-breaking club. Maybe this season Laurel will break through the jinx of falling in regional action, the final step to state.

Thought for Today
 By Brian McBride

"The weakest among us has a gift, however seemingly trivial, which is peculiar to him and which, worthily used, will be a gift also to his race."
 Ruskin

This concept should be in the back of everyone's mind. If life is to be bearable, we must have self-respect... we must have a measure of esteem for our ability to accomplish something worthwhile.
 There are times in every life when we wonder if it is all worthwhile. We seem to be ineffective, unable to do the things we need to do. Ruskin tells us that we all have a special gift which no one else has. And, if we use this gift properly, it will benefit the entire human race. Every one is important, if he wants to be.
 The fine reputation we enjoy is the result of our sincere desire to be helpful.

State Is Leading Nation in New Transfer Program

Nebraska is the first state in the nation to begin implementing an Electronic Funds Transfer System which someday may eliminate the need for writing checks.

The new EFTS program, explained John Nigh of First National Bank in Wayne, got its start in Omaha where several banks are working with the Hinky Dinky food store chain to allow persons to withdraw money from their bank accounts through the store to pay for groceries.

Nigh told members of Wayne Kiwanis Club Monday that the electronic transfer system is hooked up to one of three Omaha banks which by computer automatically tells the store manager if a customer has enough money to purchase groceries. The money then is given to the customer so that he may pay for his purchase in cash.

Promoters of the EFTS program are hoping to begin handling Social Security checks as early as December in Omaha. The SS system is designed so that payments will be made by computer and credited to the account. This will eliminate the need for a person to deliver his SS checks in person.

Nigh pointed out that the huge number of checks which are handled each day by bank employees necessitates the need for such an electronic program. In addition, the system also helps protect the businessman who is plagued by bad checks.

During Monday's meeting, members learned that on Wednesday, Nov. 10, they will begin the club's annual popcorn sale.

The big question mark is Wakefield. The past two seasons the Trojans started out with six straight wins, but fell apart as the year progressed. Will that same problem plague head coach Joe Coble?

Hope to find out the answer to that question and many more about the five teams when I begin the annual preview stories on basketball. Not to be forgotten are the stories about wrestling at Wayne, Wakefield and Winside, along with girls basketball-at-all five schools.

The reason for Allen's defeat after last week's victory over Class A South Sioux City was the lack of aggressiveness, he said. "We hung back more and played defense."

Down 14-8 in the second set, Allen came back to tie the match on the serving of Sue Lanser, who finished with six points, and substitute Pam Brownell, who had four.

Deputies Report Three Mishaps

David Krusemark of Wayne was treated for broken teeth and cuts and bruises following an accident Friday night at 7:25 p.m.

Krusemark was northbound on a county road one mile west and about one and one-third south of Wayne when his pickup went off the west edge of the road, through a ditch, traveling about 70 feet before reaching the south edge of a creek. The truck hurled 35 feet across the creek and struck the north bank, sustaining heavy damage.

Krusemark was released from Providence Medical Center Saturday afternoon.

A vehicle driven by Roger Daniels of Wayne and belonging to Donald Daniels was a total loss Oct. 28 when the driver applied the brakes to make a left turn on a county road, and lost control, resulting in the vehicle rolling over onto its top.

The accident occurred at 9:15 a.m. three miles south and one west of Wayne.

Daniels was not injured. Saturday at 10:30 p.m. a car driven by Richard McCormick struck a 350-pound calf on a county road about one and three-fourths miles northwest of Winside. The vehicle sustained more than $250 in damages.

'Freedom Singer' Continues as Soloist

A voice from the 60's singing for freedom might be one way to describe Peter Yarrow, who headlines a concert at Wayne State College tonight (Thursday).

Yarrow was a member of Peter, Paul and Mary — three voices "speaking for freedom" in the 1960's.

The group is remembered for such songs as "Blowin' in the Wind" and "Motherless Child."

Yarrow's "talking" type music dates back to his days as a soloist at Cornell University. He returned to solo performing after the breakup of the group and in addition is now producer for Mary MacGregor.

Also appearing at tonight's performance is Timberline, a group catering to a wide variety of tastes including bluegrass, ragtime, and rock.

Timberline has been billed with acts including the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, Earl Scrugg's Revue, Pure Prairie League, and Barefoot Jerry.

Band members are Bill Howland, piano; Chuck Salsstrom, bass; Craig Link, drummer; and Jim Salsstrom, lead vocalist, banjo and guitar.

The concert begins at 8 p.m. at Rice Auditorium on the WSC campus. Tickets are available at the door for $5.

Interior Official Takes Time for Visit

Back for a family visit, former Wayne resident John Kyl, assistant secretary of interior for congressional relations, took time out Tuesday to visit his alma mater and speak to Wayne State College students.

It was the first time in 20 years Kyl had set foot on campus, though he had visited family and friends four years ago. During an afternoon question session, Kyl covered topics from new employment possibilities in Alaska to his feeling on politicians' honesty.

Specifically concerned with Indian affairs, the secretary explained that 20 years ago the Interior Department's policy was to abolish reservations and make the Indian part of society. Since 1970, he said, this policy has changed to one of "self-determination."

The government now places more emphasis on federal funding for economic development, also encouragement of Indian-propelled programs backed by government monies, rather than federal direction of Indian programs, Kyl said.

Neil Wood was eliminated in a close four-man contest for the Allen school board. With three members elected, here's what the voters decided: Richard Olsen, 326; Wood, 324; Verlan Hingsl, 338, and Martin Blohm, 366.

He became grocery department manager for the Wayne Gibson's store when it opened in 1972. He was subsequently promoted to group manager and has been assistant manager since 1974.

Soden's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Doreld Soden of Wayne. His wife, the former Lee Carlson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Carlson of Laurel.

The Sodens have four children: Kari, Kevin, Kirk and Brian.

But the self-determination policy does have its problems, including managerial mixups between the government and Indians, Kyl said, adding that policy must be flexible and general to adjust to individual tribes.

He noted that within tribes a conflict between modernist and traditionalist thinking hampers self-determination. Until the Indian decides his way of life, relationships will continue less than desirable, Kyl said. The Indian wants the best of both worlds, but Kyl said he thinks this is not feasible.

In other matters related to interior, Kyl explained the department's vast concern with federal lands: about 771 million acres, one-third of the nation's territory, owned by the United States and managed by several agencies dealing with forests, parks, wildlife, mining.

Kyl said the terminology concerning federal lands is confusing. "Most Americans think national forests are national parks — they're not." Wilderness is a legal term, defined as a large amount of wild land which man must leave as it is if he enters it, and power machines are not permitted.

Lumber companies, in Kyl's opinion, are doing the best job in such areas as timber management and soil preservation.

Asked why are Pacific Islands under U.S. trust assigned to the Interior Department Kyl replied, "Because they're resources." The islands were not put under Defense or State Department control to avoid military or foreign policy implications. He added that the islands are becoming independent, with less U.S. management.

Another question was asked about job opportunities in the national parks, especially Alaska. Kyl replied that developments in Alaska will open phy leading 2,421 to 753. Dixon County voters went 2,194 for Murphy; 791 for Butler. Dakota County's tally board showed Murphy with 3,274 votes compared with 1,369 for the challenger.

In Dixon County an eleventh hour decision was made to re-print ballots in order to avoid a challenge to the election results. Butler had said he wanted to have the election declared illegal because Secretary of State Allen Beerman had instructed the Dixon County clerk not to rotate the names of nonpolitical candidates appearing on the county's ballots.

Beerman said Friday night before the election that state law requires rotation of names on nonpolitical ballots only if both candidates had been nominated in the primary election.

Butler did not run in the primary election, but had his name placed on the general election ballot by petition after another Wayne candidate, Gil Fournier, dropped out of the race.

Beerman said Butler had contacted his office and was informed about the state law governing rotation of candidates' names, and that he had previously informed Dixon County clerk Ester Blatman that it would not be necessary to rotate the names of Murphy and Butler.

Ballots were rotated when printed in Wayne and Dakota Counties and Dixon County officials made the decision to re-print the ballots with names rotated in order to avoid a possible challenge to the election.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY of the interior John Kyl, former Wayne resident, took time Tuesday to address students at Wayne State College, his alma mater. It was the first WSC visit for the former six-term Iowa congressman in 20 years.

many jobs, especially after land allotments are completed under the Alaska Indian Claims Act.

Another question came from Val Peterson, former Nebraska governor, asking Kyl's opinion about the degree of honesty of politicians. Kyl said that generally he thinks, despite egg trips, sex scandals and other temptations, "most of them are a little step above others."

As a former congressman, he said he thinks representatives should continue to face reelection every two years, and they should not hold office too long.

Kyl declared that members of Congress are agents of the people, the boss — and if the people see something wrong they should change it. If people lose faith in government, they are losing faith in themselves, which in turn leads to a pessimistic society.

Kyl concluded by recalling past teachers during his Wayne State days — he graduated in 1940 — and noted that there were "great people at this college."

"I never had one moment in which I regretted attending an undergraduate school here," Kyl said, noting his close contact with instructors and quality of education.

ward. Former council Keith Mosley was also unopposed, replacing Ted Bane who did not seek reelection in the third ward.

Duane Tappe defeated Dale Anderson by a narrow 138-134 margin for the Wakefield first ward city council seat. Derwin Hartman received 151 Dixon County votes plus another 39 Wayne County votes to defeat Gerald Boatman for the second ward seat. Boatman received 80 votes in the two districts according to figures released election night.

Committee knocks maintenance efforts

CAPITOL NEWS
LINCOLN — Some members of a legislative subcommittee say state government's efforts to maintain buildings that taxpayers bought and paid for haven't been very good.

"Frankly, it's lousy," says State Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island.

Omaha Sen. John Savage said the legislative subcommittee's visits to various buildings show that better maintenance is performed by a private institution.

The reason, he said, is simple. Private business has to maintain buildings because replacements must come out of profits and it is cheaper to maintain over a period of years than to keep building.

"We're $19 million behind in deferred maintenance" at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln alone, Savage said.

The two senators are members of a subcommittee charged with the task of coming up with some sort of policy for maintaining buildings. That policy could be introduced in the 1977 Unicameral as a law.

Ray W. Coffey, UN-L assistant business manager, said the $19-million worth of work excludes farm and living structures, such as dormitories.

He said compared with other universities, UN-L has been under-maintained since 1971. It was at that point that money was channeled more and more toward students, salaries, fuel oil and other needs, some of them critical.

Under the current budget, UN-L has $894,803 allocated for building maintenance and $332,475 for special jobs.

Coffey said the campus has a maintenance lag of immediate emergencies of up to four weeks. In reality, he said "We're operating more on a 12-week basis" now.

He also said there is one more problem besides limited money that the university is faced with — a lack of trained workers.

Another NU official said jobs with the university's maintenance crew are viewed as a training ground for private industry.

Department Upholds Death Law
 The Nebraska Justice Department says there is no way that the state's death penalty law can be applied without sufficient reason.

The state respectfully contends that the Nebraska capital punishment system does not and will not result in the arbitrary and capricious imposition of the death penalty," the department said in written briefs filed with the Nebraska Supreme Court.

The briefs, to be followed soon with oral arguments before the supreme court, seek affirmation of death sentences imposed on Erwin Charles Simants of Sutherland and John Rust of Omaha.

Simants was convicted of murdering six members of the Henry Kellie family of Sutherland. Rust was convicted of shooting a civilian, Michael Kellogg of Omaha, during a gun battle with police following a robbery.

Nebraska's death penalty law was enacted in 1973. There was the year after the U.S. Supreme Court threw out an unconstitutional all state death penalty laws.

Other states put new laws on the books and this past summer the nation's high court reviewed a few of them.

The primary conclusion the court reached was that as such a death sentence did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment.

Nebraska's law was not among those reviewed in Washington.

But Paul Snyder, assistant Nebraska attorney general, told the State Supreme Court the U.S. Supreme Court has already reviewed laws similar to the one in Nebraska books, including one law from Florida.

"The Nebraska procedures for the imposition of the death penalty are so nearly identical to those in Florida that a similar ruling on the Nebraska procedures should result," the attorney said.

Defense attorneys for Rust and Simants contend the Nebraska law does not meet the standards for such laws the U.S. Supreme Court established in its 1972 decision.

Besides answering general questions about the law's validity, the separate briefs also addressed questions related to the two men.

Included was a rejection by the judge of defense attempts to question Simants' former wife.

The defense wanted Mary Ellen Olson to tell the Lincoln County District Court judge and jury that Simants was insane. The prosecution objected on the grounds that the two had not been together since 1967 and the woman no longer knew Simants.

The defense also contended the jury failed to properly weigh expert testimony on sanity.

Snyder, after citing the list of psychiatrists who testified, said the jury properly rejected an insanity defense.

In the Rust case, attorneys appealed questions on Douglas County District Court rejections of motions to disqualify the jury, grant a trial postponement or grant a change in venue.

Snyder said the record showed there was little foundation for any of those motions and asked that their rejections be affirmed.

Airlines Competing
 It seems that two Denver-based airlines are seeking permission from the Nebraska Public Service Commission to serve communities in the state.

The commission now has before it the two formal applications and they ultimately seek permission to serve the same communities.

The first application was from Pioneer Airways. A protest was filed after the commission determined that it has jurisdiction over the airline for in-state flights and the issue is "on appeal" on the Nebraska Supreme Court.

Star Airways has now filed as second application and commission attorneys say it looks as if it is headed for the same place the first application is now at. The city of Kearney has filed a protest against the application.

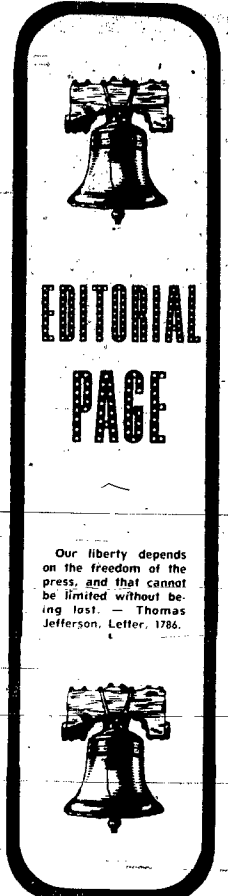

One Star application calls for service to McCook, Kearney, Hastings and Columbus. Another calls for providing service to Sidney, Alliance and Chaparral.

Both flights would offer connecting service to Denver.

Pioneer offered essentially the same things and the commission determined it had control over routes and rates within Nebraska but not the Denver connection.

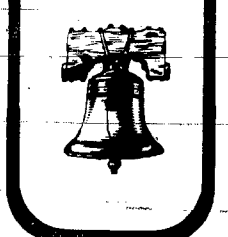

Opponents of the applications contend the commission has no jurisdiction at all.

The applications from both airlines result from decisions by Frontier Airlines to cut back service in Nebraska

Tune up for winter

The Nebraska Highway Safety Program is conducting a continuous program in an effort to reduce highway accidents and fatalities.

Winter weather will soon add to the normal driving hazards on Nebraska highways. The safety programs offers these tips on what to do to prepare for winter driving.

With fuel costs at all-time highs, and with the need for continued conservation, the Nebraska Highway Safety Program reminds motorists that pre-winter tune-ups are more important than ever.

"A pre-winter tune-up not only contributes to safety and convenience, but has the added advantage of improving fuel economy," the Nebraska Highway Safety Program says. Along with the usual tune-up which should include an inspection of the electrical system and the emission control devices, the Nebraska Highway Safety Program notes that it was even more important to check those equipment items that directly affect winter driving safety, such as tires, tire chains, brakes, windshield wipers and washers and lights.

The following are some recommendations as part of the motorists' "do-it-yourself" checklist:

Tires with good treads are important all year around, but especially when pavements are covered with snow and ice. Snow tires are particularly helpful for pulling through loosely packed snow, but they offer no advantage in stopping on icy pavements.

—That old standby, reinforced tire chains, provide the most help for pulling through deep snow or driving on ice-covered pavement. Carry them in your trunk, and be prepared to use them for severe snow and ice conditions.

—Replace streaking windshield wiper blades and be sure washers have adequate anti-freeze.

—Clean your lights more frequently during the winter months to remove snow, slush and dirt. This should include headlights, tail lights, and directional signals.

—A brake that grabs or pulls to one side is a serious matter at any time, and particularly when pavements are slippery. If you feel your car pulling to one side on a dry pavement, you're overdue for an inspection by a competent mechanic.

—Check your car, then double-check your driving habits," the Nebraska Highway Safety Program concludes. "Safe winter driving requires a little extra time, a little slower speed, a little extra care and a little more common sense."

OBSERVATIONS

OSHA plan looks expensive

If you found yourself too far out on a limb, you'd probably crawl back to the safety of the trunk. In the same position, however, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration would undoubtedly recommend building a new tree under the outer end of the limb.

That's the impression you're left with after reviewing OSHA's proposed noise control regulations.

At issue is how best to protect workers' hearing from noisy machinery. Employers want to use a hearing conservation program built around ear plugs or special ear muffs (like hi-fi headphones), at a cost of $42 per worker per year. OSHA wants to redesign or cover up noisy machinery, at a cost of $88 billion, or $267,000 per worker benefitted. And that's just OSHA's estimate of the cost, which was reached by "revising" the work of its own consultants until the figure looked low enough. Industry experts believe true costs would be many times higher.

OSHA's first study, done in 1974, put the cost of machinery redesign at $3.6 billion, to achieve noise levels no higher than 85 dBA (about as noisy as a busy urban street corner).

The same consulting firm that conducted the first study for OSHA did another, in 1975. The economic impact figures were still embarrassing, so the study was resubmitted to the consultant for "revision." After "revision," the cost figure was $18.5 billion for an 85 dBA limit, or $10.5 billion for an easier-to-meet, 90 dBA limit. And, interestingly enough, much less was said about the effect on inflation and unemployment.

OSHA then reasoned that since it had proclaimed a 90 dBA limit in 1971, it could be assumed industry had already absorbed the $10.5 billion cost of that. Therefore, moving to an 85 dBA limit would cost only an extra $8 billion ($18.5 billion minus $10.5 billion). Thus, the $10.5 billion this excessive program is already costing industry was conveniently dropped out of the total cost figure.

In other words, it doesn't matter to OSHA what costs are in the real world, as long as they can be made to look low enough on paper.

This exercise in statistical manipulation would be disreputable enough even if the supporting data were trustworthy. But evidently they are not.

Through cross-examination during OSHA's hearings on proposed regulations, we learned that OSHA's consultant used old data on some of the industrial sites it claimed to have visited in the course of its studies, and made off-the-cuff estimates of the noise level in those plants it did visit. That is, noise levels were estimated without the benefit of scientific measuring instruments — a notoriously unreliable procedure, because the human ear is easy to fool.

In another instance, this consultant selected an arbitrary figure as the "cost" of noise-proofing machinery that cannot — at the present state of technology — be made to operate quietly. In fact, their witness admitted that such figures were often based on "intuition."

Worse yet, one National Chamber consultant who reviewed the OSHA study found numerous and significant computation errors, including fifth grade arithmetic mistakes.

Under the circumstances, it's easy to see why OSHA has refused to provide documentation for all of its claims, even after the Chamber filed a formal Freedom of Information Act request for it.

Noise control is important. Continued exposure to high levels of noise can cause permanent loss of hearing in susceptible individuals. But how on earth can an expenditure of $267,000 per worker be justified, when adequate protection is available for $42?

OSHA is up a tree trying to fabricate a convincing answer to that one. — Richard Lester, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Dear Uncle Sam: now it's your turn

This column was first place for best column humorous subject in the National Newspaper Association Better News Paper Contest.

By FRANK FARRARA
 San Rafael (Calif.)
 Independent Journal

Simon Snow, a middle-aged, middle income taxpayer, was sitting in his study, smoking cigarettes and gnashing his teeth as he filled out his 1974 federal income tax form.

"The heck with this," he said. "I'm sick of answering questions I'll ask about time the government started answering some questions."

Snow set aside his tax forms, took out his typewriter, grabbed a few sheets of typing paper and wrote

"Dear Uncle Sam:

"Here is your income tax justification sheet for 1974.

"I have spent more than $10 of my money during 1974, please fill out the attached forms and send me by April 15 (see attached).

Form 1346 This form must be filled out if the government operated at a deficit during the past fiscal year. (Please round off to the nearest million). If the deficit was greater than $25 million you must use form 1346 A and itemize deficits. (If the total of lines 14, 15 and 16 is greater than the national debt, please explain.)

Form 1347 You may claim taxes from me if:

A. You constructed a new highway in my neighborhood (up to $100).

B. You turned back enemy forces within 100 miles of my home (up to $500).

C. You increased federal funding for schools in my neighborhood (up to $200).

D. You protected me from the SLA ($250).

E. You helped improve the crop in my vegetable garden ($15), or F. Abandoned the Selective Service System (up to $500).

(Note — If the cost of living rose during the year, subtract the percentage of increase from the above amounts.)

"You may not claim taxes from me to pay for roads that lead to howlers, household servants for generals, junkets for congressmen, studies on the effect of billboard posters on farm animals or military invasions.

"You should calculate your tax justification claim from the tax table on page four and enter that amount on line 17, page six. If the dollar has been devaluated, you must reduce your claim by the percentage of the devaluation (Enter that amount on line 18, page six, and subtract it from line 17).

"Instructions for schedule B — (form 1346) If you submit a claim for taxes to cover the expenses of the Watergate investigations, hearings and trials, you must submit a notarized statement listing the sentences given, times served and fines paid by defendants. (The above claim is nullified if I have been investigated by the FBI during the year.)

"Failure to file your tax justification forms by April 15 will result in a penalty of 5 to 24 per cent."

Snow sent off his letter to Uncle Sam and about a week later Internal Revenue Service agents arrived at his home and took away his typewriter.

Farmers take a look at labor

As long as there are family farms in this country and agriculture operates on the enterprise system, the interests and viewpoints of the U.S. farmer will not be compatible with those of union labor leaders and members.

Political candidates in Nebraska seeking both union and farm votes frequently tell their audiences that there is no conflict between labor union people and farm and ranch people, urging them to vote for them and they can win things together as one big happy family.

Farm people do not "hate" union people or vice versa. There are few farmers who would wish to deny workers their right to organize and join labor unions any more than laboring people would wish to break-up the family farms. But farm people in general support the 14-b section of the Taft-Hartley Act which permits states (such as Nebraska) to maintain their "right-to-work" laws.

In other words, a workman's right to join a union or not join a union should be his choice and not a condition of employment just as a farmer's right to farm is not conditional on his membership in a farm organization.

Farm and ranch people are basically friendly and understanding, but they are not "naive." They know that they have to show a profit on their operations and pay their bills in order to survive and keep on producing food for the nation and much of the world.

These things they understand fully:

—When auto workers or workers for farm equipment manufacturers go on strike with exorbitant wage and fringe benefit demands, they know that the price of farm trucks, pickups, tractors, combines, etc. will go up to pay for the loss of productivity.

—When Teamster Union leaders shut down vegetable canneries and frozen food processing plants just when California growers are ready to deliver their season's harvest, and keep them shut down until much of the crop is lost, farmers throughout the nation get a vision of what could be in store for them in the future.

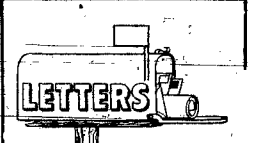

—When the AFL-CIO bankrolls and promotes nationwide secondary boycotts of California table grapes and lettuce to force growers to sign contracts which amount to compulsory unionization of farm workers, farm and labor relations get sticky. After nearly 10 years of field picketing, which included imported non-farm agitators, shed burnings, tire slashings, beatings and shooting incidents, the "non-violent" organizing efforts, there is a clear picture of how unions operate.

—Farmers know that the meat price "freeze" of 1973 can be traced back to union demands for price controls on food, that the refusal of dockworkers to load grain shipments to Russia was not a patriotic effort to protect U.S. consumers but was a device to gain more shipping subsidies for the Maritime Union, and that the costly government "grain shipping moratorium" came about because of pressure from union leaders such as George Meany.

Hard working, self-reliant farmers and their record of productivity, which is the marvel of this nation and the world, are the direct opposite to the featherbedding, make-work, slow-down, give-us-more-far-less attitudes prevalent in most "closed shop" unions. Consumers who like to eat well should hope that contrast continues in the production end of the food industry.

Relocate ambulance

Wayne
 Halloween night there was a bad accident on the corner of Seventh and Lincoln Streets. An eighth-grade boy on his bicycle was hit by a pickup.

The Wayne police department was called by my wife. Whoever took the call didn't ask who was calling. Two police cars got to the accident right away. But the police officers didn't try to direct traffic and didn't have any blankets to cover the boy who was possibly in shock. They had to be asked for a flash light to have traffic stopped.

Then the Rev. Robert Haas' son was sent to get the injured boy's folks, instead of one of the policemen doing it.

After the boy's dad got there he had to wait for traffic to go by before he could cross the street. The boy's dad had come three blocks and the Haas boy had come three blocks to get there, and the ambulance still wasn't there.

It seems to me that the ambulance could be housed downtown in the heated garage that was once meant for the ambulance. This could save some time instead of driving up to the hospital to get the ambulance. There isn't a good street to take the ambulance to start with.

It seems that if we house the ambulance at the hospital we could at least have a through street to get there on.

This may save someone's life. And this is what it's all about — to have an ambulance to start with is to save lives. So why not use it where it is easy to get to.

Allen Junior Class Prime for 'Going Up'

Play practice continues the next three weeks in preparation for the junior class play, "Curtain Going Up," at Allen High School, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 19 and 20.
The three-act comedy by Gregory Johnston focuses on a group of high school students who run into all sorts of problems trying to produce their school play about the Civil War. Some of the problems they encounter are stolen playbooks on the first day of rehearsal, high school romances, a grumpy janitor and the lead actor who gets a "swollen head" because he is the main character. Gary Brown plays the role of Jocko Gunthrie who is the main character.
The play finally gets off the ground with the help of a professional actor from Broadway, Kyle Roberts, played by LeAnn Wood.
Director Connie Roberts promises lots of laughs when the characters go into the audience as a part of the play.
Tickets for the 8 p.m. performances are available at the high school or from members of the junior class at 50 cents for students and $1.25 for adults.
Other students and the roles they play: Colleen Roeder and Sue Lansen as Miss Irene Burgess, Letta Keil as Lorry Fuller, Cheryl Koch as Nancy Leve, Riddle, June Stapleton as Miss Moran, Wendy Tibbetts as Miss Hunter, Terri Jones as Elsie Hunter, Barb French as Sylvia Moore, Kaye Linafelter as Janet Young.
Shell Prescott as Joan White, Mark Hanson as Mr. Carter, Don Bock as Andy Fullbright, Rayme Dowling as Mill Sanders, Steve Johnson as Buck O'Hara, Tod Ellis as Tony Peterson and Vince Kavanaugh as Mr. Leverage.
Helping direct the play are Marci Smith and Cathy Sachau.

MRS. RANDY HOLDORF

Bucks Prize Climbs Up To Hefty $575
Mrs. Randy Holdorf of rural Wayne is the latest winner in the weekly Birthday Bucks promotion.
Mrs. Holdorf, who was in Les' Steakhouse when the winning date was announced at 8:15 p.m., won herself $25 in Birthday Bucks which can be spent in any participating Wayne business.
The $25 consolation award went to Mrs. Holdorf because her birthday was the closest to the winning date drawn at random by businessman Darrell Doeschler, of Doeschler's Appliance. Her date is July 7, 1953; the winning date was June 25, 1953.
Had her date matched, Mrs. Holdorf would have won the grand prize worth $550. As a result of no one claiming the top prize the amount jumps $25 to $575 for the drawing tonight (Thursday).
No registration or purchases is necessary to be a winner. However, a shopper must be present in a participating store.

County Fields Yield 'Half a Crop'

About half a crop is the way one Wayne County farmer described the 1976 harvest and reports of dryland corn yields pretty much confirm that appraisal.

Dryland fields have generally been producing about 30 to 40 bushels an acre, compared with 70 to 80 bushels in a "good" year, many farmers interviewed said. Areas which received a little extra rainfall during the summer have produced in the 55 to 65 bushel range.

The county's hay crop also suffered from lack of moisture and most farmers reported they put up more silage than usual this year to provide needed roughage.

sen predicted a much greater demand for food in 1978.

Alden Johnson feeds high moisture corn and said his crop this year, with a moisture content of about 18 per cent, was almost too dry for that purpose. The Wakefield-area farmer said he likes high moisture corn because it gives a little better feed conversion, can be harvested earlier, and saves energy costs consumed in drying.

He added that now there is market for high-moisture corn, in contrast to previous years when corn had to be dried before marketing.

The hay crop was poor, Johnson said, and he has bought some hay and will probably buy more.

Pasture was also very short he said. "After the early growth was gone the pasture didn't come back. I chopped some waterways and fed a lot of silage earlier than I usually would."

Soybeans averaged about 18 bushel an acre on Johnson's farm, ranging from 16 to 35 bushels. He added that quality was poorer than usual — beans were smaller, some were shriveled and hadn't ripened yet.

Dryland corn on the Ken Everingham farm ranged in yield from 10 to 50 bushels an acre, averaging around 30 bushels, he calculated. Most of the crop will be sold for grain, part as high moisture corn — 25 to 28 per cent moisture content — and part as dry corn — 13 to 14 per cent moisture content. Part of the crop can be sold as low moisture grain without drying.

Irrigated corn on the Everingham farm yielded at 140 bushels.

Another Wakefield area farm owner, Kevin Kai, said yields from 55 to 65 bushels are common in his neighborhood. "We might have gotten a couple of extra storms that missed other parts of the county," he observed.

Kai combined and dried his crop. "It works out better that way when you're feeding hogs," he said.

Yields for corn were surprisingly good considering the dry year, Kai said, adding that yields for milo were excellent — around 90 bushels an acre, probably a bit above average.

Winside area farmer Paul Dangberg will continue feeding high moisture corn as he has the past four seasons, although, with a moisture content of 18 to 19 per cent, the crop is pretty dry for high moisture corn which he usually puts in the bin at 20 to 22 per cent moisture content.

"Feeding high moisture corn saves drying costs and I like it better for feeding cattle," Dangberg said. "This year it seems like most corn is dry enough that I won't have to crack, roll or grind it."

Dangberg said he thinks wet corn provides better feed conversion. "A couple of years ago I ran out of it and had to feed dry corn. The cattle didn't seem to like it," he added.

Dangberg's highest corn yields have been about 38 bushels with some fields cut for silage production. See YIELD, page 5

Tests Indicate Windbreaks Reduce Drought Damage

Research by the Department of Forestry conducted at the University of Nebraska field laboratory near Mead indicates that a portion of Nebraska crop losses this year could have been prevented by the use of tree windbreaks.

The Soil Conservation Service (SCS) estimates that over 5.6 million acres of crop land have been damaged by wind erosion in the 10-state Great Plains Region. Of this, over 310,000 acres are in Nebraska. ASCS estimates of crop damage to feed grains in Nebraska has exceeded $309 million so far this year. These damage estimates are largely due to drought damage to dryland corn.

In 1966, six windbreak systems were established by professor Walter Bagley of the Department of Forestry. After 10 years these systems offer the opportunity to study the effects of shelter on crop production and plant processes. This past summer, under the direction of Drs. Jim Brandt and Ralph Neild, the effects of shelter on dryland corn production were investigated. While the study is not complete, initial findings indicate plants grown in a protected area produced more grain than those exposed to hot, dry southwest winds. Yields of only 10 bushels per acre are expected on the exposed plots while 50-60 bushels per acre are expected on the protected plots. In addition, growth conditions were more favorable under protection. On July 1, protected plots showed a 49 per cent increase in fresh weight over those in an exposed plot. On July 7 protected plants were 25 per cent taller than those without protection. On the average, plants under protection tasseled up to a week earlier than exposed plants. This increase in growth rate places critical periods of corn development such as pollination, seed set and grain filling at times in the growing season when adequate moisture is more likely to be present.

The most common criticism of windbreaks is the decrease in production adjacent to the windbreak called the sapping effect. There is no way to avoid all sapping effects since the trees in the windbreak need water to grow. These effects can be minimized by the careful selection of tree species for use in the windbreak. Trees with extensive shallow root systems such as cottonwood should be avoided in favor of trees with deep root systems. These deep rooted species such as eastern red cedar offer less competition to row crops for limited water and nutrient supplies.

A recent survey indicates that many of the windbreaks planted in previous years are being removed. Many agricultural scientists are concerned that the removal of these windbreaks will lead to a drastic increase in long term wind erosion and crop losses. If interested in establishing or renovating a windbreak, contact your county agent, SCS agent or district forester for more information.

Animal Health

WAYNE NISSEN of Wayne, right, recently learned proper cattle implanting procedures from Dr. Albert Wesley, feedlot veterinary consultant for the Nutrena Feeds, at a three-day feedlot animal health school sponsored by the company at Fullerton. Nissen was taught the latest disease prevention practices by Dr. Wesley and other animal health specialists so that he would be prepared to help area livestock feeders protect their investments in cattle. Subjects covered during the school were general animal health maintenance programs, receiving programs, implanting, bunk feed management, and buller and pregnant heifer management.

Deadline Near For Protests To Beef Order

November 15 has been announced by the U.S. Department of Agriculture as the final day of filing comments on the proposed Beef Research and Information Order.

The proposed order would establish a Beef Board composed of not more than 68 member producers with the power to collect assessments on cattle sales and use the funds for beef research and information activities.

The USDA said evidence gathered in six recent nationwide hearings may be commented on in briefs filed with the department's hearing clerk at room 112A, Livestock Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

The order will become effective only if at least 50 per cent of the nation's cattle producers who pre-register to vote do so and if two-thirds of them vote in favor of the order.

Local offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service will conduct the referendum, probably by late spring 1977, according to the USDA. Producers owning cattle during a designated 12-month period prior to the referendum would be eligible to vote.

Three Million Trees Available

This year more than three million trees and shrubs are available for distribution to Nebraska through the Clarke-McNary program.

Administered through the state forestry office, the program began Monday.

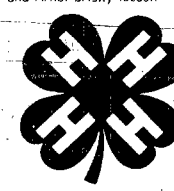

This number shows an increase of several hundred thousand trees and shrubs from last year, according to Neal Jennings, district extension forester and assistant state forester at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Trees may be requested through county extension agents or through the Soil Conservation Service.

Seeding trees will cost $14.50 per hundred delivered and $12.50 per hundred picked up at the Nebraska State Forest, at Halsey.

Evergreen varieties available are red cedar, Rocky Mountain juniper, Scotch pine, Ponderosa and Austrian pine, Colorado blue spruce, Black Hill spruce, jack pine, eastern white pine and southwestern white pine.

Tall broadleaf tree varieties listed are Siberian hackberry, honey locust, cottonwood, silver maple, black walnut, green ash and shubra red oak.

Shrubs and small trees include lilac, honey suckle, American plum, autumn olive, Russian olive, cotoneaster, chokecherry, Manking cherry, Ginnala maple, skunkbush sumac, winterberry and Arnot bristly locust.

The Do Boes 4-H Club visited the House of Creations near Bancroft Saturday afternoon with 13 members and mothers attending.

The afternoon was spent watching Marian Hoeffel demonstrate how to make different crafts. Mrs. Leroy Koch and Mrs. Harlin Anderson served refreshments.

Mulching Strawberries
You should mulch your strawberries in the next week or so if you expect fruit next year. Extremes and fluctuations in winter temperatures may kill fruit buds. Injure roots and cause crown damage of strawberry plants. Strawberry plants should be mulched after the plants have been exposed to frosts and growth has ceased.

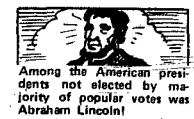

Straw-free-of-weed seeds makes a good mulch and is generally available. Baled straw should be thoroughly torn apart and scattered to a depth of three inches forming a blanket across the strawberry patch.

The main benefit of this mulch is to aid in winter protection. Next spring this mulch can provide protection against late spring frosts, improve fruit quality, improve picking conditions, control weeds and improve plant vigor. Next spring this winter mulch should be removed from around the plants as they begin growth. Remove the mulch gradually, exposing leaves before they turn yellow and eventually expose the crown.

Evergreens in a Windbreak
Evergreen trees in a windbreak can hold back as much as 90 per cent of the winter wind and at least two-thirds of the wind chill. Foresters have found that a good three-row evergreen windbreak of 25-foot trees can reduce the velocity of a 10 mph wind by 80 per cent at a 75-foot distance on the protected side of the windbreak.

A good windbreak system can lessen much of the discomfort of the Nebraska winter. A large part of a good windbreak system should be made up of evergreen species — red cedar and Austrian Ponderosa or Scotch pine. Three-fourths of all trees planted for windbreak purposes in Nebraska are evergreens.

Another consideration in establishing a windbreak is that broadleaf trees shed their leaves in winter while evergreens do not. If you are considering what type of trees you want in a good windbreak, consider the fact that once established, evergreens live far longer than most broadleaf trees. Potential loss of broadleaf trees by herbicide sprays also is a consideration.

Yield
Ducting as little as six or seven bushels of grain an acre he estimated.

Dangberg now has cattle grazing on stalks. He plans to complete chiseling if the weather holds.

"I want to get the hard pan broke so the ground will absorb any moisture we get," he said.

Dangberg said he will be feeding about as many cattle as usual. He described his hay crop as "terrible" and said he cut a little more silage this year than normal.

Deis Greunke said yields for his crop, stored in the ear, look good.

The hay crop was short, the dairy farmer said, and he will probably have to buy hay this year. He also plans to graze his dairy herd on stalks, and put up extra silage.

Greunke said he will probably cull his herd closer this year, marketing the poorer producers. "I imagine that's the case with most dairymen," Greunke said, "because of high feed costs and lower milk prices."

Harold Wittler said his first-year hay land did pretty good this year but some of the older fields was about one-third normal. Some fields were cut only once. Pasture was about half of normal.

Wittler said he and most neighbors are cutting more silage than normal because of the poor hay crop. Some farmers who don't normally cut silage were forced to this year, he added.

Still, Wittler said, there was a surprising amount of grain in the fields for as dry as the season was. "I guess the average grain yield would be about 20 bushels and considering the lack of rainfall, that's a nice surprise."

Milt Owens of Carroll said he, too, is putting up more silage this year than normal because of hay fields yielding about half their normal tonnage.

Owens said his corn yielded from 35 to 40 bushels an acre. He is drying corn harvested for grain, with moisture content at about 17 per cent.

Vernon Hokamp began irrigating in 1969 and had three center-pivot systems in operation this year. Yields ranged from 110 to 150 bushels an acre.

Hokamp said he generally watches the top foot of soil to determine when to irrigate, but "the last few years it's been so hot and dry I've had to pump continuously."

Off-season irrigation has helped, he said, explaining that he irrigated last fall in order to build up subsoil moisture supply.

Much of Hokamp's crop was dried for marketing but he is storing some high-moisture grain for feeding.

"High moisture corn is simpler to handle and the cattle seem to like it better."

Moisture content on Hokamp's irrigated fields have ranged from 14.5 per cent to 23 per cent, depending on the seed number.

Conditions in Wayne County are common throughout the state according to the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Dryland corn throughout the state was severely damaged by drought, the University Extension Service reported, with most dryland fields harvested for silage.

Getting information together first can shorten the time it takes to complete an application for social security disability payments, according to Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk.

People who face long-term disability and think they may be eligible for social security disability payments can shorten the time it takes to complete their application by getting some information together first.

Social security pays monthly disability benefits to eligible disabled workers under 65 and their families and, under certain circumstances, to disabled widows, disabled dependent widows, disabled divorced wives, and people who became disabled before 22.

You can get information about applying for disability benefits by calling, writing, or visiting any social security office. You should apply without delay. If you think you may be eligible for payments, if you can't get to a social security office because you're hospitalized or housebound, a social security representative will get in touch with you. And it's a good idea to have as much of the following information as possible at hand: your social security number, when you last worked (month, day, year), when you became sick or injured (month, day, year), what kind of illness or injury you have, the date you recovered or returned to work if you are no longer disabled, the names and addresses of doctors, hospitals, institutions, or clinics that treated you for your disability and the dates you were treated.

Your service serial number and VA claim number if you're a veteran and received medical care in a service or VA hospital, what kinds of jobs you worked at most in the 10 years before you became disabled, the names, social security numbers, and birth dates of your children and wife or husband, your workers' compensation number if you've filed a claim for workers' compensation.

The social security number is very important. If you're a disabled worker, the payments you and your family could get would be based on work and earnings credited to your names and social security on your record at social security headquarters in Baltimore.

Unmarried people who were disabled before 22 and continue to be disabled can get payments based on the social security record of a parent — or in certain cases a grandparents. Disabled widows, disabled dependent widows, and disabled surviving divorced wives, who were married at least 20 years can get payments, as early as age 50, based on the record of the deceased husband or wife.

The dates you last worked and when you became sick or injured will help determine your eligibility for disability payments. Most workers need credit for at least five years of work covered by social security in the 10-year period before they became disabled. If you're disabled before age 31, the requirement ranges down, depending on your age, to as little as 1 1/2 years.

There are different work requirements for blind people. People disabled since childhood and disabled widows, dependent widows, and divorced wives need no social security work credit on their own.

The date you became sick or injured will also help determine when your payments start. Under the law, payments to disabled workers and their families or to disabled widows or widowers generally cannot start until the 6th full month of disability. People disabled since childhood may start getting benefits when a parent starts getting social security retirement or disability benefits, or dies after working long enough under social security.

People disabled for over six months before they apply may get payments for those months. Both back payments are limited to the 12 months before the date of your application. That's why working people facing a long-term disability should apply for payments without delay.

People who were disabled but have recovered may be eligible for payments.

The medical information about doctors, hospitals, and treatment will help get medical evidence needed for your claim. Under social security, people are considered disabled if they have a physical or mental impairment which prevents them from doing any substantial gainful work, and which is expected to last (or has lasted) for at least 12 months, or which is expected to result in death.

Medical evidence of disability is usually a report from your doctor, hospital, clinic, or institution where you've been treated. You're responsible for paying for the report, if there's a charge. But if additional medical examinations or tests are required, the government will pay for them.

Medical evidence is reviewed by doctors and other disability experts in the State Disability Determinations Section, and they — not your doctor — decide whether or not you're disabled under the social security law.

If your disability prevents you from doing your usual work, the information about the kinds of work you've done may be considered along with your age and education in deciding whether you can do any other type of work. Workers who can't do their regular work but can do other substantial gainful work are generally not considered disabled under social security. Vocational factors are not considered in deciding whether or not a widow or widower is disabled, however.

The birth dates of your family help determine their eligibility for payments. The wife of a disabled worker with children in her care can get payments until the youngest is 18. The children can get payments until they're 18 — or 22 if they're full-time students in school and remain unmarried.

If you're a disabled worker under 62 and entitled to both social security disability benefits and workers' compensation, the total monthly payments to you and your family may not exceed 80 per cent of your average monthly earnings before you became disabled.

Even if you can't get all of this information together, you shouldn't wait to apply for social security disability benefits if you think you may be eligible. People at any social security office will be glad to suggest ways for you to get the information needed.

People who have recovered from a disability that lasted 12 months or more may be eligible for some back benefits. But you have only 12 months to apply after you recover. After that, no social security benefits are payable.

If a worker dies after a long period of severe disability but before applying for social security disability benefits, the family has three months after the death to apply for back payments.

I'm Going to Vote for . . .

NO ONE GETS to peek over the shoulder of 11-year-old Randy Risor as the fifth grade student at Winside elementary school casts his vote for President of the United States. Randy was one of 98 students in grades two through six who voted Monday. According to second grade teacher Mrs. Marilyn Rathwisch, who promoted the election, students were eager to vote and didn't take long to make their choice. The result: President Ford 70, Jimmie Carter 28. Randy, who is the son of Mrs. Darlene Risor of Carroll, wouldn't tell who he wanted to be president. He just smiled and gave his ballot to Norma Brockmoller, who put his ballot into the ballot box. Helping Mrs. Brockmoller keep track of students who registered to vote was Carol James, resource teacher for Educational Service Unit No. One.
