SPEAKING OF PEOPLE

Specialist Predicts No Relief In Increased Price of Coffee

Consumers can expect further price increases for coffee in the coming year, according to Kathy Prochaska, extension family economics and management specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"We all know that the price of a can of coffee has skyrocketed during the past year," she says, "but we can expect no relief in prices for at least another two years."

Ms. Prochaska says the reasons for the price increases are varied. Brazil, the largest coffee producing nation in the world, experienced two years of frost which lowered output.

In addition, a widespread destructive frost in July of 1975 killed a large proportion of Brazil's trees. Since coffee trees take a minimum of three years to begin producing and from 15 to 20 years to come into full production, the country's supply of coffee may be limited for some time to come.

Coffee prices probably would have risen even more rapidly, notes Prochaska, except that it takes time for the producer shortage to work through the channels down to the retailer and consumer.

In addition, the coffee "shortage" occurred at a time when world demand was at a high, thereby intensifying the price rise.

Mike Turner, extension economist (marketing) for UNL, offers some other reasons for the rising cost of coffee. Other coffee producing nations have not been willing or able to make up the deficits in world markets, he points out.

In Colombia, for example, where much superior coffee is produced, production has remained high.

Nonetheless, the price rise for Colombian beans this past year has been sensational. On June 30, 1975, the New York price was 72 cents a pound. One year later, on June 30, 1976, the quote was $1.17 per pound—about $1.75 per pound increase.

Turner suggests that coffee-producing nations in Africa, Asia and South America are "taking a page from the OPEC oil nation performance" by conspiring among themselves to restrict supply, influence and set prices for coffee in world market.

The pricing policies of many of these governments and quasi-governmental marketing agencies tend to restrict the incentives to producers to respond to higher prices in the world markets, he adds.

Turner warns that the result of sudden price rises may be to cause declines in coffee consumption. He relates the situation to what happened in the sugar industry when prices rose dramatically a few years ago. "Consumer reaction to high sugar prices was not to buy," he notes, "and food manufacturers switched to a greater reliance on synthetic sweeteners."

Since then, he adds, sugar prices have come down, but food manufacturers have not resumed their previous levels of sugar purchases. The net effect of high prices, he says, was the substitution of other products for sugar, which only ended up hurting producers.

Statistics appear to back up Turner's claim. U.S. imports have remained relatively constant over the past 15 years, but with increasing prices, per capita consumption has gradually fallen from 11.6 pounds (retail weight) in 1950 to about nine pounds in 1975.

Couples Invited to View First 'In Touch' Series

The first in a series of four one-half hour television shows, entitled "In Touch," will be shown at 8:30 tonight (Thursday) on ETV and repeated Sunday evening at 11:30.

Developed by Dr. Ron Daly, extension family life specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, and his wife, Donna, the program is designed to show couples ways they can enrich their relationships.

Kathy Klahn, area home extension agent, says area couples are encouraged to watch the program. "If you ever have trouble understanding what your partner means, or if you've ever felt like the doormat in a relationship, the program can be especially helpful," she says.

Working with three other couples, Daly and his wife will illustrate some of the common stumbling blocks which can prevent a relationship from growing. They will be aided by film clips of couples who participated in Home Extension Club workshops Daly conducted in counties across the state.

The "In Touch" series was developed under the supervision of the University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service. The Nebraska Council of Home Extension Clubs are aiding in the implementation of the program at the county level.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Lühr of Wayne and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lipp of Laurel.

The Rev. Kenneth Edmonds of Wayne officiated at the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Richard Lühr of Osmond was soloist. Organist was Mrs. Fred Webber and violinist was Michael Palumbo, both of Wayne.

Candles were lighted by Michelle Joslin of Laurel and Cynthia Filiter of Wayne. Jennifer Lühr of Laurel was flower girl.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white style gown of ivory polyorganza over angel mist taffeta, styled with a V-neckline edged in sculptured Venise lace. Venise lace appliques and seed pearls accented the waist-length bib, which was outlined with a scalloped band of lace. Her full, bishop sleeves were caught at the wrist by a wide, lace-trimmed cuff. The hemline of the A-line skirt, which swept into a chapel-length train, was edged with scalloped Venise lace.

The bride wore an opal pendant necklace and earrings, a gift from the bridegroom.

Her waist-length veil of ivory nylon illusion was sprinkled with embroidered flowers and was held in place by a shell, cap accented with seed pearls. She carried a cascade of two large white callieya orchids accented with lavender-tinted stephanotis and purple statice with ivy garlands and ivory and lavender bridal streamers.

Their satin floor-length dresses were in deep purple with a wide bertha collar. Their short veils were attached to braided crowns of purple satin and they carried a single white callieya orchid with baby's breath and long purple and lavender streamers.

Cats Stomp Midland by 113-85 Rout

Wayne State's Wildcats evidently had authority when they went to Fremont Tuesday. They stomped Midland, 113-85, after taking their only loss of the season, to Missouri Western Saturday at St. Joseph.

Following that setback, coach Jim Seward said his Wildcats were anything but beaten in spirit. No matter that the scoreboard read 93-86 for Missouri Western the Wildcats "really thought they won," Seward said.

Fremont was wasted no time making sure they won. They zoomed to a 57-41 half and all but doubled that production while Seward used every player.

Such depth has been typical in every game, lending stature to an early-season Seward command that the Wildcats enjoyed a strong bench.

Another measure of team balance in this fact: five players are averaging in double figures, topped by Wayne Robinson's 20. Still another measure is a team's winning margin. Wayne currently owns an average margin of 11.2 points. Their record: 5-1.

The Wildcats will have a two-week rest now before returning to their own Christmas Tournament, Dec. 28-30.

Randolph Pins Wayne Matmen By Slim Score

Wayne High grapplers opened their season dual Saturday at Randolph by claiming four decisions and two forfeits, but the hosts came up with the big pins to stick the Blue Devils, 29-24.

The match had been scheduled for Tuesday night of last week, but was postponed because of bad weather.

Wayne racked up four wins in the lower weights to carry coach Don Koenig's crew to a hefty 15-6 lead near midway.

through the match. Rick Luff, Kirk Echtenkamp and Ward Wacker each won their matches by decisions and Terry Hamilton took the 105-pound title by default when Randolph failed to produce a wrestler.

Senior Bill Marr kept the Devils in the running with a 12-5 handcutting of Ryan Whitehorn in the 135-pound match during what Koenig called one of Marr's best showings.

Heavyweight Randy Davie wrapped up the Devil's scoring by taking the class on a Randolph forfeit.

"What we needed (to win the dual) is some guys who got pinned to stay off their backs," Koenig said.

Laurel Breaks Away in Second Half Bears Treat Fans to First Home Victory

By BOB BARTLETT
 After posting two wins on the road, Laurel High opened their 1976-77 season on home Tuesday night by treating fans to a 20-17 victory over Wayne.

The Bears built a 33-27 half-time lead and never had trouble the remainder of the game as the Joel Parks-coached Bears gradually drifted away from the area rivals with a fast-breaking offense which took advantage of Laurel's domination on the boards.

Leading the Bears' scoring was 6-4 junior Mike Martin who ripped the nets for 15 of his 43 points in the last two frames. Martin, who had trouble getting away from the outstretched hands of Wayne's big man, 6-5 senior Tim Koll, found the open shots when the Bears offense trapped Koll on the outside, leaving Martin free under the boards.

Right behind Martin was 5-9 senior Cleve Stolpe who popped the nets for 14 points, including four key baskets from the coffin corner to help get his team untracked in the second period.

Both clubs played even ball the first period as neither established a healthy lead. Laurel had a two-point edge three-quarters before the first period before Wayne started moving the ball effectively.

Breaking the ice for the Blue Devils was six-foot Jon Levy who sank the go-ahead basket with 1:11 remaining for a 12-11 Devil lead. Seconds later he got the ball again on a Laurel turnover for a 14-11 score to end the period.

Wayne missed three scoring opportunities at the start of the second period to increase its lead. Meanwhile the Bears whittled at the lead with the help of Stolpe's corner shots to grab the lead midway through the stanza and forge a four-point lead at the half.

The 1-3 Devils of coach Bill Sharpe switched from a zone to man-to-man defense late in the third frame, hoping to cool the Bears' breaking offense. The change temporarily slowed Laurel, but the offense cranked up again when a pressing defense forced Wayne to cough up the ball for easy layups.

For the night Wayne had 28 giveaways compared to 13 for the home team. Both teams were about even on shooting from the floor: Laurel 47 per cent, Wayne 44.

The major difference in the percentage was the number of shots each team put into the air. Laurel made 31 of 65 attempts while Wayne was 21 to 49.

Again the extra number of shots was due to Laurel's work on the boards. The Bears cleared 31 carroms and Wayne had 24. Koll made his presence felt for both clubs as he hauled down a total of 17. Tim Harrington led Laurel with nine.

For the fourth straight game, Koll was the scoring leader for Wayne, sinking nine baskets and four free throws for 22 points. The senior got most of his points on his physical moves towards the basket, nearly touching the rim on most of his one-handed shots.

The night started out with an exciting junior varsity match as Laurel came from behind the notch its 44th straight victory by one point, 42-41.

Behind the scoring of Al Nissen and John Keating with 10 points each, Wayne took a 20-17 halftime lead and built a 32-24 margin at the end of three periods.

Foul trouble, however, cancelled Wayne's hopes when three key players, Jeff Zeiss, Dave Schwartz and Nissen exited the game late in the final period with their fifth personals.

Ron Gadenken and Dale White then managed to tally most of the 10 points each scored for the night to lift Laurel to victory in the closing seconds.

Prep Picks: Up, Down Bears Up Again?

By BOB BARTLETT
 Best way for coach Joel Parks to describe Laurel's play during the first two games of the prep case season is to compare the team's play to a roller coaster ride.

In the opening game against Norfolk Catholic, the Bears were cold from the field, yet hot on the boards. Against Hartington Cedar Catholic last Friday, Laurel blitzed the nets for 58 per cent, but had trouble pulling down the caroms.

"If we can just get the two together, then we should be a pretty good club," Parks pointed out after his last victory.

Again this year the Bears look to be a solid favorite in the Northeast Nebraska Activities Conference to win the loop title as well as one of the top Class C clubs, making a bid for the district and regional titles en route to the state meet in Lincoln.

That's the view a lot of Parks' colleagues this season, and perhaps, that's how the head Laurel man wants to look at it. But for now, parks will settle for one game at a time.

Last week's selections were eight right, six wrong, for a season record of 10 right and nine wrong.

This week's predictions (winners in boldface):
 Boys: Friday — Allen at Homer, Laureate at Emerson, Hubbard, Wakefield at Lyons, Wayne at Wisner-Pilger, Winside at Hartington High, Tuesday — Laurel at Stanton, Coleridge at Wakefield, Pender at Allen.
 Girls: Tonight (Thursday) — Laurel at Wayne, Stanton at Wakefield, Tuesday — Wayne at Stanton, Tuesday — Battle Creek at Winside.

Westmar Steals Scoring Show Against Wildkittens

The second half told the story of the Wayne State women's basketball loss to Westmar Tuesday. Tied 31 all at half, Westmar stole the scoring board then and Wayne couldn't seem to cash in on any points.

The first few minutes of the second half resembled first half action, a good offensive game, the lead tugging back-and-forth. But then the story switched. Eleven minutes remaining and Westmar led by nine, adding to the margin regularly.

Six Average 20 Points in A Loop Play

Scoring 20 points or better was the trend Monday night for six players during the first night of A league city recreation basketball at the city auditorium.

Rick Mitchell pumped in 26 points to lead Team 2 in a losing effort against Team 5 in overtime, 77-74. Leading scorer for the winners was Mark Flier with 25, including two of his team's six points in extra play.

Mike Lidie ripped the nets for 24 points in a 60-57 decision by Team 4 over Team 3. And Dave Sotro and Steve Hix hit 21 and 20 points respectively to guide Team 1 past Team 6, 76-68. Earle Overin dropped in 20 points for the losers.

One minute left and Westmar was up by 21, the score 93-72. Wayne player, Connie Kunzmann of Evely, Ia., dunked a final two-point shot in the last 18 seconds, closing the gap only to the 93-74 final number.

Fouls were also a problem for Wayne in the second half. Lori Mittelstadt of Hampton, Ia., fouled out and other Wayne State players came close to foul trouble. Westmar cashed in the points on several of Wayne's 11 second-half fouls, but Wayne missed the freethrows on eight Westmar errors.

Starting for the first time, Mittelstadt staged a fine performance collecting 12 points for the Wildkittens. Next on the list came Pat McKay of Knoxville, Ia., with 14; and a familiar name on the top-scoring list, Connie Kunzmann contributed 22.

Saturday the Wildkittens picked up a nice win over South Dakota State University in Brookings, S.D. The Wildkittens squeezed a 59-55 final, leading 40-30 at half.

Top scorer for Wayne was Connie Kunzmann with a fine performance collecting 12 points for the Wildkittens. Next on the list came Pat McKay of Knoxville, Ia., with 14; and a familiar name on the top-scoring list, Connie Kunzmann contributed 22.

The holidays bring two gameless weeks for the Wildkittens. Action begins again December 28 in Chadron State tournament action.

Homer Nips Allen Quint by 32 to 30

Making only 18 per cent of their shots, Allen High girls fell two points short in the rally against Homer Monday night, losing their first match in three starts, 32-30.

The big turning point for the host Knights was in the second period when Homer scored its biggest output of the night, 14 points compared to six for Allen for a 20-13 halftime cushion.

"We got the shots, but they just wouldn't go down," said a disappointed coach Steve Mc-Manigal. For the night, Allen attempted 67 shots from the field and made only 12. In the first half the Eagles were four for 34 for 10 per cent.

For the third consecutive contest, senior Lori Erwin again with the scoring leader, this time with 18 points. Susie Erwin was the rebounding leader garnering seven of the team's 30.

WS Grapplers Finish Fifth

Wayne State wrestlers won two championships and finished fifth in a tight race for team honors in the eight-team Northwest Missouri state tournament Saturday at Maryville.

Paul Sok, of Oakland, ran his season to 7-0 as he won the 134-pound title, and Dwight Lencemann, Winside, claimed the 177-pound crown. That put him at 6-1.

Chuck Brockman, Wayne, won his first two matches by falls, then lost in the finals by a fall, for second in the heavyweight class. He is 5-2.

Also placing for Wayne were Herb Harris, West Lafayette, Ind., fourth at 150 on a 2-1 overtime decision, and Kirk Hanson, Rutland, Ia., settled for fourth at 158.

Coach Marion Haayer described the 150 and 158 classes as unusually strong.

The University of South Dakota team championship on 67 1/2 points. Fort Hays State finished second at 56 1/2. The next three places went to Northeast Missouri, 49; Northwest Missouri, 47 1/2; Wayne State, 47. Farther back were Peru State, 26 1/2; Dana, 26, and Lincoln University 14 1/2.

A year ago Wayne finished sixth in the annual meet, scoring 22 1/2, less than half of this year's production.

The Wildcats will be idle until a Jan. 7 dual at South Dakota State. Their dual record is 1-2-1.

Backstop / Bob Bartlett

THAT FIRST loss always leaves a bitter taste in the mouths of most coaches. Including Wayne State basketball mentor Jim Seward.

Saturday night Seward's quint suffered its first setback of the season, 92-80, to Central State Intercollegiate Conference foe Missouri Southern.

Glancing back at Saturday night's title, Seward pointed out that his Wildcats played well enough to win, but Southern's slowdown tactics and work on the boards, 51 to 36, made the difference.

That first loss in five outings is something Jim doesn't want to dwell on. It was tough to lose in the Cats' first conference match, but it's no reason to be disappointed in his team's performance.

The coach particularly singled out the play of Mark Olson who came off the bench early in the game to lead Wayne with 20 big points. Southern went into the game owning a 3-0 conference mark and 4-4 overall. Is Southern better than Wayne? "They're a good team, but certainly not better than us," Seward quipped.

THE COACH dismissed thoughts by some that the Cats displayed the best brand of ball they possibly can this year against Doane last week, beating the Tigers, 98-80. Fact is he's still waiting for his club to give its best showing.

Seward feels that his year's club can go a lot further than last year's team which finished the season in good stading at 14-11. Two factors which he says can contribute to an outstanding season are leadership and a good start.

Instead of relying on two or three players to do the scoring, as last season, the head man has 12 players who provide the leadership both on and off the court. As far as good start goes, he can't complain about winning his first four games, including a couple of toughies on the road.

Although a little more height wouldn't hurt his club inside, Seward thinks "height is too much overdone" by coaches and sportswriters. What we need to improve upon is defense. We're giving up a lot of points partly because we shoot the ball a lot.

STEVE HIX, who's organizing a Wayne High varsity-alumni wrestling match, has extended the deadline for "veteran" Blue Devil grapplers to Friday to sign up for the meet. So far the response from WH grapplers has been somewhat disappointing, but Steve is optimistic more will show interest. If enough contact Hix to participate, he's hoping to have the meet later this month.

NEXT MONTH the annual City Association Handicap bowling tournament will be held at Melodee Lanes. The meet runs two days, Jan. 22 and 23.

All members participating in this tournament must be a member of the Wayne Bowling Association and the American Bowling Congress. The highest average as of Jan. 16, will be used. The handicap shall be 70 per cent of the difference between 100-200. Any member not having nine games in league play this season in the Wayne Association must use his highest average of last year in the Association, otherwise he must bowl scratch.

2 Area Matmen Win Weights at NB Tournament

Wrestlers from Winside and Wakefield each won their weight classes during the finals of the eight-team North Bend Tournament Saturday.

Kevin Cleveland of Winside pinned his opponent in the 126-pound class with a time of 1:59 and Dave Gustafson from Wakefield won the 155-pound class with a time of 1:59. Dave Verlie Miller of Winside a 7-4 decision to win the 167 division.

Altogether, Winside had six grapplers finish second. They were Rick Bowers (98), Tom Anderson (105), Brad Langenberg (145), Neil Wagner (155), Miller and heavyweight Bryan Svoboda.

In the team standings, North Bend finished on top with 185 points, followed by Winside with 176, Winside with 145 and Wakefield with 112 1/2. No results were available for Millford, Weeping Water, Bennington and Elkhorn.

Eagles' Slump Helps Newcastle In 52-39 Win

Just plain flat footed. That's how Allen coach Jim Kooz described his players Tuesday night after the Eagles dropped what the coach pointed out since have been 2 sizeable victory. Instead, host Newcastle prevailed, 52-39.

The coach pointed out that his team looked to be in a mental and physical slump after playing one of Allen's best games Friday night and coming away empty handed against Bancroft.

The Eagles were forced to shoot mostly from the outside, thanks to the effectiveness of Newcastle's zone defense. At the outset of the game, Allen appeared not to be bothered too much by the zone, jumping off to an 11-8 first period. Helping that cause was senior Denny Uhl's six points. Uhl and teammate Bart Gotch each had 13 points to lead Allen.

Newcastle turned the tables in the second and third periods outscoring the visitors, 26-14.

Newcastle's Mark Wiedenfeld ripped the nets for 24 points on turnaround jump shots from eight feet out to put his club into the lead to stay.

The night wasn't completely bleak for the 52 Eagles. In the preliminary contest the reserves got their first win in three years, nipping the hosts 28-26. Doug Koester led his teammates with eight points.

Athletes of the Week

Sharing this week's "Athlete of the Week" honors are basketball players from Wayne and Laurel High Schools.

Senior Tim Koll of Wayne garners part of the accolades for his back-to-back 26-point performances Friday and Saturday nights and senior Tim Harrington made a driving layup with nine seconds left to give Laurel a two-point win over Harfington Cedar Catholic.

Koll's second 26-point output was the turning point in the Blue Devils' first win of the season Saturday night against visiting Columbus Lakeview. The 6-5, 200-pound center used his height to advantage over the smaller Vikings for the inside shots to hit 12 of 22 attempts for 35 per cent.

Koll, who started the season with an eight-point average, has made the biggest change in his game on defense where, according to coach Bill Sharpe, he has improved "quite a bit."

Sharpe admitted that because of Koll's improvement both offensively and defensively, a lot of clubs will be focusing on him to stop Wayne.

Harrington, a lanky 6-2 senior, guided Joel Parks coached Bears to a narrow 42-39 verdict with his 14-point output, including the winning bucket.

Parents of the honored athletes are Mr. and Mrs. Don Koll of Wayne, and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Harrington of Laurel.

No awards were presented to female athletes this week because coaches failed to nominate any players.

Koll stuffed in 26 points and pulled down 16 rebounds Saturday night to lead Wayne to its first win of the season, 58-44, over visiting Columbus Lakeview.

Koll made 12 of 22 attempts from the field and added a pair of free throws for his best game overall this season. The night before Koll also tossed in 26 points against South Sioux City.

Senior Jon Lewis and Chris also had a good night from the floor. Ley led his club with good ball handling while he sank seven points. Ginn helped to garner Wayne's 41 rebounds and collect nine points.

As a team, the Devils shot 44 per cent of the field with the help of feeds to Koll inside for the quick points.

Some lucky shopper will walk away from the Chamber of Commerce office in Wayne tonight (Thursday) with Birthday Bucks coupons redeemable at businesses in Wayne taking part in the promotion. During the Christmas season, the Birthday Bucks consolation prize, for the shopper whose birth date comes closest to the date announced in participating stores at 8 p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 16 and 23, will be $100, rather than the regular $25 consolation prize. MRS. DARRELL MOORE

She Can Thank Her Children For Bucks Prize

Mrs. Darrell Moore of Wayne has her children to thank for her winning the $25 consolation award in last week's Birthday Bucks drawing. Mrs. Moore was content to stay home Thursday night until her youngsters decided that she better go Christmas shopping. As a result of her being present in a participating Wayne business when the lucky date was drawn and announced, she won herself $25 in Birthday Bucks, which can be spent just like cash in any participating store.

She was born on Feb. 22, 1945. Because her birthday was the closest to the winning date, she was the winner.

Had her birth date matched the date drawn by Neil Dinges, manager of McDonald's, she would have won $375 in Bucks.

Now that total goes to $400 for the drawing tonight (Thursday) at 8:15.

It's easy to be a winner. Just be in a participating store when the date is announced. No purchases or registration are necessary to be a winner. Mrs. Moore was at Gibson's Discount Center when the winning date was announced.

License Fees Are Going Up Next Season

Nebraska hunters, fishermen and trappers will have to dig a little deeper in their pockets next year to finance a new program designed to help wildlife, says the Game and Parks Commission.

Beginning Jan. 1, Nebraska residents will have to pay $7.50 for a fishing permit, $6.50 for a hunting permit and $7 for a trapping permit. In addition, those who hunt or trap will have to buy a $7.50-habitat stamp. Non-residents, too, will feel the bite. Their permits have also gone up.

Why the increase? Habitat for wildlife, or a lack of it, prompted the Game and Parks Commission to ask the 1974 legislature for an increase in license fees to fund a new program designed to provide more cover for wildlife.

The result was LB 861, the "Habitat Bill", designed to provide a yearly total of close to $2,500,000 for private land habitat development, acquisition of new wildlife lands, development of existing state-owned wildlife lands and easements for wetlands.

Who pays the bill? Sportsmen will. They reap the benefits from increased outdoor opportunities, they will have to pay the cost.

House

directors said moving the house and converting the property to a parking lot would have some benefit for downtown businessmen, but the main benefit would be additional parking for persons attending activities at the auditorium.

There is a real need for additional parking in the area, said William A. Groves, city assessor. "You should own a business across the street and try to keep your parking lot open for customers when there is something going on at the auditorium."

Councilman Vernon Russell made a motion that the city advertise for bids to sell the house to be removed from the property by June 1. The motion carried with Russell, Mosley, Carolyn Filter and Sam Hepburn overriding negative votes by Hansen and Vajoc.

Building

Osmond Trips Winside Gals

Winside's six-point lead after the first quarter against Osmond Tuesday night went down the drain when the hosts staged rallies in the second and final periods to overcome the visitors, 42-36.

Despite the output of senior Paula Hornmann with 23 points Winside couldn't get any major scoring help from other members to overcome Osmond's 20-17 lead at the half and one-point edge going into the fourth period.

State supreme court: county assessors have no authority to go to court

Capitol News
LINCOLN — County assessors have no authority to go to court if they disagree with a decision made by a county equalization board on property valuations.

That ruling has been handed down by the Nebraska Supreme Court in a case involving Douglas County assessor Frank Beemis.

It seems that Beemis decided that United Parcel Service had more property and should pay taxes accordingly. The original assessment was $30,815. Beemis added that to $236,735.

UPS appealed to the county equalization board and the board reduced the valuation to its original level. Beemis didn't like it and took the matter to court.

The Douglas County district court decided Beemis didn't have the legal standing to file any lawsuit and the equalization board action stood. Beemis appealed to the supreme court.

In figuring out whether Beemis should have the day in court, the supreme court had to look over all state laws on the subject of that office to find out just exactly what duties and powers go with it.

The supreme court finally concluded that the county assessor is more of an advisor than anything else and therefore does not have the authority to try to get around an equalization board decision by going to court.

The court, in another appeal, decided there is a definite difference between the rank and file employees and supervisors even though the State of Nebraska writes the paychecks for both.

Supervisors Separate
 The Nebraska Association of Public Employees wanted to represent both the rank and file and some supervisors. The union was especially interested in state park supervisors.

The supreme court admitted Nebraska law is silent, or nearly so, on where to draw the line on union membership.

But at the same time the court said the Union is fully aware of federal rules which do draw the line. There are no exceptions in state law to those federal rules and therefore the federal rules apply.

On that basis, the supreme court took a look at the consequences of not following the federal law. The court said "chaos would result" if a labor union was allowed to represent all pay check recipients.

"There would be no one left to negotiate in behalf of the state" with the union, the court said.

Also, the court said allowing supervisors and the people they supervise in the same union could be an invitation to union manipulation at both management and employee levels.

The supreme court also struck a blow for law enforcement officers.

It seems that one Barbara Swayze objected to a blood test that was to be used in deciding who was the mother of a newborn baby boy found at the Lodgepole State Wildlife Area in Kimball County.

The Cheyenne County district court found the woman guilty of assault with intent to murder, using the blood test results as evidence, and sentenced her to prison. She claimed violations of civil rights.

The court said the issue was whether illegal search and seizure provisions and constitutional prohibitions against self incrimination were violated.

Also, the court had to review the validity of Nebraska's Identifying Physical Characteristics Act as valid.

Failure to submit to a blood test could mean a contempt citation under the act.

The court concluded "The minute sample of blood which the defendant was required to supply for testing was physical evidence, not testimony or communications."

By that meant the blood test results were in the nature of evidence that was not necessarily incriminating to start with and therefore police had the right to require the test.

On illegal searches and seizures, the court said the law amply protected individual rights by requiring police to seek a warrant just as they must seek a search warrant from a court.

"We find no constitutional infirmities in the application of the act to the defendant," the court ruled.

Norden Dam Challenged
 Did the U.S. Reclamation Bureau fully investigate the impact of the proposed $160 million Norden Dam project scheduled for the Niobrara River?

That question is being considered in U.S. district court in Lincoln.

A group of about 400 landowners and others in the O'Neill and Springfield area say the bureau paid no attention to agricultural losses the dam would cause because of the land taken out of production.

So, they formed an organization known as the Save the Niobrara River Association and decided to go to court.

The formal challenge involves the environmental impact statement filed in the case. The association contends the statement is at best faulty and the attorney for the group described it as little more than "propaganda" that was sponged to Congress for the purpose of getting the project, and the money, rolling.

The association admitted the dam would increase agricultural production on some land, but not theirs and claimed losses of at least $10,000 each.

Many of those objecting depend on livestock rather than crops for their income.

The safety aspect of the dam itself has also been questioned. Some claim that once built there is a danger it would collapse because of the geological make-up of the area. The bureau claims there is no danger of a collapse.

Another concern is the nitrate level in underground water supplies that would increase by virtue of more crop production and more water being used.

One expert witness for the association said the environmental impact statement all but ignored the issue by simply saying the levels would increase.

OBSERVATIONS

Businessmen must decide

The associate director of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Bureau of Business Research last week proposed that Wayne businessmen join in a project under development in which the bureau would provide data and training necessary for businessmen to undertake a continuing analysis of market and trade areas.

We aren't prepared at this stage to either endorse or condemn the proposal. Businessmen should be cautious about either rejecting the idea out of hand, or jumping on the band wagon.

What is needed is a long hard look at the idea, its possible benefits, and the investment of time and money to make it work.

Dr. Ed Hauswald pointed out in presenting the idea that there is a considerable amount of data regarding markets available through the bureau which isn't being used to much advantage by businesses in Nebraska communities. Hauswald's proposal recognizes the considerable expertise demonstrated by local businessmen in that they are the ones who would apply the data supplied by the business bureau.

Successful businessmen undoubtedly have a pretty good idea of what trade and market areas they serve. If they didn't, they probably wouldn't be successful.

At the same time, there is always the danger of complacency — "that's the way we've always done it" attitude. A detailed analysis of trade and market areas might prove valuable in making marketing decisions, enabling businessmen to better serve their customers and to expand their retail base. If that is the case, the businesses, their customers, and the community in general would all benefit.

Hard figures as to cost have not yet been made available, but Hauswald indicated a grant will be sought to finance most expenses if enough support is demonstrated. If that is the case, cash outlay for the project would be minimal, he said, consisting mainly of a nominal fee for training classes. Under those conditions, the main investment would be time, an intangible, perhaps, but no unvaluable commodity for hard working business leaders.

People in business are the ones who must decide whether to accept or reject the proposal. Hopefully, a great deal of consideration will go into making that decision. — Jim Strayer.

'Tinkering' with markets has pitfalls

Those who would "tinker" with America's agricultural commodity exports and the policies under which they have been operating so successfully in recent years should be aware that they may endanger the benefits of all.

There are many examples of this "tinkering" and already some damage is evident. There should be no doubt in anyone's mind that the 1975 embargo of grain sales to Russia, even on a short-term basis, was ill-advised and totally unnecessary. The boycott by the dockworkers on loading those grain shipments to Russia which led to that embargo may have obtained higher shipping subsidies for the Maritime Unions, but it hurt U.S. farm prices and probably added to the number of unemployed.

The Japanese responded to the 1973 halt in soybean shipments to their country by investing in soybean production in Brazil and enabling that country to obtain a much higher percentage of the world soybean market. Despite all of this, U.S. agricultural exports have increased from $5.7 billion in 1970 to $22.8 billion worth for the year which ended Sept. 30. Never have U.S. farmers produced so much and their production has been so prodigious that there are surpluses of major proportions, and prices have been declining. Without interference, U.S. farm exports might have been considerably more.

The "tinkering" has extended over into the P.L. 480 program for food assistance as well as the cash market. Congress in 1975 amended the P.L. 480 act to require that in any fiscal year no more than 25 per cent of the food assistance provided under P.L. 480, Title I, go to countries with per capita gross national product (GNP) of more than $300. Title I of P.L. 480 permits government financing of export sales of U.S. farm products to developing countries with long-term, low interest credit.

Normally, the largest quantities of food under P.L. 480, Title I, go to Southern Asia — India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Sri Lanka. Crops in Asia this past year have generally been good and so the need for food assistance there is drastically reduced. Food import needs in several countries in North Africa and the Middle East are greater this year, but the U.S. is unable to meet these needs under the P.L. 480 program because these countries have per capita GNP in excess of $300.

Since the P.L. 480 program was established in 1954, the U.S. has shipped approximately 250 million tons of farm commodities, valued at $25 billion throughout the world. The act has been amended a number of times to meet changing times and conditions. The most recent amendments provide that up to 15 per cent of each loan level be forgiven if recipient countries undertake specific developmental projects. Under the Title II donations program, at least 1.3 million tons of food is donated each year.

Some of the major participants in the program's early days have gone on to become major dollar markets for U.S. agricultural products. Japan, Spain, and Korea are notable examples of nations which have made the change from aid recipient to cash customer. Japan bought more than $3 billion worth of U.S. farm products last year. Our greatest single cash customer for farm commodities.

As Congress considers new farm legislation in 1977, it hopefully will seek to retain those features of agricultural policy which have worked and worked well, keeping in mind that some of the failures can be attributed to artificial restraints and "tinkering" with farm production and marketing. — M. M. Van Kirk, Nebraska Farm Bureau.

WRITE A LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Good idea

Fairbury Journal-News editorial writer Don Shearon has forwarded a suggestion which bears some further consideration.

As many readers are probably aware, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Marching Band again this year was informed by the university that the institution didn't have the funds to send the band to a post-season bowl game.

As this is being written the band members are busy trying to raise the necessary $40,000 to attend the Astro-Blue Bonnet Bowl festival. Besides for raising the money is today (Thursday) as we go to press, the fate of the fund drive is unknown.

Shearon pointed out, "This sounds like a replay of a year ago when Nebraska was acutely embarrassed on the playing field of the Flasco — oops! sorry about that — The Fiesta Bowl, while the marching band captured the fancy of Arizonians and a vast TV Audience."

The writer's suggestion is this: "The university might avoid similar financial crises in the future years by taking a hard look at its list of freebies. Offering for sale a portion of home game season tickets now given away could plug a big hole in the band's bowl game travel deficit."

That certainly sounds like a feasible plan to us. Where Go Big Red football is concerned, there isn't any shortage of dollars. If the tickets are available, there will be plenty of buyers. Perhaps persons now receiving free tickets could be offered first chance at purchasing them in the future. If those on the freebie list decline, then the tickets could be offered to others for hard cash which would go into the band's bowl game coffers.

It certainly seems a shame that a university which can fill a stadium every game can't afford to send a splendid marching band along to post-season contests. — Jim Strayer.

'A little bit of him in all of us'

Dear Editor:

This is the season to count our blessings and be thankful for all the good things that come into our life. I would like to call attention to one of those blessings.

This blessing is in the form of a person, who has given the community of Wayne a real boost into the limelight because of his hard work and extreme dedication in building one of the finest instrumental music programs in the state and now the nation. The blessing I refer to is our band director Ron Dalton. Because of him, Wayne can boast of a fine instrumental music tradition in the past, the present and undoubtedly in the future.

You are probably saying to yourself, "Who are you to tell me this? After all we have spent a lot of money, and time, and supported our programs second to none, bought new uniforms, and instruments, paid for transportation, and a large number of other things, so why shouldn't we have a superior program? Anyone could have done it."

Could just anyone have done it? I feel competently qualified to say, "No." I have seen schools spend money for all those things and still have nothing because the man behind it all was nothing. In Wayne, the man behind it all is everything, and without him we have very little.

Sure, he inherited a good program, but he made it superior. You ask anyone associate with marching bands in the state which band is always superior, competitive, and breathtakingly perfect and they'll say Wayne. The Blue Devil marching band is second to none in its class. The stage band has germinated and grown under Mr. Dalton's leadership to also boast of superiors and first place trophies. The concert band has been the most consistently superior rated band in the history of the District Three Music Contest. All this and more under his direction.

Don't kid yourself by saying, "He's lucky," or "Anyone could have done it." Luck comes from hard work and confidence in your students. You make your own luck, good or bad. Ron works hard to make his good and I, for one, admire him for that.

In conclusion and on a more personal note, without the encouragement and support of this man, I might not be where I am today doing what I'm doing. I too, am a music teacher, working with kids, and looking up to teachers like Ron for guidance and examples of excellence. I am one of several who have pursued a career in music because of this man's integrity and confidence in a career more satisfying than most and more humbling than others. I thank Ron Dalton for all he has accomplished and for all that I have accomplished, because there is a little bit of him in all his students and that's what being a teacher is all about.

Ron, congratulations, thanks and God bless you for nine wonderful years and the hope of many more to come. — Sincerely, Timothy J. Sharer, choral director, Southern High School.

YOU AND YOUR CAR

One of the big automotive hassles of 1976 has been over a non-existent "car" with a price tag of $24,000.

Actually, it was the product of an Insurance Industry trade association and appeared in advertisement in publications across the nation. The message in the ad charged that a part-by-part replacement of a popular 1973 car would reach $24,000.

Auto manufacturers were quick to react. A U.S. Senate hearing and pointed out that the insurance trade association did confirm that the price included the cost of labor. It was also noted that no insurance company would pay such a cost to have a car repaired and would settle with the insured at the current market value.

What the "auto" people term a highly exaggerated cost figure would have brought smiles to the faces of many of the industry's own pioneers — originators like Henry Leland, Ransom Olds, Henry Ford and many more.

The Automotive Information Council points out that if the $24,000 price is even remotely accurate, it really represents a salute to the inventive genius of industry people. Mass production is the brainchild of the automobile people. Olds was the first to mass produce a gasoline fueled automobile, Leland, the founder of Cadillac and Lincoln, was the precision master who gave us interchangeable parts. And Ford, of course, made the automobile even more convenient. His moving assembly line brought the price down.

While the prices of fenders, hoods, door panels and other body parts have risen along with the cost of raw materials and labor, the AIC noted these parts are one area where replacement manufacturers have chosen not to compete. In just about every other area — spark plugs, brakes, axles, transmissions, water pumps, etc. — the competition is fierce. It may be that the body parts business isn't all that profitable.

Chrysler Corporation says cash parts sales amount to less than one-half of one per cent of total sales. General Motors and Ford also placed the sales at less than one per cent.

One of the major factors in parts boosts has been the role of federal safety standards. A 1977 bumper is highly complex, costs substantially more than a 1973 bumper because it prevents damage to safety oriented parts in low speed bumps.

Poem offers 'bureaucrat's explanation'

Here's a delightful little poem for you. I have subtitled it "The Bureaucrat's Explanation."

"The rule of law, in complex times, Has proved itself deficient. We much prefer the rule of men! It's vastly more efficient."

Now, let me state the present rules."

The lawyer then went on, "These very simple guidelines You can rely upon: You're gouging on your prices if You charge more than the rest. But it's unfair competition if You think you can charge less. The second point that we would like To help avoid confusion: Don't try to charge the same amount; That would be collusion! You must compete. But not too much. For if you do, you see, Then the market would be yours — And that's monopoly!"

I'd like to claim to have written it, but both honesty and a copyright make that inadvisable. The two stanzas are from a much longer work by Richard W. Grant.

entitled, "Tom Smith and His Incredible Bread Machine," and are quoted here with his permission.

That lighthearted poetry offers food for thought on two levels, one superficial and the other profound.

First, and obviously, it pays a tribute to the very real frustrations of today's business managers in their struggles with a regulatory bureaucracy that seems impossible to please.

And second, it raises an important question about our economic system. Karl Marx pointed out that a competitive economic system such as laissez-faire capitalism theoretically should not be able to survive, because the stronger competitors would eliminate the weaker until eventually only one firm remained, and then there would be no competition.

We have more-or-less accepted that Marxist fear, and tried to prevent it from coming to pass with laws against trusts and monopolies.

The problem with this approach, however, is that laws designed to preserve competition tend to prohibit it, as the poem so cleverly illustrates. And in discouraging competition, they deny to the consumer its benefits: a superior combination of price, quality, service, and style.

Let's just think this is an excessively theoretical discussion — consider two recent real-world examples.

Item one: The Federal Trade Commission has accused General Foods of not charging enough for its "Maxwell House" brand coffee.

Item two: The Federal Trade Commission has demanded that Borden, Inc. license its lemon concentrate to make and sell its brand of reconstituted lemon juice, "RealLemon." Not only that, but Borden is also supposed to let them call their products by the same name. Reason? "RealLemon" was too popular with consumers.

I'm not about to recommend junking the antitrust and antimonopoly statutes. But it is a curious paradox, when you stop to think about it, that government efforts to promote competition can sometimes be anti-competitive. — Richard Leshner, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Right Procedure Vital in Filing Medicare Claims

If you've ever filed a Medicare claim before, you probably are aware that there are a number of things you must know in order to file a complete and accurate claim.

Not only do you have to know what form to submit, but you must also know how and when to submit it. And sometimes that isn't as simple as you might think.

However, to remedy this situation, Mutual of Omaha Insurance Company, fiscal intermediary for Medicare Part B in Nebraska, has compiled the following helpful tips for faster Medicare claim service:

When to submit claims — If you file your Medicare claims as you receive your medical bills during the year, you are helping to reduce the chances that your Medicare payments will be delayed. When medical bills are accumulated and submitted to Medicare at one time on one claim, chances for delay in payment are increased — one or two bills with missing information could hold up payment on the entire claim.

Timely claim filing is important — There are time limits for filing medical claims, so the following should be kept in mind. For services received Oct. 1, 1974, through Sept. 30, 1975, the claim must be mailed by Dec. 31, 1974. Likewise, for services received Oct. 1, 1975, through Sept. 30, 1976, you have until Dec. 31, 1977, to mail your claim.

Completing the "Request for Medicare Payment" form (SSA-1290). Copy your name and health insurance number exactly as they are shown on your red, white and blue Medicare card, and be sure you sign the claim form or it will be necessary to return the claim to you for this purpose.

Itemized physicians' bills — When you are submitting claims for medical services for payment to you rather than to your physician, it is extremely important that the bills itemize the services and charges. In order to determine whether the services are covered by Medicare, your medical bills must contain the following information:

— The date and place of each service performed.
— A description of each service provided and the separate charge for each service.

The nature of your condition that caused you to receive these services (you should describe your illness or injury on the Medicare claim form if it is not apparent from your medical bills).

— The name of the physician who treated you (write his name in if it is not clearly indicated on your bill).

Refer to your Medicare handbook — Your local Social Security office will provide you with a handbook if you were not given one when you enrolled for Medicare. It tells you how Medicare works, and you may contact Social Security if you need assistance in filing your claims.

Explanation of medicare benefits — Every time a Medicare payment is made to either you or your physician, an explanation of medicare benefits is sent to you. This document serves as your record of the action taken by Medicare on your claim. The explanation shows the charges on the claim which were applied to the annual $60 deductible and the amount of the allowed charges, as well as the amount paid by Medicare. This letter is an important record and should not be discarded. If you have private medical insurance which supplements your Medicare coverage, you will need to file the letter with your claim for supplemental benefits.

Veterinarians Discuss Swine Disease

Three swine health problems — pseudorabies, mange and large roundworms — were placed on the most wanted list by three veterinarians addressing the third annual Nebraska Swine Seminar in Bloomfield, Dec. 8.

Dr. James Bailey, South Dakota State University (SDSU) extension veterinarian, called pseudorabies "one of the real emerging problems in the swine industry."

The disease, which results from a virus infecting the brain, can cause heavy losses in baby pigs, Bailey said. He cited SDSU statistics showing the incidence of pseudorabies has increased dramatically in the last year.

"There has been a drastic change," he told about 80 swine producers attending the seminar. "The virus is becoming more more virulent in swine. Our diagnostic lab in Brookings so far this year has diagnosed 130 cases of pseudorabies compared to 33 in all of 1975."

He said symptoms of the virus in nursing pigs include encephalitis with high death rates and "shaker pigs," and said pneumonia can be caused indirectly by pigs inhaling the virus.

In growing and finishing hogs, Bailey said, symptoms include acute illness, signs of encephalitis and variable death loss. Pregnant gilts and sows suffering from the virus have fetal resorption, abortion problems, mummified fetuses and are repeat breeders, he said.

"The virus seems to spread much like the TGE virus and can be tracked from farm to farm," he indicated. "Infected animals may continue to shed the virus for an unspecified length of time, complicating control."

Bailey said there is no known vaccine for the disease and prevention can come only by selecting breeding stock from herds with no known exposure to pseudorabies and through blood tests to detect carriers of the virus.

"There are a lot of basic problems involved in the future control of pseudorabies," he said. "The decision will have to be whether to strive for vaccination or eradication, which is difficult unless there is some type of indemnity program for producers with infected herds."

Dr. Alex Hogg, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension veterinarian, said the "hotbed" of pseudorabies in Nebraska is in the West Point area.

But Hogg said severe mange also is a problem in the state's swine herds, with sarcoptic mange the most common form, being widespread.

"It's (mange) all come in since hogsmen went back to bigger units with more confinement," he said. He said a swine external parasite control program can increase profits by 20 per cent, and said one study showed swine producers could receive $37 for every dollar spent on parasite control.

Hogg said mange's first symptoms are lesions that form around hogs' snout, ears, eyes or where there is tender skin and little hair.

"Many swine owners are unaware of the chronic losses that are caused by mange and tend to ignore the problem," he said. "Mange can cause anemia in both pigs and sows which can lead to other problems such as slow growth and poor conception."

Mange and lice can be controlled by spraying or dipping all hogs in one of the following insecticide solutions mixed with 25 gallons of water, he said.

- One-half pint of 20 per cent Lindane or three-quarter pint of 12.4 per cent Lindane.
- One quart of 57 per cent Malathion.
- One and one half pints of 60 per cent Toxaphene.

Hogg said using power spraying equipment, such as plastic garden sprayers, is the most common method of application, but said dipping is preferred although it is tedious and least used. Farmers spraying should be certain the entire pig is soaked, especially the inner ear, Hogg said, and the spraying procedure should be repeated weekly for at least six weeks.

He said most insecticide sprays should not be used on pigs until after weaning, and said pregnant sows should not be treated within one week of farrowing because of possible litter poisoning. However, he said, sows should be treated two to three weeks before farrowing to minimize chances for young pigs becoming infested before weaning time.

Dr. Tom Lucast of Mankato, Minn., a veterinary consultant for the American Cyanamid Company, told the group that parasites, especially large roundworms, are a "very significant problem" in swine.

"Large roundworms can cause the fits in total economic losses," he said. "It's the most common and most damaging as far as feed efficiency goes."

Lucas said the large roundworm also migrates through the lungs after being consumed as an infective larva, and can be a contributing factor in causing pneumonia.

"We have to do a better job of preventing the consequences of these things through preventive medicine and good management practices," he said. "All swine herds have some degree of parasite problem."

Anthelmintic (or deworming) drugs are available to combat a host of worm problems, he said, but must be used at the right time and in the right amount.

Lucas said properly washing hogs and avoiding overcrowding are two prime management techniques helpful in controlling internal parasites.

The day-long event was sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service, UNL, Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources and Departments of Animal and Veterinary Science and the American Cyanamid Company.

In other remarks by the veterinarians:

—Hogg said hard water often is alkaline and may retard active ingredients in chlorinated hydrocarbon insecticides such as Lindane. He suggested adding one ounce of vinegar to each gallon of water, letting the solution rest for 10 minutes, and then adding it to the insecticide.

Buying a Christmas tree — which is best, a natural tree or an artificial one?

Tradition, initial cost, cost per year, and environmental considerations need to be taken into account. The natural tree has tradition and romance going for it, but an artificial tree saves time and money because it is reusable. And it seems a shame to cut a living tree just for a short time of enjoyment.

However, natural trees are either thinnings of forest stands or are from tree plantations. They must be harvested because they are too crowded to grow to full size.

What about buying a potted or living tree and planting it afterwards?

This presents difficulties in a cold climate so you would end up with a smaller tree. To obtain a living tree, arrangements would have needed to be made in early fall before freeze-up.

How do you determine if a tree is fresh?

Wrap the needles around your finger or bend them. If they are flexible and do not break, the trees may be fresh enough to take up water and recover its natural water content. It is possible for a newly cut tree to be kept fresh over a month in the average living room if the container is never allowed to go dry.

What about fire danger? See AGENT, page 5

Host Families Needed

The search is on for host families for exchange students. The students will come to Nebraska for three weeks, from July 1 to Nov. 1, 1977, in cooperation with the International 4-H Youth Exchange (IFYE), according to Dr. John Orr, associate state 4-H leader at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The young persons, ranging in age from 12-30 years, may come from any of 38 countries such as Switzerland, Poland, Denmark, France, Japan, South America, Africa and England.

There is no cost to the host family except for normal maintenance of the student for the three weeks. The family should treat the youth as a member of the family. Most of the young people have taken English language classes in their home country, some have excellent abilities while others have lesser abilities. Those interested in being a host family should contact their county agent for more information.

There is still time for young people from Nebraska to sign up for participating in the IFYE program. The young Nebraskans, aged 12-30, may go abroad for varying lengths of time ranging from weeks to months, Orr said. The delegates will have the opportunity to live with farm families in one of the 38 countries and to work and play in day-to-day activities. The cost ranges from $500 to $1,450.

Speaker: Farmers Must Tell Their Story to Consumers

The majority of problems facing farmers and ranchers which public relations efforts are geared up to solve all boil down largely to the premise, "give us the freedom to produce and the freedom to market."

So declared Elmer J. Dapron, Jr., vice president of Gardner Advertising Co. of St. Louis, Mo., in an address before the Nebraska Council on Public Relations for Agriculture in Lincoln Dec. 10.

Dapron, whose agrimarketing activities have involved some of the largest firms concerned with serving American agriculture, engaged in dialogue with Mrs. Betty Stevens, a Lincoln Journal news writer and columnist, homemaker and householder for a fraternity at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

The survival of the traditional, family owned and operated agriculture in the U.S. rests with the ability to convince urbanites that these freedoms are in the common interest, Dapron said.

Interference with the freedom to produce begins with the denial of access to useful substances for agricultural production, such as feed additives and farm chemicals by government agencies, he said. Of some 35,000 compounds useful as insecticides, fungicides, herbicides and other uses, one third will be removed from the market by EPA action, he predicted. Other new discoveries of value will never reach the shelves and the farmer, he added.

Capital is being siphoned off into regulatory projects which could be used for production, Dapron said. Agricultural Interests are losing fights for irrigation water and are the victim of "discriminatory tax rates," as an example, Illinois farmers are paying five times as much as other property owners to support education because of high land values, he explained.

Not all regulatory efforts or constraints should be criticized, he conceded, noting that in reference to farm safety, some 145,000 persons are involved annually in agriculturally-connected fatal or disabling accidents.

If farmers were to achieve the first freedom (of production), they still must have the second problem solved, he stressed.

Hi-Rater Girls
The Hi-Rater Girls 4-H Club met Thursday evening at Grace Lutheran Church, Wayne. Nine members answered roll call.

New officers were installed and the president made appointments. Joan Daum is flag salute leader, Pam Maler, 4-H pledge leader, and Susan Rethwisch and Brenda Larsen are roll call chairmen.

Mother will serve as project leaders. Project and record books were distributed. Mrs. Melvin Utecht conducted a judging lesson on breakfast groceries.

Pam Maler was in charge of entertainment and a gift exchange was held. The Lowell Rethwisches and the Melvin Utechts were hosts for the evening.

The next meeting will be Jan. 13, at 8 p.m. at Grace Lutheran. Sandy Utecht, news reporter.

Spring Branch
The Spring Branch 4-H Club met last Monday evening at the firehall with 20 members attending. Vice president Kevin Marotz conducted the business meeting.

It was decided to continue the project of baking cookies for the Methodist Church in Norfolk. New members are Erin Marotz, Kay Meierhenry, Russel Puls, Paul Davids and Terry Bronzynski. Members brought food for a gift exchange.

Refreshments were served by Diane and Russell Puls, Sue and Jon Meierhenry and Karen Wiltier. The next meeting will be Jan. 10 at the fire hall. Karen Wiltier, news reporter.

This would mean two guarantees:

—The right to sell through cooperatives if farmers so choose.

—The right to sell farm commodities overseas.

Expansion of the cooperative movement will not occur without a fight, he said, pointing to what he called "a relentless attack" by "a whole who of federal bureaucracies."

Decrying "four grain embargoes in one year," and the dock strike at Texas Gulf ports which stopped overseas grain shipments, Dapron said "certain fundamental decisions must be left to the producer." He said the loss of grain market outlets "when a small group of people (striking dock workers) took control of the market" may have had a depressing effect on grain prices still noticeable today.

Dapron said consumers "have a widespread concern" about food quality, safety, price and availability. He expressed the opinion that a poor job has been done in educating consumers. One important part of the story, he said, is to assure consumers that all (real or apparent) food shortages in the U.S. are temporary "if the farmer has the two freedoms."

Warning that higher food prices at the retail level are inevitable, he said the fact that families pay 17 per cent of their disposable income for food shows that "the farmer is subsidizing the rest of the grocery bill." On the other side of the ledger, he said, the farmers' 40 per cent share of the food basket cost is "unrealistic."

Commenting that "agriculture hasn't told its story," Dapron said everyone agrees that there is a lack of understanding of agriculture, but too often the farmer asks to share his problems with others, but doesn't say what's on his mind. He called for more specific approaches, "education is the only answer," stressing that a public relations campaign on behalf of agriculture can't be won with bumper stickers and slogans.

He cited three "must" goals of consumer education:

—Supply-demand conditions and other mechanisms of the market place must be explained on a continuing basis.

—The consumer must be helped to be a better shopper.

—Helpful information on food management in the home must be disseminated effectively.

Following Dapron's remarks, Betty Stevens, Lincoln homemaker and columnist for the Lincoln Journal, spoke to members of the Nebraska Council on Public Relations for Agriculture about consumer concerns toward agriculture and food prices.

As fraternity mother to a Nebraska Wesleyan chapter, Mrs. Stevens says she spent $1,874.53 on food last month to feed 36 boys five days a week. "My boys still go hungry," she said, "and that makes me one of those hysterical consumers."

Consumers spent $150 billion at the grocery store last year, she said; nearly 17 per cent of disposable discretionary income. Despite this, however, farmers say they aren't making any money and supermarkets say they're only turning a one per cent profit," she said. "Yet consumer groups tell me that's not true — that they turn a one per cent profit every time they turn over volume."

"Someone's in the kitchen with Dinah, and I think it's my supermarket," she quipped.

In responsive remarks, Dapron said the 9 to one per cent figure is the profit earned by supermarkets on all goods sold on an annual basis. He said the margin is so narrow many supermarkets "are going broke." No one in the food marketing and processing chain is really making a lot of money, he maintained.

Mrs. Stevens suggested that one of the reasons for high food prices is that "food power is concentrated in the hands of the few. When this happens," she added, "you have monopoly and consumers don't get the benefit of competition to keep prices down."

The Lincoln journalist also commented on the quality of food products consumers buy, including tough tomatoes, rusty lettuce and bread that contains only five cents worth of wheat and primarily seed.

"It's meat that's really hurting us, though," she commented. "What I want to know and what consumers want to know is who puts water in hamburger and why a four ounce hamburger patty ends up the size of a dog biscuit."

"Farmers say that it takes about 2 1/2 pounds of beef on the hoof to make one pound of supermarket beef," she added. "As a homemaker, I can tell you it takes about 2 3/4 pounds of supermarket beef to make one pound of edible meat."

According to Stevens, there's also a certain amount of "supply manipulation" that goes on in the food business. She pointed out that consumers were so scared when it was rumored that bread would go up to a $1 a pound because of grain sales to Russia, that now they're overjoyed to be buying bread at 49 cents a loaf.

Advertising also has a some times detrimental effect on consumer food purchases, she said. The box most cereals come in costs more than the cereal, she said.

Consumer wouldn't mind high food prices as much, she said, if they felt they were being well fed. She issued a challenge to agricultural communicators to better explain to consumers why quality and prices of food are what they are.

Income for Elderly Americans Is 32 Per Cent Social Security

Social security payments account for one of the two largest shares of the income of the nation's 23 million older people according to Dale Branch, social security district manager in Norfolk.

"A Social Security Administration study indicates that social security payments account for 32 per cent of their total income," Branch said. "Wages and salaries account for another 32 per cent."

The social security payments are a partial replacement of pre retirement earnings. Social security pays about $3.7 billion a month to retired workers and their wives or husbands — and about $737 million a month to older widows, widowers and dependent parents of deceased workers.

Eligible workers can start getting their full social security

Swine

He said swine herd owners with no lice or mange problems should purchase replacement stock from accredited SPF herds or others free of the diseases or quarantine replacement animals selected from diseased herds.

Bailey said Leptospirosis, which can result in abortions, can be detected through blood tests, and said vaccination of breeding stock before each gestation is advisable.

He also said brucellosis and the treatment of other "old reproductive disease now are pretty well under control." Bailey said much progress has been made nationally in eradicating the disease through validation of individual swine herds.

Bailey said other reproductive problems caused by "SMEDI," intestinal viruses, can be controlled by exposing breeding swine to these viruses through the addition of new females or boars into the herd.

Hawaiian Trip Brings Excitement

The Marvin Nelsons, the Rober Meyers, the Lloyd Rober and three others Omaha couples returned last Wednesday from a trip to see the Big Red Nebraska football team in exotic Hawaii.

The group toured Diamond Head Mountain, Blow Hole, Pineapple Farms, Dale and Del Monte canneries and Paradise Park, among numerous other places of interest. Mrs. Rober reported that almost every plant, bush and tree is either in bloom, has fruit or both.

The men of the party went deep-sea fishing and caught a mahi-mahi. Watching the taping of the Don Ho Show and the Kodak Hutu Show proved to be entertaining highlights of the trip.

The Nebraska fans attended a Big Red Breakfast hosted by a Lincoln Radio Station. They were a bit reluctant to leave the warm 83 degrees of the islands to return to a minus seven degrees!

Has Christmas Party
About forty members of the Firemen's Auxiliary and the husbands met Saturday evening at the Firehall for their Christmas Party. Chili and oyster soup were served. A grab bag gift exchange was held. The evening was spent playing games.

The next meeting is Jan. 11 at 8 p.m. at the Firehall.

Mrs. Ohlquist is Hostess
Eleven members of St. John's Lutheran Church Bible Study group met with Mrs. Alvin Ohlquist for their cooperative Christmas Luncheon Friday afternoon. Mrs. Ohlquist gave the lesson.

Lost Their Mittens?

THE THREE Little Kittens lost their mittens, according to the nursery rhyme, and some Wakefield elementary school youngsters apparently had the same problem. This pile of mismatched mittens caught the eye of a Wayne Herald photographer who attended the Wakefield Christmas concert Monday night. Okay, moms, recognize any of those mittens?

EXPLAINING some of the problems in determining the amounts of underground water is Glenn Spreeman of the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resource District. Spreeman spoke to members of Wayne Kiwanis Club Monday during the weekly meeting.

'Water Level in County Is Good'

The quality of underground water in Wayne County isn't the best in the state, said a spokesman for the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District, but there is enough water for the amount of irrigation systems in the area to enable farmers to continue to grow their crops. What makes the underground water in Wayne County relatively poor is the high level of salt, said Glenn Spreeman, but that can be overcome by extra watering if needed. Because the county's water supply is in good shape at this time, Spreeman noted that farmers can afford to over irrigate in some instances to saturate the salty water below the crop roots.

water is a "different ball game," because they can't see the water. Spreeman went on to say that the 35 to 40 wells in Wayne County aren't seriously hampering water levels, compared to the problems caused by the 200 wells in Codington County. Prior to Spreeman's talk, members learned that the Wayne chapter received The President's Project award for completing five projects last year under past president Dan Sherry. The projects included holding a Farmer's Appreciation Day, sponsoring a blood pressure clinic, honoring all Wayne County 4-H'ers who participated in 4-H activities other than livestock, sponsoring a youth golf tournament, and planting trees. Receiving special recognition during Monday's program was club secretary Vern Fairchild, who for the second year in a row was named Secretary of the Year in the Nebraska-Iowa district.

Snow Plow Ahead? Drop Speed

The average citizen is just flat not aware of the danger of riding with the heavy-weight boxing champion of the world. And the average citizen knows it. But for some reason he will on occasion get into his compact or medium sized car and think he is equipped to tangle with a seven-ton truck pushing a snowplow.

Apparently fail to realize that snow blowing off the plow, can blind them for a second or two, or that the ridge of snow left in the center of the highway can be hazardous when they change lanes.

Ken Sieckmeyer says. "In a confrontation between these heavyweights and a passenger car," he added, "the car is going to come out second best."

Unfortunately he is not better equipped for the latter than for the former, as the records kept by the Nebraska Department of Roads show.

The Department of Roads uses three to seven ton trucks and motor graders for plowing snow, with the heavier vehicles coming into use as snow depths increase. The overall width of the plows is about nine feet. However, when using a "wing" to plow off the shoulder, the plow may be as wide as 15 feet.

Drivers can get around the snowplows and sanders without risking collisions or broken windshields by using patience and good judgement and allowing plenty of distance between themselves and the snow removal equipment. Sieckmeyer went on to say:

The snowplow, like the champion boxer, has its advantages. In full recognition of this, the Department of Roads has done everything in its power to make the snowplows and graders as visible as possible.

They are painted a brilliant "highway orange." Each one has a rotating amber light mounted on top that can be seen for great distances, even under conditions of poor visibility. In addition a large reflective sign indicating "SNOWPLOW" is mounted on the rear of the trucks.

They can also watch the road ahead for an area clear of snow, and time their passing to coincide with it, to pass on a relatively dry pavement with no danger from flying snow or loss of visibility.

In spite of all this, nearly 50 per cent of collisions involving the department's snow removal equipment happens when another vehicle tries to pass a snowplow or sander and hits it in the rear.

"Motorists are urged to watch for the caution signs and flashing beacons on Department of Roads snow moving equipment," safety division manager

A third method is even better, and that is to slow down, follow the plow at a safe distance, and continue following until it reaches the end of its assigned plowing territory. The plow operator will then pull off the road temporarily and the following driver can proceed safely, without the risk of tangling with a 7-ton snowplow.

Out in Front

BRENDA WILLIAMS is out in front of brothers Steve (front) and Forest Jr. (back) and Dennis Otte (on steel runner sled). The youngsters Sunday proved that mixing kids, sleds, and an icy street adds up to a lot of fun. Dennis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Otte of Wayne, and Forest Williams Jr. team up for a scoot down the hill (top, right photo). After the slide, of course, comes the long walk back up (bottom photo). Barricade blocking of Sherman St is visible in the background. The four sledders hit the ice just in time Sunday. Warmer temperatures Monday melted many streets clear, but chances are, there will be other good sledding days before winter ends.

The Herb Holzes, Seward, spent Saturday in the John Asmus home.

Ray Andersen, Bridgeport, spent last Thursday to Sunday in the Howard Iversen home. He came to attend funeral services for an uncle, Chris Petersen, in Norfolk Saturday. The Art Hoff, Sidney, spent Sunday afternoon in the Howard Iversen home to visit with Mrs. Anna Andersen.

The Fred Bradens and Vernon and Mrs. Ray McMillan returned home Sunday from St. James, Minn., where they attended funeral services for Mrs. William Warnemunde on Saturday.

The Larry Swanson family, Blair, arrived Monday to spend the day with his parents, the Emil Swansons.

GET THE FIT BEFORE YOU SEW!!

Willis Stapleton grew up in McCook, Nebraska, but has spent the last 25 years with her husband in Oberlin, Kansas. She began her career as a certified Singer Sewing Instructor, teaching three classes daily, in her classes, a student began with the pattern, and step-by-step was instructed completely through to the finished garment.

Willis next became a free lance designer and opened "Willis's Custom Design Studio" in Oberlin, Kansas. Professional performers in the theatre and night club groups and those desiring special gowns for wedding parties came from hundreds of miles to Willis's Studio. On the local community level she has worked with the Extension Service and judged 4-H shows.

Willis Stapleton
Certified Sewing Instructor
Free Lance Designer & Former Owner of Willis's Custom Design Studio

"I love to work with people," Willis says, "I truly enjoy free-lance designing, traveling and working with whom, where and when I want to, without the pressures of running a business. Young people control fashion today — they determine what sells. Wherever you shop, everytime you look in a fashion magazine or pattern book, you see this youthful influence. Mature persons have much difficulty finding suitable, suitable ready-made clothes, and even more difficulty finding garments that fit!"

"The young have their fitting problems, too. It all means that millions more women (and men, too) are now sewing who never sewed before."

"The increase in those creating home tailored garments demands simpler methods, especially with modern fabrics which eliminate many techniques formerly required with totally natural fibers."

At her lectures, Willis will be giving tips on alterations to commercial patterns, showing how anyone can make a pattern simply and make that pattern fit! She will be introducing a new pattern making method and will be giving many tips on design.

Thought for Today
By Brian McBride

"Don't swallow good-geons ere they're caught or count the chickens ere they're hatched."

Samuel Butler

You might have thought that the old admonition against premature enumeration of poultry originated in early rural America... It sounds like frontier wisdom. Actually, the first recorded use of the phrase is credited to Butler, an English poet of the 17th century.

Like other true gems of wisdom, the phrase will last as long as there are eggs and chickens. When we anticipate good fortune and celebrate too early, we're apt to suffer disappointment.

It is advisable to get acquainted with a funeral director before you need his services, just as you would select a doctor or a lawyer. We welcome "get-acquainted" visits.
