Realistic standards needed

We haven't seen a copy of the latest draft of jail regulations proposed for Nebraska, so it isn't possible to approve or disapprove of the overall plan, but press reports indicate that the draft—No. 1—contains some major changes in the draft from a Nebraska Bar Association committee draft last summer.

The Bar Association's draft would have forced compliance in three years, according to state jail standards administrator Robert Cole. Variances and allowances for existing facilities have been written into the latest draft.

Jails would no longer have to provide an outdoor exercise area for prisoners. The average stay in county jails is 17 days.

Requirements on educational and rehabilitation programs have been modified to make them more realistic for rural county jails, according to Cole.

The Bar Association's draft would have almost meant turning every jail cell in the state into a classroom. Again, the average length of stay and small number of prisoners in any given rural jail at one time make the idea expensive and impractical.

Under the latest draft, sheriffs would be required to give prisoners addresses where he or she can write for information about correspondence.

We agree with those revisions in the proposed jail standards as far as they go. A state standard for jails is necessary, for the protection of both jailers and prisoners. Efforts should be made, however, to keep the standards within the bounds of practicality.—Jim Strayer

STRAYEr Thoughts

By Jim Strayer

You probably didn't realize it when you picked up the paper but this column is an absolutely historic event. It's the first one written on my brand new typewriter.

I can't really say I'm sorry to see the old one go. Our relationship was one of mutual tolerance.

It looked like an Army surplus special and I suspected it was old, but I didn't realize just how right I was on both counts until one day when I tipped it on its side so I could recover my trusty editing pen which had rolled underneath it.

I wasn't surprised when two curiously bent paper clips fell out the side. (Ever since then, two of the keys haven't worked, but I never used them anyway.)

I was surprised at the plate I discovered attached to the bottom—A.E.F. 1917. For Official Use Only by Order of Gen. Pershing. Now that's old.

There is one disadvantage to having a new typewriter. I don't have an excuse anymore for my bad typing. Maybe I can get by for a few weeks—months if I work it right—but saying I'm still getting used to the new machine.

I think Mark made a mistake, though, by trading in the old typewriter. It was probably worth more as an antique. Maybe we should have had it bronzed, or donated it to the Wayne County Historical Society Museum.

you believe I got one the other night asking if I had any comic books?

I guess I should explain that one. I mentioned Steve after he stopped in to visit me in the fall. He's an old friend dating back to junior high. Steve had what was considered a strange hobby. He collected comic books. Now he collects Mustangs, the kind with wheels, not legs.

He still has his old collection and plans to give it to his nephew as a birthday gift. Trouble is, he's missing a few copies which fell victim to moisture or the family dog. So he called to see if I can help him out.

I can't really understand why he called me. After all, I gave comic books up a long time ago. Last year. (Just kidding, folks. What really happened was, I gave them to a Democrat I know who wanted to study so he could run for public office.)

Solar Heat
Carhart Lumber is building what I believe to be a first for Wayne—a home with a solar furnace. Included are collector panels to take advantage of the sun's rays, and 40 tons of crushed rock to hold the heat.

The home will also have a conventional heating plant, but the solar furnace is designed to provide about 80 per cent of the heating needs of the home. The furnace sits outside the house, and won't be going in until the weather is warm enough to pour the concrete pad on which it will sit.

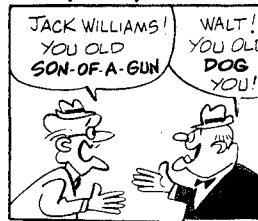

Here Come Da Judge
I thought I'd really had it last week when I looked at the return address on a letter I received at the office. It was from Justice Robert W. Hansen of the Wisconsin Supreme Court, and my name and address were hand printed on the envelope.

I knew I hadn't taken a shot at the courts recently in the editorial columns, particularly not a Wisconsin State court, and I couldn't figure out why I would be getting such a letter.

Reforms taking game away from cats?

In the political year 1976 we saw the first trial of some far-reaching reforms in the financing of political campaigns.

The overwhelming verdict from experienced political observers is that the reforms at the Presidential level worked exceptionally well. All candidates, in the primaries and general election were spared the demeaning chore of begging for big gifts from the heavy spenders, and the winner is spared the obscenity of being beholden to well-heeled special interests.

This time, tens of millions of Americans took the game away from the fat cats and paid for the Presidential campaign themselves through the one dollar check-off on their tax returns.

There was a lot of nattering about the paper work and auditing required by the new law, but it signified nothing. Politics was just about the last segment of our national life in which the handling of large sums of money had escaped auditing. It was bound to lose its carefree status.

But on the Congressional level, the reforms went only halfway, and the consequences are deeply disturbing. Congress took the presidency off the auction block, but rejected public financing for itself.

Incumbents have an enormous advantage, and a majority of the House of Representatives had no intention of diminishing that advantage further by putting public funds in the hands of their challengers. Result: a lot of members of Congress were bought and sold in 1976, just like the good old days except that the going rates were higher.

In 1976 special-interest groups poured well over $20 million into Congressional campaigns, as compared with $12.5 million in 1974. The money-heavy special interests couldn't buy themselves a President so they tried to buy as many members of Congress as they could.

In a study of the top dozen heaviest spenders among special interest political committees, both labor and the professions appeared to outrank business in the amount spent, but the business world is gearing up to regain its position in 1978. So we face a kind of escalating political arms race to see who can paper Congress with the most currency.

The overriding solution is public financing of Congressional campaigns. Congress must remove itself from the category of purchasable commodities.

One need only sniff the breeze to pick up richly malodorous evidence in the Tong Sun Park affair—potentially one of the most damaging scandals Congress has faced in our lifetimes. Involved in the revelations are the South Korean government, the South Korean CIA, Tong Sun Park (a big spending South Korean businessman—or something) who gave lavish Washington parties and handsome gifts to members of Congress. Some Congressmen have already acknowledged receipt of favors, but there is no certainty that a definitive list of recipients and the degree of their involvement will ever be revealed.

The purpose of all the shenanigans and flowing cash was, of course, to keep the U.S. Congress firmly on the side of confuted military aid to South Korea. So presumably what was to be bought with all the favors and money was not just out members of Congress. It was our foreign policy.

We restored dignity to the Presidential election through a law that worked, a law whose "profound impact" or "election to quote a leading journalist" was nearly invisible to the voters. We can have the same profound impact on Congressional elections and ensure for Congress the integrity that our best Senators and Representatives so sincerely desire.—John Gardner, Common Cause chairman

Gun safety is a must!

Most homes in America have at least one gun. Not all of them are used for hunting. And since most gun accidents happen in the home, it's a good idea to make sure everyone in the family has a good knowledge and respect for firearms. From everything I've seen, I'd recommend that young and old alike take a Nebraska Hunter Safety instruction course... even if they never plan to hunt. Write to me for more information. By the way, see if you can answer these questions.

'Right to life Is fundamental'

Dear Editor:

Our governor has proclaimed this week to be "Respect Life Week" in Nebraska. Saturday marked the anniversary of the 1973 Supreme Court decision to legalize abortion in the United States. Abortion is now the most common surgical procedure performed in our country with more than two million babies aborted each year.

The right to life is the most fundamental right of every person whether in the womb or out of the womb. When this right is violated a crime is committed against man, society and God.

If it is legal to "take the life of an unborn child today how much longer before we rid ourselves of other unwanted humans?"

YOU AND YOUR CAR

By the Automotive Information Council

A researcher, who has devoted 17 years of his professional life to the study of seat and shoulder belts and their effectiveness in highway accidents, believes the government should test the air bag on its own cars.

"It would cost a half a billion dollars, about the price of a third of an airplane, to equip 100,000 government cars with air bags," says Donald Hueike, professor of anatomy at the University of Michigan. He was responding to the recent decision of William T. Coleman Jr., the secretary of transportation in the Ford Administration, who ruled out a decision on installation and urged a voluntary program partly financed by industry and by the public.

Hueike told the Automotive Information Council that he is opposed to marketing the passive restraint:

"If a new medicine were as poorly researched as the air bag—really a health related device—it would not be allowed on the market. We simply do not have sufficient crash data. Of the 100 bags that have been deployed in cars, a handful of deaths or injuries were prevented and four people even died."

While not opposed to the air bag concept, Hueike feels it is at best an upper torso restraint and believes seat belts will be a needed adjunct. He says the bag will not prevent ejection from the car and adds that research proves a person has a better chance of survival by remaining in the seat.

Hueike points out that the industry already has tried to sell the air bag as an option and met a stone wall of buyer resistance. "Even at the reduced price of $100 for full front seat protection, or $50 for the driver only, I don't see many people sending the money," he says.

Hueike, who has personally investigated 2,300 accidents in his career, has the records to prove that lap and shoulder belts can be effective and at much lower costs than the air bag.

He proposes that shoulder and lap belts be made mandatory. They already are standard equipment on all new cars but the federal government does not require people to wear them. Hueike would change that. Then, he suggests that air bags be offered as optional equipment.

The need for fuel to prosecute World War I, coupled with strikes by U.S. coal miners and a severe winter in 1917-18, reduced the available supplies of coal, petroleum, and natural gas. The U.S. government attempted to increase the water on radiators or in front registers to help keep air in the house moist. All lights used for merely decorative purposes should be eliminated. Keep the bulbs clean. Finger-marked or dusty bulbs absorb light. Lights should be turned out upon leaving an unoccupied room. Keep living rooms at not over 68 degrees.

This is not a check-list for consumers hoping to save money on fuel bills in this winter of 1976-77, rather, these suggestions appear in a pamphlet in the files of the Nebraska State Archives entitled: Fuel Facts: Information for Consumers and Savers of Fuel, published by the United States government in December 1918.

Because the end of the war on Nov. 11, 1918, lessened demand and made shortages less severe, the Federal Fuel Administration was phased out during the year 1919. In a speech to the Nebraska State Historical Society in 1920, John L. Kennedy of Omaha, Nebraska's fuel administrator, explained that although Nebraskans never suffered seriously for lack of fuel, consumers were frequently dissatisfied with the kind and quality of coal available. Nebraskans survived this energy crisis with only minor inconvenience.

Out of Old Nebraska

The need for fuel to prosecute World War I, coupled with strikes by U.S. coal miners and a severe winter in 1917-18, reduced the available supplies of coal, petroleum, and natural gas. The U.S. government attempted to increase the water on radiators or in front registers to help keep air in the house moist. All lights used for merely decorative purposes should be eliminated. The state fuel administrator enforced general regulations designed to conserve energy with orders such as those issued in 1917 and 1918 which called for "lightless nights." The federal government required that from July 24 through Nov. 11, 1918, "light covers be used on gas, oil or other fuel for illuminating or displaying advertisements, announcements or signs, or for the external ornamentation of any building would be discontinued entirely on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of each week in New England, the states of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and the District of Columbia, and on Monday and Tuesday of each week in all the remainder of the United States." Daylight Saving Time was also established by Congress to save energy, and was in effect from March 31 to Oct. 27, 1918. The Fuel Administration continued that during those weeks 1,250,000 tons of coal had been saved.

JOHN WAYNE LAUREN BACALL "THE SHOOTIST"

Devils Squeeze Past Trojans by One

By DAN VODVARKA

Wayne High's cardiac kids were at it again Friday night. Fresh off of two one-point contests last weekend, the Wayne boys' coaches just couldn't give coach Bill Sharpe a quiet night as they waited until the final seconds Friday to ice a 55-54 win over Hartington Cedar Catholic.

The win was Wayne's second in a row, after stopping Bloomfield by one last Saturday, and pushes the Blue Devils' season mark to 3-7 while Hartington's record dips to 5-5. Friday Wayne travels to Pierce before returning to the home maples Saturday to meet tough Schuyler.

After having all kinds of problems during the first period, the Devils finally got started when six-foot sophomore Brad Emry entered the contest at the quarter break. Trailing by as much as 10 points early in the second quarter, Emry brought the Devils back with eight points in that period and the hosts trailed by only 28-25 at halftime.

Coach Sharpe labeled Emry's effort as the sophomore's best of the season adding, "He's been shooting real good in practice and I've been waiting for him to get a hot hand in a game."

"Our young kids really did a super job," Sharpe commented as he praised Emry, Tom Ginn and five-foot-three freshman Jeff Zeiss for their play off of the bench. Sharpe also said Friday's game was the Devil's best this season. "We played well after the first quarter, outside of our turnovers," he commented.

The winners grabbed the lead for the first time with 6:30 to go in the third quarter as Mike Wieseler hit on a field goal to put Wayne up by a 31-30 count.

From there on in the contest went back and forth between the two clubs with the Trojans grabbing a one-point lead when Bill Wieseler hit a shot with 1:17 left in the game.

Wayne controlled the ball until, with :22 left, Emry got loose and calmly banked in a soft jump shot for the winning points. The excitement was not over, however, as Hartington's Bill Wieseler got off another shot that just rolled off the rim and Wayne's Tom Ginn and Wieseler tied up in a jump ball situation under the Hartington bucket with :05 left in the contest. Ginn, another Devil, came through in the clutch and tipped the ball to Vic Sharpe who iced the game by curling around the valuable spheroid as the clock ran out. Sharpe said that the Devils were not going to anyone special for the fast shot during the final minute of action. "I told them just to make sure they took a good shot," he said.

Emry finished the night with 14 points and six-foot five Tim Koll threw in 18 points for the Devils and pulled down 14 rebounds. Rick Wieseler led the losers with 14 points while Mike Litz and Frank Hochstein had a dozen tallies each.

In praising the consistent play of Koll all season long for Wayne, Sharpe said that because of Wayne's lack of outside scoring during most of the year, other teams have been able to fall back on Koll. "With some good outside shooting tonight we got some of the pressure off of him," Sharpe said.

Both teams hit on 23 of 59 field goal attempts while Wayne committed 20 turnovers to Hartington's 17.

Wayne's JV's made the night complete for the Devils by pounding out an easy 49-34 victory. The Ron Carnes-coached reserves had a big third quarter as they outscored the young Trojans 22-4. Dennis Carroll led Wayne with a dozen points while Ginn threw in 11. The win was the third in a row for the JV's and moves their record to 5-4 on the year.

Bears Topple Pender Quint

Laurel girls pushed their record past the .500 mark Thursday night with a 49-38 whipping of visiting Pender.

Cheryl Abts and Elaine Gueri paced the Ev Jensen-coached Bears with 15 points each as Laurel moved its record to 5-4.

Laurel's mixture of a zone and man-to-man press prevented Pender from penetrating. On the offense, the home team used a fast-break game to capitalize for the break-away score. "We missed quite a lot of layups, otherwise we could have blown the game open," Jensen pointed out.

Laurel's junior varsity kept its perfect record intact by topping Pender's reserves, 28-14. The win was the sixth for the junior Bears.

Thursday night Laurel takes on Hartington High.

JH Girls Win Over Emerson

Wayne's junior high girls team opened their season Thursday with a 25-10 win over Emerson Sacred Heart.

Ann Edmunds pumped in 10 points for high scoring honors. She was followed by Lynn Surber with eight, Teresa Ginn, Jennifer DeTurk and Vicki Ellis with two each and Kirt Kay with one.

Athletes of the Week

The Herald's "Athlete of the Week" awards again go out to three area athletes who have shown their leadership ability in guiding their clubs to victories.

Winning the female portion of the awards is 5-10 junior Paula Hoemann. The Winside High product has been the scoring leader in the Wildkittens' season, particularly during Winside's two victories.

Coming off a 17-point average, Hoemann dropped in 20 to pace her club past Hartington High and added 15 to help topple Coleridge.

According to her coach Kathy O'Connor, Paula has the good leaping ability, the hustle and desire to be a leader.

The male portion of the awards is divided between two Allen High players who combined their talents to knock off Westfield, Ia. Tuesday night for the Eagles' third win of the season.

Senior Darwin Kluever pumped in 17 points to fire up Allen to a 59-57 win. In addition to Kluever's hot hand, coach Jim Koonitz pointed out that Allen got the needed spark from junior Ryan Lubberstedt to help Allen to the win.

Lubberstedt came off the bench and put up seven points, including the final point with 10 seconds left to put Allen in front by two.

Parents of this week's award winners are Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hoemann of Hoskins, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Kluever of Allen and Mr. and Mrs. Larry Lubberstedt of Dixon.

College Cagers Triumph; Women Suffer First Loss

Men's and women's basketball teams of Wayne State had contrasting fortunes Friday night at Fort Hays State. The Wildcats beat the host Tigers, 93-88, after the Wildkittens bowed to the Tigrettes, 88-69.

For the men cagers, it was the first time their Central States Conference record mounted to the plus side, at 3-2, but for the girls, it was the first league loss after three lopsided victories in season records, the Wildcats were 10-4 and the Kittens 10-5 before their Saturday invasion of Kearney State.

The Wildkittens seemed to have Fort Hays well in control through mid first half until scoring-rebounding leader Connie Kunzmann got her third foul and went to the sidelines. From a seven-point lead, Wayne sank to a 45-33 halftime hole. After intermission it was worse as the Tigrettes pounced on numerous Wayne turnovers. Kunzmann finished on top of Wildkitten scoring with 15 points before fouling out late.

By contrast, the Wildcats went through a common routine. They zipped to big early leads, then slipped for a time while Fort Hays closed to 46-44 at intermission.

After that, frequent Wayne last breaks, sparked by Wayne Robinson's 19 second-half points, See CAGERS, page 8.

5 Matmen Win

Five Wakefield grapplers won their matches Tuesday night during the Trojans' 33-18 defeat at the hands of West Point.

They were Lyle Borg, 126; Carl Domsch, 132; Kurt Dolph, 138; Blaine Nelson, 145; and heavyweight Verdel Ekberg.

Top-Ranked Tekamah Pins Wayne

The state's top ranked Class C high school wrestling team, Tekamah-Herman, rolled past host Wayne High Thursday night, 58-0.

The Tigers of coach Guy Mytty won eight of the 11 matches by pins, including two first-period stops in less than a minute and a half.

Wayne's 145-pound Don Straight was the only Blue Devil grappler to stay close to his opponent. Straight trailed by 2-1 to Tekamah's Dick Doty until the third period when Doty scored one point on a reverse and two points each on a take down and near fall to win 7-1.

The locals head back into dual action Thursday night when they

Springfield Heading for Mat Repeat

South Dakota-Springfield wrestlers took a big jump toward repeating their Wayne State Round Robin Tournament championship Friday when they beat Westmar and Fort Wayne State in rounds 1 and 2.

USDS' foes in the remaining three rounds Saturday — Wayne State, Peru State and Midland — did not appear to be threats to a second-straight Pointier sweep.

Both Westmar and Peru lacked wrestlers of several weights, and Midland was a shutout victim of Fort Hays.

First round combat went this way: Springfield edged Westmar, 20-16; Wayne defeated Peru, 39-18, in a bob-tailed meet which had seven forfeits — three by Wayne, four by Peru; and Fort Hays blitzed Midland, 35-0.

In the second round, Springfield survived a nip-and-tuck battle with Fort Hays, 29-14; Westmar downed Wayne, 21-13; Midland spanked Peru, 42-18.

The host Wildcats, while losing to Westmar, could enjoy a lightening pin that 177-pounder Dwight Lienemann of Winside put on Roger Hartman. It took 34 seconds — a time exceeded only two or three times in Wayne mat history.

Midland's Jeff Burks also won a quickie when he decked Peru's Willie Johnson in 43 seconds, at 167 pounds.

Three of the five returning champions won twice Friday: Springfield's Dan Muehntenberg at 134 and Pat Rohlik at 167, and Westmar's Larry Winslow at 118.

The other 1976 champs split: 158-pounder Kerry Feekes of Westmar and heavyweight Max Shnyder of Midland. It was Kirk Hanson of Wayne who beat Feekes in a 4-0 decision.

GRIMACING AS he tries to break free, Wayne High grappler Don Straight battles Tekamah-Herman's Dick Doty in the 145-pound match of Thursday's dual between the two schools. Doty went on to win the match, 7-1.

Finding a never-fall long shot, Mittelstadt contributed 18 points while Kunzmann continued her role as scoring leader with 26.

Wayne's victory was the third CSIC win and came as easy as last week's big-gap victories over Missouri Southern and KSC Pittsburg. Wayne led 40-20 at the half.

A rapid increase in groundwater development in the last three droughty years has presented an increase in management and supply problems in the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District.

Irrigation systems developed in marginal groundwater aquifers or in areas resulting in apparent competition with domestic wells have resulted in conflicts in groundwater supplies.

During the past year, rules and regulations were prepared to implement the Groundwater Management Act. The framework is available and the timing is appropriate to handle the problems in the Lower Elkhorn NRD. In order to provide information in regard to the proper management of the groundwater as a natural resource, the Lower Elkhorn NRD has initiated a Groundwater Monitoring Program. The Groundwater Management Act allows for the establishment of critical groundwater management areas if it appears that there are areas that do not have adequate recharge to support further irrigation development.

If scientific data, including general water table declines, indicate groundwater declines, management measures such as alternating pumping schedules, limitations on total water applications per acre per year or as a last resort limitation of further well drilling on a year-by-year basis may be required.

The Groundwater Monitoring Program, which has only one year of data, has not shown a specific groundwater table that would indicate the need for a critical groundwater management area designation.

The Lower Elkhorn NRD encourages improved efficiency of irrigation systems. First of all, an inefficient irrigation system takes dollars from the profit side of the ledger. Secondly, over use of groundwater limits the number of acres that can be irrigated with a given amount of water.

What can you do?

- 1) With gravity irrigation systems, avoid excessively long runs which cause deep percolation.
- 2) With center pivot systems, shut the system down during hot-windy times of the day to eliminate excessive evaporation losses.
- 3) Plant borders of windbreak trees, such as red cedar or pines to cut wind losses with sprinkler systems.
- 4) Nozzle back to prevent run-off from over application rates on heavy soils.
- 5) Probe soils to be sure each irrigation is needed.

The past summer did uncover a number of domestic well failures. A basic understanding of the groundwater system is needed to explain the problem.

In order to manage groundwater aquifer systems, two basics need to be understood.

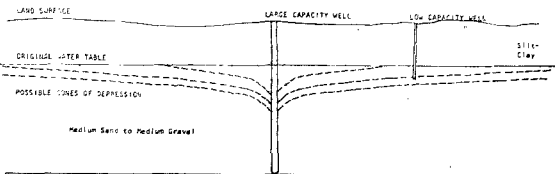

One: Groundwater usually moves very slowly. Usually, less than 200 to 300 feet per year. If a large capacity well begins pumping, the groundwater will move toward the well due to pressure differences.

Two: As water is pumped from an aquifer and water begins to move toward the well, a slope is formed which is called a "cone of depression". This "cone" is widely variable and depends on the varying amounts and sizes of sand and gravel that happen to be in the aquifer.

For instance, an aquifer made up primarily of sand will have much deeper but narrower cone of depression than would an aquifer of gravel which allows water to move through it more easily. Also, a fairly common occurrence in Northeast Nebraska is a confined or artesian aquifer. An artesian aquifer is under some pressure which when punctured by a well causes the water in the aquifer to rise in the well to a point higher than the aquifer itself. Artesian wells do not necessarily have water flowing above the land surface.

In an artesian situation, a "cone of depression" also occurs but of a different type. The artesian system actually causes compression of the water and sand and gravels in the aquifer. When the pressure is partially released as through pumping, the water and aquifer materials expand to take up the pore space with the aquifer remaining fully saturated.

The "cone of depression" then in an artesian system is a drop in the pressure head even though the aquifer remains fully saturated with water.

Note possible cones of depression showing how one or several wells could affect a shallow domestic well. Aquifer is not seriously depleted; however, the shallower well could fail.

'It's Just Creative'

THIRTEEN are ladies turned out for a weaving workshop last Monday at the University of Nebraska Northeast Station, near Concord. Conducting the day-long workshop was Gail Skinner, extension textiles and clothing specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. In the photo above, Miss Skinner demonstrates the various techniques that are used to do "creative weaving." The women experimented with a variety of stitches and weaving techniques. They examined a wide selection of exhibits and slides to see how various types of yarns and items such as fabric scraps, feathers, sticks, shells and leather might be used in woven projects. At right, Mrs. Ken Pettit of Laurel, a beginner at weaving, struggles to get her yarns interlaced correctly. In the bottom photo, from left, Mrs. Robert Dalton of Dixon, Mrs. Melvin Puhman of Concord and Mrs. Dwight Johnson of Alton concentrate on their "creative" efforts. Miss Skinner emphasized that the loom must be threaded correctly and, once that is accomplished, there really are no right and wrong ways to do creative weaving. "There are no mistakes we call them experiments." A similar workshop, held earlier at Dakota City, was attended by 12 homemakers. Both workshops were arranged by Anna Marie Krefleis, area home extension agent at the Northeast Station.
