Firemen Pour It On

WAYNE FIREFIGHTERS pour water on a barn fire Wednesday night in an attempt to keep the blaze from spreading. A barn and about 400 straw bales on the Ed Heithold farm three and one-half miles north and one mile east of Wayne were destroyed by fire Wednesday night.

fire and restrict damage to some shingles. A tree next to the barn also caught fire and volunteers later were forced to cut it down. The Wayne department responded to the call with two tankers and a pumper and later called the Wakefield department for another tanker. Firemen were on the scene until about 11 p.m., guarding against sparks as the straw fire burned itself out. Wayne fire chief Dick Korn Friday said no cause for the fire had been determined. A .22 caliber Remington rifle was reported taken from a vehicle owned by Richard Nolte during the fire.

ACP Plan Designed To Conserve Water

The Wayne County Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) development group Friday agreed to ask for approval of a locally originated program to encourage more efficient use of irrigation water.

County agricultural extension agent Don Spitze conducted a pilot test last summer on the Glenn Loberg farm north of Carroll. Gypsum blocks are buried at six-, 12-, 24-, and 36-inch depths in four locations in the field being monitored. Wires extending from the blocks to the surface are attached to a portable meter which measures electrical resistance caused by moisture content. The meter provides an accurate measure of water in the soil, indicating when the irrigation pump should be turned on.

Spitze, and Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District (LENRD) board members. Alden Johnson and son Lowell, an LENRD director, had asked for suggestions for projects which would encourage conservation of water. Spitze Friday proposed a program in which ACP funds would be made available to share costs of the meter and blocks used to measure moisture content in irrigated fields. See ACP, page 10

Allen Superintendent Resigns

VIRGIL FERGUSON

Allen school superintendent Virgil Ferguson submitted his resignation during the monthly school board meeting Wednesday night. Ferguson, 58, told members that his resignation will be effective at the end of the current school year. His future plans are undecided. Ferguson came to the Allen school system two years ago after leaving North-Loop School where he was superintendent for 13 years. Members also learned that on April 20, representatives from the State Department of Education and teachers from the surrounding area will visit the school to evaluate its programs. In other action, the board set May 7 as the date for the annual school program.

Presidential Scholarship Initiated

Wayne Mayor Freeman Decker Friday handed a $1,000 check from the city to Wayne State College president Lyle Seymour, kicking off a drive for a new scholarship fund designed to help students who don't qualify for assistance under federal aid programs, but need financial help to continue their education.

The scholarship fund will be administered by a screening committee which will include Dr. Seymour, financial aids officer Doug Barry, and director of admissions Jim Hummel. Applications for assistance from the fund will be considered on a case by case basis. Need for assistance and academic ability will be among factors considered, and the screening committee will establish guidelines for qualification.

"We want to attract high quality students," Seymour said. "We think there are many good students who, with a little financial help, could go to school." Dr. Seymour added that while the first contribution to the scholarship program is earmarked for Wayne students, additional funds will be available on a general basis unless otherwise specified. Students already enrolled as well as those entering WSC may apply for assistance under the program.

Contributions designated for the Presidential Scholarship Program should be donated through the Wayne State Foundation.

Thone Announces Internship Program

Ten high school seniors and one teacher from Thone's First Congressional District will be chosen to spend the week of April 4-24 as interns in the Washington, D.C. office of Representative Charles Thone.

The 1977 high school interns will be chosen by geographic areas within the 27 county Congressional District. Two interns will be selected from Lancaster County and one each from the following areas: Richardson, Johnson, Nemaha and Otoe; Pawnee, Gage, Jefferson and Thayer; Saline, Fillmore, Seward and York; Saunders and Butler; Dodge and Colfax. See THONE, page 10

Trustees Give Scholarships

Nebraska State College trustee Friday named 19 recipients and 10 alternates for the Board of Trustees' Scholarships for the 1977-78 school year.

The awards consist of full resident tuition at Wayne State College, Kearney State College, Peru State College, or Chadron State College.

Area students receiving the award include: Peggy Prusa, Howells; David Sindelar, Columbus; Doug Paik, David City, and Kathy J. Anderson, Cole ridge. Others include: Patty Meis, Elgin; Marge Skovensde, Pilger; Randy Mackey, Bancroft; and Robin Bauer, Norfolk.

Doug Barry, director of student financial aids at Wayne State College, noted that three students were chosen from Nebraska town this year because of their scholastic excellence.

Students to Test Spelling

About 50 seventh and eighth grade students from Wayne County rural schools will find out how good they are at spelling Friday during the annual rural spelling contest.

Youngsters from 17 rural schools in the county will meet at 1 p.m. in the North Dining Room of the Wayne State College student union.

The first phase of the competition will be a written test. Contest chairman Mrs. Richard Carlson said the top dozen spellers will be selected as finalists based on results of the written exam. The finalists will then be eliminated one by one in a show-down oral spelling contest. The winner will receive a $25 savings bond from The Wayne Herald and a trophy provided by the Wisner Pharmacy. In addition, the Stanton Bookstore will donate a copy of the book "Newspaper" to the school of the first place winner.

The First National Bank in Wayne will provide a $10 cash prize for the second place winner. The Wayne Book Store will contribute a dictionary for the third place winner. The State National Bank in Wayne will contribute $15 for prizes for runners up in the oral contest. Other prizes and contributors include: Gibson's Discount Center, marking pencils; Northwestern Bell, pencils; Judy Haas, Carol Nixon, and Kirkch, Public Power, $5; Wittig's Food Center, cash prize.

Development Corporation Is Offering Memberships

The Wayne Industries board of directors decided Thursday to offer memberships in the industrial development group for $50. A decision was made in January to change the status of the corporation from profit to non-profit. The change was prompted by the necessity of paying income taxes on money earned through rental and sale of land at the industrial site located adjacent to the airport. The change was brought about through a vote of the stockholders.

When the corporation was a profit-making company, shares were sold for $100 each. Stockholders had one vote for each share of stock. The corporation was a profit-making company, shares were sold for $100 each. Stockholders had one vote for each share of stock.

President Dean Pierson said all shareholders will now be issued a certificate of membership entitling them to one vote regardless of the number of shares previously held.

The directors made the decision to offer memberships for $50 in an attempt to solicit greater support. "We believe it is important that everyone be a part of Wayne Industries and hope the lower membership fee of $50 will attract more people," Pierson said.

Wayne Industries is primarily concerned with attracting firms interested in establishing their operations in Wayne.

City Power Plant Electric Revenue Increased

The City of Wayne is Nebraska's first community to complete a generating plant upgrading project which will produce increased revenue for the city under a lease capacity purchase agreement with the Nebraska Public Power District.

When the agreement was originally signed, the plant's generating capacity was 9,500 kilowatts and the city received $120,000 a year from NPPD. Addition of an evaporative cooler, two transformers, and a heater has increased capacity to 14,500 kilowatts. The city will now receive $290,000 a year from NPPD. Brink said the additional $100,000 in revenue will be used for five years to pay the $400,000 cost of making the improvements. After that, the additional revenue will be used to "soften or forestall" increases in city electric rates, Brink said.

The other $190,000 a year in revenue from NPPD is being used to retire debts on the power plant, to help pay incidental costs, and help keep rates from rising higher under a new rate structure approved by the city council last fall.

An NPPD spokesman said, "The improvements in the Wayne power plant increased our reserve capacity. It is beneficial to the district and our customers because additional power will be available when needed during periods of peak demand."

CPR Techniques Could Reduce Wayne County Death Rate

Irreparable brain damage begins within five minutes after a heart attack unless pulse and breathing are restored. That is why Miron Jenness of Wayne hopes to train enough Wayne County residents in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) so that someone will be available to keep heart attack victims alive until an ambulance arrives to provide professional life saving techniques.

Jenness, a Wayne teacher, businessman and ambulance driver, pointed out that last year, 54 per cent of the deaths in Wayne County and 42 per cent in the City of Wayne were caused by heart disease. Jenness believes many of those heart attack victims would still be alive if someone had been on hand to provide immediate life saving assistance.

The ambulance driver explained, "There is no way we can reach a heart attack victim within five minutes, even if he's only on the other side of Wayne. Unless someone is there to help right away, it will be too late."

Jenness said the experience of a city in Washington has proven the effectiveness of training classes. More than 1,300 persons there took the resuscitation course in one year. The death rate for heart attack victims dropped from 60 per cent to 20 per cent.

Jenness was certified as an instructor in cardiopulmonary resuscitation in October and began teaching classes in Wayne in late December. Since then, five classes have started, 51 people have signed up for the course and Wednesday night 34 received certification cards.

Classes so far have included groups from Providence Medical Center, the Bentback and Wiseman Clinics and the Region IV Child Development Center, but Jenness plans to teach additional classes which will be open to the general public.

In fact, his goal is to eventually qualify at least one person in each block in the city of Wayne, one person in each family with a member who has a history of heart disease, one person from each business in Wayne County's communities, plus members of rescue squads and some rural residents.

Jenness said that if he reaches that goal, deaths attributed to heart attack could be reduced by at least 10 per cent in the county and 20 per cent in Wayne.

CPR techniques are taught during two-hour classes conducted at a wide apart. Students must also find time during the week between the classes to go to Providence Medical Center to practice techniques on special resuscitation dolls.

Testing for certification is stringent. In addition to a written test, students must demonstrate proper CPR techniques on dolls in four practical exams under time limits. Situations simulated by the four practical exams are a witnessed cardiac arrest, an unwitnessed cardiac arrest, infant cardiac arrest, and cardiac arrest with obstructed airway. Tests are performed both solo and in pairs. Techniques used to keep cardiac arrest victims alive include ventilation (mouth-to-mouth resuscitation) and chest compression. The next class will be conducted Feb. 21 and 28. The course is being conducted for the Wayne County sheriff's department but Jenness said there are openings for other people. Certification, good for three years, is by the American Heart Association. Persons who have been certified in the CPR basic life support class, and their organizations are: Providence Medical Center - Claudia Adams, Peggy Neill, Mary Edmonds, Mary Bose, Betty Regal, Verlin Anderson, Marian Creighton, Kathy Hillier, Penny Johnson, Cindy Van Auken, Barb Wortman, Carol Dohrman, Dennis Spangler, Pat Morton, Sheryl Luedtke, Kris Nedergaard, Karen Eisberry, Leola Larsen, Phyllis Sushni and Kay Flanagan. Bentback Clinic - Linda Young, Nancy Reinhardt and husband Bryan, Sue Ann Topp, Judy Woehler, Diane Zach and Carolyn Westerhaus. Wiseman Clinic - Kathy Milligan and Kathy Luth. Region IV Child Development Center - Judy Haas, Carol Nixon, Sandra Kirach, Sandra Brudigan and Lori Hall.

OBSERVATIONS

RIF bill not a good one

The Unicameral is now considering LB 375, which would establish a RIF — reduction in force — policy for the state's school districts.

Legal requirements and professional standards such as endorsements would be taken into account, but aside from that, the sole factor for deciding who would go and who would stay if school districts are required to cut back on staffing because of declining enrollment or for whatever would be seniority.

That, in some cases at least, isn't in the best interests of education.

Teachers should have some job protection to give a degree of stability to their career, but competence and performance shouldn't be overlooked.

The Wayne-Carroll board of education has done a good job in establishing a RIF policy, one which hasn't drawn any criticism at least in public, for the Wayne Education Association.

Seniority is one of the factors to be considered if a reduction in the teaching staff is considered, but it is not the only one. Competence, quality of teaching, contribution to the total education program and other factors will also be considered.

Length of service shouldn't be totally ignored, of course. Experience is an important factor in any profession and should be taken into account. At the same time, in most professions it is possible to find individuals — not many, but some — who have years of service behind them, but aren't doing the job they should be capable of.

It seems only reasonable that school boards should be able to retain teachers who contribute the most to education. The legislature won't be doing anyone a favor, including dedicated teachers who strive to continue providing quality education, by passing a law which will serve only to protect a handful of teachers who have nothing to recommend them except length of service. — Jim Strayer.

YOU AND YOUR CAR

By the Automotive Information Council

As the new Congress debates legislative proposals that could make or break the 1978 automotive model year, the Automotive Information Council urges the lawmakers to consider a report that came out of the old Congress.

An Automobile Industry Task Force, led by Representative James M. Hanley of New York, warned that the viability of the industry was seriously threatened as long as there is a conflict among the standard setters. That conflict is between fuel efficiency and federal standards affecting safety, vehicle damageability, and emissions.

The AITF study spoke in terms of cost effectiveness and employment effectiveness. It cautioned that the future of the industry "must not be endangered by the continued lack of coordinated energy and transportation policies."

Among other things, the task force urged an annual review of federal transportation policies by Congressional committees, preparation of a comprehensive national energy policy and a re-examination of proposed increases in emission standards.

It's the tougher emission standards for 1978 cars that are threatening production of the new models this fall. The industry — domestic and foreign — says it cannot meet the '78 levels on hydrocarbons, carbon monoxide and oxides of nitrogen. It further contends that even if the technology were available, certification by EPA takes a year.

The task force says the economic health of every state is affected by the industry's performance. It released testimony showing that 15 million jobs are at stake, that nearly 58,000 people lose their jobs for each decrease in production of 250,000 cars, or loss of a billion dollars in sales.

The congressman from New York, called the report "a rather disturbing analysis" of the cost of government-mandated standards and their impact on jobs.

What action the current 95th Congress takes directly will affect the 1978 year — unless the industry decides to go ahead and market its products based on 1977 emission requirements. That could be against the law although the automakers believe they acted in good faith when they began certifying 1978 models to 1977 standards.

STRAYEr Thoughts

By Jim Strayer

I took an armful of Wayne Herald's on vacation last fall, just so I could show friends and relatives what I do for a living.

I was a bit hesitant, however, about showing the paper to one of my Memphis compadres. Pat has a streak of cynicism, left over, I believe from his years, as patrolman on the Cleveland police force. Being a big city boy, he always liked to put down us fellows from America's grass root communities, particularly when he learned the name of my home town.

"Fairbury?" he would ask. "Galtee, that sounds a whole lot like Mayberry." I always felt he meant it good naturedly, but couldn't help but wonder what his reaction to a community newspaper would be. I was surprised.

He humbled through the paper, then said, "You know, it must be great living someplace where people care about people."

That was never more evident than last Sunday, when more than 500 people turned out to honor Dr. and Mrs. N.L. Dittman at the Winside city auditorium.

It was great to see that many people who cared about people. Of course, ample testimony presented at the dinner illustrates that the Dittmans are people who have always cared about people.

Consultation Offered
The Nebraska Labor Department's division of safety has announced that it is now offering on-site consultation service to check for safety and health hazards.

Idea behind the program is to suggest ways to eliminate any danger and to explain OSHA (Occupational and Safety Health Act) standards which apply to your business.

According to the Labor Department, their consultant is not an inspector nor an investigator and his visit will not trigger an OSHA inspection.

As some of you may have noticed in the past, I'm not a big fan of OSHA, and one of my biggest gripes has been that a small business owner couldn't have a visit to determine if any hazards exist without taking a chance of receiving a citation for violating OSHA standards.

I'm still not thrilled with OSHA, but if the consultation program works as the State Labor Department says it will, business owners can at least receive advice without risking a fine.

We've Got Problems?

Water is the big topic in Nebraska this year, and Wayne County has had some problems, and has the potential for more. At least we don't face problems like those in Saunders County. According to the Wahoo Newspaper, the Omaha Metropolitan Utilities District has purchased more than 22 acres in the Yutan-Leshara area and has drilled and cased three wells. It is alleged that millions of gallons of water will be pumped from Saunders County. Depending on the geological structure there, that could cause some real problems for irrigators. Congratulations and thanks are due Fred Salmon of Wakefield. He was honored recently for his 36 years of service to the community as a member of the Wakefield city council. That's quite a record.

Out of Old

Nebraska

"St. Valentine's Day, Feb. 14, which falls this year on Tuesday, is one of those ancient festivals which, though once held in very high repute, has gradually degenerated into an occasion of little moment and one very lightly regarded."

So wrote columnist Geoffrey Williston Christine in the February 14, 1888, Daily Nebraska State Journal on file at the Nebraska State Historical Society. After discussing the origin and importance and antiquity of Valentine's Day, Christine ended his article on the following pessimistic note: "The sending of valentines, the only observance of St. Valentine's day that is retained in our land and time, seems to be gradually dying out. For some years past it has been a testimony of postmasters all over the country that the number of these sentimental missives passing through the mails has steadily decreased. This falling off began with the introduction of Christmas, New Year and Easter cards . . . and the popularity of these three classes of cards bids fair to finally extinguish even the last remaining observance of the day devoted to the honor of good St. Valentine."

However, in following years Nebraskans did continue to observe Feb. 14 in a variety of ways. Cards were exchanged, of course, by students and teachers, and parents and children, as well as by sweethearts. Gifts of flowers or candy were also popular — and strongly encouraged by enterprising merchants of large and small towns alike.

The Feb. 9, 1906 Chadron Journal contained an advertisement suggesting appropriate Valentine's Day gifts: "As it is a day for love tokens, why not give something of value? Speaking of candies, we have a nice assortment of pound and half pound boxes (and) an infinite variety of nice gift books." The Feb. 14, 1920 Omaha World-Herald included a mouth-watering list of "Cobb's Valentine Candies": "Glaze Nuts, $1.00 a lb. Almonds, Filberts, Walnuts, Brazils. . . New Nuts dipped in clear candy. Maple Caramels, 50 cents a lb. A rich, cream Maple Caramel, dipped in Canada Maple Sugar. . . Valentine's Sweets, Heart-Boxes filled with Cobb confections, appropriate for mother, sweetheart, or friend, 90 cents to $5.00. Cream Hearts for after dinner. Small Hearts for children, with cute sayings."

In spite of all inducements, however, 1920 may have been a slow year for Valentine candy. The Feb. 11, 1920, Omaha Daily News contained the four comment: "In this February of 1920 . . . devoted as it is to a thrifty campaign, the Omaha girl who receives a five-pound box of chocolates may count herself well blessed."

Valentine dances and masquerade balls were also popular. The 1918 Nebraska History magazine includes the following brief paragraph: "A well printed invitation to a Valentine's Day mask ball at Nemaha City is before us . . . sometime thirty or forty years ago. It was held under the auspices of the Nemaha City Cornet Band, and was at the Nemaha Opera House. Tickets were one dollar and spectators were charged twenty-five cents. Supper was served at the Park Hotel, but the price was not stated. Music by the Band orchestra."

The Feb. 12, 1904, Chadron Journal, under the heading "Novel Way to Celebrate the Feast of Good St. Valentine," describes one variation of the popular Valentine party game of the period — an auction sale of hearts. "Let the girls of the party all withdraw into one (room), the men remaining in the other. The folding doors are closed or partly drawn and the girl whose heart is first to be auctioned is decided upon among the ladies. The men are kept in total ignorance of the results of this decision."

"Some one who is a clever talker then mounts a chair, and, armed with a hammer, begins to auction off the heart of the girl chosen. He does not describe her in such a way that she can be recognized, but dwells upon her particular charms. Her wit, if she is witty, her beauty if she is beautiful, her vivacity if she is vivacious, and so on.

"When his wares have been sufficiently extolled he asks for bids. Bids can only be made by pounds or ounces (etcetera) of love, the man who would like to capture the heart offering so many pounds or ounces for it. This bidding continues for about a minute, the heart going to the highest bidder.

"As soon as the purchaser has been decided upon, the man who wins is led into the adjoining room and presented to the lady whose heart he has won. The men who were not purchasers remain in the outer room and do not learn the identity of the lady whose heart they failed to carry off.

"Another heart is now proposed by the auctioneer, and her charms described. This also goes to the man who bids highest, who is promptly admitted to her society."

"The game continues until all the hearts have been disposed of, when, of course, all the young people will be together."
Feb. 14 still provides an opportunity for sweethearts to exchange cards and other tokens of affection and remains a popular day for dances, parties and get-togethers.

Tenant Club Meets

The Villa Wayne Tenants Club met Tuesday for their regular meeting. There were 11 guests present. A cooperative lunch was served.

Rev. George Francis of the Wesleyan Church led the Bible study Wednesday morning on the 16th chapter of Acts.

The center, located in the basement of the new Wayne City Hall at 306 Pearl St., is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

There were 15 at the center last Tuesday afternoon for a painting demonstration by Julie Brogren of Hoskins. Mrs. Brogren painted a wall hanging, which was presented to the center, and each person attending the demonstration painted a block, which was displayed Saturday at the Wayne Federated Woman's Club's annual Arts and Crafts show in the city auditorium.

Mrs. Brogren plans to visit the center regularly to teach advanced painting. Ruth Andrews furnished refreshments following Tuesday's demonstration. Mrs. Joceli Bull conducted the Bible study at the center last Monday afternoon in the absence of the Rev. Larry Oster camp. Sixteen persons attended Mrs. Bull also read a portion of the book, "The Power of Positive Prayer" by John Bisagno. A discussion followed.

Mrs. Anna Jensen called bingo prior to the Bible study, and furnished refreshments. Next Bible study of Acts will be led by the Rev. Larry Oster camp at 2:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 28. Residents of the Wayne Care Centre were entertained by the center's Bobbies and Bubbettes band Thursday afternoon, Feb. 2. Residents with birthdays in February were honored with the traditional birthday song. The Wayne Senior Citizens Center band will entertain at the Care Centre again on March 3 at 7 p.m.

Lessons Will View Shopping Practices

Have you ever bought something and then wondered, "Why did I buy that?" Or at the end of the month question, "Where did all the money go?"

Spending more than necessary and spending for the unnecessary can be avoided if consumers become more aware of how to shop wisely, advises Anna Marie Kreifels, area home extension agent at the Northeast Station, Concord.

In February, Miss Kreifels will be helping Home Extension Club leaders in Cedar, Dixon, Dakota, Wayne and Thurston Counties to improve their shopping habits.

Swift Hams Under Recall

Consumers who have the three-pound size refrigerated "Certified Tender-Made" brand canned hams are being asked to return them to the store in which they were purchased immediately.

Because the product may be undercooked, the Wilson Foods Corporation has notified the USDA that it is voluntarily recalling the product as a precautionary safety measure.

The unopened can may appear swollen and, if opened, the product may have an off odor. The recall involves 439 12-can cases of the refrigerated hams from the Wilson plant in Cedar Rapids, Ia. The hams were distributed to wholesalers in six states, including Nebraska.

Cans affected bear the can code "2326 D" from the USDA plant number "EST 111." Other sizes or brands of Wilson canned hams or non-canned meal products are not affected by the recall.

Wakefield's Domsch Grabs Third Place

Awesome Tigers Send 12 Matmen to State

As expected, the state's top-ranked high school wrestling team in Class C, powerhouse Tekamah-Herman, waltzed through the two-day C2 district tournament at Wayne State's Rice Auditorium and came away with the team trophy Friday night.

Along with that first-place award went 12 other awards — namely, all the Tekamah players who won the right to compete in the state tournament this weekend in Lincoln.

Of the seven who made it to the finals, five finished second while two grabbed first place. The remaining five garnered third place showings.

The biggest surprise for Tiger coach Guy Mytty had to be the loss by the second-ranked heavyweight in Class C, Randy Saxon, to know Jeff Nelson of Oakland-Craig, 10-6 in the finals. Plaque with the right to compete in the state tournament for this district loaded with some of the best grapplers in the state. The state's No. one 98-pounder, Steve Schindler of Elgin Pope John, was knocked off by the eventual second-place finisher in districts Jeff Taylor of Tekamah, who came into the tourney ranked third in the state.

Also falling by the wayside were No. four rated Dan Miller of Tekamah (112), fourth rated Steve Beckman of Elgin (119) and third ranked Jim Lewis (126).

No one was near the Tigers in score scoring. Tekamah ripped the field wide open with a total of 230 points, almost 100 points better than its nearest rival, Platteville with 126. West Point finished with 123 followed by Randolph with 108, Elgin Pope John with 100, Pender with 95, Neligh and Oakland with 79 1/2 each, Norfolk Catholic with 78, Wakefield with 54 1/2, Newman Grove with 44 1/2, Osmond with 41, Harrington High with 25 1/2 and Stanton with 4 1/2.

One area grappler, 132-pound senior Carl Domsch, will be making that trek to Lincoln after he grabbed third place with a hard-fought come-from-behind 4-2 decision over Oakland-Craig's Kevin Larson in the consolation rounds.

Down by the score of 2-1, Domsch collected three points on a near fall in the closing seconds of the third period to nail down the victory.

Pleased with Domsch's showing, Trullinger pointed out that he had confidence in the senior to pull through with a trip to the state.

Wakefield mentor Lyle Trullinger lost seven of his 12 matmen in the first round and lost four more in the battle to come back in the consolation rounds.

WAKEFIELD HIGH senior Carl Domsch, insert earned himself a ticket to the state Class C wrestling tournament in Lincoln this weekend by placing among the four in his weight division. Here, the 132-pound grappler matches strength with Kevin Larson of Oakland-Craig before Domsch wins the third place medal.

Tillema was nominated by his coach, Sam Colvin, and elected during Wednesday's conference meeting by coaches from the six-team Clark division to the highly-talented all-division team.

On the top five team, Dan Lucht and Tom Goetz of Harrington High, Doug Stratton and Roger Folkers of Osmond and Gary Skalberg of Wausa. Goetz is the only sophomore while the rest are seniors on the top five.

The second five includes Tillema along with John Leapey of Coleridge, Meril Fredrich of Wausa, Kent Edward of Osmond and Kevin Prones of Wynot.

Heading the list for all-state honors are Stratton, Lucht and Skalberg.

Pesky Creighton Pulls Out Victory

By DAN VODVARKA
Short but pesky Creighton stayed with the taller Wayne Blue Devils all night Friday and then in the closing minutes struck the hosts with a 56-54 defeat.

LOOKING RATHER confused, Creighton's Tom Peters (33) doesn't seem to know or care what he is supposed to do with the ball while Blue Devil defender Vic Sharpe (32) and Brad Emry (partially hidden) put on the pressure.

Playing with no one over the six-foot tall, Creighton hit some clutch free throws in the final minutes of play to clinch the two-point win and down the Devils' in their final home game of the season. The loss drops Wayne to 6-11 on the year with the next stop being the district tournament in two weeks.

A disheartened Wayne coach Bill Sharpe labored the Devils' performance as, "our worst game of the year." Sharpe said that with their height advantage the Devils should have won by 15 points but, "we just played lousy, didn't hustle and didn't hardly do anything right."

The contest Friday was a see-saw affair with the invading Bulldogs once holding an 11-point lead in the second quarter and Wayne hustling back to hold an eight-point lead at one time before the end of the third period.

Despite the 16 rebounds pulled down for the Devils by six-foot-five Tim Koll, the losers had trouble on the boards all night as shorter Creighton finished the game with a 38-36 edge in the rebound column. The Bulldogs built their lead by hitting the offensive boards hard as they pulled down 14 offensive rebounds in the first quarter alone.

Leading by one point after the first eight minutes of play, the invaders stunned Wayne with ten straight points and led 26-15 with 5:08 left in the half. But See PESKY, page 10

Low Scoring Win Goes to Team 4 In City League

In a low scoring game Wednesday night, Team 4 barely got by Team 2, 42-35, to hold onto second place in men's city recreation basketball.

Both clubs were cold from the floor at the outset. The winners held only a 6-4 lead after the first period before an exchange of leads put Team 2 in front at the half, 17-33.

Wayne Vessel sparked Team 4 with his 16 points in the second half as his club went on to win its fifth game against two losses.

Idle Team 3 still is in command of the seven-team league with a 6-1 mark.

Wildkittens Keep on Winning: Southern Hands Cats a Jolt

Once again Wayne State Wildkittens demonstrated superiority when they whipped Missouri Southern cagers Friday night at Joplin.

For the Wildcats, 15-9 over-all, hopes for a conference title bid took a jolt to 7-4.

Both teams were scheduled for Saturday games with Kansas State-Pittsburg, hoping to repeat the double win they inflicted on Pittsburg here last month. It was not reassuring for the Wildcats that Missouri Southern men lost at Pittsburg Wednesday, 77-66.

For the Kittens, now 16-5 on the season, the victory fortified their assault on a Central States Intercollegiate Conference championship. With nine wins in league play, they're the only team with a single loss.

Southern led the Cats all the way through a close first half that ended at 46-41.

That was too much for Wayne's scoring balance: Lennie Adams at 16, Wayne Robinson and Mark Olsen both 15, Gary Billings 11.

Wayne Gals Back to Their Winning Ways

Wayne High gals again proved that they could snap back from a loss Thursday night against the Blue Devils knocked off host Emerson Hubbard, 49-34.

Wayne teams split in two preliminary games. The reserves lost a 27-25 thriller after the freshmen pulled out their fourth win in five starts, 13-11.

That will be the only home action for either team in the coming week. The Wildkittens canceled a Wednesday game here with South Dakota State.

The 10-5 Devils, which has fallen to strong Wisner Pilger in the finals of the West Husker Conference tournament, expended 19 points in the second quarter for a 25-12 half-time cushion, then coasted to the win.

Scoring for the frosh were Jean Koll and Stacy Jacobmeyer with six each and Megan Owens with one.

That was too much for Wayne's scoring balance: Lennie Adams at 16, Wayne Robinson and Mark Olsen both 15, Gary Billings 11.

Wayne dropped four straight at the beginning of the season, then put together nine wins going into the West Husker finals two weeks ago against one of the top rated Class B clubs in the state.

The locals will have a chance to even their mark against the Galettes Tuesday night when the 10-1 Wisner clan comes calling at the Devils' gym during the final season game for Wayne.

Test Provides Tips for Northeast Region Irrigators

By DON SPITZE

Wayne County Extension Agent

Irrigators in the local area have three basic questions concerning irrigation:

—What cultural practices are needed to produce a satisfactory yield?
—How much water is needed and when should it be applied?

—How much will it cost to produce a bushel of corn? Irrigators and non-irrigators alike are interested in learning more about the most efficient use of water. Unfortunately most irrigation studies in Nebraska are concentrated in the western and southern parts of the state. We have already found that conditions in Northeast Nebraska are enough different to produce different results than in other parts of the state.

This study was made on a typical center pivot system in Wayne County by the Wayne county extension service in an attempt to learn more about the answers to these questions. All figures were actual amounts furnished by the farmer except that average custom rates for his field operations were used (which included labor). Labor costs for irrigation were based on North Dakota study which indicated an average of .47 of an hour of labor was used for each acre of center pivot irrigation.

Several varieties of corn were planted on the 125-acre field, but only the yield of DeKalb XL44, the predominant variety, was used for computing yield for this test. Some of the other varieties yielded more and some less than the XL44. Harvested yield was 133.28 bushels per acre of No. 2 corn.

A corn hybrid performance test was conducted in this field by Russell Moomaw, agronomist at the Northeast Station. Seventy corn hybrids were planted in small plots and replicated four times. Corn yields were determined by hand harvest.

Average yield of the 70 corn hybrids was 135 bushels per acre, but there was a range of 25 bushels per acre between the lowest and highest yields of the various corn hybrids. Moomaw said. Complete yield results from this corn hybrid performance test will be available in an extension circular at county extension offices.

Field Operations
The field was disked twice, plowed and cultivated once and harvested with combine and dried.

The farmer estimated seeding rate at 25,600 seeds per acre. The average plant population at harvest time was 22,288. Herbicide used was two quarts of Lasso and one and one half pounds of Bladex per acre. This provided very good weed control.

Dyfonate at the rate of seven and one half pounds per acre was used for root worm control.

This farm was one of 16 farm locations throughout Eastern Nebraska where the currently recommended rootworm insecticides were monitored for corn rootworm control according to extension entomologist John Witkowski. At this site, all chemicals except Thimet gave acceptable control. Counter 15G gave the best root protection.

Considering all locations, all recommended rootworm insecticides seemed to perform quite well in 1976, Witkowski said. The one possible exception is the performance of Furadan in continuous corn fields with a history of Furadan usage.

In the fields having a history of Furadan usage, entomologists are detecting lessening performance of Furadan as a planting time treatment. The 1977 recommendations for planting time insecticides include Counter 15G, Furadan 10G, Dyfonate 20G, Thimet 15G, Lorsban 15G and Mocap 10G. The entomologist said, advising users to read the label for proper rates of application and special handling required.

Soils and Fertilizer

Soil type was Nora and Moody with a holding capacity of 2.4 inches per foot of soil. Fertilizer recommended by University of Nebraska soil test was 165 pounds of nitrogen plus 40 pounds of phosphate broadcast per acre or use 20 pounds of phosphate in the starter. One third of the nitrogen should be applied through the irrigation water. In one area of the field the phosphate recommendation was doubled. No potash and two pounds of zinc in starter was recommended.

The actual fertilizer program followed was an application of 90 pounds of nitrogen, 46 pounds of phosphate and 20 pounds of potash broadcast and plowed down before planting. The starter fertilizer used supplied 15 pounds of nitrogen, 40 pounds of phosphate, 15 pounds of potash and two pounds of zinc per acre. A total of 80 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre was applied with the irrigation water.

No sulfur was recommended because corn grown on the Nora and Moody soils have not responded to sulfur in the past, commented district agronomist George Rehm.

Past research has shown that the application of some nitrogen in the irrigation water has improved yields of irrigated corn. This is especially true for sandy soils, according to Rehm. It's important to point out that all nitrogen should be applied before the corn silks. The total requirement for nitrogen should not be applied with the irrigation water.

"In Wayne County, one-third of the nitrogen may be applied through the irrigation water although some recent research indicates that a single application of 25 to 30 pounds

SUMMARY OF RESULTS
Variable Costs Per Acre
Fertilizer	55.53
Field operations, harvest and drying	49.48
(Based on custom rates)
Seed, herbicide and insecticide	29.85
Labor	1.88
Interest on operating capital	0.22

Total variable costs per acre	$174.28
(Yield 133.28 bushels per acre of No. 2 corn)
Fixed Costs Per Acre
Interest and taxes per acre, land valued at $800	51.40
Fixed irrigation costs per acre +	55.19
Total fixed costs to produce irrigated corn	$106.59
Total Fixed and Variable costs	$280.87
Cost per bushel (excluding farm overhead and management charge)	$2.11
Total amount of irrigation water applied	12.25 inches
Rainfall during growing season, May 1-Sept. 1	8.55 inches
Moisture needed to produce 135 bushel yield	27.5 inches
(Deficit was made up by moisture stored to five-foot level prior to planting time.)
* Formula is 13.7 per cent of total cost (figure includes depreciation, interest, taxes and repairs on irrigation equipment) multiplied by $50,338 (cost of irrigation unit when new) divided by number of irrigated acres (125). This cost is based on the average cost according to an extension survey and does not necessarily reflect the cost of this particular unit.

per acre during the week of silking would be ideal," Rehm said.

Irrigation

The irrigation system used was an electric drive center pivot with 100 horse power electric motor on pump. The well is 290 feet deep with 180-foot static level and delivers 750 gallons per minute.

During the growing season of May 1 to Sept. 1, 8.55 inches of rain was received on this farm. Soil profile was filled with moisture to five foot depth prior to planting time. This moisture had accumulated from the previous growing season and fall rains in November 1975.

The center pivot made fifteen complete circles starting

July 6 and finished August 26. The system operated 83 per cent of the time during this period. This added 11.25 inches of water plus one inch of preemergence irrigation. Moisture was monitored each week through the growing season at 6, 12, 24 and 26-inch depths by using gypsum blocks and a moisture meter.

Based on custom rates, no time was corn under visible stress due to lack of moisture. Moisture block reading taken weekly through the growing season showed that the irrigation schedule followed by this farmer was sufficient to provide adequate moisture.

If ample moisture had not been stored to five-foot depth prior to growing season, it is possible that crop would have gone under moisture stress in the latter part of July and early August, thereby cutting yield. The use of the gypsum blocks helped the farmer to do a better job of scheduling his irrigation and make more efficient use of his water.

Many different figures are quoted to produce a bushel of corn per acre. There are two main variables that effect bushel cost of irrigated corn.

The first main variable is production cost. In order to find out how much production cost is effect per bushel, costs multiply the yields per acre by one cent. The resulting product indicates how many dollars it takes to change the per bushel cost by one cent. In this study every $1.33 of change in production costs resulted in a one cent per bushel cost change. Therefore, a $13.33 production cost change would change the per bushel cost 10 cents.

The second main variable is yield per acre. A few bushels difference in yield can have a real effect on per bushel cost. Yield should always be adjusted to 135 per cent moisture as it was in this study.

Another less important variable is the acres irrigated in the field. In this study, a farmstead acreage cut out a part of the irrigated circle.

The important thing to remember is that this study reflects only this field. Because no two irrigated fields are the same, the cost per bushel may be lower or higher than $2.11 quoted here. But these figures are useful as a guide to what it costs to produce irrigated corn in Wayne County.

In discussing the production practices on this farm with extension agronomists and an irrigation specialist it was concluded that this was a well managed irrigation unit and followed in general the practices recommended by extension personnel.

Additional information on how costs were computed, weekly water use at different depths of soil as well as the corn hybrid performance test of 70 corn hybrids tested on this farm are available by asking the Wayne County extension service for the booklet "A Study of Center Pivot System in Wayne County."

This Community of Ours Is Not Perfect

... but we don't make it better by hauling a lot of our trading money across country to the traffic-traumatized crime jungles that smugly call themselves our "area shopping centers"

Our necessary but necessarily rapacious big cities have ghosted out a lot of once-thriving smaller communities by siphoning off their lifeblood (trading money) with the cooperation of the victims.

After a community has city-shopped itself out of good sources of daily and emergency needs, good neighbors, good schools, good jobs and property values and other nice things, it is a little late to do much about it. Let's start stopping this development here. Now.

Wayne, which had switched from a zone defense to a man-to-man, bounced back and trailed by only four at halftime with Koll having 14 points for the Devils by half.

The final minutes of the first half and the third quarter were all Wayne as the Devils held Creighton to just 11 points in an 11 minute span while building a 43-37 lead going into the final eight minutes.

If Wayne had any dreams of blowing the game open early in the fourth period, those dreams were quickly dashed as Creighton's Bill Thiele blocked a Koll jumper and the Bulldogs held on to their lead and the victory by hitting three clutch free throws in the final seconds.

Girdner led the winners with 16 tallies while Bruce Hansen flipped in 10. The Dogs committed 20 turnovers and hit on 24 of 63 shots from the floor.

Koll led Wayne with 20 points while Tom Ginn came off the bench for 11 tallies and Vic Sharpe added 10 more. Wayne hit on 24 of 56 shots from the floor and committed 21 miscues.

The Ron Carnes, coached Wayne JV's ended their 1976-77 campaign on the high side by bombing Creighton 52-32 in the night's opener. Carnes remarked that his cagers have played very well since the Christmas break as he pointed out that the Wayne JV's lost their first four contests of the year and then finished 8-7.

During dry years, the system probably won't result in decreased use of water, Spitz said, but by showing farmers when to irrigate to avoid reducing yields will provide for more efficient use — greater returns for the amount of water applied.

During years of normal rainfall, knowing when to irrigate to avoid soil erosion through run-off from irrigated fields, Spitz said.

Under the plan proposed by the development group, farmers participating in the program would receive $195 for the first year of monitoring the fields. The amount should cover cost of purchasing the meter and gypsum blocks and is intended to pay for 75 per cent of the cost of monitoring. The other 25 per cent would mainly include the farmer's labor. At the end of the crop season, participating farmers would be required to turn in a report of moisture levels recorded and weekly intervals.

Participation in the program would be limited to one irrigated field per farmer. Cost share would be on a reduced basis would be available after the first year.
